PLAINFIELD LIQUOR LICENSE FEE, $1,000

Mayor Jenkins Urges This Rate and Opposes Any Increase in Number in City.

HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE

OPPOSES MUNICIPAL COLLECTION AND DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE.

Dwells at Length on School Legislation As Effects the Proposed $125,000 High School Here—City Finances in Good Shape.

In his annual message delivered to the Common Council Monday, Mayor Jenkins opposed the increase in the number of liquor licenses and urged that the fee be increased to $1,000 from $750. He took a stand against the proposed systematic collection and disposal of garbage and dwelt at length upon the proposed new high school cautioning the Common Council to exercise care in the matter of the bonds to be sold to defray the expense in the erection of the institution. He also called attention to the fact that under the Meeker law the members of the present Board of Assessors hold office until next year.

This is the full text of his message:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
Plainfield, N. J.,
January 1, 1904.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Gentlemen:—The several administrative departments of the city government have, during several years last past inaugurated such reforms and acquired such increased efficiency, and withal have been conducted so admirably, that there are comparatively few matters to which I need at this time to direct the attention of the Common Council. The condition of the city finances at present is highly satisfactory. Starting with a balance of $31,244.48 in the general fund, the last Common Council met all the usual expenses chargeable to that fund, and in addition to that furnished the moneys expended for permanent improvements in connection with the installation of the police call sytsem, the police patrol wagon, the equipment of the police station with eight new steel cells, the purchase of six water-sprinkling wagons, and the expense of sprinkling the streets, in all involving an expenditure of about $12,200, and at the close of the year had in hand a balance in the general fund of $37,-123 24.

The fire department has increased its permanent equipment by the purchase of a combination wagon, and the amount remaining unpaid of moneys borrowed by that department in anticipation of taxes already assessed is the sum of $7,000. The other departments, as will appear from the reports on file with the City Clerk, owe no borrowed money and have all kept within their respective appropriations.

Taxes.

This city has up to this time availed of all the powers conferred upon it by its charter and the general laws of the State looking to the vigorous enforcement of the collection of unpaid taxes and assessments, and its success in this direction has won the unstinted approval of our citizens. The Legislature which met last winter revised the laws governing the assessment and collection of taxes. The law went into effect on the twentieth day of December last, and in many of its features effected radical changes. All city ordinances in conflict with that statute are so far forth repealed. Taxes in this city will hereafter become delinquent on the twentieth day of December instead of one month earlier; the collector is no longer required to make return of delinquents for taxes from 1903 on, to the city judge; the city judge as to such taxes is no longer required to issue warrants, but instead thereof the collector is authorized and directed to issue transcripts of the assessments, his duplicate, which shall have the force and effect of warrants. Other changes with respect to the method of enforcing the collection of taxes by seizing and selling the personal property of delinquents and by arrest and imprisonment of deliquents for non-payment of personal property taxes have been effected by the statute referred to, and all these changes tend to the simplification of procedure, and if possible, make it more imperative upon the collecting officer to see to it that all citizens, and not merely those who pay voluntarily, shall contribute

CRANFORD OUTBOWLED BY ROSELLE TEAM

Winners Take Three Straight in Series on the Cranford Casino Alleys.

ROSELLE'S GREAT WORK

VICTORS NOW LEAD IN DAILY PRESS BOWLING LEAGUE TOURNAMENT.

Losing Team's Work Not Up to the Standard—Howe, High Man for Roselle—Westerberg's Poor Showing—Summary and Standing.

Play in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament was continued last night, when a series of three games were rolled between Roselle Casino and Cranford Casino on the alleys of the former. This was the first series of the year, the holiday season causing a postponement of the games scheduled. Roselle started the New Year by taking all three games, the first by a score of 845, the second by 873 and the last by 933. Cranford rolled scores of 664, 730 and 676, which was rather poor for that organization. Plummer was their low man, making a score of 94 in the last game, while Crape rolled high score for his team in the same game, making 155. The other scores were generally lower than that.

Roselle bowled strong from the start, all of the scores, with very few exceptions being high. In the first game Howe, who was high man, rolled 193 and in the second game he reached 199. The lowest score was 147 rolled by Westerberg in the first game and as the bowling progressed Roselle's work improved measurably, each member of the team doing excellent work. In winning the series last night Roselle takes the lead with a total of 9 games won, with Westfield second with 8 games to their credit.

The summary of last night's games:

ROSELLE.				CRANFORD.
S. Smith	180	193	161	Park	132	132	147
Westerb'g	147	154	178	Crane	115	147	165
Harris	179	167	148	Hibson	144	155	117
Howe	193	199	167	Plummer	158	136	94
Bulford	166	186	179	Bates	115	160	150
	845	873	833		664	730	676

This is the standing in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament:

THE OFFENDERS' DESCRIPTIONS

CARD SYSTEM OF CATALOGUING PHYSICAL MEASUREMENTS.

A new card system of cataloguing offenders who appear before the City Judge has been established at police headquarters. The name and record of each offender is entered on a separate card, the prisoner's physical measurements, nationality, etc., being included, and the whole arranged alphabetically. For ready reference in dealing with and identifying habitual offenders, the method is of great convenience to the police as well as to the City Judge.

JERSEY BOYS AT CORNELL.

Five of the Hundred and Fifteen From This State Are Plainfielders.

According to the January number of the Cornell University Register, just published, there are 115 students at the university from New Jersey, and Plainfield is well represented. Edward Allyn Janes is a student in the College of Arts and Sciences, while in the Sibley College of Mechanical Engineering there are Walter Vaughan McGee, Charles Clarence Roosa, Wetmore Holloway Titus and Cyrus Hillman Kinsman, all of Plainfield. The Register also shows that the body of undergraduates now numbers 2,853.

Lost in Plainfield.

Sentence was suspended, yesterday afternoon, by City Judge Runyon upon Tomaso Carraso, arrested for acting suspiciously in the West End and carrying a loaded revolver. Carraso said he came from Brooklyn and had intended to leave the train at Fanwood, but was carried beyond his station to Grant avenue, the fact of his being lost explaining his suspicious actions.

Service Not Abandoned.

The Public Service Corporation prides itself on the fact that during the recent severe storm the cars on the local lines were not tied up, though the schedule was not strictly adhered to.

SPEEDWAY BRUSHES ATTRACT CROWD

Sleighing on Park Avenue Course Being Enjoyed by Owners of Fast Horses.

"BELLE," THE QUEEN

"GLITTERS LAD" FAILS TO SUSTAIN HIS RECORD.

Duke, Owned by L. M. French, Goes at a Lively Clip—Fast Time Made by Horses of N. B. Smalley and A. Baldwin—Racing Today.

The heavy fall of snow on Saturday has made fine sleighing on the speedway on Park avenue, and yesterday afternoon there were a number of exciting brushes there. The racing was witnessed by many people, in carriages and afoot. The course was well filled and the time made in some instances was excellent.

A. I. Smalley's Belle was the queen of the courses yesterday. She passed every thing easily and distinguished herself by handily defeating Glitters Lad, J. H. Greene's trotter. These two horses brushed several times and in each instance A. I. Smalley's mare was the better horse.

Augustus Baldwin's Kiawana, and a horse driven by Mayor Newton B. Smalley had a go down the course and easily distanced the horse driven by Mayor Smalley. The latter's horse which has been a familiar speedway sight, was injured recently and could not be driven. Stonewall Jackson drove a new importation from the West which in some cases gave Al Smalley's Belle a determined struggle for supremacy.

Duke, a bay gelding, driven by L. M. French, did some good work, matched against a sorrel horse driven by Edson O. Martin. These two horses are about evenly matched and each brush was a close one, the honors being about evenly divided. Percy Dayton's stallion, Black Prince, held a prominent position on the course.

The brushes were, on the whole quite exciting and it is probable that there will be impromptu contests on the speedway as long as the snow and sleighing lasts. The racing generally begins at about 2:30 in the afternoon.

HOURLY SERVICES.

Dr. Richards' Idea for Increasing the Brick Presbyterian's Usefulness.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and now pastor of the Brick church, New York, in a year-book soon to be issued gives his ideas of the larger use to which the Brick Presbyterian church could be put. He wants the church to have services hourly on Sunday mornings as Roman Catholic churches have. As a beginning, the Sunday night service was started some weeks ago, and while it has not attracted crowds, the pastor says he sees his idea developing in it. Further to use the building, there was begun a few weeks ago a twilight service on Fridays. The church front doors are now kept open always.

Peculiar Accident.

Henry Drake of North avenue, an aged employe of Woodhull & Martin, while placing a stone door on the rear of the firm's stables, had a heavy part of the temporary structure blown upon him by the strong wind. A deep gash was cut on his right cheek, in which several stitches had to be taken. Although the accident happened several days ago he is still in a serious condition on account of the shock.

Public Funeral for Mr. Vail.

The members of the Exempt Firemen's Association are requested to attend the funeral of their late brother, Wallace Vail, to be held from the First M. E. church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. It was originally planned to have the services from Mr. Vail's late home, but a change has since been made to the church in order that the dead man's friends may be able to attend the obsequies.

Warren Again Retires.

It is said in railroad circles that Charles H. Warren, vice president of the Rock Island system, will retire from office. He was formerly vice president of the Jersey Central and Plainfielders still hold him in pleasant remembrance.

Addition to Store.

M. Weinberger was granted a permit Monday by Inspector T. O. Doane to build an addition to the rear of the building, 202 West Front street.

THE NUMBER OF LICENSES

WILL THE COMMON COUNCIL RESPECT MAYOR JENKINS RECOMMENDATION?

It seems to be a question in the minds of many persons as to whether Mayor Jenkins' recommendation regarding the number of saloons to be allowed in Plainfield for the coming year will be followed. There are now fifteen licensed places in the city, but it is understood that John Goff, who has recently built a hotel on West Front street near Clinton avenue, will ask the Common Council to give him a license to sell liquors. It is hinted that it is the purpose of the city fathers to grant such a petition if it is asked for.

If this is done it may be the purpose of the Council to cut off an application somewhere else. It is the opinion of most of the officials that the present number of licensed places is sufficient for the city and for some years past the policy has been a high license one. This is shown by the action of the Common Council Monday night in accepting the suggestion of the Mayor to raise the license fees for both retailers and wholesalers.

At present most of the saloons and drinking places are so regulated in such a way as to give the police list e or no trouble.

BOROUGHITES ARE HEALTHY

ONLY TWO CASES OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASE REPORTED TO BOARD.

Samuel S. Swackhamer was re-appointed counsel of the North Plainfield Board of Health at the meeting Monday night. This was the first meeting of the year and the appointment of a legal representative always takes place at that time. It was reported that there are only two cases of contagious diseases in the borough. One is diphtheria and the other scarlet fever. The fumigation of the house of Edward S. Hooley, where there were two cases of a contagious disease has been in progress for two days, the patients, Mrs. Hooley and her daughter, having fully recovered.

The matter regarding the polluted wells in the borough, which have been reported to the local and State Boards of Health, was discussed. The alleged polluted well on Stone street has been declared in a healthy condition and the other six wells, in Chatham and Harmony streets have been deepened, as the cause of their pollution was said to have been due to surface water flowing into them. The secretary of the Board, Dr. William E. Honeyman, reported to the Board that it has been a number of years since the Board has been able to present such a clean bill of health.

MRS. RANDOLPH BURIED.

Funeral Services in Charge of Rev. Dr. Chambliss and Rev. Mr. Shaw.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Randolph were held Tuesday afternoon from the late home in Madison avenue and it was largely attended by her friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was in charge of the services. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, the pall-bearers being Alexander Thorn, O. M. Dunham, John Neagle and William H. Combs.

From Brunswick Town.

A sleighing party numbering almost 100 young people drove to this city last night from Metuchen and New Brunswick and attended the dance of Eugene O'Reilly on North avenue. A supper was served on North avenue and at a late hour the merry-makers left for home. The party was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Elston Gaddis, of Metuchen, and Mrs. Lawrence Snowden, of New Brunswick.

Inter-Association Meet.

There will be a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. bowling league of Northern New Jersey in this city with the local association Thursday, January 14. A schedule for the second round of matches will be arranged. C. B. Koons, of the local association, is secretary of the league.

Engine Company's Meeting.

Warren Engine Company in the borough held its regular monthly meeting last night at which time routine business was transacted. Nothing was said about the new paid system in the borough.

SWACKHAMER CALLED CODDINGTON "COWARD"

Former Judge Replied That He Would Settle Personalities After Case Was Over.

HOT WORDS AT A TRIAL

DISPUTE AROSE IN JUSTICE SMALLEY'S COURT ROOM.

Swackhamer Made a Retraction and Harmony Again Prevailed Between Opposing Counsel—Case of Smith Against VanFleet.

Hot words were bandied between Former Judge W. A. Coddington and Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer yesterday afternoon in a jury trial of a case in tort in Justice Smalley's court in North Plainfield. "You are a coward," said the assemblyman, when Judge Coddington, who was the opposing counsel, is said to have reduced to an absurdity some of the conflicting testimony of Mr. Swackhamer's witnesses. Judge Coddington won his case but his logic did not please his opponent. But for the fact that the two lawyers were on opposite sides of a table, it is more than likely that blows would have been struck.

Judge Coddington told his opponent that his first duty was to his client, but that after the trial he would be glad to meet Mr. Swackhamer and settle the argument as to cowardice in any manner that could be suggested. By that time, however, Mr. Swackhamer retracted his remark, and peace reigned.

The case in court, which was held at Boice's hotel, was that of John D. Smith, administrator, against John VanFleet and wife, the dispute being over some household furniture left by George Smith who died last September. Mr. Smith's wife died ten days after her husband, leaving two children under three years of age as the heirs, with John D. Smith, the plaintiff, appointed as administrator of the estate. The house was stripped of its furniture by the VanFleets who refused to return it on demand, and suit was brought for $100 to $120 for the value of the property.

The defendants claimed that part of the furniture had been returned, that they had received permission from George Smith to take it away and that its value was not more than $5. This valuation was claimed in spite of the fact that the testimony of the defense showed that the four rooms of George Smith had been comfortably furnished. It was in the arguing of this point that the heated argument arose between the opposing counsels.

Foreman Francis, of the jury, announced a verdict of $60 and costs in favor of the plaintiff.

Up to Corporation Counsel.

When Councilman Robert L. Lee, who is generally interested in trolley matters, was asked Monday night why he did not make an effort to improve trolley conditions in Plainfield, said that at present he is too busy with other matters. He added that the matter is now up to the corporation counsel to whom it was referred at a meeting of last year's Council.

Sleighing to Mt. Bethel.

A sleighing party of twenty-five young people journed to Mt. Bethel last night and enjoyed a dance at the hotel there. The evening was enjoyable spent there in dancing and a supper was served at a late hour. Joseph Robinson and V. W. Nash, Jr. were the committee in charge of the arrangements.

C. B. Brown's Work.

The last issue of "The State Work," a small pamphlet issued by the Y. M. C. A. of the State, shows two pictures of Charles B. Brown, associate assistant State secretary, addressing shop men. Mr. Brown was a former resident of Plainfield and meeting with great success in the association work.

Veterans to Install.

The Union Veterans' Union will hold a public installation of officers in the lodge rooms over the police headquarters on East Front street tonight. It is expected that a large number of Grand lodge officers will be present from New York, Elizabeth, Jersey City, Newark and Brooklyn.

Democratic Committee to Organize.

The Democratic City Committee will meet Friday night in the Democratic headquarters to organize and elect officers for the ensuing year year. The Democratic county committee will meet meet Monday night in Elizabeth for the same purpose.

AUTHORITIES AFTER CENTRAL THEATRE

Proprietor Instructed to Take Steps at Once to Prevent a Possible Disaster.

SOME CHANGES ORDERED

BUILDING INSPECTOR DOANE DEMANDS IMMEDIATE ACTION.

Hose and Buckets to be Provided Within 24 Hours—Exits to be Kept Open During Performances—Passageways to be Cleared.

The general inspection of fire protection in theatres and halls of amusement, which in nearly every city of the country has followed the great Chicago disaster, reached Plainfield and has resulted in the giving of explicit instructions to James A. Galvin, manager of Washington Hall and the Central theatre, in regard to the proper protection of the patrons of that place.

Mr. Galvin has been ordered by Building Inspector T. O. Doane not to use any kerosene stove or lamp as a stove in any of the dressing rooms connected with Washington Hall and to place all lamps at a sufficient height above the floor as to be beyond the reach of persons using the rooms. Orders have also been given for the protection of such lamps by metal guards and for the proper protection of all other lights used in the hall. The dressing rooms and stage of the hall, it is decreed, must be kept free of accumulations of paper, rags and other inflammable materials.

Directions have been given that the passage ways leading from the hall and dressing rooms must be kept clear of all obstructions and all aisles free from persons standing therein as well as camp-stools, sofas, etc. Mr. Galvin must also within twenty-four hours provide the hall with not less than fifty feet of rubber hose attached to water at all times and must maintain not less than two buckets of water, one on each side of the stage. He has further been notified to keep the inside exit doors of the hall open at all times during performances.

In regard to the Casino, Manager Mase Edwards said this morning that every possible precaution is taken for the safety of audiences in the hall. Nothing combustible is allowed on the stage or in the hall, the wiring is entirely new and complete, the exits ample and open as all times during performances.

TO ADMINISTER OATH SINGLY

UNION COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION WANT JURYMEN SWORN SEPARATELY.

The prosperous financial condition of the Union County Bar Association was indicated by the treasurer's report received at yesterday's annual business meeting. The association has a balance on hand this month of $489, which together with the January dues, will bring the total to about $700. A committee which had been appointed to bring about the swearing in of the Grand Jury individually instead of collectively through the foreman reported that their efforts had been successful. Instructions were given for the drawing up of resolutions to congratulate Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel upon his recovery from illness. A committee was appointed by President Craig A. Marsh to arrange for a dinner to be held some time during January or early February.

Injured by Fall.

J. Warren Stewart, a wheelwright, of Somerset street, was taken to his home in a carriage suffering with a badly bruised hip caused by a fall on an ice-covered pavement in front of the Crescent Hotel, Somerset street, at 7 o'clock this morning. The aged man was able to limp to his place of business, but later had to be removed to his home.

Installation of Officers.

Elaborate arrangements are being made for the installation of officers at Reform Hall tomorrow night, when it is expected that several ministers of the city will be present. The hall has been decorated by a committee from the club. A banquet will be served after the exercises.

Concert at Heavenly Rest.

Thursday night, January 21, has been fixed as the date for the concert to be given at the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

INDOOR ATHLETICS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Four Records Smashed in Contests Last Night at the Local Association.

GOOD SHOWINGS MADE

LARGE NUMBER OF CONTESTANTS AND RIVALRY GENERALLY KEEN.

Munger Threw the Shot Over Forty Feet and Three Inches—McNaughton's Great High Kick—Quarter-Mile Walk Record of Koons.

Four Y. M. C. A. records went by the boards last night in the contests postponed from last Saturday. The hop, skip and jump record was improved upon by H. Scull who covered 25 feet, ten inches half an inch better than R. Carroll's record established in 1898. In the shot put, C. H. Munger made the remarkable record of forty feet, three one one-half inches, the previous mark being 38 feet, 1½ inches, made by G. P. Smith in 1897. C. B. Koons beat his own record time in the quarter-mile walk, negotiating the distance in two minutes, thirteen seconds, the previous record record established by him last year being 2-16 2 5. In the high kick, W. McNaughton did himself proud, reaching a height of eight feet four inches, smashing R. Carroll's best mark established in 1898 of eight feet, three inches.

All of the new marks were cleanly made in regular competition. Records beaten in each of the four events contested made a good night's work. There was an unusually large number of contestants out and the interest in the events was keen. W. McNaughton made his first appearance in the contests, which were the third in the series. The finals will be a rope climb, running high dive and running high jump and will take place Saturday, January 16.

In the high kick last night, W. Bentliff scored a second to McNaughton's record kick, the mark being seven feet, ten inches. Raymond Smith was third with seven feet two inches. Other competitors were Koons and Stuart.

There was a generally high quality of performances in the 12-pound shot put, though none of the athletes approached Munger's giant put. H. Scull won second honors with 31 feet, 10 inches, and Raymond Smith was third with thirty feet. Others who participated were Bentliff, Mensenbach, Rothberg, Koons, Mundy, Collier, McNaughton and Stuart.

The hop, skip and jump was a well contested event. Next to Scull's record distance, was the mark of 24 feet, 6 inches made by Munger. McNaughton was well up with 24 feet 3, and R. Smith was a good fourth. Others who did good work in this event were Koons, Bentliff, Stuart, Mundy and Woodland.

The regular quarter mile walk was run off Saturday, December 5, and won by Smith in 2 minutes 16 seconds. Koons was out of town at the time, however, on business for the association and was allowed to walk the distance last night. This he did to such good purpose as to break his own association record.

As a result of last night's contests, Raymond Smith, the leader in the race for the individual championship, added 122 points to his total; Walter McNaughton made 145 points and W. Bentliff scored 117. In the totals to date Smith leads with 498 points, Koons is second with 400 and Mundy third with 330.

Democratic Club's Ball.

The Plainfield Democratic Club has secured the use of the Casino for the night of February 15 for the second annual ball of the club. The committee in charge of the affair consists of P. J. Reville, A. J. Nolan, J. V. F. Dilts, James Kane and Victor Troice.

Charles Shupp's Guests.

Charles Shupp, of the firm of Hill & Shupp, entertained the clerks of the store at his home Monday night. There was an informal programme of vocal and instrumental music, interspersed by the playing of games.

More Patients at Muhlenberg.

Four patients were received at the new hospital yesterday and those at the institution are doing well, according to the report of the superintendent.

Freeholders Meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders will be held in the Court House at Somerville, Tuesday.

HAS A GOOD RECORD.

John Sharp Williams Well Liked by His Colleagues.

New Minority Leader in House of Representatives Abundantly Able to Take Care of the Interests of His Party.

If he lives until July 30 next John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, the democratic leader in the house of representatives, will be 50. He is of slender figure, and a trifle above the medium in height. He has a whole lot of wooly hair and a striking disregard of fashionable clothing.

From boyhood Mr. Williams has been a hard student, and all his mature life an industrious reader of high class literature. Although never of a decidedly robust constitution, he has not at any time been regarded as an invalid. At present he appears to be in good condition physically for the arduous duties recently imposed upon him with unanimity by his party associates.

Mr. Williams received a thorough educational training. He studied at the Kentucky military institute, and later at the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., and at the University of Virginia. Then he went abroad and attended Heidelberg university.

While at Heidelberg he mastered German sufficiently to converse fluently in it. He also studied French in his youth, and since leaving the universities he has kept up his researches both in German and in French. Since his selection for the minority leadership, though, Mr. Williams has been somewhat amused to read that he is able to read and speak half a dozen languages.

He was born at Memphis, Tenn. His mother died when he was quite young, and his father, who was a colonel of Tennessee volunteers in the confederate army was killed at Shiloh. His home is at Yazoo, Miss., where he has practiced law and engaged in planting cotton. He and his brother are joint owners of about 1,000 acres of land in the Yazoo country. This property has not been divided in many generations.

Mrs. Williams never held any public office prior to his election to congress in 1892.

Mr. Williams does not pretend to be a good parliamentarian. On the contrary, he has before and since his election as the minority leader candidly admitted that he is lacking in this capacity.

But Judge De Armond, of Missouri, is acknowledged to be a shrewd, careful and able parliamentarian. That is why at the request of Mr. Williams he was appointed by Speaker Cannon a member of the rules committee. Throughout the congress, and especially during the session preceding the presidential election, Judge De Armond will virtually be at the elbow of the minority leader.

The New York Sun says that it is conceded on all sides that Mr. Williams is amply fortified by experience and ability to take care of himself and his party in any partisan debates that may arise. His mind works quickly, he purposes to be ever watchful, and those who have measured lances with him know that he is no slouch in discussing the welfare of the nation.

A talk with Mr. Williams impresses the interviewer with the fact that if he has the support of his party he does not propose to engage in filibustering to the extent of wasting the time of the house. His policy will be slightly different from that of some of his predecessors.

He purposes, however, to put the republican party on record at every stage, so that the country may know what is actually being done in the popular part of congress. This he believes can be done speedily and in order without a resort to tactics that prevailed in former congresses, when the rules were more lax and permitted filibustering to a degree nothing short of ridiculous.

Haunted by Flock of Geese.

Twenty years ago an unsuspected man in Lexington, Ind., stole three geese from a neighbor. The despoiled farmer has just received five dollars from a resident in Washington, D. C., confessing the theft, and thus making financial reparation. He says that for years he has been unable to sleep well, as a flock of geese always haunted his dreams, no matter where he slept.

Not a Common Criminal.

A Pittsburg minister was in the county jail doing missionary work among the prisoners. He found a darky strutting the floor on one of the upper corridors, and asked him if he was in for disorderly conduct. "No, sah," indignantly replied the negro. "I's no common criminal; I's a highway robber."

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

The Pace of Editor McKelway in Gotham Journalism.

THE REAL ESTATE CONDITIONS

What the Reorganization of the $60,000,000 Realty Trust Means—Too Many Hotels—The Return of the Kitchen.

EDITOR McKELWAY

New York.—St. Clair McKelway, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, has been again brought into national prominence by the receipt of the letter in which Grover Cleveland declined to be a candidate for the presidential nomination.

More than any other man in New York McKelway fulfills the old-fashioned idea of the editor who is a personal power in public affairs. It is not age that gives him this position of authority, for he is yet in late middle life. It is something in the man's mental make-up which allies him to the personal editors of the past. People meeting each other in street cars say: "Let's see what the World says this morning." Or the Herald or Sun, as the case may be. At night going home in Brooklyn with a copy of the Eagle, it is: "Let's see what McKelway has to say"—though McKelway himself may be at the moment far away. His name is a household word with those of Merrill, of the World, Hazeltine, of the Sun, Nicholson, of the Tribune, and others as powerful, are unknown.

Dr. McKelway is a master of Johnsonian ponderosity. He is a maker of phrases to match Mr. Cleveland's own. His style holds out a clutch for ridicule. When as editor of the Albany Argus he was the model for democratic editors throughout the state, jokers insisted that the party managers had to furnish diagrams before the men on the country weeklies could understand his editorials. The Sun, in a spirit of bitterness which has long passed from New York journalism, once referred to him as the "omniscientical princox that daubs dullness over the vast editorial page of the Brooklyn Eagle." The latter's editorial page is no longer vast; it was never dull.

The Making of an Editor.

Dr. McKelway is rather above medium height and ponderously framed. He is a man's man, a master of anecdote, allusion and illustration. Originally a rather halting and ineffective public orator, he has persevered in the art until he is easily Depew's rival in London as in New York as an after-dinner speaker. He lives in very modest style, as befits a Brooklyn editor, and his salary is probably exceeded in dimensions by those of 20 New York newspaper men of whom no one ever hears.

Monotonous Companionship.

Years ago McKelway was a sub-editor upon the Eagle, a paper which had employed men like Walt Whitman, Archie Gordon, "Tom" Kinsella, Kenward Philp, accused of being the author of the Morey letter, and other famous newspaper men. From the Eagle, a nursery of democratic editors, he was called to command the Albany Argus. Later he was called back to the Eagle to take command. Kinsella being dead. When Brooklyn became a part of New York, McKelway suddenly forged to the front, when already his hair was thin on top and grayish along the side, as the democratic mentor and adviser of statesmen. This is his simple life story.

The brilliant Watterson occupies in Louisville a position somewhat analogous to McKelway's in New York. Col. Alexander K. McClure did until recently occupy such a position in Philadelphia. Changes in methods of the Times of that city changed McClure's outlook upon life. It is said that his recent appointment as prothonotary at a salary of $15,000 by Matt Quay was arranged because of these changes.

Another Philadelphian who long enjoyed a position as Mr. Cleveland's close friend and occasional mouthpiece upon public policy, Mr. Clarke Davis, of the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Triumph of the Kitchen.

The reorganization of the $60,000,000 realty trust contemplated by such substantial men as Messrs. Speyer, Stillman, Juillard, Olcott and Hyde has an interest far beyond New York.

It was a department of the realty trust, the Fuller Construction company, whose president, Judge McConnell, brought from Chicago the famous "grafting" walking delegate, Sam Parks, now in Sing Sing prison. This department of the Fuller company got into a fight with the unions. Long after the disastrous strikes began last spring the Fuller company went on its way serenely. But the powerful stockholders were recently under criticism of the methods hinted at—plainly, it was alleged, that the Fuller company kept the walking delegates on its payroll—and when it late the Fuller company began getting its share of strikes, and when the Wall street "bear" raid[illegible] the company's securities, [illegible]organization was resolved upon.

Curiously, there is something else doing in local building. The promised millennium, the coming age when housework was to be abolished, when all families with money enough were to live in hotels, isn't coming. The kitchen triumphs.

Legally, every New York building which contains apartments with separate kitchens is a tenement house, no matter how fine and costly, and is limited in height by the width of the street it faces, and in the area of the lot which it can cover. This, upon most streets, limits building to eight or nine stories for apartments for housekeeping. But these limits do not apply to hotels. Hence it has been a favorite speculation to combine two or three of four or five lots almost anywhere up-town and erect a family hotel thereon, with a great general restaurant, but no separate kitchens for the residents.

Hotel Business Overdone.

All at once it dawns upon the building fraternity that the hotel business is overdone. Costly apartments are vacant, thousands of them, while the humble "flat" with kitchen attached which is at once a trouble and an economy is in great demand. The millennium is put off for a year or two. Bridget's calling is not gone.

The Kitchen in the Air

This discovery is one cause of the slackening of the pace which big buildings are erected. Owners of costly plots cannot build upon them profitably to a height of only eight or nine stories. They are hoping for such an amendment of the law as will permit them to erect ordinary flats, 30-story houses; if they get that modification you will hear no more for a time of the "startling drift toward the hotel" which has so worried the preachers for the past years. The preachers and moralists might have spared their alarm. There was never any such tremendous drift, after all. With the builders and real estate agents, wish was father to thought.

City people are much like others, after all. Flat life, it has been proved, does not appease the home spirit. People live in flats because they have to. The hotel may be a different matter, for children at any rate. People seem to think so, from the latest returns. Meanwhile the scene of greatest building activity shifts to Brooklyn and the outskirts generally, where small houses and modest flat buildings of conventional type are going up faster than ever before.

As a trade pointer, this shift means more demand for lumber and ordinary building material, much less demand for structural steel.

A Daughter of Good Fortune.

The next great wedding in society will probably be that of Miss Florence Twombly and Mr. William A. M. Burden.

Captains of Industry

Miss Twombly is a "darling of the gods." At home she lives in a great palace in New Jersey, erected at a cost, with its surrounding 4,000 acres, of some $2,000,000. A Harvard graduate at a salary of $10,000 a year is the steward of this great estate. It is named "Florham" in compliment of the girls baptismal name.

In winter the Twombys occupy for a short time one of the great brown stone packing boxes on Fifth avenue, which were the first "Vanderbilt houses" to arise on that now residential thoroughfare. Mrs. Twombly was a Vanderbilt and drew the customary $10,000,000 which was given to each child of William H. Vanderbilt, except Cornelius and William K., who got each some $60,000,000. Twombly also was a wealthy man.

The Burdens are an older family than the Vanderbilts. Their considerable wealth is drawn from the great Burden iron works in Troy, about which the two branches there have for some time waged such a bitter quarrel. A very dear cousin of Miss Twombly, Miss Sloane, also a Vanderbilt grand-daughter, married James A. Burden, Jr., of the other branch of Burdens from William A. M. of the name. Perhaps the ties thus closer drawn favor a reconciliation, and perhaps they may not.

The young bridegroom-expectant knows nothing about iron-making. He is a Wall street broker. Is that a fact significant? Would it be better if more of our young men knew about making things and fewer knew about selling and buying company shares?

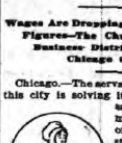
A SERVANT PROBLEM

It Was a Stumbling Block in Chicago for Several Years.

SOLUTION IS NOW IN SIGHT

Wages Are Dropping Back to Normal Figures—The Church of the Business District — Other Chicago Gossip.

Chicago.—The servant girl problem of this city is solving itself much to the satisfaction of the mistress. The wave of prosperity which struck Chicago a few years ago brought with it a demand for servants which the supply was inadequate to fill. Families which had existed for years without knowing the luxury of a servant suddenly found one or more indispensable. Matrimonially inclined couples added the item of a girl's wages to their estimated household expenses, many mechanical tradesmen, office clerks, small merchants and others who had never before employed household help were in the market for girls.



A New Importation

With the increased demand it was inevitable that wages should go up. The competent girl, who a year before had been content to work for $2.50 a week soon found that she could get $3.50. Another employer would give one dollar a week more than that and still another would offer a raise of another dollar. And so it went until the limit was virtually taken off entirely, until eight dollars per week was not unusual, and still the supply was inadequate.

Such has been the condition for something like the last five years. Wages have been constantly going up, but now the tide has turned and wages are going down again. The "Want" columns of the newspapers now contain more inquiries for places than there are places to fill. For this there are possibly two or more reasons. One is that there has been an increase in the number of girls coming to the city from Europe. The high wages have attracted an increased immigration from Sweden, from Germany and other countries of Europe which supply our servant girl population. Another is the closing of near-by manufacturing plants such as the laying off of a large number of men at the South Chicago steel mills. The girls of the families of these discharged men must now become wage earners, and they are turning to house work, and so helping to solve the vexed servant problem.

Where It Hurts Most.

To the class in particular this change in the supply and demand of servants comes particularly hard. That is to the work-seeking mother. To the woman with a child who must work that both might live the stringency in the servant market has been a boon.

Hard to Find Work

The hardest problem any large city has to solve is the care of homeless children. When the Chicago Orphan Asylum, erected at a cost, with its surrounding 4,000 acres, of some $2,000,000, A Harvard graduate at a salary of $10,000 a year is the steward of this great estate. The Children's Aid Society.

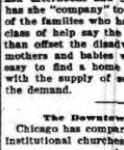
The Children's Aid society undertook to find homes for mothers and babes; homes where the mother could earn wages as a servant, and at the same time keep her baby with her. The society found the undertaking easier to plan than to accomplish, but the unusual demand for servants helped in the solution.

There are advantages attached to the employing of a woman with a child that are seldom thought of. As a rule she does not demand as high wages as the girl; she has no outside interests and does not ask afternoons and evenings out, nor has she "company" to entertain. Many of the families who have employed this class of help say the advantages more than offset the disadvantages, but the mothers and babies will not find it so easy to get a home and employment with the supply of servants exceeding the demand.

The Downtown Church.

Chicago has comparatively few great institutional churches, though the idea is growing, and in time may become more deeply rooted here than in New York. Peculiar among the churches of this class at the present time is All Souls, located on Oakwood boulevard on the South side, and just now erecting a handsome new edifice, more club house than church.



A Downtown Church

Fifty years ago many of the largest and most influential churches of the city were located in what is now known as the downtown district, but business has driven all but a very few of them out. One that has withstood the pressure of the commercial interests is the First Methodist, and this may in time become to Chicago what Trinity is to New York, though at the present time it is in no sense an institutional church. At one time the leader of the denomination in point of membership the First Methodist has to-day but little more than 200 communicants, though the value of its property, a business block at Clark and Washington streets, in the center of which is its auditorium, is worth considerably more than half a million dollars, an average of something like $3,000 for each member. Some idea of what this enormous property valuation means may be had by comparison with the Englewood Methodist church, which has a membership of more than 1,000 communicants and owns property to the value of $45,000. The First Methodist proposes in time to replace its present structure with a large sky scraper business block, and in this new building considerable space will be reserved for class rooms, club rooms and other features of the institutional church.

Grace Episcopal, now just on the edge of the business district at Fourteenth and Wabash, was once the fashionable place of worship of the denomination, and though its membership has removed to other sections of the city it proposes to stay as a haven for the element that has grown up around it. To enable it to do this an endowment fund of $100,000 is now being raised. The pastors of this church are now open every night in the week, and it is the bright spot in an otherwise dark district.

Clothe Needy School Children.

The charitable organizations of Chicago are practically numberless. Some of them are peculiar and some scarcely worthy of recognition, but by charitably inclined public, but unique among them all is the School Children's Aid Society, the object of which is to clothe destitute children so that they may attend school.

Contributing Their Pennies

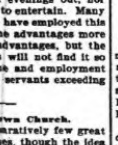
The compulsory education law of Illinois theoretically at least forces every child below the age of 14 years, and under certain conditions below 16 years, to attend school. It is the duty of truant officers to enforce this law, but children improperly dressed cannot be sent to school. It is a case of where exceptions must be made to fit conditions. That the conditions might be made to fit this law the School Children's Aid society was organized in 1887. Each year the children of the schools, of whom there are more than 300,000 in the primary grades, are asked to contribute to this fund. The contribution is asked for on a Thanksgiving offering, and is collected the day before Thanksgiving day. The pennies, the nickels, the dimes and a few larger coins contributed grows a fund that in the aggregate amounts to about $5,000 annually.

With this sum sufficient clothing was purchased last year to enable 3,579 needy children to attend school. To them were given suits, skirts, dresses, underclothing, shoes and stockings. No applicant was turned away empty handed, though not all could be supplied with all that was asked. With the fund new clothing is purchased. For boys ready-made clothing is bought, and for girls the material for dresses, skirts, etc., is then made into garments by different church sewing societies and the Needlewoman's guild.

From this fund the society distributed last year 3,358 pairs of shoes and stockings, 654 dresses and skirts, 1,015 suits for boys, 433 extra trousers and fleece-lined underwear to all that needed it.

Chicago "Kosher" Meat.

An industry that represents an output to the value of $2,000,000 annually is not small, and yet such is the case with that exists in Chicago and is but little known outside of a limited circle. It is the killing of "kosher" meat at the stockyards.



Killing "Kosher" Meat

The Jewish religion demands that all meat eaten by the followers of the church be killed either by Jewish rabis or under their inspection. To this religious demand four of the large packing houses at the stockyards employ Jewish rabbis, the chief of which force must of necessity be a member of the cabinet of the Rabbi Acot of the United States, Rabbi Ridwiz.

Rabbi Ridwiz is a newcomer to Chicago, and a new head of the church. When he reached the city Rabbi Album, the chief of the Jewish meat slaughterers at the stock yards declined to recognize him, and a ban was pronounced upon all Jewish meats. This brought about a boycott of stock yards meats on the part of the Jewish Butchers' association, which lasted for some two weeks. The packers, seeing they were losing valuable business, proposed peace overtures. Rabbi Album became a member of the cabinet of Rabbi Acot, Ridwiz, the boycott was raised and the slaughter of approved "kosher" meat again goes on as before. The product is sold largely in the Ghetto district.

MEN OF THE HOUSE

Gossip from Around the Speaker's Chair in National Congress.

PARLIMENTARY LAW AUTHORITY

The Value of Asher Hinds—Indiana Prominently Figures in National Legislation — Heads of Important Committees.

Washington.—The indispensable man is not numerous, but scarce as he is one is to be found in the speaker's room in the house of representatives. Asher Hinds has been clerk at the speaker's table ever since Tom Reed began to wield the gavel away back in the Fifty-first congress. He came here from Maine where he had been writing editorials on the Portland Press and he slipped right into the czar's habits and moods. He is a young man still, considerably under 40, and when Reed picked him out he was barely more than a boy; but he hadn't been in the harness a single session before he was looked upon by the older members as an authority on parliamentary law; and before two congresses had passed there was nobody else about the capitol who could compare with him.

Popular Clerk of Mr. Hinds

Reed himself depended on Hinds absolutely. The great speaker was not much of an adept in the intricacies of parliamentary law and didn't pretend to be. He was concerned in reaching results and having made up his mind what he wanted to do he had a way of turning to the experts about him for information as to how he might do it. Hinds was always able to find a way and the speaker never hesitated in following out Hinds's suggestions no matter where they might lead.

There has not been a republican speaker since who has not been even more dependent on Hinds than Reed was. When Reed was in the chair he noticed that whenever the house got into a parliamentary tangle Hinds would hie himself to the speaker's room and hurry back with some loose sheets of paper, upon consulting which a way out was sure to be found. This had happened several times when it aroused Reed's curiosity. He inquired about it and discovered that his clerk had spent his spare hours collecting all the precedents and decisions of speakers from the beginning of the government—work which nobody had ever had the intelligent industry to undertake before.

Hinds had a drawer full of these papers and as soon as the house leaders found out about them they passed a resolution to print them and put them in permanent form. Hinds' book is now the standard work on parliamentary precedents.

A Reincarnation of Reed.

It is a frequent subject of remark among habitues of the house that Hinds seems to be almost the reincarnation of Reed. It may be simply the strain of common ancestry among Maine seafaring folk, but there are certainly several striking points of resemblance.

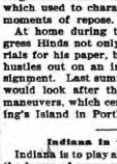
Does a Reportorial Stunt Now and Then

Hinds is not quite as big physically as Reed was—he is plenty big enough; and to look at him from the rear as he ambles up Pennsylvania avenue one might well imagine himself watching the resurrected speaker's rolling gait. Hinds has the same easy drawl supplemented by the same hard sense and delicious humor. His face is of the keen Yankee type, so that here the resemblance ceases. Nobody who remembers Reed can ever forget the vacant moon-like expression which used to characterize him in his moments of repose.

At home during the recess of congress Hinds not only writes the editorials for his paper, but he occasionally hustles out on an important local assignment. Last summer he thought he would look after the army and navy maneuvers, which centered about Cushing's Island in Portland harbor.

Indiana in the House.

Indiana is to play an important part in the house of representatives as long as Cannon is speaker.



Cannon Is Kind to Indiana

The old stand-bys, like Payne, Dalzell and Grosvenor will still continue in their positions won by seniority, but a new element has come in of younger men who have been loyal adherents of Cannon, and who will be his counselors now. Conspicuous among these are Hemenway and Overstreet of Indiana. Hemenway is to be chairman of the appropriations committee and Overstreet is to be chairman of the reorganized committee on post offices and post roads. But their influence does not arise from their chairmanships. It arises from their close personal relations with the speaker and his confidence in their judgment.

When the speaker came to look over his committees almost the first thing that struck him was the necessity of completely reorganizing the postal committee, the chairman of which had failed of reelection and the other members of which were almost without exception subject to some failing which made is inadvisable to put them at the head of a committee which was destined to handle a very knotty and disagreeable situation. So he decided to go outside the committee for a chairman. He didn't have to look long before he hit on Overstreet.

Overstreet was secretary of the republican congressional committee last year when the figures he made before election were almost exactly verified by the results. He is a mighty good politician, as well as a very clever but fellow every way and one of the most popular men in the house.

The Appropriations Chairman.

Hemenway is a different type, with fewer popular qualities and less of the politician's art. Cannon's confidence in him has grown through years of intimate relationship while both were members of the appropriations committee.

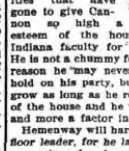
Not a Chummy Fellow

For several congresses Hemenway has been Cannon's right hand man on that committee and he possesses some of the sterling qualities that have gone to give Cannon so high a place in the esteem of the house. He has the Indiana faculty for close calculation. He is not a chummy fellow and for that reason he may never gain a popular hold on the house, but he is bound to grow as long as he remains a member of the house and he will become more and more a factor in legislation.

Hemenway will hardly develop into a floor leader, for he lacks the snap and pugnacity of a born debater, but he will always be looked upon as safe. He, too, is young enough to look forward to a career, but his ambition lies in the direction of the senate or the governorship of his state. Hemenway and Overstreet come from adjoining counties.

The Landis Brothers.

Two other Hoosiers who are going to attract attention are the Landis brothers. One of them has been in the house for three congresses and is known as a witty and forceful debater, but a thoroughly good fellow. He went to Boston two or three years ago and made a hit there before one of the political dining clubs of that town, which is even now remembered. He has a faculty for telling stories that nobody who hears them can by any possibility forget.



Brothers, of Different Principles

His brother, who is just beginning his first term, is like unto him in mental alertness, though there is little resemblance physically between the two. Charlie, the older, is a little over 40, stands to build on 6 feet and is spare.

Fred, the younger, is the baby of the house, with his 29 years. He is tall, angular and thin as a rail. He had already made a reputation as a story teller and wit. His quaint expressions are quoted in the republican coal regions.

Their father, Frederick Kenesaw, who used to be private secretary to Walter Q. Gresham, when Gresham was secretary of state in Cleveland's second administration. The way Kenesaw shook up the dry bones of the state department during his brief incumbency was a caution. He is a lawyer now in Chicago and he can hardly have more friends there than he left in Washington. Both Charlie and Fred Landis are newspaper men.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

Two New York Hotels.

Only two hotels in New York refuse to keep their register of guests open and publicly accessible. These are the Fifth Avenue and the Waldorf-Astoria. The Fifth Avenue is a favorite resort of politicians, and its guests sometimes prefer to be known to the public that they are there. The Waldorf-Astoria has made its way with leaders in haute finance, with important and unimportant persons, diplomats and men like Dr. Amador and M. Varilla with republics in their brains. The books must be accessible to the public; lists of guests cannot be transcribed. This is not only intended as a protection to the guests, but as a protection to the office staff. Many business houses send circulars to "Hotel arrivals" and copy the names, and at the Waldorf this would mean each morning the sorting of some 1,500 additional pieces of mail. The law only requires that a register shall be accurately kept, so that the police or authorized officers of government may consult it.—N. Y. Sun.

DOMESTIC WORK

Make It a Trade

THERE is one way to solve, at least partly, the vexed question of domestic help, and that is to make the social position of the kitchen girl a better one, so that intelligent American women can do housework without loss of self respect. There is one sure way also to do that, and it is to let the kitchen girl be graduated from a school of domestic science, as other girls are now graduated from schools of telegraphy, stenography and bookkeeping or from institutions where professional nurses are trained. Until the day of the nurse's training school her profession was not a profession at all, but a haphazard business given over to Sairy Gamps and Betsy Prigs, who stood very low indeed in the social scale. Now the smart, refined, trained nurse in her pretty, immaculately clean uniform is the social equal of any other professional person.

The like thing would undoubtedly happen in case of the girl who does domestic work if she took a course in a school of perfect housekeeping and at the end received a diploma certifying that she is a refined, intelligent woman who knows her business and will mind it. The disrepute into which domestic service has fallen is partly owing to the ignorance of those who do it. The raw, green girl who comes to us from the peasant class of other lands may have all the virtues of a perfect American housekeeper, but they are undeveloped. Many of these girls come from homes which have mud floors and know almost nothing, even of personal cleanliness.

These girls can secure work at good wages the moment they touch our shores, though quite ignorant of the tidy requirements of American housework. The abundance of employment makes them extremely independent and tends to develop alike impudence and slatternliness.

Suppose, now, American clubwomen should establish in each of the large cities of the Union a school for training in domestic work, confining its scope strictly to that. There would be courses in cookery, laundry work, chamber work and house cleaning. With modern improved domestic utensils, machines and implements household labor may be now made much easier than formerly it was. The first course in the model training school should be the inculcation of cleanliness as the foundation of all the rest. This probably would be the hardest course in which to train the housework student. At the end of the prescribed term of instruction, lasting, say, one to two years, there would go out from the school a young woman who would make of household work what the trained nurse has made of attendance on the sick.

Mrs. Russell Sage, whose head is packed full of good, hard common sense, is an advocate of as well as a worker for a school of domestic labor like that suggested. She is president of a board of women who purpose to start soon in New York city a training school for household workers. The ladies expect to connect with the institution an employment agency for their graduates and others. Mrs. Sage has made a study of domestic science and domestic help. She is freer from snobbery than most women with millions at their command would be, and she realizes perfectly that a kitchen girl is a human being with feelings, impulses and even prejudices much like those of the lady who employs her. Take domestic service out of the domain of rough labor and elevate it to the dignity of a trade, is the conclusion wise Mrs. Russell Sage has reached. To this end, under her lead, intelligent ladies, like herself, of the kind that do things, are working.

An association of ladies some years ago established a school of housework in Philadelphia which has done noble service in improving the domestic help of that city.

There is such a thing as esthetic housework. The gentle Quaker women, the quiet Shaker sisters, with their exquisite housekeeping, have shown that. From even the artistic viewpoint there is something beautiful in a house shining clean and in order from top to bottom. The girl graduate of the housekeeping school will understand household sanitation and hygienic cookery. She will attain such dignity that she will be able to enjoy regular hours of labor and have some time for herself.

ACCESSORIES OF FASHION.

Pretty Folded Kid Belts and Dainty Hand Bags.

The hat made entirely of ermine is the most fashionable and smart a woman can have, and its chief beauty is that it goes with everything.

Wide kid belts are perhaps the smartest feature of fashion for street wear. They are carefully fitted and are laid in folds to give the appearance of silk or cloth. They come in all tints to match the costume.

The little hand bag to match the costume has taken the place of the ordinary pocketbook. These little bags have come to be a necessity since women no longer have pockets. The bag should be as small as possible, however, just large enough to hold a handkerchief and a powder puff together with the requisite change. The prettiest come in pearl gray and in lavender kid mounted in gold, with little stones set in the fastening. Curious fat gold purses combining cardcases with the name traced in colored stones are carried in Paris.

The illustration shows a coffee colored cloth gown with facings of brown velvet decorated with tiny gilt braids and buttons. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

They Are Elaborately Made of Velvet, Chiffon and Lace.

The few blouses seen are of the most elaborate description. They are made of fine all over lace or crepe de chine or fine yellow net applique, with yellow insertion.

Chiffon velours and spotted velvet form some of the warmer blouses, and these are mingled with lace and sable or chinchilla edging. Blouses of green chiffon velours combine very handsomely with old yellow lace and chinchilla.

DOTTED CHIFFON EVENING GOWN.

They are worn either with skirts of cloth or of velvet. Blouses pouched back and front are among the latest things. They are made of accordion plaited chiffon trimmed with a narrow edging of good fur and a chemisette of fine lace. Such a waist carried out in white would be most dressy and effective worn with a white cloth skirt made very full and trimmed with applications of the same lace as the vest.

Ruchings will take the place of fur trimmings in the early spring, and they are very fashionable as it is on the lighter gowns, such as crepe de chines, veilings, etc.

Gowns of brown chiffon voile are considered very smart for restaurant dining and theater wear. They are trimmed with Persian chiffon and tiny gold or silver tassels.

Hats in pale shades of beaver are very smart and require but little trimming, a few flowers or a knot of ribbon, to render them complete. The great thing is to find a smart and becoming shape in a good quality.

One of the most effective hats is of black beaver trimmed with two beautifully shaded roses attached to the underside of the brim, while the upper part of the hat is simply trimmed with a big satin or velvet bow.

The illustration shows a dotted chiffon evening gown trimmed with ruchings of silk and diamond shaped medallions of lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

EYE TO MAIN CHANCE.

Colored Man Forsakes Daughter When He Finds That Mother Has Money in Bank.

At ten o'clock the other forenoon a citizen passed a house on Brush street, in Chicago, to see a young colored man and woman seated on the doorstep with their arms around each other. The pedestrian smiled and passed on, but before he had gone a block he was overtaken by the young man who, shamefacedly, said:

"I seed yo' grinnin', boss, an' I thought I'd explain dat it was a case of love at first sight. I was jest took wid dat gal de first minit I set eyes on her, an' I reckon she'll dun promise to marry me befo' noon."

Three hours later the citizen returned that way, and he found the young man billing and cooing with a much older woman, while the other sat sulking ten feet away. He passed on as before, and again the young man overtook him to say:

"Reckon yo' am sorter surprised ober de change, eh?"

"Yes, rather. You were courting the daughter two hours ago."

"Dat's a fact, sah."

"And you said it was a case of love at first sight."

"Yes, I said dat."

"Well, why did you drop her for the other?"

"Dey am mudder an' daughter, sah."

"So I should say, but what of that? You ain't going to make love to both at once, are you?"

"No, sah; no, sah. Ize gwine to let de gal slide."

"But for why?"

"Bekase, sah," replied the lover as he dropped his voice to the confidential pitch, "I has diskibered dat it's de mudder who owns de house an' has de $300 in de bank."

LOST VALUABLE BAG.

It Contained Half a Million Dollars and Was Returned Safely to Excited Owner.

Flustered and frightened, a well-dressed young man ran into the upper waiting-room of the Broadway street station, at Philadelphia, recently, and asked the special policeman:

"Where's my satchel? Have you seen it? I've lost it, and it has half a million dollars in it."

The policeman fell against the steam radiator and gasped. "Half a million dollars?" he murmured. "Why, I don't suppose anyone could carry that much away with 'em, could they? Ask the information bureau. Maybe one of the porters has wheeled it over there."

"THAT'S MINE!"

The information bureau had only three handkerchiefs and a penknife in stock.

"I stopped at the news stand; probably I left it there," said the young man.

The news agent said he had an old satchel which a suburban passenger had found, and handed to him, with the suggestion it might have money in it, if its weight was any indication of its contents. The satchel was produced.

"That's mine," said the young man. "It contains $260,000 in gold bonds, and as much more in other securities. Thanks." Then he hurried out into the train shed.

Chicken Without Feathers.

A featherless chicken, six months old, is a curiosity belonging to Charles Robinson, of Phillipsburg, N. J. Its skin is smooth and velvety, without a sign of hair or feather. It is the owner's intention is to breed from this chick, as featherless broilers would be likely to command high prices.

RODENT BREAKS JAIL.

Entrapped Rat, Aided by Another, Escapes from Trap Prison, in an Ingenious Way.

H. E. Barden, a printer of Toledo, O., tells an interesting story of rat intelligence. His pressroom is infested with rodents, and recently he sought to clean the place of them by means of a trap.

Occasionally he found a rat in it, but if he failed to take it out and dispatch it at once it invariably escaped. He determined to learn how the trick was done. Waiting until he had seen a rat securely in the trap he secretly watched it.

The trap is a wire affair, where the rat is led along until it reaches a flat piece of tin which tilts, allowing the rat to drop into a box, when the tin drops back into place, securing the prisoner.

Mr. Barden presently saw a second rat approach the trap and climb up near the entrance. Then the two rats began to work together. The imprisoned rat dragged the piece of cheese so that it was immediately under the tilting piece of tin. The rat on the outside had evidently been informed how the trap worked, for it braced itself with its hind legs so that it would not slip, and then, tilting the tin, the two rats worked the piece of cheese so that it wedged between the tilted platform and the side of the cage. This held the trap open so that the imprisoned rat could get out.

On several other occasions Mr. Barden watched and saw the performance repeated, the procedure being the same in every instance.

LATEST GOLD BRICK.

New Jersey Farmer Is Still Waiting for Reward Offered for Lost Diamond Ring.

James Thompson, a well-to-do farmer, living in New Jersey, near the Delaware Water Gap, was working on a fence along the road when a well-dressed stranger came along searching for some lost article in the road. Inquiry revealed that the stranger had dropped a $500 diamond ring a few hours before. He said he would give $100 for it. After an hour's fruitless labor the stranger gave it up and went away, giving the farmer his address in Scranton.

A little later a tramp appeared on the scene, and as he passed along the road he stopped and picked something from the dust. The farmer hastened out and found it to be the lost diamond. He negotiated for the possession of the stone and finally secured it for $50. Then he rushed off to Scranton, but failed to locate the well-dressed stranger. Later he learned from a jeweler that rings such as he had were worth about 25 cents each, if well cleaned.

Severe Blow to Hypnotists.

In Germany a severe blow has just been dealt to hypnotists, magnetic healers and other so-called occultists. A law has been passed prohibiting such persons from holding public seances, and heavy fines are prescribed as penalties in case of disobedience. The reason why such a measure has been passed is curious. "Seances, given by magnetic healers and others," says the law, "are likely to arouse public prejudice against the persons who are used as mediums for such occasions, and, therefore, it is ordained that no meeting of this kind shall be held in the future." Moreover, the magistrates throughout Germany have received strict instructions to prosecute with the utmost vigor any persons who publicly practice hypnotism, magnetic healing, or any other of the so-called occult arts.

SOLD INTO WEDLOCK.

Husband Paid One Dollar and a Razor for Wife and Then Refused to Support Her.

By her detention at the county jail at Port Huron, Mich., deserted by her husband and abandoned by her parents, a peculiar transaction in the life of Mrs. Anna Horn, nee Jones, has come to light. For one dollar and an old razor, according to the story, the woman was sold into wedlock, a bargain which she has many times had cause to rue. Up to a year ago the young woman lived at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, of Commercial street. About that time George Horn, of Clyde township, came to town in search of a wife.

He met an old friend—Harvey Lakin—and asked him to recommend a woman. Lakin thought of Miss Anna Jones as being of marriageable age, and the match was made without much ado, the intermediary receiving for his services a silver dollar and the razor. The alliance did not prove a happy one, and the bride soon returned to her old home, at the same time having her husband prosecuted for nonsupport. The criminal case, however, was dropped on advice of the prosecutor.

Now the mother asserts that she is unable to support the young woman, and a few days ago appealed to Sheriff Davidson, saying that her daughter was insane and asking that officer to take her. She was taken to jail but an investigation failed to show any signs of insanity, and a petition was then filed with the poor commissioners, asking them to care for the unfortunate woman. Pending action on the case she will remain with the sheriff.

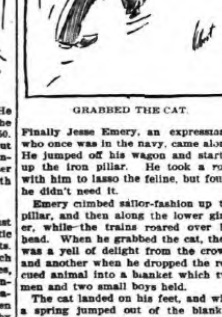
EX-SAILOR RESCUES CAT.

Climbs Structure of Elevated Railroad and Drops the Animal Into a Blanket.

The attention of an early morning crowd on Columbus avenue, at New York, was attracted by a large tomcat perched on a girder of the elevated road directly underneath the ties. He had evidently been there most of the night, and looked badly scared.

What excited the crowd was the narrow escape the animal had every time he tried to climb up to the track. Time and again he would poke his head up and duck just as a train roared over him. Between attempts he sat and mewed. It was a thirty-foot jump, or a climb down an iron pillar.

A changing crowd, that kept growing, watched the cat for three hours.



GRABBED THE CAT.

Finally Jesse Emery, an expressman, who once was in the navy, came along. He jumped off his wagon and started up the iron pillar. He took a rope with him to lasso the feline, but found he didn't need it.

Emery climbed sailor-fashion up the pillar, and then along the lower girder, while the trains roared over his head. When he grabbed the cat, there was a yell of delight from the crowd, and another when he dropped the rescued animal into a blanket which two men and two small boys held.

The cat landed on his feet, and with a spring jumped out of the blanket. He didn't stop to thank his rescuer. The rescuer jumped onto his wagon, said: "Forget it," to the crowd, and the incident was closed.

Domestic Service in Germany.

It is difficult in Germany for a professional rogue to enter a family as a domestic servant. There every servant has a character book, in which the mistress must enter the dates of the coming and leaving of the servant, with her character while in service. This the girl is obliged to take to the nearest police station and have it dated with the official stamp, thus preventing the manufacture of bogus recommendations.

WHAT IS WORN.

Wide Cuffs on Coats—Chinese Lamb the Latest in Fur.

The very widest possible cuffs are used on coats, and these are lined with white satin slashed and filled in with yellowish or cream white lace.

The three-quarter loose coat and the little loose coat reaching to the waist line and merely belted in at the back are both very smart.

Most of the trimming of hats seems to be on the underside of the brim or drooping on the hair.

Cluny lace and moleskin are mingled in fancy neckwear to go with rather severe tailor made suits, and white chiffon neckwear is decorated with touches of ermine.

Some beautiful evening gowns are carried out in royal blue net trimmed with sequins of the same color, and an equally good effect is obtained in brown net having bronze sequins. The waist of the latter gown would be smart enlivened by a few shaded orange flowers.

White Chinese lamb is the latest thing in fur. It is very effective, closely resembling the baby lamb, but is of a much flatter description. These coats are usually made three-quarter length and lined with delicately tinted Persian brocades.

The picture shows a fine cloth tailor made. The blouse has an inner vest of spotted panne, and the skirt is tucked on the hips and finished with three bands around the bottom.

Costumes For the House and For the Street.

Afternoon reception gowns are made in all the lighter clinging fabrics trimmed with tiny gaugings, plaitings, ruchings and entre deux of lace.

Very attractive little ties are made of fur in sable, ermine or moleskin.

UP TO DATE NIGHTGOWN.

These fasten in a loose knot around the throat and are finished off in black and white or with fringe or frills of chiffon to match.

Although some people do not like them, dressmakers continue to trim frocks with ruchings of taffeta or satin. On the heavier gowns some of these are very broad and have an edging of fur. Between these ruchings there are bands of gauging two or more inches wide, and in many cases velvet is used as well. So dresses are quite elaborately worked up.

The three-quarter length coat still continues to be the favorite because it is easier to walk in and because it shows an attractive glimpse of the gown underneath. These three-quarter coats are particularly becoming worn with a much frilled skirt, the frills just showing below the coat.

The picture shows an extremely up to date nightgown made of white china silk. It has a yoke of tuckings and insertion and very wide sleeves held together by ribbon bows. The ruffle at the bottom is a pretty addition and gives a flare around the feet.

MODISH HATS.

Smaller Shapes Copied From Old Paintings—Shaded Effects.

In contrast to the exaggerated shapes some very small hats are being worn. These are copied from old paintings and mediæval prints, and one sees the quaint Louis XI. shapes and, the furred bonnets of the middle ages converted into bewitching headgear for the modern woman.

Shaded effects are much used just now on hats and gowns, but especially on the former. The favorite combination is a deep tone of purple combined with ox blood red, shading into bright cerise. When carefully managed this is most effective, and an easy way is to trim a deep purple French sailor shape with a wreath of these shaded roses.

Bird of paradise plumes are again in vogue, and so are feather tips and aigrets, now that millinery is less flat than formerly. Cocks' plumes are perhaps the leading millinery ornament, but their downfall is soon predicted, because they are all too popular. They come in every shade conceivable from the palest heliotrope and pale gray to brilliant red and are placed on the hat in such a manner that they droop on the hair, forming a pretty contrast.

In the illustration is shown a tailor made hat of white felt trimmed with knotted velvet ribbon and a shaded wing under the brim.

FASHION'S FRILLS.

The New Moleskin Coats—The Season's Stocks Plainer.

The very fancy stock has been relegated to the ranks of forgotten neckwear. Instead we have the rather severe cravat with the street tailor made and the soft tie of lace or of chiffon to wear with the dressy visiting costume. Little stocks of white taffeta or chiffon have rounded ends, and these are embroidered with French knots in black or white silk. This is about as elaborate a piece of neckwear as the smart woman cares to wear.

The clasps on some of the fur stoles are very handsome, being of gold or silver, richly jeweled. This is especially the case with the stoles of ermine and fine sable, where the price of the clasp is often a serious item. Occasionally muff buckles are seen to match, the fullness of the top of the muff being drawn up through one of these jeweled affairs.

Coats of moleskin are made with the skins vandyked into little points, and this gives a very handsome effect. Such coats are three-quarters in length and loose, the full sleeves being held in with cuffs of embroidery or lace and the coat being faced for some distance back with the same trimming.

The French are trying to inaugurate a theater headdress not unlike the Dutch cap, only much tinier. It is composed of a band of lace embroidered in silk or gold and having a gold or a silver rose on each side of it. This is fastened directly back of the pompadour and gives a very jaunty effect when worn by the right person.

Gold and silver flowers are the latest, by the way, in hair decorations.

The illustration shows a gown of brown cloth trimmed with bias bands of chiffon velvet.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Jan. 7, 1904.

The man who advertises judiciously, other things being equal, is the man who will succeed, and this proposition will become more and more apparent from year to year. This is a strenuous age, and it's the aggressive advertiser who's going to forge to the front, just as sure as the sun rises and sets.—Retailer and Advertiser.

J. Wesley Johnson's term as president of the First National Bank will expire next Tuesday and we regret to learn of his decision to step out of the office. His refusal to accept another term will be received with disappointment not only by the stockholders and depositors but by the general public, which has witnessed the upbuilding of that strong banking institution under his administration. The public's confidence in him has always been great and for this reason alone he is an admirable man in any executive position, particularly of a banking concern.

EXHIBITIONS GIVEN BY Y. M. C. A. BOYS

Clever Gymnastic Stunts by the Lads in the Presence of Their Parents and Friends.

"HARVARD" WON GAME

FINAL MEET TO SETTLE BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP AN EXCITING ONE.

C. E. A. Heywood in Charge of the Affair—"Columbia" Defeated 4 to 0—The Lineups of the Two Teams.

The Y. M. C. A. kept open house all day Friday and numbers of the friends of members availed themselves of the hospitality freely proffered. In the morning an exhibition for the benefit of the parents and friends of the members of the boys' department was given of the gymnastic work of the department. The programme opened with calesthenics and dumb bell drills, illustrating the regular work of the past year. There were four divisions of the boys under the leadership of Howard Freeman, W. Loughlin, Walter Caldwell and Chester Denton. The boys performed on the idw bar, buck, horse and parallel bars, the boys of the younger grades exchanging apparatus and those of the more advanced grades following suit. The calesthenic drill was led by Director C. E. A. Heywood.

"Vaulting the elephant," which was the horse covered with mats, was an entertaining novelty as was also "jumping the string." A game of hustle ball, an adaptation of basket ball was played.

The final game in the boys' league to settle the tie between "Harvard" and "Columbia" was played and won by Harvard 4 to 0. Doane and Doeringer each scored a goal from the field in the second half, there being no scoring in the first period. The result leaves "Harvard" undisputed champion. The line up was: Harvard—G. Doane and A. Doeringer, forwards; W. Loughlin, centre; Lambert and Gavett, guards. Columbia—Woodhull and Line, forwards; Freeman, centre; Stern and Mackay, guards. Ten minute halves were played. Kenneth Robbie was referee and Walter Osborne, umpire.

AMUSEMENTS.

Over in Newark, at Proctor's Theatre, the programme next week will be headed by that famous minstrel star, George Primrose, and the Foley Twins. Mr. Primrose will present a unique singing and dancing specialty, in which he will present some of his latest songs. Paltry and Hilton, novelty cycling comedians; Barnes' famous animal actors, a revelation in brute intelligence; the Four Otts, in a farcical comedy sketch, entitled "The Silent Set;" Rakers and Berg, in a quaint little Japanese operetta, entitled "Little Pee Wee;" Ramza and Arno, eccentric comedians; Laura Bennett, describing her "weddin' tower;" LaBelle Blanche, the juvenile impersonator, and a dozen other strong holiday attractions will complete a highly interesting programme.

To Remove Here.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor-elect of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and his family, will move to Plainfield this week. Their residence will be on Putnam avenue.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICES ABOUT THE CITY

The Local Congregations in Prayer and Praise When the New Year Was Ushered In.

LARGE ATTENDANCES

THREE MINISTERS TAKE PART AT MONROE AVENUE M. E. SERVICE.

J. Lester Leggett in Charge at East Third Street Chapel—Entertainment at Hope Chapel—Rescue Mission and Reform Club.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

The members of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal church led by Rev. James R. Bryan, knelt in prayer at a watch-night service Thursday evening. The services began at 9:30, which were in charge of the pastor, Rev. John McMurray.

Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, made an address on looking backward and forward. The quartette, composed of John W. Gaub, John P. Thompson, John Babcock and Walter M. McGee, rendered two selections. A social time was then enjoyed until 11:15. Worship was then resumed and as the new year was rung in the assemblage knelt in prayer. Refreshments were served later.

Hope Chapel.

The new year was ushered in by many members of Hope chapel at a watch-night service. The early part of the evening was taken up with recitations by G. Stuart Simmons, and phonographic selections by Harry K. Lister. The watch-night service, conducted by Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, was held at midnight. The committee in charge of these arrangements were Mrs. Donald McGuinn, Mrs. George Radford and Mrs. J. Fred Wharton.

East Third Street Chapel.

The watch-night services at the East Third Street chapel, New Year's eve, were largely attended by members and friends. The services began at 10 o'clock and lasted until after midnight. Rev. J. Lester Leggett, who, beginning tomorrow night will have charge of the work at the chapel, led the meeting. The time was occupied in giving testimonies and offering prayers. Special music was rendered. Mr. Leggett gave a helpful talk appropriate to the dying year and the new year. When the new year arrived there was a general exchange of good wishes.

Reform Club.

The members of the Reform Club watched the old year out Thursday night at Reform Hall. William Oakley, of Elizabeth, led the meeting and several others furnished testimonials. Solos were rendered by W. C. Smith, Jr. A business meeting of the club will be held Tuesday night and the annual meeting Thursday night. To the latter meeting have been invited all the members of the ministry in the city and prominent business men. There will be twelve speakers.

Rescue Mission.

The watch-night meeting of the Rescue Mission Thursday night was largely attended. Phonograph selections were given by Frederick Goodwin and stereopticon views on a variety of subjects by Albert Kanr. William Oakley, of Elizabeth, spoke, as did also Mrs. O'Brien and Miss Sutton.

Bethel Chapel.

The watch-night service at Bethel chapel New Year's eve was largely attended and full of interest. The pastor, Rev. F. D. Tildon, was in charge, and the closing hours of the old year were spent in testimony, prayer and song.

AMUSEMENTS.

The prevailing rates for seats at the New York theatres has been the subject of wide discussion in the press and among playgoers during the past year. It has been made clear that public sentiment demands a lower tariff at the first-class theatres. Harrison Grey Fiske, manager of the Manhattan Theatre, is convinced that the $2 scale of prices is excessive. Mr. Fiske makes the following statement: "I am satisfied that a large number of persons, irrespective of the question of personal means, feel that $1.50 is quite enough to pay for an orchestra seat, unless in an exceptional case, such as the engagement of some great foreign artist imported at heavy expense and exploited under a continuous large outlay. I purpose to adopt that scale for the best seats in the Manhattan Theatre hereafter, beginning with the engagement of 'The Virginian' on Tuesday, Jan. 5. I have consulted with Mr. Kirke LaShelle, manager of 'The Virginian,' and with the managers of other attractions that are to appear at the Manhattan, and I find that their views entirely accord with my own."

FIRST REPORT OF COUNCIL'S P. S. C.

Synopsis of Result of Telephone Competition Investigation Made by Committee.

WHY IT WAS DENIED

REPORT RECITES RECOMMENDATIONS AS TO LIMITATIONS.

That the time is not ripe for the granting of the application of the Central New Jersey Telephone Company to operate in this city was the conclusion reached by the committee of the Common Council on public service which acted upon the application. William S. Tyler, chairman, James F. Buckle and Ralph I. Tolles composed the committee.

The report submitted by the committee relates to the general question of the relative advantages of having two mutually independent telephone companies competing in the same territory and to the merits of the particular application before the Council. Much of the report is concerned with telephone history, the struggles of independent companies against the Bell companies.

A resume of an extensive correspondence by the committee with business men in several States is given and shows a general sentiment of approval of the double system. It was found that the Central N. J. Telephone Company has as yet obtained but one important franchise, New Brunswick, although several applications are now in the hands of governing bodies of other towns.

In explaining its decision that the time for granting the applications is not ripe, the committee believes that no advantage can result from hasty action. In explanation it calls attention to the automatic system of operating the exchanges, doing away with "central" operators and making absolute secrecy and promptness assured through a plan of mechanical levers. This plan which is now undergoing extensive improvements is the one contemplated by the new company in Plainfield and according to the committee "nothing will be lost by awaiting the further developments of the immediate future."

The committee believes that the multiplication of wires, poles and conduits in the streets is a growing menace to the beauty, convenience and safety of the city, and that no further privileges in this regard should be granted until proper provision can be made for the including of all wires in one system.

Two telephones where required in one place of business are usually less convenient and slightly more expensive than one, but one telephone usually costs less than before and is greatly improved by the presence of competition, both in the equipment furnished, and in the courtesy shown to patrons. The persons requiring both systems represent a small proportion of the population, and even they receive all the benefit coming from the enormous increase in the number of telephone users, which universally follows the advent of a competing company. The fallacy that to obtain complete service one must employ both companies is apparent if we consider the universal experience of other places, that the old company never falls off in the number of its subscribers, but increase that number as never before, so that a subscriber receives more and not less at the same or lower cost. The company merely adds still further to the number.

The report calls special attention to the fact that undue importance is given in popular contemplation to the presence or absence of long distance connections, inasmuch as statistics show that more than 95 per cent. of all calls are local. The committee believes that a purely local company maintained by home capital would probably give better satisfaction to the public than any larger foreign corporation could, and could obtain the benefit of long distance service quite as soon, when available to any other.

The report calls attention to the fact that under the terms of the franchise granted to the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Co., the city has no power to direct or control the affairs of the company, and that no improvement can be looked for except in the benefits effects of competition.

The report then enumerates the committee's recommendation, with respect to the proper limitations to be placed upon any new company, as follows: Franchise to be limited to 25 years; time limit for commencing and completing construction; rate limitation substantially below present charges; right of inspection and control for protection of city's interests; certain number of feet of wires to be placed under ground every year; free telephones in city offices including long distance service within one hundred miles; provision against selling out to competitor; proper bond for the performance of the company's obligation; forfeiture of charter for failure to live up to agreements and ordinances; fair proportion of profits to be reserved to the city; right to the city to purchase the plant after a stipulated number of years.

COMMON COUNCIL'S HEAD, R. I. TOLLES

City Fathers Organize for 1904, and Transact Routine Business at First Meeting.

A FEW CHANGES MADE

GLOAK SUCCEEDS TOLLES AS CHAIRMAN OF STREET COMMITTEE.

Garriques Head of Aims Committee and Wilson Chairman of Auditing Committee—Mayor's Message to be Read Monday Night.

The Common Council for 1904 met Friday for organization, all of the members being present except Mr. Garrigues. Only such business as was absolutely necessary was transacted and the session was a short one. Ralph I. Tolles was elected president, succeeding James F. Buckle, who retired with old Council.

Mr. Lee gave notice that at the next meeting he would move that the rules for 1903 be adopted for the coming year. The bonds of Constables Amos Moffett and Peter Weaver were received and filed. The petitions referred from the old to the new Council were turned over to the proper committees to be reported upon later.

Mr. Gloak, the new chairman of the streets and sewer committee, offered a resolution appropriating $2,000 for the street work until regular appropriation is made. Mr. Daniel offered a resolution designating The Daily Press and the Courier News as the official newspapers of the city for the coming year. Jacob Dunham was reappointed janitor for the coming year at the usual salary, and George B. Wean was also reappointed stenographer and copyist for the year at a salary of $400.

Accompanying the annual report of the Board of Health, which will be called up at the next meeting, was a communication from Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, secretary, stating that the trap in the police headquarters is not sanitary and requesting that it be made so. The matter was referred to the police committee with power.

President Tolles announced the following as the standing committees for the year:

Finance—Leslie M. Daniel, Clarence L. Murphy, William S. Bullock, J. Stephen Higham, William A. Garrigues.

Streets and sewers—William L. Gloak, J. Stephen Higham, Robert L. Lee, Theodore D. Wilson, William S. Tyler.

Fire and buildings—Robert L. Lee, William S. Bullock, Frank DeW. Randolph, William A. Garrigues, Leslie M. Daniel.

Police—Frank DeW. Randolph, William L. Gloak, Clarence L. Murphy.

Lights and trees—Clarence L. Murphy, J. Stephen Higham, William L. Gloak.

Alms—William A. Garrigues, William H. Bullock, Theodore D. Wilson.

Auditing—Theodore D. Wilson, William S. Tyler, Leslie M. Daniel.

It will be seen that no changes are made in the chairmanship of the finance, fire and buildings, police, lights and trees and license committees. William L. Gloak succeeds Mr. Tolles as chairman of the streets and sewer committee and William A. Garrigues takes Mr. Gloak's place as chairman of the alms committee, while Theodore D. Wilson is chairman of the auditing committee.

There being no further business the Council adjourned to meet Monday night, when it is expected that the mayor's message will be received and the appointments made.

Councilman Tyler did not fare well in the mak-up of the committees.

The Examiner of last week published in New York, has for the decoration of its front cover an excellent picture of Rev. Dr. John Alexander Chambliss, recently installed pastor of the First Baptist church, of this place. A brief sketch of his career is given.

Pupils Promoted.

The annual promotions of pupils from the primary to the intermediate and from the intermediate to the main school were features of the session at the First Baptist Church Sunday-school on Sunday. In all eighteen pupils were promoted.

J. Hervey Doane's photograph "Revolutionary House at Two Bridges," near Rahway, won the first prize in the amateur contest of photos published in the magazine of the Mail and Express on Saturday.

DISCOURAGED MAN ENDED HIS OWN LIFE

James Ray, a Machinist, Took Carbolic Acid and Died in An Hour.

UNABLE TO GET WORK

STOMACH PUMP USED, BUT MAN DID NOT RALLY.

Brooded for Long Time Over His Inability to Get Employment—Machinest by Trade—Left Relatives in Ireland.

By drinking carbolic acid in his tea because he could not get work, James Ray, who boarded at the house of Eden Boice, of Central avenue and West Third street, killed himself New Year's eve. At 6 o'clock in the evening Ray bought a bottle of carbolic acid at one drug store and rough-means at another. When he reached home, he asked for a cup of tea and poured into it the acid, explaining, when questioned, that it was whiskey, and that he wanted something for a bracer to warm his stomach. By 7 o'clock the man was dead in spite of the fact that Dr. Albert Pittis was quickly on the spot and operating over him with a stomach pump. Ray did not seem to suffer excessive pain, apparently escaping the extreme agony which usually accompanies the death struggles of those who murder themselves by drinking carbolic acid.

Ray was sixty-eight years of age and came to this country from Ireland when sixteen years old. He was a machinist, and came to this city twenty years ago from Connecticut. He was employed first at Potter's Press Works and later at Walter Scott's Press Works, which place he left about three months ago on account of trouble in his leg. Recovering, he returned and asked for a position but on account of his age, he is said to have been refused. Over this Ray brooded until he decided that death was the best solution to his troubles. Ray had boarded at the house of Eden Boice for the past seventeen years. He had been drinking heavily of late.

SCHOOL BOARD'S ELECTION

OFFICERS CHOSEN AND CHANGES IN TEACHING CORPS MADE.

The present officers of the Plainfield Board of Education were re-elected at Monday's meeting and will serve for the year 1904. Dr. J. B. Probasco was re-elected president; F. T. Woodhull, secretary; and F. B. Clark, clerk. To the newly created position of vice president, L. N. Lovell was chosen.

The committees which served during the past year will continue during 1904 as follows: Committee on teachers and text books, J. B. Probasco, L. N. Lovell, C. F. Abbott; books, stationery and supplies, F. T. Woodhull, F. C. Abbott, J. B. Probasco; buildings and repairs, C. F. Abbott, J. T. Probasco, L. N. Lovell; fuel, E. M. Cave, L. N. Lovell, F. T. Woodhull; finance, L. N. Lovell, F. C. Abbott, E. M. Cave.

As members of the Board of School Estimate, L. N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott were re-elected.

Announcement was made of the resignation of Miss Ada B. Weatherwax and Miss Mary Buckle as teachers in the Irving school, and of Miss Elsie Gould from the Franklin school. As their successors, appointment was made of Miss Helena Hubert, a graduate of the normal school at Cortland, N. Y., Miss Ethel W. Fletcher, a graduate of the Trenton Normal School, and Mi s Geraldine McGauley, a graduate of the Newport N. Y., Normal School.

The custodian of school monies report showed a balance on hand December 31, of $33,550 06. The medical inspectors, Drs. Tomlinson and VanHorn, stated that examination had been made of thirty-seven pupils during the month of December. Formal action was taken regarding the authorizing of the building of a new high school in accordance with the new Colby school law, the building to cost $112,000 and the lot $18,000.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Darby, of Alton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edith Marion Darby, to Edward P. Simon, of Philadelphia. Mr. Simon is a member of the firm of Caldwell & Simon, architects, of the Quaker City.

Central Office Manager.

G. A. Torbert, who has been associated in the "central office" of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company at Newark, has been transferred to Plainfield, where he is now centra' office manager at the local telephone exchange.

COMMON COUNCIL ACTS ON MESSAGE

All Appointments Made by Mayor Confirmed Without a Dissenting Vote.

THE LICENSE FEES GO UP

AN ORDINANCE AFFECTING SALE OF LIQUOR AWAITS FINAL ACTION.

Board of Health Recommends Municipal Collection of Garbage—Commissioners of Assessment and Board of School Estimate Named.

The various appointments by Mayor O. L. Jenkins were confirmed and his recommendation that the liquor license fees of both retail and wholesale dealers be increased, that of the retailers from $700 to $1,000 and the wholesalers from $500 to $800 a year, were concurred in through an ordinance adopted on first and second readings changing the amounts of the fees. The ordinance was ordered advertised and will come up for final adoption at the next regular meeting in February. All of the members of the Council were present. The session was one of unusual length for the reason that during an executive session of nearly an hour and a half, the question of license fees and the fixing of the several salaries for the coming year, were discussed, thereby doing away with the plan of holding a special conference for the purpose of fixing salaries.

The first business was that of accepting the resignations of Townsend Rushmore, R. A. Meeker and H. W. Marshall as commissioners of assessment in sewage matters. This action was taken so that a new commission could be appointed, it having been determined that Mr. Marshall cannot serve by reason of the fact that he owns one of the properties affected. The new commission appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the Council is composed of H. A. Meeker, Townsend Rushmore and James F. Buckle.

After the filing of the bonds of Collector F. H. Smith and Constable J. H. Manley, the Mayor's message was read. The full text appears in another column. Following the message were the appointments. Andrew J. Gavett was appointed street commissioner to succeed himself, while William Craig was appointed to succeed W. Cornell as a commissioner of appeal. Craig A. Marsh was reappointed corporation counsel and Dr. T. S. Davis and F. W. Dunn were reappointed members of the Board of Health for a term of two years.

These special policemen were appointed: William Harding, S. R. Hope, Charles Harris, Henry Pugh, Jesse Scull, Joseph Merrison, George Dean, D. F. Stewart, William Downs, J. H. Conroy, Edward Martin, Alexander D. Ayers, Charles Geise, Robert McCormick, Nathan J. Pollard, William Forrestel, Thomas O'Gorman, Thomas Clarkson, William Addis, Sr., Frank Keiso, Isaac Kennedy, Edward Maynard, William J. Eakins, Edgar Brokaw, Lewis Peterson, Edwin Dobbs, Jeremiah Cash, James Baldwin, James Beimer, Fred Wine, Jacob Wagner, Jacob Kriney, Charles J. McCarthy, Frank Vanderhoff, Thomas Mercein, Fred. W. Pearce, Peter Hamilton, Jacob C. Dunham.

A report from the Board of Health stated that it had been determined that $3,750 would be needed for health purposes during the coming year, exclusive of any amount for the treatment of small-pox, and the Council was asked to appropriate that sum for he use of the Board. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The fifteenth annual report of the Board of Health was also presented, a portion of it being read. The report of the Board on the question of municipal collection of garbage was referred to the streets and sewer committee for further consideration.

Dr. Charles R. Lufburrow, the city physician, presented his annual report showing that he has made 423 visits and that proper treatment has been given to the city's poor when needed.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution fixing 10 per cent. as the amount of interest to be added to all taxes delinquent after December 20 last. The law provides that it must be fixed between 7 and 12 per cent. The new law also provides that the governing body of the city shall fix the salary of the tax collector and on Mr. Daniel's motion the salary of Collector F. H. Smith for the coming year was fixed at $3,250, an increase of $250 over that of last year.

In accordance with previous custom, Mr. Tyler nominated the two members who are to serve as members of the Board of School Estimate from the Council. They were L. M. Daniel and Robert L. Lee. They were elected and together with two members from the Board of Education and the Mayor will constitute the Board.

By this time the temperature of the Council rooms had dropped from 75 to about 50 degrees, it being uncomfortably cold. This brought forth a resolution from Mr. Lee, which was adopted, that the owners of the building be notified by the city clerk to keep the rooms at the proper temperature, that is 70 degrees or over, when in use. Mr. Tolles added "all night if the Council is in session that long."

Mr. Tyler then introduced an ordinance, as chairman of the license committee, changing the license fees, that is striking out the fee $700 for retailers and making it $1,000 and striking out the fee of $500 for wholesalers and making it $800. The ordinance was adopted unanimously on its first and second readings and ordered advertised.

LEAP YEAR DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB

Young Women Escorted the Men to the Affair and Engaged Their Partners.

SOME PRETTY FAVORS

LAURENS VAN BUREN LED THE COTILLION AT MIDNIGHT.

Reception Committee of Club in Charge of the Affair—Ball Room Well Decorated—Large Number in Attendance.

The novelty of having women call for them at their houses and being escorted to the dance, there to be asked to trip the light fantastic toe, was experienced Monday by a number of the young men identified with the Park Club. The affair was a leap year dance, arranged by the women of the club, and it was a success in every detail.

The decorations were an attractive feature of the event. The ball room was arranged with festoons of Christmas greens and garlands and wreaths. Dancing was started at 9:30 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock.

Laurens VanBuren led the cotillion which took place shortly before midnight. The favors were roses for the women and pink and white carnations for the men. Other favors were Hiawatha cards, Japanese fans, lanterns, horns, whistles and many other musical toys.

The affair was in charge of this reception committee; Miss Saidee Mae Howell, Miss Belle Milne, Miss Nellie Valiant, and the patronesses were Mrs. I. H. Brown, Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., Mrs. Elliott T. Barrows, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. Henry McGee, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. S. St. John McCutcheon, Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. G. T. Rogers, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. Isabel Milne.

MAIL MESSENGER KILLED BY A TRAIN

William Ruckman, Struck by Freight at the North Ave. Station, Died in Hospital.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED

ACCIDENT HAPPENED ON THE EVE OF THE NEW YEAR.

Dead Man Was a Resident of Watchung—Hard Working Man—A Valued Employe at Local Postoffice as Mail Messenger.

Wm. Ruckman, who has been employed for some time past as a mail messenger, carrying the mail between the railroad station and the postoffice, as well as between the postoffice and Watchung, received injuries at the North Avenue railroad station New Year's eve which resulted in his death at Muhlenberg Hospital at 7:45 last Friday night.

It was about 9 o'clock Thursday night when Mr. Ruckman was at the station with mail. He stepped out of the path of an eastbound Royal Blue train to into an eastbound freight train. He was knocked down, receiving a compound fracture of the skull. The ambulance was summoned and the man removed to the hospital. He did not become unconscious until 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, when there was a turn for the worse and he died early in the evening.

Mr. Ruckman was a resident of Watchung, having lived there for a long time. He was a hard-working man and his work gave satisfaction at the postoffice.

Mrs. Ashbrook and daughters, of Philadelphia, are stopping for a time with relatives in North Plainfield.

HARMONY RESTORED IN BOROUGH COUNCIL

Charles A. Lee Explains His Words and Robert Clark, Jr., Does Not Resign.

THE NEW FIRE LIMIT

ORDINANCE PASSED ESTABLISHING NEW BOUNDARIES.

Borough Must Pay Cost of Insurance and Storage of Voting Machine—Treasurer's Report Excellent—The Routine Business.

Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., did not offer his resignation at the meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council Monday as some supposed he would. Oil had been poured upon the troubled waters and Councilman Charles Lee's explanation of his words which passed in heated discussion at the last meeting served to bring about harmony at last night's session.

Although the meeting was a short one many matters of importance were transacted. The fire limit ordinance was passed on its third reading and was adopted without a dissenting vote. The report of the collector and treasurer, George F. Brown, showed that there was an unusually large balance on hand in the treasury for this time of the year. The amount now on deposit to the credit of the borough is $14,886.26, which the Mayor declared, is more than has been in the treasury at this time of the year in five years. This is explained from the fact that the taxes have been paid more promptly this year since the borough has taken measures to see that all delinquents come to time.

The treasurer's report is this: Taxes and interest, including sidewalks, $16,264.39; Board of Health, $189.30; special school tax, $8,613.80; recorder fines, $3; Plainfield Gas Company, franchise tax, $153.20; Plainfield Water Supply Company, franchise tax, $339.01; disbursements, $21,061.40; cash on hand, $14,886.26; borough fund, $11,588.68; engine house fund, $3,297.58. Street Commissioner James K. Arnold reported that during the month of December $14 75 had been spent on the streets in cleaning gutters. Councilman Clark reported that $22 95 was spent for the fire department and $443.04 for street lighting. It was decided to hold up the bill of the Standard Paving Company until repairs can be made. It appears that there is too much slope to the sidewalk and that when there is ice upon it it is dangerous to pedestrians. It is the intention of the Council to see that this defect is remedied.

North Plainfield will be obliged to stand the expense of storage and insurance for the new voting machine now located in Robert Trewin's barber shop on Somerset street. A communication from Trenton, which was read at the meeting, stated that the borough should make arrangements for the storage and insurance of the machines, the expense incurred thereby to be borne by the municipality.

Councilman Nichols moved that warrants be drawn for the payment of bills amounting to $100. A resolution was passed appropriating $100 for the services of an expert accountant to audit the books of Collector Brown. Councilman Nichols and Mayor Smalley both paid a high tribute to Mr. Brown and said that they have always found his books in an excellent condition. It has been the custom of the borough to employ an auditor each year. Councilman Lee reported that there have been nine arrests and the borough and $8 have been collected on fines. Councilman Lee moved that claims amounting to $24 in the police department be paid.

The next Council meeting will be held Friday night, January 15.

Home For Kings.

The story is given out that the Steel Trust has slipped from the hands of Morgan and Schwab, and has passed under the control of Rockefeller and Frick. The interesting part of the story is that such a reorganization will be bard, as it will abolish the enormous salaries paid to friends of the management, and that such salaries will be paid as will enable the recipients to "live comfortably in Metuchen or Plainfield, but not in style on Fifth avenue," an expressive description of a laudable change; but as she saying will go to the Standard Oil Company the advantage to the public is not self-evident.—Trenton True American.

WALLACE VAIL DIED; AGED SEVENTY-FIVE

Former Postmaster Passed Away This Morning; Death Due to Heart Trouble.

WAS ONCE INFLUENTIAL

ACTIVE IN LOCAL POLITICS FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS.

Retired From Municipal Affairs After Being Defeated for Sheriff Recently Ended Business Career —Arrangements for Funeral.

Wallace Vail, for years a leading citizen of Plainfield, lies dead at his home at 1314 Dunellen avenue. He passed away Tuesday at 1:30 a. m. after fighting against an attack of heart disease for several weeks. Few men have wielded the power and influence here that he did.

He was seventy-five years old and until he retired from active business five years ago was one of the leading business men in local real estate circles. Coming here with his parents from Bound Brook at an early age. He received the greater part of his education in Plainfield. Before he was scarcely of age he began to take an interest in politics.

Some have said that the work of Wallace Vail in politics in this city was the cornerstone to the present stable government here. He was progressive and enterprising. There was nothing that came up in the way of an improvement to the city but that Wallace Vail was not at its head.

He was a staunch Republican. For thirteen years he served as Postmaster under Lincoln and Grant, succeeding Elston Dunn. So great was his interest in municipal affairs that his wife practically took charge of the mail service in order that he might look after other interests. He was frequently a member of the Election Boards. He ran against Nathaniel Thompson for sheriff of Union county but was defeated. This defeat crushed him perceptably and his interest in politics began to wane and the beginning of the end of his power and influence was apparent. He retained an active interest in the fire department. He was an active member in the Granelle Engine Company he was an enthusiastic fire fighter and for several terms held positions on the fire boards. He was a member of the Exempt Fire*men's Association of this city up* to the time of his death. He led the agitation for a steamer for the fire department.

In the face of much opposition Mr. Vail also led the movement to macadamize the streets of this city. He believed in good roads and he wanted Plainfield to be a model city. He was connected with the Telford Paving Company and laid the first street of macadamizing in this city. As payment he accepted a lot in the southern part of the city.

There are many people in this city today who owe much to Wallace Vail for he has more than once sent coal and food to those who suffered. Charity was part of his nature but he made no display of it. During the heighth of his power as a politician and leading citizen he was generally considered one of the wealthiest men in Plainfield. One man said that morning when he heard of Mr. Vail's death that "he at one time carried the Republican party in his vest pocket but his loose change he kept in the pocket with a hole in it."

Mr. Vail was a lover of fast horses. Since he was a young man he always had a number of thoroughbreds. His stables were always well stocked and at one time he dealt in horses.

Mr. Vail's full name was William Wallace Vail. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Vail, whose old homestead is still located at the corner of Central avenue and West Seventh street. He also lived at one time at the corner of West Fourth street and Central avenue. Besides his wife, who was a Miss Hulda Sturtavant, he is survived by only one sister, Mrs. Trueman Moffett, of Philadelphia.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 1:30 from his late residence at the corner of Dunellen and Clinton avenues and the interment will be in Evergreen cemetery. The services will be conducted by Rev. J. B. Bryan.

John Silvers, of Lakewood, has been visiting friends in town during the past few days.

Miss Belle Beekman, of Martinsville, spent the holiday season with Plainfield relatives.

Mrs. John Purcell, of Raritan, has been spending the past week with friends in Plainfield.

Miss Mary Wells, of East Seventh street, is spending the holidays with friends in New England.

Miss Walker, of Rockview avenue, has been spending the holiday vacation at Concord, N. H.

to the expense of government, municipal, county and State. The Martin Act, which has proved of such value in enabling the city to enforce the collection of delinquent taxes on real estate, still remains in force, both with respect to taxes now due and taxes on real estate hereafter to fall due, and it is of the highest importance that all necessary steps should be taken by the several officers charged with duties under that act, to insure in the future, as in the past, the contribution of every piece of real estate in this city, not expressly exempted, of its full fair share of the burden of taxation.

The New School Law.

It is sincerely to be hoped that at last the Legislature has enacted a school law that is constitutional. The several previous futile attempts in that direction have greatly embarrassed the Boards of Education of this and other cities, and if the act passed at the last special session of the Legislature should in its turn, be successfully attacked, and the erection of the proposed new high school building of this city is further delayed, the injury to this city will be well-nigh irreparable, unless some means can be found to enable the city and the Board of Education to fall back on some other law in the contingency of the new school law being declared unconstitutional. It is believed that such a law may be found among those enacted last winter, which may prove of value in the premises. I need hardly suggest the need of especial care in the matter of the issue of bonds in this connection, so that when they shall be sold, they may command the confidence of bidders and realize such prices as the financial credit of this city entitle us to expect. It is necessary that your Honorable Body shall at its present meeting or at the first adjournment thereof, comply with Section 73 of the new school law, by appointing two of its members, who, together with the Mayor and two members to be appointed by the Board of Education, shall constitute the "Board of School Estimate" of this school district, and that the members of such Board should take the oath of office as such, before the city judge within ten days after their appointments.

Licenses.

This city has long been committed to the system of the regulation of the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors by its license, rigid limitation as to the number of licensed places, the requirement of abundant certification as to the good character of the license, and the enforcement of the penal ordinance governing the conduct of the business. As the city has rapidly grown in population, the effort to correspondingly increase the number of saloons, has for the most part been frustrated In my judgment, we should adhere to the policy that has been so long tried and not found wanting. There is no use of increas*ing the number of liquor licenses in* this city. The only change necessitated in this respect by the greater population is more extensive police supervision, and this should be accompanied by an increased license fee. There would be no hardship involved upon the licenses, because it will be far less onerous on them to pay the increase, than it would be to adopt the policy here, observed in most other cities, of making the number of saloons keep pace with the number of the population. In most cities of the size of Plainfield, the number of licensed places is more than double or treble the number here. I submit to the favorable consideration of your Honorable Body the suggestion that during the present year the license fee be made one thousand dollars, and that the number of licensed places be not increased at all.

City Park.

The special communication urging the acquisition and embellishment of a public park suited to the needs of Plainfield, is of such recent date that you will permit me to refer to that communication and the map and documents accompanying the same, and to urge that if you should deem it wise, the matter may be taken up afresh.

Concerning Improvements Generally.

The several public improvements inaugurated during the last twelve months, and with which your Honorable Body is entirely familiar, have met with the approval of citizens and taxpayers, especially in view of the fact that none was undertaken without first providing for the expense incident thereto. Important as it is to give the city the benefit of these and like improvements, it is even more important to undertake none not warranted by the moneys on hand, or those that may be raised by moderate and reasonable taxation.

Garbage Collection.

There would appear to be some public sentiment in favor of providing a system of collecting garbage from the houses of citizens at the public expense. In my opinion, the time is not ripe for the adoption of such plan in this city. It could not be successfully instituted without the imposition of taxes beyond the point that seems to me to be just and reasonable. Considerations of public health do not necessitate a change in the present methods, inasmuch as the ordinances of the city, and the Sanitary Code of the Board of Health, and the supervision of the Health Officer and the Health Inspector afford the most ample safe-guards if the ordinances are properly enforced. Again, to tax all property to meet the expense of the removal of garbage from private houses and other buildings, would be unfair to many small property owners, who are now able to attend to the matter at little or no expense.

Appointment of Assessors.

It has erroneously been supposed that the term of the Board of Assessors expires January 1st, 1904. The whole matter is fixed by State law. As pointed out in my Message of 1902, the Meeker Act extended the terms of all appointive officers. The Act applies to the Board of Assessors of this city whose first term was for three years from noon of the first Monday in January 1898 and whose second term, without the Meeker Act, would not expire until several days after January 1st, 1904, and under the Meeker Act, is extended to January 1st, 1905. As in the case of all other appointive officers, so with the members of the Board of Assessors, the State law, which executes itself, extends their term of office for nearly one year beyond the term for which they were appointed before that Act was passed.

Your obedient servant,
Otto L. Jenkins.

The Red Book.

The January Red Book is characterized by its usual high standard of excellence in cover, illustrations and stories. Seventeen portraits introduce the pictorial features, nine of them photographic studies by American artists, and eight selections from Paris studios. The stories, a dozen or more, are invariably readable, clever and original. Among the authors represented in this number are Arthur E. McFarlane, Harriet A. Nash, Rafael Sabatini, Annette Kittredge, Frederick Walworth, Marion Short, Kemlo Watson, Mary E. Fitz Gerald, John Harwood Bacon, Ida Alexander Frederic Johnston and Bradley Ford. These stories are illustrated throughout and the color printing, convenient form and typographical excellence of the magazine make it one of the most welcome of all the periodical list.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. D. TenEyck, of North Branch, have been visiting Mrs. L. D. Holmes, of North Plainfield.

Miss Ellen McQuirk, of Raritan, has returned home after a visit of several days with Plainfield friends.

Miss Ada Higgins, teacher in the public school at Watchung, is much improved from a recent severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. LaTourette have returned from a visit at the home of their son at Westerly, R. I.

L. R. Thurlow, of the Board of Health office, has returned from a visit to his former home at Brookline, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cleaves, of West Front street, have been spending several days with relatives at Marsinsville.

J. Hervey Wyckoff, of Raritan, who recently underwent an operation at the hospital for ear trouble, is steadily improving.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Tallamy, of West Sixth street, who have been visiting relatives at Raritan, have returned home.

Samuel Crouse, of this city, who has been spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Crouse, of Raritan, has returned home.

Miss Grace VanCleef, of Trenton, has been the guest of Plainfield relatives for a time. She is now visiting her cousin in Westfield.

Mrs. J. T. Armstrong and son, Howard, of Brooklyn, who have been visiting relatives in Plainfield for several days, returned home Monday.

Theodore Smith, of Allen place, who has been confined to his home for the past few weeks with rheumatism, has recovered sufficiently so as to be able to be out again.

The City Fathers in Final Session for the Year Hear the Annual Reports of the Heads of Principal Branches of the Local Municipal Government.

THE IMPROVEMENTS THE KEYNOTE OF ALL THE REPORTS.

EXCELLENT CONDITION SHOWN IN THE STATEMENTS SUBMITTED BY THE TREASURER, FIRE CHIEF, POLICE CHIEF AND STREET COMMISSIONER—MANY IMPROVEMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE AND OTHERS RECOMMENDED—DETAILED REPORTS.

With unusual despatch the Common Council for 1903 finished up the business for the year at its final meeting held December 30, and to all purposes the Council is now a thing of the past, although it will be legally in existence until 12 o'clock on New Year's Day. All of the members were present except Councilmen E. E. Pray and W. A. Garrigues, the former retiring this year. Mr. Pray, however, sent a pleasant letter denoting his regrets in not being able to attend the last meeting.

President James F. Buckle, who also retires, made a brief mention of the pleasure he has had during the year in presiding over the meetings of the Council, while a resolution offered by Mr. Lee extended to the retiring president the thanks of every member for his uniform courtesy and the efficient manner in which he presided over the meetings for 1903, was passed unanimously.

The actual business of the meeting consisted chiefly of hearing reports of the various officials. These reports, which are published in other columns, include those of Chief Treasurer William F. Arnold, Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during December sixteen permits were given and that for the past year 258 were granted. City Judge William H. Runyon submitted his annual report, in which he expressed his appreciation for improvements made in the police department. The statistical part of his report is found in that of the Chief of Police.

Mr. Daniel reported on two old petitions, one of which was regarding the adjustment of a tax assessed on property owned by the Potter Press Company, it having been claimed by the company that the tax was paid twice. Mr. Daniel moved that the matter be referred to the incoming Council. He also moved similar action regarding the petition of F. E. Kinsman for an adjustment of the tax on his property on Pemberton avenue.

Mr. Murphy reported that an electric light has been located at the corner of West Fourth street and Manesa place, in accordance with the petition of O. B. Pearson and referred with power. He also reported that he had received a communication from the president of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, informing him that the local light company had been merged with the Union and Middlesex Lighting Companies and that in the future all bills would be payable to the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Lighting Company. The communication was referred to the corporation counsel for consideration.

Mr. Murphy, as chairman of the light and trees committee, reported that there are now 834 street lights, at a yearly cost of $15.53 each and one arc light at annual expense of $100. He also reported that the lighting service during the year had been satisfactory.

Mr. Tyler, as chairman on public service, submitted a report, containing thirty-eight typewritten pages upon the application of the Central New Jersey Telephone Company for franchise rights in Plainfield. Accompanying it was a summary of the report. It treats the subject pro and con and is intended to be an impartial statement of facts, concluding with the recommendation that the time is not ripe for the granting of a second franchise, as the independent companies are not in condition to become successful competitors of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. A synopsis of this report will be published by The Daily Press on Saturday.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution that the city treasurer's report be published in the local papers and that 300 copies of it be printed for distribution. Mr. Lee offered a similar resolution that 300 copies of Chief Doane's report be printed for exchange with other departments.

The report of the alms committee showed that there is a balance of $428.32 on hand out of a total of $7,418.48 available to this department, December 31. The total disbursements for the year were $6,988.15, allowing a balance on hand to the credit of the poor fund, January 1, 1904, of $735.33. The report shows that at the last report there were five male and nine female inmates of the Industrial Home. The number received during the year was eight males and nine females, while seven males and seven females were disposed of during the year. There was one death, leaving a total number of sixteen at the home at present. The total number receiving miscellaneous help outside during the year was 510.

During the year $1,300 was expended on general repairs. The home has been connected with the city water supply and a number of other necessary improvements have been made, including a miniature sewage disposal. This is the first money spent on the home building since it was established by the city. Due praise is given the Fallufield Relief Association, the Organized Aid Association, the State Charities Aid of Union County and King's Daughters for the kind services of the city nurse. In the unanimous opinion of the committee this co-operation of the different charities has enabled the committee to dispose of a great many cases that would have otherwise been a burden to the city. The report shows that Overseer of the Poor Alexander Ayers has made 301 calls to the home and 475 calls at office and home of the overseer were made.

After the transaction of all the business of the evening, the minutes were read by the stenographer, George B. Wean and afterward adopted by the Council, thus bring to a close the actual business of the Common Council of 1903.

GERMANS DANCE.

Gesang and Turn Verein Welcomes New Year In Saengerbund Hall.

Seldom has Saengerbund Hall held so large an assemblage as it did Thursday night when the annual dance of the Gesang and Turn Verein took place. Members of the German Singing Society, of Lincoln, also of the Singing Society Aurora, of New Brunswick, were also guests of the local society. The president of the society, William Gardener, presented the leader, Mr. Eichorn, of Elizabeth, with a pretty silver tea service. The committee in charge of the affair was William Gardner, Matthias Mannsenbach, John Retzer, Joseph Haurand and Carl Felber.

Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Liquid Cream Balm is becoming quite as popular in many localities as Ely's Cream Balm sold. It is prepared for use in atomizers, and is highly prized by those who have been accustomed to call upon physicians for such a treatment. Many physicians are using and prescribing it. STREET COMMISSIONER GAVETT'S REPORT

Work Done on Plainfield's Thoroughfares and Sanitary Arrangements For the Year.

AS TO BRICK PAVEMENTS

MUNICIPAL STREET SPRINKLING CONSIDERED A DECIDED SUCCESS.

Sewage Disposal 800,000 Gallons—Flagging and Curbing—Macadamizing and Resurfacing—Building Line Recommended.

In his annual report submitted at Wednesday's meeting of the Common Council, Street Commissioner Gavett states that "the heaviest work of the year in street repairing has been that on Watchung avenue, from East Sixth street to Woodland avenue, on which but few repairs had been made for many years. Near Woodland avenue a fill of ten inches was required, and on account of the large amount of water flowing through this street, all of the work was much heavier than usual.

"West Fifth street between Plainfield and Park avenues, was also in bad condition, and in repairing it, the crown was lowered where it had been found inconveniently high. Richmond street, which was macadamized originally at the expense of the street railway company, and which is subject to very heavy carting to and from the freight house, required much more than the average amount of repairs.

"The heavy storm in October did considerable damage to Richmond, East Front, East Second and East Third streets, caused very largely by the flood waters of Green brook overflowing through them to Cedar brook. These floods, which happen every few years, are a serious detriment to property in this vicinity and as far south as Park avenue. We consider it very desirable that their cause be investigated by the Common Council, and the proper remedy applied.

"West Front street was resurfaced at different points and is now in better condition, as a whole, than ever before. West Second street has been thoroughly repaired. Resurfacing work was also done on many streets. West Fourth street, West Sixth street, West Third street and South Second street were repaired where broken up by sewer ditches; the cost of repairing the latter being borne by the sewer contractors. Terrill road, for the greater part of the distance between South avenue and Watchung road, has been dressed partly with cinders and partly with crushed stone.

"The only new macadamizing done by subscription of property owners this year was on a portion of Webster place. Early in the summer an ordinance was introduced for macadamizing several streets, amounting in all to about four miles, but owing to various delays, the contract was not awarded until October fifth, since which time, six streets have been macadamized but are not finished.

"On Woodland avenue part of the space west of the track has been spread with 2½ inch stone, and on West Fifth street, between Grant and Monroe avenues, a part of the heavy earth fill has been made. There are several streets under contract, on which no work has yet been done.

"Various plans have been suggested from time to time for securing a section of pavement which would be more clean and durable than macadam. While the latter presents a good appearance in the residential sections of the city, even during wet weather, the heavy wear in the business districts causes muddey streets after every rain except the most severe downpours, which wash the macadam effectually. We would recommend paving Watchung avenue, from East Second street to North avenue, with vitrified brick on a concrete foundation, after having a first class track laid by the street railway company. The company would bear between one-third and one-half of the expense.

"Tar macadam is proving a very satisfactory pavement in many cities, and we strongly favor it for our own. One firm, at least, claims a patent on this style of pavement, and we have thought it best, on this account, to defer action until the city can lay the pavement without danger of suits for infringement.

"The Arlington avenue storm sewer, which was nearly completed in 1902, has been finished, and not only frees Arlington avenue from any accumulation of water, but greatly improves the condition of the streets to the southwest. Albert street storm sewer has been improved, apparently solving the difficulty on that street, as the enlarged pipe and new inlets now remove the surface water promptly. On West End avenue the extension of the 24-inch storm sewer from Front street to Green brook permitted the filling in of the deep ditch which formerly carried the water, and the raising of the whole street with slag from Pond Tool Works. This slag alone makes a very fair road surface, and furnishes an excellent foundation on which only a thin coating of stone is needed to complete a good macadam pavement.

"A fifteen-inch pipe has been laid under Union street at Stelle avenue, which may eventually be extended to Cedar brook. New storm sewers have been asked for in Plainfield avenue from West Seventh street to the brook near the city line; in Darrow avenue through West Fourth street to and through Grant avenue to the storm sewer at Second street. Unless this sewer is constructed, Darrow avenue will have to be filled to such a height as will seriously depreciate the value of the adjoining property. Storm sewers are also needed in Watchung avenue, from Hillside avenue to Cedar brook, in Putnam avenue, and in North avenue from Leland avenue to Cedar brook. It would be a decided benefit to the city if Cedar brook could be widened and deepened from South avenue to Park avenue.

"The principal work ordered by the committee this year was the flagging of Arlington avenue, from West Seventh street to Randolph road, and all of this work has been done or is under contract. During the year 1903, 10,322 feet of flagging have been laid and 1,780 feet of curbing have been set.

"Fourteen crosswalks have been laid or practically made new this season; it has been the custom of the committee to provide them as promptly as possible after the completion of flag sidewalk by the property owners. Several culverts have been constructed and others rebuilt. Some in Putnam avenue are in need of similar treatment. The 48-inch cast iron pipes from Berckman street, which were taken out when the new bridge over Cedar brook was built by the Freeholders, were carted to Hobart avenue and placed in the small brook south of Eighth street, making a permanent improvement. The carting was done by William Hand without charge.

"The work of grading Jackson avenue has been carried on during the year whenever the force could be spared for it, but considerable excavation yet remains to be done between Front and Second streets; with the best of the material from this block it is intended to fill in Netherwood avenue north of Second street. The work on these two streets and on Jackson avenue has resulted in a decided improvement to the eastern district of the city. West Fourth street, west of Clinton avenue was partly graded to drain a hollow at Hunter avenue and should be completed next year; the erection of ten new houses on our southern boundary during the year shows that the improved section of the city is constantly enlarging. The erection of the new Muhlenberg Hospital at the corner of Park avenue and Randolph road and the grading of the property made necessary the grading of Randolph road.

"Reference has been made to the good results obtained by the use of slag from Pond Tool Works on West End avenue; similar satisfactory work has been done on Clinton avenue, south of Third street. It would be of great benefit to all the sandy streets in the vicinity of the works could be excavated, say six inches below grade, and filled with this slag.

"Proceedings for the laying out and opening of Myrtle avenue, from the intersection of Dunellen and Compton avenues to Green brook, there to meet the proposed extension of Myrtle avenue in North Plainfield, have progressed as far as the appointment of commissioners."

Referring to the street sprinkling the commissioner says: "The sprinkling of streets by the city has been, with few exceptions, very satisfactory to the property owners, and has aided materially in keeping the macadam streets in good condition. It has made possible the successful application of small patches to the macadam pavement, and the six inch tires on the sprinklers have proved their value as rollers in consolidating the stone. We believe that the public would not care to return to the old method of street sprinkling, and that the Common Council will be obliged to continue to have the work done under city control. We recommend that two more wagons be purchased and a sufficient appropriation made to operate them throughout the year excepting when the temperature is near or below the freezing point. While the carrying out of this improvement will probably cause some increase in the tax rate, the largest part of the cost will be paid by those who have, in previous years, subscribed for street sprinkling, and to them the annual expense will certainly be less than formerly."

"The storm of September 16th uprooted a large number of trees, completely blocking many of the streets; the cost of cutting up the trees, removing them and repairing the sidewalks was $74.94. The usual trimming of trees has been continued by authority of the committee on lights and trees, and is not paid for out of the street appropriation; the work meets with general approval and many owners request an extra amount of trimming. As the shade trees in the city increase in size, it becomes more and more evident that for the public health, for the best development of the trees and for the good of the streets, our trees should be thinned out.

"We believe that prompt action should be taken by the incoming Council to establish building lines on all streets in and near the business centre of the city, and to appoint commissioners to assess damages and benefits.

"The street railway company has paid for removing snow from streets and as its proportion of the cost of street repairs, $1,053.80. The continual tearing up of the streets to make repairs to the track, often several times in the same place, has been annoying to this committee, and suggests that the efforts should be made to have all the tracks in the city thoroughly overhauled and laid in a substantial manner; it is evident, from the frequent derailing of cars and the decayed condition of such ties as are removed, that the roadbed is in urgent need of repair.

"Last spring seventy-two street signs were put up, most of them to replace those which were damaged; some of the injuries to the enamel were no doubt caused maliciously, but the majority of failures were probably the result of defects in manufacture. Most of the street signs are now in excellent condition, and the few damaged ones can be replaced at small expense.

"There are a number of macadam streets in need of repair. The Hillside Cemetery Association has agreed to pay one half of the cost of repairing Belleview avenue in a thorough and substantial manner, providing that the work be done at an early date.

"The sewerage system has been operated very successfully during the past year and the new disposal plant is considered, by many of those visiting it, to be largest and best example of the septic tank and double contact bed system in this part of the country. All of the sewers and flush tanks have been examined and tested about five times during the year.

"Two hundred and seventy-five new sewer connections have been made during the year, making a total of 7,775; the four mile contract of Jas. Maybury & Son is practically completed, and many connections have been made with the new sewers as they progressed. This work, also that done under the previous contract, will probably be referred to the sewer assessment commissioners early in 1904. Several additional sewers are now asked for, and the demand will no doubt continue until all the streets are sewered.

"The quantity of sewage has almost doubled since the new disposal works were constructed, being now about 800,000 gallons per day. In wet weather there is a considerable leakage of ground water into the sewers constructed in North and South avenues by Patrick T. Plunkett, and as this was discovered before his final payment, the amount still due him has been retained to cover cost of repairs.

"The former residence of the operator at the disposal works having been taken by the Board of Health for the Emergency Hospital, we suggest that a plain dwelling be erected by the committee on the lot at the east corner of Rock and Dunellen avenues, in which the operator may reside near the works. Some much needed repairs are now being made to the barns on the city property."

LITTLE ONES MADE HAPPY

MERRY TIME FOR THIRTY INMATES OF THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

Kris Kringle did not fail to pay his annual visit to the Children's Industrial Home as on Thursday afternoon the little inmates of that institution were made glad by receiving numerous presents. In the dining room was a huge Christmas tree.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, made a few remarks and Ernest R. Ackerman gave a number of phonographic selection. The committee in charge of the arrangements consisted of Mrs. Horace Kimball, Miss Ella Serrell, Mrs. Flanders, Mrs. Justus H. Cooley, Mrs. John Valiant, Mrs. Frank Rowley and Mrs. William Dunn.

JOLLY NEW YEAR'S PARTY

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT A. MEEKER ENTERTAINED THEIR FRIENDS.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Meeker entertained a few friends at their home on West Front street New Year's eve, when there were many pleasant features attending the departure of the old and the arrival of the new year. During the evening the guests played games, and a novel feature, while seated at the refreshment table, was the distribution of cards tied with pink ribbons. Each one was requested to draw a picture of Santa Claus, the ones doing the best work to receive prizes.

Mrs. Frank Wynkoop received first prize for the women, a silver hat pin, and Mrs. M. B. Long second prize, a hand-painted breast pin. J. Hervey Doane received the first prize for the men, a hand-painted claret pitcher, and Dr. M. B. Long the second prize, a handsome horn. The painting on the pitcher and breast pin was the work of Mrs. Meeker and was much admired. When the new year arrived there was a general exchange of greetings.

Useful Gift.

The Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange of New York, of which L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, is the president, has distributed among its patrons and friends a most complete memorandum book, containing much useful information, in addition to the space left for memoranda.

SOME MORE MERRY CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS

Entertainments in Grace P. E. Church and Warren Chapel Were Well Attended.

SANTA CLAUS PRESENT

REV. E. VICARS STEVENSON MAKES ADDRESS TO LITTLE ONES AT GRACE.

Good Numbers on Warren Chapel's Programme—Richard Lovell and Edward Freeman As Santa Claus—Distribution of Gifts.

Grace Church.

With songs and recitations and the giving of Christmas presents, the children of the primary department of the Grace church Sunday-school celebrated in their annual Christmas entertainment at the parish house Wednesday afternoon. Edward Freeman was the Santa Claus and appeared in costume, making his entrance merry by the jingling of sleigh bells. He was assisted by Harry Pinch, treasurer of the Sunday-school. Miss Edith Little, director of the primary department, was in charge of the entertainment; assisted by Miss Anna Davis. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson gave a brief talk to the children. He was presented with a handsome book rack, the gift of the children in the department.

With songs and carols interspersed, recitations were given by Charles Irvine, Harriet Gardner and Lorenzo Brown, and an exercise by Janet Lane, William Wheelan, Arthur Tillotson and Constance Vesnie. A recitation with triangle accompaniment, was given by Agnes Dooley, Clementina Bremble, Hazel Putnam, Viola McLean, Martha Marquam, Dorothy Hibbard, Bessie and Viola McGoldrich. Selections by a boys' and a girls' chorus, a solo by Lillian Varden and recitations by Jane Brower and William Wheelan followed.

Warren Chapel.

The Christmas entertainments in Warren chapel Wednesday afternoon and night were largely attended. The evening entertainment was provided by New York talent. Joseph Mackey pleased his hearers with vocal and instrumental selections and recitations; Walter W. Waters, a monologue artist, was well received with his humorous recitals and Mrs. H. W. Rankin, a clever pianist, gave several renditions. Some clever recitations were given by Miss Geer.

Remarks were made F. H. Andrews, the superintendent of the school, and by Rev. J. J. McKelvey, the pastor. Candy and refreshments were served. The committee from the Ladies' Aid Society in charge of the arrangements was composed of Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, Mrs. George Demarest and Mrs. Gibson Smith. The decorations of Christmas greens was in charge of a committee of the Christian Endeavor Society: Charles Bryan, Theodore Mason, Alvah Freese, Mr. and Mrs. George Zimmer and Miss Jennie Everett.

The refreshments committee consisted of Mrs. Geo. W. Demarest chairman; Mrs. William Demarest, Mrs. Samuel Tayner, Mrs. William E. Sharpe, Mrs. Hansen, Mrs. C. Gibson Smith, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Miss Jennie Everett and the Misses Osborne, assisted by William Demarest and Samuel Tayner.

In the afternoon an entertainment was given for the members of the infant and primary department. Santa Claus, in the person of Richard Lovell, distributed over one hundred presents to the children. Ida Wheeler, Louise Demarest and Ashley Burner recited and the pastor made a few remarks. The committee in charge of this part of the programme was Miss Evelyn Benton, Miss Laura Lovell, Miss Margaret Swain and Mrs. R. K. Ulrich.

Society of Friends.

The Friends of the First-Day school met at the meeting-house on Watchung avenue, Wednesday, and participated in an excellent Christmas programme, under the direction of Margaret Vail, superintendent. There were numerous recitations and readings by the younger pupils of the school and an appropriate address by W. D. Williams.

Afterward all adjourned to the upper room, where ice cream and cake were served to all, while the pupils each received a box of candy and an orange. In the recitations and readings given the children displayed much ability.

Episcopal Mission.

The members of the colored mission of Grace church held a reception and entertainment Wednesday in the Grace church parish house. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector, received. A musical programme was presented, including piano selections by Albert White and Miss Douglass and songs by Edward Blair.

Marconnier Chapel.

The members of Marconnier chapel and Sunday-school enjoyed their annual Christmas entertainment in the chapel, Wednesday. There was an excellent programme consisting of carols by the school and recitations by the young folks. All acquitted themselves creditably. Horace J. Martin was present and made an address of interest, while Santa Claus in the person of William Compton, was all happy in the distribution of gifts. The exercises were in charge of Stephen Stover, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

MARRIED THIRTY-FIVE YEARS

MR. AND MRS. JESSE A DAYTON CELEBRATE THEIR WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Dayton celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of their marriage New Year's eve, at their home in Piscataway. During the evening Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of South Plainfield, made an address, and Mrs. Lacy Schenck led the singing. Mr. and Mrs. Dayton received a number of gifts. They were married thirty-five years ago by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of West Seventh street.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John S. Carman, of Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Feney, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs Merle G. Larabie and son, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Larabie, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. C. Compton and Miss Louise Compton, of Metuchen; Miss Laura VanCourt, of Oak Tree; Mr. and Mrs. William Dayton, of Stelton and family, Isaac Dayton and family, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Boice, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gaffney, of Jersey City; Walter Elliott and son, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Cubberly, of South Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Meeker and daughter, of Metuchen; Miss Swift, of New York, and Bryant Randolph, of New Durham. The five children of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton were all present.

Jan. 10: "Some Tests of Repentance," Luke iii, 8-14; Ps. ii, 1-17.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

There is much of truth in the homely old saying. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." In many forms the same truth has been taught. It applies to character and folks as truly as to things. What we are is shown infallibly in what we do. A person may act a part some of the time, but not all the time. Some time the truth will appear. The sham may imitate the real so that no one suspects the fraud for a great while, but the fruitage must reveal the true nature. Men may scoff at, betray, smite and crucify, but the third day will show whether one be not the Lord of Life by the resurrection from the dead, even though the other two be thieves.

So in the lives of men, the test of the power of Christ is in what transformations He works in them and their doings.

The proof of the power of God in us is not wholly in the inner feeling, but is also in outer action.

The test by speech is not so much what one says to his neighbors in prayer meeting, not even what he says in private to them about religion, as what he says about his neighbors to others.

The test by conscience is an old one. It is as good today as in the time of John Baptist. The people asked him, "What must we do?" He said, "He that has two coats, let him give one to him who has none." Watch the bursting of the safes and the emptying of the closets and attics and wardrobes for old clothes. How we pack barrels and boxes with castoff garments we can no longer use and no one would buy, send them to the needy and then report it in the religious news and in the benevolent column of the conference statistics! "He that hath two, let him give one." What does it mean? Have you ever taken that rule and measured yourself and your goods and given it a try? Have you done it carefully, honestly?

One from two leaves one. One from twelve leaves eleven. Which example did you do? You gave one. Was it from two or from a dozen you took it? Think it over. It scares many to think of giving one-tenth of their income to God. How much more does it scare one to think of dividing evenly with our fellow man. Is it fair to always give him the old ones? Are old clothes and "odd pieces," given to tramps and missionaries, the best fruits you can produce from your Christian life?

"He that hath food, let him do likewise." Have you food? What food? Is it good? What have you of which to make clothes? Have you any? Have you shared it with others or have you kept it to yourself? The little fellow on the street, ragged, dirty of face and hands, who shares his apple with another, says: "Here, Jim, you have it, Jemmy!" It solved this riddle of life. The man who is successful in business and shares his business and its profits with his employees because he takes an interest in them and enjoys seeing them get on in the world, he is bearing the right kind of fruit. Whoever in his heart wants to share with others and in his life does give as freely as he gets of everything—good cheer, kind words, smiles, dollars and helpful deeds—that one shows the true nature. The tree may be rough of bark, ill shaped in limb and scant of foliage, but it grows good fruit and is in no danger of being sent to the wood pile yet. God wants such, and the world needs such for fruit bearing.

Holiness a Habit.

Holiness is not holiness at all, but only a sporadic effort thereafter until it has become a habit—that is, "made of action so established by us as to be entirely natural, involuntary, instinctive, unconscious and uncontrollable." Holiness is not an occasional victorious resolution of the will to do right. Neither is it the placid triumph over temptation and the extirpation of all that is imperfect and weak. It is the love of righteousness grown into a passion, refusing to accept defeat or defect of effort toward ideals and touched with the piercing love of the God of holiness and right, plus among us the tender apprehension and inward vital acceptance of Jesus. Holiness is more than the mere purpose of right behavior. It is this kindled into light and heat by living contact with God in Christ.—Robert E. Speer.

God's Judgments Sure.

The righteous judgments of God may be delayed, ofttimes to give room for repentance, but they are sure to fall at last. God is patient and long suffering, merciful and gracious, but the sinner persisting in his sinful course must expect to meet the penalties of outraged justice at last. Saul had every chance to retrace his course, but steadily refused till at last he found himself involved in destruction, with all associated with him. Thus it is that the wicked involve in their own ruin the ruin of others also. So for the sin of the parents must children suffer.—Christian Work and Evangelist.

The River of Grace.

The river, clear as crystal, still flows from beneath God's throne. We are not about to exhaust the resources of love and munificence. The more we draw the more there flows. It is not a cistern to which we come, but "living" water. The way to have grace is to use grace, and he who expends grace in gracious acts has grace returned to him in abundant measure.—Evangelist.

Heaven Smiles.

Heaven smiles with love and admiration on those who seek to cheer the desponding heart or lighten by act or word or look the burden borne by the weary soul.—Our Dumb Animals.

Lent It to Dan.

Secretary of War Root, on the day he sailed for England to act as a member of the Alaska boundary commission, told a story of Daniel Webster's boyhood. "Little Dan and his younger brother," said Mr. Root, "had each been given some money. They started out gleefully, and it was evening before they got back home 'Well, Dan,' said the senior Webster 'what did you do with your money?' 'Spent it,' the boy answered, sturdily 'And how about you?' What did you do with your money?' the father asked the younger brother. 'I lent it to Dan,' was the reply."

A Young Professor.

The appointment of Mr. Alexander W. Mair to the Greek chair at Edinburg, in succession to Prof. Butcher, has excited some criticism, inasmuch as the new professor is only 23 years old; but he had a most distinguished career at Aberdeen and at Cambridge, he is a highly accomplished scholar and has acted as lecturer and assistant professor of Greek at Aberdeen and latterly at Edinburgh with conspicuous success.

Turks Not Allowed to Emigrate.

Emigration from the Turkish empire is forbidden. No man or woman is permitted to leave a Turkish port without the tschera, or permit, which must be obtained from the police authorities, and under the general instructions and policy of the Turkish government tscheras cannot be issued to subjects of the sultan.

Prediction Fulfilled.

The Figaro of Paris is congratulating itself on the prediction it made two years ago that one could soon communicate with passengers on Atlantic steamers without leaving the boulevards. Recently booklets were distributed giving the directions necessary for utilizing this mode of correspondence.

Homemade Dandruff Cure.

Strong black tea is recommended as a dandruff cure. It is said that shampooing the hair once in ten days with this and stimulating the hair by thorough brushing, both before and after, will cure the most obstinate cases of dandruff if used persistently.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan 19—Comment by Rev. A. L. Doyle.

"Topic—What are some tests of repentance?—Luke iii, 8-14; Ps. ii, 1-17.

John the Baptist was the forerunner of Christ. He came to prepare the way of the Lord, and he did it by preaching the doctrine of repentance for sin. But repentance does not only includes sorrow for sin, but the giving up of sin. In repentance a sinner, "out of a true sense of his sin and full appreciation of the mercy of God in Christ, doth with grief and hatred for his sin turn from it unto God, with a full purpose of and endeavor after a new obedience." The Jews in John's day claimed that they had sought shelter from the wrath of God, and John called upon them to prove it by bringing forth "works worthy of repentance." Repentance means not only a changed inward life, but also a changed outward life. We prove our repentance of sin by giving up sin. "The wicked forsakes his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts" when they repent and turn from sin unto God.

Under the preaching of John many were convicted of sin and cried out unto him, "What shall we do?" "The people asked him, saying, "What shall we do, then?" and unto them he be not selfish. "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none, and he that hath meat, let him do the same." John prescribes no senseless penance, but the kindly exercise of unselfish service toward others in life. The publicans said, "What shall we do?" and John replied, "Exact no more than that which is appointed you." The publicans were the tax collectors under the Roman government. Their besetting sin was theft. John calls upon them to give up stealing and to be honest. Then came the soldiers, saying, "What shall we do?" and John replied, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages." The discharge of their duties they exercised undue brutality, frequently made false accusations against men and caused trouble concerning their wages. Hence John calls upon them to give up their besetting sins. And these illustrations answer the inquiry of the topic. The test of a man's repentance is his willingness to give up "the sin that so easily besets him." The people, the publicans, the soldiers, were not guilty of the same sins, but their sins were offered according to their temperaments and professions. But each was called upon to give up the sin that was peculiar to him. This is the only test of repentance. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

But in the experience of David it is also suggested that service in the interest of others is "a work worthy of repentance." "Restore unto me," says the psalmist, "the joy of Thy salvation and uphold me with Thy free spirit. Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto Thee." If truly repentant we become interested in the repentance of others. We saved can want to help save some one else. This is God's plan. He saves us that we may help save others. If repentant let us prove it by our personal abandonment of sin and interest in the spiritual welfare of others.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. i, 16-18; iv, 6, 7; Matt. vii, 15-20; Luke xix, 1-10; John i, 40-42; xv, 1-8; Acts ii, 37-40; iii, 19-21; xxvi, 19, 20; Rom. ii, 1-11; II Cor. vii, 8-11.

What Is Happiness?

Happiness is the greatest paradox in nature. It can grow in any soil, live under any conditions. It defies environment. It comes from within. It is the revelation of the depths of the inner life as light and heat proclaim the sun from which they radiate. Happiness consists not of having, but of being; not of possessing, but of enjoying. It is the warm glow of a heart at peace within itself. A martyr at the stake may have happiness that calls forth anyone might envy. Man is the creator of his own happiness; it is the aroma of a life lived in harmony with high ideals. For what a man has he may be dependent on others; what he is rests with him alone. What he obtains for life is but acquisition; what he attains is growth. Happiness is the soul's joy in the possession of the intangible.—William George Jordan.

Regrets.

The society that doesn't grow is going to be a dead society pretty soon. The thing that we want to do to make the society grow is to intensify the prayer meeting. Every nook and every cranny of the prayer meeting room should shout the word of welcome to the stranger.—Harry A. Kinports, Secretary New York State Union.

Kindness.

Guard within yourself that treasure, kindness. Know how to give without hesitation, how to lose without regret, how to acquire without meanness. Know how to replace in your heart, by the happiness of those you love, the happiness that may be wanting in yourself.—F. W. Faber.

Spirituality.

The spiritually minded man is not always the one who talks the most about his religion. Spirituality is service. Those who do good as they may have opportunity and in the most unconventional way give the most satisfactory evidence of living near to God.—Presbyterian Journal.

The True Religion.

The true religion of Jesus Christ our Saviour is that which penetrates and which receives all the warmth of the heart, and all the elevation of the soul, and all the energies of the understanding, and all the strength of the will.—Dean Stanley.

FIRE DEPARTMENT RECORD

CHIEF DOANE TELLS WHAT HAS BEEN DONE AND RECOMMEND THINGS.

Chief T. O. Doane in his report of the fire department carefully reviews the work for the year and makes a number of important recommendations. He says:

"There have been some improvements made in the department during the year. A new roof has been placed on the West Second street engine house, and the stalls altered. The partition and the first floor of this house should be taken out and stairs removed to rear, making an improvement in looks as well as general utility. New doors are needed in front, and all the woodwork repaired and painted. The roof of the headquarters building and of the West Fourth street house have been painted, which they very much needed. Teams have been purchased for Nos. 1 and 2 hose wagons.

"I would earnestly recommend the immediate purchase of 4000 feet of hose. We are very much in need of that amount. A life net should be purchased, as this useful article may be the means of saving life at any fire. We need a deluge, so that when necessary we can throw a large and powerful stream. Rubber tires should be placed on all of the apparatus and especially on the truck, which is very heavy, weighing about four tons. The rubber tires would not only save wear on apparatus and harness, but be a great help to the horses, as the apparatus would roll very much easier.

"A six-circuit repeater is very much needed in our fire alarm system. Our lines are virtually all on one circuit just as it was when installed twelve years ago. Then there were only twelve miles of wires, now there is nearly double that amount. We then covered a comparatively small part of the city; our wires now spread out in nearly all parts of the city, running through trees in every direction. In case of trouble or a break in any part of the line, every box in the city is out for a time, often for an hour or more. With a repeater installed, each circuit would be taken care of automatically. I recommend that you give this your careful attention the coming year.

"I again respectfully call your attention to the fact that more hydrants are needed in the business section of the city. This should be done before a permanent pavement is laid. Last year I recommended that three four-way hydrants be placed on the north side of West Front street, one central between Somerset street and Compton's lane, one between Compton's lane and Madison avenue, one on the south side between Madison and Central avenues, this two-way hydrant on East Front street central between Park and Watchung avenues should be replaced by a four-way, and another two-way placed on the opposite side of the street, and a four-way placed on Park avenue between Front and Fourth streets. There should also be a hydrant placed on Madison avenue near the bridge. I again renew my request of last year, that water wagons be prohibited the use of hydrants. The water company should place stand-pipes for the use of these wagons, then there would be no excuse for mud-holes in front of houses, and our hydrants can be kept in repair.

"I would recommend that two more permanent men be appointed for the headquarters, and one for each of the other two houses. With the present number of men, we are very much handicapped as meal hours, and especially so on days when there is a man off in either of the houses, because of accident or sickness. We have so many telephone and still alarms that we should be prepared for them at all hours."

The other reports of the various departments will be found in the columns of today's issue.

Wedded Two Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wyman, of East Front street, celebrated their second wedding anniversary yesterday at a family reunion. There were about twenty members of the family present at dinner. In the afternoon the guests played games and enjoyed vocal and instrumental music.

Few Birthdays.

There is one boy in North Plainfield who celebrated the arrival of 1904 with more vim than his fellows. Franklin Lowe, of 67 Fairview avenue, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Lowe, who is seven years old has had but one birthday and he is especially happy because of the fact that his second birthday is only two months off. He was born on the 29th day of February, 1896.

Electric wiring and supplies are kept constantly in stock by Allen B. Laing, on North avenue. He makes a specialty on figuring on big electrical contract work.

TenEyck & Harris, the coal dealers, have a large stock of the best grade of anthracite coal and all orders are promptly filled. The prices are the lowest to be found in the local market.

STRONG BASEBALL NINE FOR PLAINFIELD

Scheme on Foot to Organize a Crack Aggregation to Represent City on Diamond.

SEMI-PROFESSIONALS.

ST. MARY'S CLUB PROMOTING THE PLAN OF FORMATION.

Local Players to be Augumented by Out-of-Town Men—Arrangements for a Fine Field—Fair to Raise Money for Proposed Nine.

Plainfield is to be represented in the baseball field next season by a stronger team and it is said St. Mary's nine is at the head of a scheme to give to the fans of this city and vicinity a model, up-to-date article of ball which will compare favorably with any organization in this vicinity. Much has been said about doing away with all the smaller teams here and merging the best players into one crack semi-professional aggregation which will be a credit to this community. At the head of the scheme are John Owens, manager of last year's St. Mary's team; Clinton Shannon, the president, and Victor Troyce, the secretary, of the same organization.

A meeting of the players of St. Mary's nine will be held in the T. A. B. Hall on West Fourth street Sunday afternoon at 2:30 when the matter will be further discussed. Two sites are under discussion as proposed baseball diamonds. The locations of these lots have not yet been given out. There is talk of enclosing the field with a tight board fence and of erecting a grandstand which will accommodate at least five hundred people.

Lindaman, the Hoboken pitcher, Lamar, his catcher and Manager Driscoll, of the Hoboken nine, are interested in the proposed deal. Driscol has informed the local promoters that he will see that the best professional players are supplied Plainfield. For the purpose of raising funds for the new project, a fair is planned by the managers of the St. Mary's team which will be held in the T. A. B. Hall in the near future. It is probable the date will be set at the meeting Sunday.

While there will be some out-of-town professional players in the team the new nine will be representative of Plainfield and will probably be known as the Plainfield baseball nine, because of the fact that it will be primarily composed of local players.

POLICE SUMMARY FOR 1903

SYNOPSIS OF CHIEF KIELY'S REPORT SHOWS GOOD WORK DONE.

The total number of arrests during the year 1903 in this city has been 683 as against 690 for the year 1902. The total amount of fines collected has been $710 as against $640 85 for the preceding year. This is according to the report of Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, submitted to the Common Council last night. Of the arrests, 634 were of males and 59 of females; 549 of whites and 134 colored. As to nationality, 333 of the culprits were Americans, 75 Irish, 34 Italian, and the rest scatterers.

The total amount of the appropriation for the year for the department was $18,900; the total expenditures, including running expenses, cost of erecting the police stable, purchase of horse, wagon, harness, etc., was $18,791.50, leaving a balance of $108.50. Extra appropriations were made during the year to the amount of $5,915 expended, $6,025 for the Gamewell alarm system, and $890 for six new steel cells. The institution of the new cells, introduction of the Gamewell system and leasing of rooms above the present headquarters were recommended by Chief Kiely in his last year's report and have added greatly to the efficiency of the department.

As the result of the arrests during the year, 136 prisoners were fined, 375 released on suspended sentence, 53 dismissed, 53 committed, 44 held for the Grand Jury, and the other cases disposed of in miscellaneous ways. The arrests for drunkenness were 104, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, 170; for disorderly conduct, 170; for larceny, 33; breaking and entering, 5; burglary, 7; assault, 17; embezzlement, 10, and other cases scattered.

Miss Mary R. Judson and nephew, Master Ferris Hulse, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John B. M. Judson, of John street.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Judson, of Montgomery, N. Y., have returned to their home after spending the holidays with their son, Joseph B. M. Judson, of John street.

LAST OF THE MANY XMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

First Presbyterian, First Baptist Junior, Grace Church Mission and Mt. Olive Festivals.

CHILDREN MADE HAPPY

"OLD-FASHIONED SANTA CLAUS," A CANTATA, AT ONE CHURCH.

Miss Edith Cairns in Charge of First Baptist Junior Department Entertainment—Soloists at First Presbyterian.

First Presbyterian.

"The Old Fashioned Santa Claus," was the title of a musical cantata given Thursday night at the First Presbyterian church, as the annual Christmas entertainment. During the cantata there were solo parts by William Holmes, "Santa Claus," E. D. Cutting, "Jack Frost," and several of the younger persons taking parts, while there were several selections by the chorus. The music throughout was catchy and every one did well. Miss Aimee Emmons took the part of "Annabel," and she also recited "Budd's Christmas Stocking."

These were the characters: "Santa Claus," William Homes; "Annabel," Miss Aimee Emmons; "Jack Frost," E. D. Cutting; fairies—Hattie Bailey, Helen George, Ada Woodward, Bertha Hedden, Mabel Townley, Henrietta Englehardt; elfs—Leo Leek, Preston Dunning, Thomas Leacock, David Wagner, William Bailey; bootblacks—Roy Gates, Charles Line, William Gluck, Charles Doughty, William Dunning, Arthur Hand; flower girls—Winnie Harned, Jessie Hill, Eva Kelly, Bertha Englehardt and Bertha Townley. Alvah Dunham took the part of "Alfred Tennyson Longfellow Jones," Arthur Dunning that of "Sammy Slim," and Albert Knight that of "Silas Stout," while Edith Schenck and Ida Englehardt also took special parts.

This was the committee in charge: LeRoy H. Gates, chairman; Miss Remsen, Miss Mang, Miss Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams, I. B. Hill and F. O. Dunning. Clifford Bleiler, organist of the church, drilled and trained those taking part in the cantata. After the entertainment the pupils of the Sunday-school adjourned to the Sunday-school room and received boxes of candy. The cantata will be repeated Thursday night, January 14.

First Baptist.

The annual Christmas party under the auspices of the Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, Thursday afternoon, closed the Christmas festivities at this church. Miss Edith Cairns, superintendent of the department, assisted by the seven teachers, was in charge. While the affair was intended for the pupils of the Junior department it was also arranged that the mothers should be present.

The programme opened with the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers." Helen Mayers gave a recitation and Hazel Marsh a piano solo. Ten girls sang a Christmas carol, the whole department joining in the chorus. A recitation given by Helen Pierce and the singing of a Christmas carol preceded the reading of a story, "Why the Chimes Ring," by Miss Cairns. After the entertainment there was a social time, during which ice cream and cake were served by those in charge. Tomorrow the yearly promotions in this and the primary departments will take place.

Grace Church.

The Christmas entertainment of the colored children's branch of Grace church Sunday-school was held Thursday afternoon in the parish house. There were no individual songs or recitations but each pupil received a Christmas gift from a well loaded tree. Several Christmas carols were sung by the class. The entertainment was in charge of Miss Cook and Miss Reed.

Mt. Olive.

An excellent programme was presented at the Christmas entertainment at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, New Year's eve, including singing by the choir and a chorus of forty voices from the primary department, recitations by Miss Ivy Henry, Willie Jones, Miss Laura Connett, Miss Agnes Alexander, Miss Alberta Gordon, Miss Florence Washington, an essay by Miss Mary Randolph, and vocal solos by Mrs. A. Lomax, Miss Hattie Wood and Miss Patsy Landon. Following the programme, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, made an address, and M. C. Dobbins, the retiring superintendent, spoke words of encouragement. The entertainment was concluded with select readings by Miss Elizabeth Carstr. Then gifts were distributed among the pupils and the superintendent and teachers made Mrs. E. E. Jackson a suitable gift. Other presents will be given tomorrow afternoon.

All Souls' Church.

The Sunday-school of All Souls' church in Park avenue, met yesterday afternoon and enjoyed the annual Christmas festivities. There were carols by the school and recitations by Miss Priscilla VanWyck, Miss Sarony Gerard, Miss Lord and George Osgood, and in the playing of games Miss Nickerson and Miss Osgood led. The pupils received boxes of candy in the shape of boats and there was an abundance of good things to eat. The "tree" was a handsome one. The affair was in charge of Mrs. P. V. R. VanWyck, Miss Osgood and Miss Nickerson.

MRS. IRVING BROWN'S TEA

ENJOYABLE AFFAIR SATURDAY AFTERNOON ATTENDED BY SOCIETY FOLK.

The first of a series of two teas was given by Mrs. Irving Brown, of Central avenue, Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 7 o'clock, when, despite the severe storm, a large number of friends were present. Mrs. Brown was assisted in receiving by Mrs. E. H. Booth, Mrs. Howard Fleming and Mrs. H. De Haven, while assisting in the dining room were Miss Clara Case, of New York; Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Elsie Goddard and Miss Josephine Lapsley, Mrs. James R. Blake assisted. The decorations were chiefly pink, there being a profusion of pink roses in the dining room. The second tea will be given Saturday afternoon, January 9.

BASEBALL TEAM'S BAZAAR

ST. MARY'S BASEBALL CLUB TO HOLD FAIR IN FEBRUARY.

A fair will be held under the auspices of the St. Mary's Baseball Club in the T. A. B. Hall during the first week in February. This was definitely decided upon at a meeting of the baseball team held in the West Fourth street hall yesterday afternoon at 3:30. The matter of forming a representative baseball team for this city during the coming season was also discussed and the members and others interested looked upon the scheme as a feasable one and the consensus of opinion seems to be that such a team would receive the support of local people. Another meeting is to be held Thursday night at the hall when the matter will be discussed further and other arrangements will be made for the fair. Those who are at the head of the movement are Clinton Shannon, Victor Trotier, John King and Thomas McDonald.

Fire in Washington Hall Building.

A slight fire which was discovered at 10 o'clock Saturday night in a closet in the Independent Fife and Drum Corps rooms, located in the Washington Hall building, was quickly extinguished and prevented much damage. It was not necessary to call the fire department.

There is not likely to be any material increase the coming year in the salaries of city officials. Tax Collector F. H. Smith now receives $2,200 instead of $2,000.

NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS

REV. DR. EARP PREACHES INTERESTING DISCOURSE AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

"Some Thoughts for the New Year" was the subject of an interesting and helpful sermon preached Sunday by Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of the Grace M. E. church. His text was taken from Mark 13:37. The pastor said that at this time of the year it is essential that people take an account of their lives. He asked his hearers to look in retrospect and at the future and what it would probably bring forth. He advised an examination to ascertain if all is well with the soul, to see if we have the proper courage of our convictions and the necessary faith to make the most of opportunities.

Rev. Mr. Earp cautioned his congregation to prepare for the new year by being near to God. He dwelt particularly of the value of daily devotion in spirit and of being willing to change one's opinions to those of others who have tasted better success, and not to rely too much on fads as seems to be the growing custom.

At the morning sermon two children were baptised and four new members were received into communion, two by letter and two from probation.

JAMES S. EMERY IS DEAD

AT AGE OF THREE SCORE AND TEN LOCAL RESIDENT PASSES AWAY.

James S. Emery, aged seventy years, a resident of Plainfield for some time past, died Monday at 5 o'clock a.m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Hinkle, of North avenue. Death was due to consumption, he having been ill for some time. Mr. Emery was born near Clinton, Hunterdon County, and funeral services and the interment will be at that place.

Mr. Emery leaves four daughters, Mrs. Hinkle and Mrs. John Neighbor and two sons, Watson and Adolphus Emery, of this city, one daughter lives in Bound Brook and another in Irvington. For a time Mr. Emery kept a fruit store on Somerset street.

To Eat Turkey.

The annual turkey supper under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church will be held Thursday and Friday nights, Jan. 28 and 29, in the lecture room of the church.

Edison Pictures.

The Lyceum entertainers will present an interesting programme of Edison's life-size moving pictures for the benefit of the First M. E. church, at the church Monday night, Jan. 11, at 8 o'clock.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Morrison announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna U. Morrison, to Walter A. Eells formerly of Westerly, R. I., now of Plainfield.

In Honor of Guests.

Mrs. L. J. Flippin, of West Third street, entertained a number of young people Friday night in honor of the Misses Edith and Margaret Johnson, of Orange.

MATCH WAS A DRAW.

Hart and Gardner Boxed Fifteen Rounds In Boston.

BOSTON, Jan. 6.—Marvin Hart of Louisville and George Gardner of Lowell boxed fifteen rounds to a draw at the Criterion Athletic club. Over 5,000 people witnessed the bout, which was one of the most scientific exhibitions seen here in recent years. During the first part of the contest it looked as though Hart would be the winner. In the second round Gardner was knocked down twice, and only excellent blocking and holding saved the Lowell man from a knockout. Gardner came up strong in the third, but could not land effectively. In the fourth and fifth rounds honors were even, but in the sixth Gardner put in some terrible swings which made the Kentuckian groggy, the bell saving him from a knockout. Hart showed his superiority in the seventh.

The eighth round was the fastest of the match. At the opening Gardner's holding prevented his being knocked out, while at the end of the round the bell only saved Hart.

From this time until the thirteenth round the fight lagged somewhat. In the thirteenth Gardner's strength came back, and he had Hart groggy. The fourteenth round was full of fast blocking, but both men were so tired that their punches lacked knockout power. In this round Gardner had a slight advantage, the bell once again sounding just in time to save Hart from defeat. Both boxers put up a game exhibition in the final round, but Referee Buckley would not give either man a decision.

Racing at Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—The defeat of Kenilworth was the surprise of the racing at Oakland. He was even money favorite for the six furlongs handicap, but the impost of 126 pounds on the heavy track was evidently too much for him, as he stopped badly. Arcade, getting through next to the rail, won by a neck from the poorly ridden Martinmas. Nantor was plunged on to win the last race, but Stuyve, the second choice, led all the way. Hildebrand was in form, riding three winners.

Dr. Sharpe Stays at Penn School.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 6.—Dr. A. L. Sharpe of this city, the former Yale fullback, has declined the offer made to him to act temporarily to become athletic director of that university. He will remain at Penn Charter school, Philadelphia, as athletic advisor and surgeon.

Yale Hockey Match.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The Yale university hockey team was easily defeated by the Yale graduates by the score of 4-2 at the St. Nicholas rink. In the first half the Graduates scored 2-0, the second half resulting in a score of 2-2.

Reyes Will Accept Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Although he declared that under any circumstances he would not be a candidate for the presidency of Colombia, General Rafael Reyes does not feel that he can decline to serve now that he has been elected, and he expects to accept the presidency. He is essentially a soldier, not a politician, and his preferences are for the army; still, now that he has been chosen, for the selection of electors in Colombia is said to be equivalent to an election, as in the United States, he will accept the office. General Reyes is highly esteemed by the people of Colombia and now that he has received their indorsement through the election of electors favorable to him feels it would not be proper to decline the presidential office.

Four Killed by Explosion.

PENZANCE, England, Jan. 6.—Four men were killed and several were injured by an explosion at the nitro-glycerin department of the National Explosive works, eight miles from here. The whole district was enveloped in a cloud of black smoke, and nearly every window at St. Ives, three miles from the scene of the explosion, was shattered by the terrific force. Many windows were also smashed at Pensance.

United States Steel Dividend.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The dividend on United States Steel common was passed at the quarterly meeting of the directors, but the regular 1¾ per cent was declared on the preferred stock. This was practically what Wall street expected. At the previous quarterly meeting the common dividend was cut from a 4 to a 2 per cent basis.

Conde's Valuable Cargo.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—The Occidental and Oriental liner Coptic, just arrived, brought one of the most valuable cargoes that ever came here. It included 1,000 bales of silk valued at about $1,200,000, besides gold in Japanese yen valued at $1,250,000.

Boot Murder Trial Opens.

WOODSTOCK, Vt., Jan. 6.—The trial of Joseph Boot, charged with the murder of Ephraim Root at Rochester, has been opened in the Windsor county court. Root was found dying in a barn. It is alleged that he and Boot had a quarrel over a woman.

Judge Dykman Very Ill.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Former Supreme Court Judge Jackson O. Dykman is dangerously ill at his home here. He has been suffering from pneumonia for some days, and it is feared he cannot recover.

Hurt Did Not Say.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 6.—President Burt, when asked if it were true that Mr. Harriman would succeed him as president of the Union Pacific, said he had no official information to that effect.

HOPES OF PEACE NOW

Russia Has Made Many Concessions to Japan.

CZAR WANTS NEUTRAL ZONE IN KOREA

Both Powers Agree as to Integrity of China and Korea, but Tokyo Government Cannot Accept Zone Clause—Russia May Yield.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 6.—In her reply to Japan Russia has made many great concessions and hopes her proposals will prove acceptable to Japan.

The foreign office has given out the information that instructions had been sent to Viceroy Alexieff based upon the reply. The latter was drawn up in the most conciliatory spirit. Some of the Japanese proposals were accepted, while others were made the subject of extended observation and were met by counter proposals.

There are strong hopes in many circles that tomorrow, the Russian Christmas, the czar may be able to announce that peace is assured.

The greatest difference between Russia and Japan arises from the proposal made by Russia that a neutral zone shall be established extending from Pingyang, in Korea, on the south to the Russian frontier on the north.

The Russian government has expressed a willingness to recognize the preponderating influence of Japan in the remainder of Korea, and the two powers are agreed respecting the principle of the integrity of China and of Korea.

Japan, however, can see no reason why the proposed neutral zone should be established, holding that the entire peninsula should be subject to her preponderating influence.

The attitude of Russia is believed to be due to the fact that if Japan controls Korea she will thereby be able to more easily menace Port Arthur as well as Vladivostok.

The diplomat who gave the foregoing information expressed himself as confident that Russia in her reply to Japan will give way on this vital point.

A dispatch from Tokyo says that Russia has proposed the creation of a neutral zone in northern Korea running south from the Manchurian frontier as far east as Yuensan and west to Pingyang, but this will certainly be unacceptable to Japan.

Fire Panic Narrowly Averted.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—A panic which might have caused loss of life was averted by the remarkable activity of the fire department at the textile mills of William T. Smith & Sons. The firm employs between 500 and 600 girls. A few hours after they had gone to work the dames were discovered in the lower part of the building, practically cutting off all means of exit save by the fire escapes. An alarm was quickly turned in, and the prompt arrival of the firemen at the scene seemed, to those below, to allay the fears of the hundreds of girls, who had rushed to the fire escapes. All were taken safely from their perilous positions. The flames were extinguished after a loss of $25,000 to the building and machinery.

Bunau-Varilla to Resign.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—M. Philippe Bunau-Varilla, the minister from Panama and the joint signer with Secretary Hay of the Hay-Bunau-Varilla treaty, will resign his office after the exchange of ratifications of the treaty between the Washington and Panama governments. It is said his successor will be Mr. Arosemena, a prominent lawyer of Panama, whose son is now secretary of legation here. M. Bunau-Varilla probably will go to Paris after his resignation.

Still Want Home Rule.

WATERFORD, Ireland, Jan. 6.—John Redmond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party and president of the United Irish league, addressing his constituents here, said that when parliament reassembled the Irish party, which was the only united party in the house of commons, would continue to demand home rule, the desire for which, he declared, had not been suppressed by the passage of the land purchase act.

Nine Negroes Escape From Jail.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 6.—Nine negro prisoners escaped from the Wake county jail at an early hour. Most of them were awaiting trial on charges of larceny. One was charged with criminal assault on a white woman. He had been sent home for safe keeping. The escape was made by prying off a section of a steel cell in the corridor and removing the bricks in the outer walls. There is no trace of the men.

Doctor Removed For Antagonism.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Dr. W. H. Hawkes, who has made charges of irregularities in the administration of the Emergency hospital in this city, has been removed from the office of secretary of the attending staff of that institution. The cause assigned for the removal is antagonism to the staff.

May Freeze to Death.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Daniel Finch, a patient in the Matteawan State hospital, has escaped from a keeper who was taking him to the village to buy clothing. With the thermometer 15 degrees below zero a score of keepers are scouring the country in search of the fugitive.

Ex-Senator Dead.

ROANOKE, Va., Jan. 6.—J. Allen Watts, ex-state senator and consulting attorney for the Norfolk and Western Railway company, is dead here, aged forty-eight years. He was one of the most prominent lawyers in Virginia.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

According to the present plans of the beach commissioners Asbury Park's beach front next season will be a veritable fairyland from the standpoint of illumination. Already much work has been done toward bringing this about and the present intimate of the board places the number of lights to be in service on ordinary occasions as 3,267 incandescents and 65 arcs. Twenty of the latter will be what is known as incandescent arcs. In all probability this number will be largely increased, especially the incandescents, as no provision is made for pier lighting for illuminating a possible structure at Eighth avenue.

FUNERAL OF J. P. ALLIS

THREE MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT OBSEQUIES—INTERMENT AT HILLSIDE.

The funeral services of the late Jeremiah P. Allis were held from the home on West Fifth street, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, and Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market, was in charge of the services. There was a large attendance of friends and many floral tributes. The interment was at Hillside. These were the pallbearers: Albert N. Crandall, of Westerly, R. I.; W. H. Rogers, T. O. Smith, A. C. Rogers, George Clark and C. H. Dunham.

Mr. Dolliver Advanced.

G. Q. Dolliver, of Fairview avenue, has been appointed general inspector of ties, timber, piles, etc., of the Central Railroad of New Jersey with an office at Elizabethport. Mr. Dolliver has been in the employ of the road for more than twenty years and his appointment is viewed with high favor alike by officials and employees of the road.

Drum Corps Incorporates.

Certificate of incorporation has been filed in the office of the county clerk by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, of this city, the trustees of which are Raymond D. Carver, George Herman and Marion B. Brokaw.

MASQUERADE BALL A BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Plainfield Society Folk in Grand March at Dawn of the New Year.

GORGEOUS COSTUMES

ALL SANG AULD LANG SYNE WHEN PEALING BELL USHERED IN 1904.

Austin's Brooklyn Orchestra—Supper at Midnight—Characters Represented—List of the Guests Present.

What was in many ways the most brilliant dance ever given at the Casino was the masquerade ball of the Cotillion Club Thursday night. The costumes were the most varied and elaborate and the decorations of the hall appropriate to the Christmas season were superb. Austin's orchestra of ten pieces from Brooklyn was seated upon the stage at the end of the hall, surrounded by Christmas greens. The decorations were by Carson Sapper, in charge of Mrs. Lena Hollstrum, was served at small tables in the clubhouse at 12:30 o'clock, at the conclusion of the grand march, which started at 11:45 and was ushered in the new year.

Miss May Waring and Lewis G. Timpson led the grand march, followed by Mr. and Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring. Everybody unmasked at 12 o'clock, the room was darkened and Auld Lang Syne played. The old year was rung out with an old bell taken from the deserted village of Feltville. Dancing continued till 3:30 o'clock in the morning.

Present in costume were: Mrs. L. E. Waring, Miss Lowe, Miss Smith, who represented Folly; Miss May Waring, country maid; Miss Florence Waring, bridge whist; Lewis G. Timpson, Indian; Mrs. James R. Blake and Mrs. James Hallock, night; Miss Leila Cruikshank, goddess of liberty; Mrs. T. D. Wilson, Babette; Miss Waterman, French maid; Mrs. Clifford McGee, gypsy; Miss Helen Bushnell, Swedish peasant; Mrs. Arthur Otterson, night; Mrs. Alfred Streuli and Mrs. Evarts Tracy, rag babies; Miss Martin, Spanish girl; Mrs. Irons, washerwoman; Mrs. Schellerbarger and Mrs. Reinhart, school girls; Mrs. E. M. VanBuren, one of a quaint family of Miss Sprong, hospital nurse; Miss West, mermaid; Mrs. George Ring; Miss Russell, little girl; Miss Burke and Miss Elsberg, follies; Mrs. August Kleinecke, happy new year; Miss Gould, summer girl; Miss Russell, child; Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Maude Muller, Miss Davis, folly; Mrs. Williams, holly; Mrs. Theodore Morris, dairy maid; Mrs. John Kirkner, peasant girl; Miss Hoxie, dairy maid.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Martin, Mrs. Thomas Davis, Dr. F. C. Ard, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Miss Flora Lockwood, Miss Edith Sawyer, James R. Blake, Wells Taylor, Owen Fleming, B. H. Shepard, Mellick Tweedy.

Before the dance began, several of these who attended served dinners to numbers of their friends, among them Mr. and Mrs. E. M. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, and Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Smith. In each case the entire party adjourned to the dance at which most of the guests arrived at about 10:30 o'clock.

Plainfield Talent.

Wm. E. MacClymont, of North Plainfield, choirmaster of St. John's church, Somerville, and Fred and Wm. VanEps, of this city, are planning to give a concert at Somerville some time this month.

YOUNG GIRL SHOOTS PLAYMATE SERIOUSLY

Loretta Waldron in Hospital and Maggie Bentford Confined at Police Station.

WERE PLAYING "INDIAN"

MAGGIE DECLARES THAT SHE "DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED."

Conflicting Stories Told by the Two Girls—Awaiting Result of the Injuries—Bentford Family Well-Known in Police Circles.

"I didn't know it was loaded," sobbed fifteen-year-old Maggie Bentford, as she stood behind the bars of the police headquarters Tuesday, charged with shooting Loretta Waldron, colored, her ten-year-old playmate, yesterday afternoon. She is being held by the police pending the result of a serious wound in the Waldron girl's head. The injured child lies in a critical condition at Muhlenberg Hospital, and Dr. W. Kempton Browning states that there are some hopes of saving the wounded child's life.

The story told by little Loretta Waldron as she lay in bed swathed in bandages was to the effect that the two children were left alone in the house by their parents. They had been playing tag in the back yard and becoming tired of that game decided to creep up into the room of Maggie Bentford's brother and play "Indian" with his big pistol. They went to the room and Maggie got the pistol out of the drawer. First it was Loretta's chance to shoot. She held the pistol up and pulled on the trigger. Maggie then made believe she had been shot and fell to the floor. Then she came over and decided it was her turn to pull the trigger. She had more strength and taking aim at her colored playmate pulled the trigger.

"This time," said Loretta, "the pistol went off with a loud bang. I felt something hit me in the face and it stung awfully. It hurt me and I cried and then I saw the blood coming, and I ran down stairs and told my sister Nora. She started to wash the blood away and then saw the little round hole in my cheek. Maggie ran away and bid but when the doctor came to the house she came out and told how it happened."

In reply to a question as to whether or not she had quarrelled with her playmate she said there had been no unpleasantness.

The Bentford girl behind the bars tells a different story. To Dr. Browning she said that she had taken the weapon from the draw and had placed it on the top of the marble covered bureau when it suddenly went off and the next she knew the smaller girl had been struck by the bullet. She affirms that she did not know it was loaded and that the shooting was entirely accidental.

The Bentford family is not unknown to the police of this city. Jack Bentford is now in the asylum at Morris Plains and nearly all the male members of the family have been before the City Judge on different charges. The disposition of Maggie will depend entirely upon the result of the Waldron girl's injuries.

The girl was held yesterday by Justice Huff in $500 bail, furnished by her attorney, John P. Owens, Esq., to await the results of the Waldron girl's injuries. A charge of assault was entered.

Abolish Grade Crossings.

The State Legislature will be asked to pass an act compelling railways to put gates at all road crossings in cities and towns. The bill will be prepared by Assemblyman Hamill. Recent accidents at Dunellen have shown the local need for such an act.

County S. S. A. Session.

The executive committee of the Union County Sunday-school Association met last night at the home of Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth. C. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was the Plainfield member in attendance.

To Westfield by Sleigh.

"Jest and Yonthful Jollity" held full sway among the members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., last night, twenty-five of them taking a sleigh ride to Westfield.

AMITY RELIC FOR THE FAIR

PLAN TO PLACE OLD SILVER-MOUNTED HOSE CARRIAGE AT EXPOSITION.

Captain Robert Oswell, formerly a driver for Chief Croker, of the New York Fire Department, was in this city yesterday for the purpose of arranging to take the silver hose carriage, formerly the property of the Amity Engine Company, of New York, to the St. Louis Exposition for exhibition purposes. Chief Doane entertained him during the day. The matter will be brought up before the Exempt Firemen's Association at the next meeting and at that time it is probable the local organization will allow the historic machine to be taken west to be exhibited along with other relics in the firemen's building at the big fair. Captain Oswell represents Chief Hale, of the Kansas City Fire Department, who will have full charge of the firemen's exhibit at the fair next year.

The Old Amity hose carriage, which belonged to the Alert Company at one time, and which is silver mounted, is very dear to the local firemen who have cared for it ever since the volunteer system was abandoned in this city.

The hose carriage was the only thing of value saved from the great Crystal Palace fire in New York City where it was on exhibition in Barnum's Museum. It was built in 1858 by Joseph Pine.

DR. SNODGRASS TO REMAIN

PRESENT PASTOR OF THE FIRST M. E. CHURCH TO SERVE ANOTHER YEAR.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, who is about to close the seventh year of his pastorate at the First M. E. church, has announced to his congregation that subject to the wish of the Bishop and elders he is willing to accept the call extended to remain with them for another year. He speaks of the seven years pastorate and says that if it is his pleasure as well as that of the congregation to labor together for another year he trusts that it will be a fruitful one. It seems to be the general opinion that Dr. Snodgrass be returned to the church.

Seven years is now believed to be the record for the longest term served by any minister in the Methodist church during recent years and should Dr. Snodgrass serve another year it will be unprecedented in the history of the church in Plainfield, if not in the State. He is popular with his people and there is general satisfaction and pleasure expressed by all that he has signified his willingness to return another year.

HEALTH INSPECTOR BUSY

HOW WILLIAM ADDIS' TIME WAS SPENT DURING THE YEAR JUST CLOSED.

The total number of inspections made by Inspector William Addis, of the Board of Health Department, during the year 1903 is shown in the following table: Visits to houses with contagious diseases, 990; house and yard inspections, 803; inspections of nuisances on complaint, 146; inspections of sewer connections, 173; inspections of house connections to cesspools, 64; water tests of soil pipe, 87; smoke tests of completed plumbing systems, 13; altered plumbing systems, 5; completed plumbing systems, 22; additions to plumbing systems, 6; defective plumbing systems, 5; cellar closets installed, 39.

DURLACHS ENJOINED.

Owners Cannot Remove Building, Tenants Having Obtained An Injunction.

The cause of the delay in the work of moving and making repairs to the Durlach property corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, is due to the fact that the tenants of the property have secured an injunction against the owners for twenty-one days, prohibiting them from doing anything with the property.

Miss Randolph's Wedding Date.

The wedding of Miss Sadie Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Randolph, to William Abbott, both of this city, will be celebrated at an early date next month at the home of Miss Randolph's brother, E. S. F. Randolph, of Park avenue.

Attending Agriculturists Meeting.

William Henry Rogers, of Warrenville, left last night for Trenton, where he is attending the annual sessions of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society. The sessions will continue for three days.

CRESCENT CO., U. R., K. P ELECTED OFFFICERS

Gen. Hitchcock, of Belleville, Compliments the Company on Its Fine Drilling.

A BALL TO BE GIVEN

PLAINFIELD KNIGHTS ACCEPTED INVITATIONS FOR DANCES.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Phillip Jahn and Elmer D. Cutting Committee for Affair to be Given in Casino—Companies to be Invited.

Crescent Company, No. 13, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, took part in one of the most successful drills in the history of this branch of the Knights of Pythias, at Washington Hall, last night under the direction of General Hitchcock, of Belleville. The attendance was large and a most enjoyable social session closed the evening, which was partly occupied in the election of officers.

These were: Captain, J. E. Flannery; first lieutenant, J. G. Higbar; second lieutenant, O. R. Pearson; recorder, Charles McGinley; treasurer, Joseph C. Blimm; chaplain, David Bowden. An auditing committee was appointed which consists of Thomas Osment, Robert Gow and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. George E. Firstbrook was received into membership.

The Company is arranging to give a ball in the Casino at some date in the near future. Arranging for this is a committee composed of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Phillip Jahn and Elmer D. Cutting. The committee plans to revive the old time military ball which was held here annually at one time. General Hitchcock promised to bring the entire membership of the Black Prince Company, of Newark, and Grand Vice Chancellor Bowen, of Palestine Lodge, of Jersey City, promised his lodge would attend. Elaborate preparations are being made for this event.

Invitations were accepted to attend the ball of Palestine Company, in Jersey City, next month and in the Grand Central Palace, in New York, next Wednesday night. The local lodge was highly complimented by General Hitchcock on its fine drilling.

PRIVATE SCHOOL'S RECITAL

PUPILS OF RANDOLPH-COOLEY COLLEGIATE SCHOOL ENTERTAIN.

A piano recital was given yesterday afternoon by the pupils of Miss Sarah A. Palmer at the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate school. It was an annual mid-winter recital and was attended by a large number of parents and friends of the children.

All of the numbers of the programme presented large difficulties in the way of sympathetic interpretation and for this reason the performance of the children was remarkable. The work revealed careful study and patient drilling under Miss Palmer's direction as well as the possession of musical intelligence. The feature was a kinder-symphony, the first one ever produced in this city.

This was a veritable concord of sweet sounds intended to imitate the music of nature, particularly the songs of birds. The symphony was arranged for violin, piano and other instruments. Miss Alice Rose and Miss Edith Mellick presided at the piano; the triangle was played by Miss Dorothy Burke, the drums by Arthur Willis and Francis Foster; imitations of a quail were produced by Miss Ellen Burke, of a cuckoo by Miss Edith Foster, and nightingale by Miss Grace Otteson. The solo was played by an adult friend of the school, Miss Mary Colton.

Those taking part included: Marjorie Brown, Carolyn Rose, Francis Foster, Ellen Burke, Ann Wilson, Dorothy Burke, Arthur Willis, Edith Foster, Mal Rivers, Virginia Fox, Alice Rose, Grace Otteson.

False Report.

William H. Abbott, the North avenue real estate and insurance broker, denies the rumor that he is to engage in business in Westfield, as recently published in another paper. He says he intends to continue at his old stand here.

Mr. Fredericks Improving.

A report received concerning the condition of Wilson S. Fredericks, of Dunellen, indicates that he continues to improve. He is about free from pain and although compelled to remain indoors is quite cheerful.

LEGISLATIVE MILL READY TO GRIND

Officers of Senate and House Chosen and Committees Selected at Session.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

NO PLUMS FOR UNION COUNTY'S DEMOCRATIC ASSEMBLYMEN.

Republicans Effect Complete Organizations—Swackhamer Introduces New Speaker of House—Another Session Monday Night.

The 128th session of the New Jersey Legislature was formally organized Tuesday afternoon and the Republicans, as usual nowadays, had things all their own way. After the election of officers in the Senate and House, the various committees were named by the presiding officers.

Senator Joseph Cross, of Union County, is chairman of the committee on public health and a member of the committee on revision of laws and finance, two of the most important. Senator S. C. Childs, of Somerset County, was made a member of the committee on boroughs and townships. Senator Cross is also chairman of the joint committees on State Library and public buildings and grounds and a member of the joint committees on Treasurer's accounts and State village for epileptics. Senator Childs is made a member of the joint committee on soldiers' home.

In the House the Union County assemblymen fared in this way: Charles L. Moffett, riparian rights; Joseph Gunn, towns and townships; Joseph Hague, statistics. Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of Somerset County, got a place on the boroughs and borough laws committee and on the joint committee on printing.

Governor Murphy's message, as delivered to the Legislature, dwelt on these topics: Good financial condition of the State; interest on deposits, receipts from corporations; recommendation that an auditor of State accounts be named; abolition of the fee system; the State prison; Rahway reformatory extension; recommending the sanitorium of tuberculosis; State institutions; condemnation of signs near railroads; endorsement of the voting machine; inspection of factories and workshops, appropriations for good roads; consolidation of State Board of Taxation and State Board of Assessment; primary election law; new Senate chamber and various commissions.

A few bills were introduced in Senate and House and then an adjournment was taken until Monday night.

Assemblyman Swackhamer introduced the speaker-elect, Hon. John Boyd Avis, to the members in a short and neat speech. Senator and Mrs. Childs remembered Mr. Swackhamer with a handsome floral piece.

J. H. Mattison and William Acker, both of Somerset county, were named by the Senate Democrats for journal clerk and bill clerk respectively. Among the officers named by the minority party in the House were: Levi G. Kline, assistant supervisor of bills; doorkeeper, Walter Linbarger; page, Charles McCann, all of Somerset county, and Frank Shattle, sergeant-at-arms; Howard T. Johnson, bill clerk; John W. Craig, W. F. Sickley, gallery keepers, and Joseph Kohlbecker, postmaster's page, all of Union county.

Senator Cross introduced a bill to establish the office of register of deeds and mortgages in counties of over 90,000. This bill is primarily intended for this county, the Republican platform last fall having advocated the establishment of such an office.

United States Senators Kean and Dryden held a reception in the Trenton House in the afternoon and evening, which was attended by several Plainfielders.

Resolutions of sympathy with the people of Chicago in the recent Iroquois theatre disaster, introduced by Mr. Swackhamer, were passed by the State Legislature yesterday and a copy ordered forwarded to Mayor Carter H. Harrison. Resolutions also offered by Mr. Swackhamer were adopted also directing an examination of the means of fire protection afforded in the State Normal School buildings, the several asylums, reformatories, prisons and other State buildings. A report on the conditions in the State Normal School at Trenton was ordered immediately. The resolutions will be

CENTRAL'S MOTIVE POWER DESCRIBED

Instructive Address by William McIntosh, Superintendent of the Department.

SURPRISING FIGURES

LECTURE BEFORE THE MEN'S CLUB OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

During Last Five Years 186 New Locomotives, 11,635 Freight Cars and 118 Passenger Coaches Have Been Put Into Service.

The motive power department of a railroad was the subject of an informal talk by William McIntosh last night before the Men's Club of the Congregational church. Mr. McIntosh was well qualified to deal with his subject from his position as superintendent of motive power of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The meeting was one of the most largely attended in the history of the club.

Mr. McIntosh described the organization and development of the motive power department of the Central Railroad during the last decade. He said that within the last five years, 186 large locomotives had been put into service and 11,635 freight and coal cars added to the road's equipment. The additions during the same period included 118 passenger cars and practically the same number of old cars were discarded as unfit for service.

The engines used by the road in the freight service weigh now 100 tons where ten years ago they weighed forty. The old ones hauled trains of 800 to 1000 tons while the new ones pull 3000 tons. The value of freight traffic to a road was illustrated. A long train of small cars, it was said, requires greater motive power in an engine than a shorter train of longer cars, where the capacity of the two trains is equal.

At the conclusion of the talk and a general discussion of the subject, refreshments were served. The social committee in charge consisted of Charles Belknap, Robert Suffern and Peter Lund.

MINISTER VS. ASSEMBLYMEN

REV. MR. M'MURRAY AND MR. SWACKHAMER HELD INTERESTING DEBATE.

Before a large and enthusiastic audience composed of the members and friends of the Men's Guild of the M. E. Church, at High Bridge, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer and Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, debated the question "Resolved, That capital punishment should not be abolished." The question was argued Monday night in the same manner as it was at the meeting of the Men's Assembly of Grace M. E. church a few weeks ago.

At his request, Mr. Swackhamer was allowed the negative side of the question, while Mr. McMurray took the affirmative side. It was the general opinion of the audience that the assemblyman from Somerset county did not reasonably answer the arguments of his opponent, but his display of eloquence made a decided hit in old Hunterdon county. If not by sound argument he won the sympathies of his audience by a strong appeal to the finer senses. He dwelt upon circumstantial evidence, cruelty and numberless mistakes made in carrying out the law of capital punishment, while he declared it to be against civilization. His principal force, however, was in relating clever anecdotes and these greatly amused his audience until it became wildly enthusiastic.

Mr. McMurray said that there is nothing in either the old or new Testament that condemns capital punishment and that it is in accordance with Divine injunction. As for life imprisonment, he said that the objection to this is that it guarantees support to the criminal and even gives him a chance to commit other crime in killing a keeper. In the second place it gives him the possibility of escape, the hope of some day becoming free. Mr. McMurray also spoke of the pardoning power, which he considered right and just as affording a means for rectifying mistakes.

The question was argued before a jury of five men, but no decision was given.

Democratic Ball Date.

The committee on arrangements for the Democratic Club ball has decided upon February 15 as the date of the dance.

CAVEAT AGAINST BIRD WILL

SON APPEARS WITH ANOTHER DOCUMENT WHICH GIVES ALL TO HIM.

Harrison Kerr Bird, of Albany, Military Secretary of Gov. Odell, of New York State, has filed a caveat against the probating of the will of his father, William Bird, of West Dunellen, who died, possessed of property worth $150,000.

William Bird was formerly treasurer of the Seventh Avenue and Broadway Railroad Company, of New York City and lived with his brother, Howard Bird, at Dunellen, for the past five years. His will was offered for probate in New Brunswick on Dec. 31, when his son filed a caveat against it. The citizens were returnable yesterday, but the son has refused to acknowledge service, and Judge Strong continued the matter until Feb. 18 in order that a service upon the son may be again made.

Since the filing of the caveat another will has been offered for probate by the son in New York City. This will is dated April, 1903, while that offered in New Brunswick is dated December, 1902. The will filed here gives $10,000 each to the testator's brother, Howard, and sister, Anna Marlow, and $5,000 to Joseph Bird, another brother. The rest of the estate is left to the son. In the New York will none of these relatives is mentioned, and the son gets all the estate. The New York will comes up in court today.

NETHERWOOD EUCHRE CLUB

MRS. A. B. DAVIES, OF BELVIDERE AVENUE, ENTERTAINED THE MEMBERS.

The Euchre Club, of Netherwood, met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. B. Davies, of Belvidere avenue. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Wallace Guilford. First prize in the euchre tournament was won by Miss Watts, second by Mrs. Peterkin and third by Mrs. Pemberton Rogers.

The members of the club present were Mrs. Henry C. Irons, Mrs. Schellenberger, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Mrs. Henry L. Hall, Miss May Anderson Reinhart, Mrs. L. M. Serrell, Mrs. Arthur Murphy, Mrs. Woolston Maxwell, Mrs. Theodore Morris, Mrs. Adolph Hagadorn, Mrs. James Blake, Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. J. Gilbert, Mrs. Delafield, Mrs. M. Pemberton Rogers, Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mrs. David J. Welms.

Among the guests of the club were Mrs. Peterkin, Mrs. Benjamin Wood, Mrs. Wilcox, Miss Watts, of New York, Miss Anne Murphy.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS MEET

COUNTY BOARD APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO DO SOME LOBBYING.

A communication was received from the Burlington County Board of Freeholders at the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, yesterday, respecting an application to the Legislature for permission for the counties to purchase stone quarries and crushers to construct and repair roads in the several counties, and a committee composed of Vreeland, Gibson, Letkins, Demler and Whitenack was appointed to wait on the local representatives at Trenton and request the passage of such a bill.

Charles L. Bockhoven presented a bill for $114 for damages to horse and sleigh, which he claims fell through a bridge near Fred McMurtry's. Messrs. Letkins, Codington and Demler will consider the claim and report.

Still Alarm.

A still-alarm was sounded yesterday in the Warren Engine Company house, North Plainfield, for a fire in the home of J. C. Averill, 57 Washington avenue. The blaze was discovered in the chimney by Otis Averill, and a telephone message was sent to the engine company. There was no damage done.

Plainfield C. E. to Help Home.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the city will meet tomorrow night at the First M. E. church to discuss ways and means for assisting the Children's Home. The plan at present is to hold a bazaar some time in February in the First M. E. church, the proceeds to be devoted to the home.

Union County Court.

The members of the Union county petit jury were dismissed Monday, and will not resume their session at Elizabeth until Tuesday, Jan. 19. The Grand Jury is now in session.

JOINT INSTALLATION OF POST AND CORPS

Candidates Elected by Winfield Scott, No. 73, and Woman's Auxiliary Installed.

FEAST AFTER CEREMONY

MEMBERS OF ELIZABETH, RAHWAY AND PERTH AMBOY POSTS PRESENT.

Past Junior Vice Department Commander J. A. Atwood and Mrs. Hannah Westphal as Installing Officers—Programme Presented.

The joint installation of the officers of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the Woman's Relief Corps, attracted a large number of members and visiting friends to G. A. R. Hall last night. The officers of the Post were installed by Past Junior Vice Department Commander James M. Atwood, of Trenton.

These are the officers: Commander, William C. Smith; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, William Hand; quartermaster, John R. Naylor; adjutant, Charles B. Stephens; surgeon, Hiram King; chaplain, M. C. Dobbins; officer of the day, I. L. McVoy; officer of the guard, William Day; sergeant major, Francis M. Whiteley; quartermaster sergeant, Edward E. Townley; trustees, William Hand, William C. Smith and M. C. Dobbins; delegates to Department Encampment, J. W. Coddington and J. R. Naylor; alternates, Andrew Cox and Edward Willis.

These are the Woman's Relief Corps officers, installed by Mrs. Hannah Westphal: President, Mrs. Sarah Beahlin; senior vice president, Mrs. Samuel Terry; junior vice president, Mrs. Frederick Wensel; treasurer, Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; conductor, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; assistant conductor, Mrs. Charles B. Stephens; guard, Mrs. J. R. Naylor; assistant guard, Mrs. Hannah Westphal; color bearers, Miss May E. Howlett, Mrs. Edward De Vine, Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mrs. Francis M. Whiteley; secretary, Mrs. W. C. Smith; musician, Mrs. John Manley; press correspondent, Mrs. Hannah Westphal; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; executive board, Mrs. Jennie Brokaw, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. W. C. Smith; delegates to department convention, Miss May E. Howlett, Mrs. Somers, Mrs. Frederick Wensel and Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle.

There were present delegations from Dalhgren Post and Kilpatrick Post, of Elizabeth; Col. Dandy Post, of Perth Amboy and Barry Post, of Rahway, accompanied by members of the Woman's Relief Corps from each of the above Posts. After the installation there were remarks by the installing officers and visiting veterans and there was a short programme consisting of recitations by Miss Case and Miss Try Matatox and piano solos by Mrs. E. William Bergman.

A banquet was served, the local corps of women composing a general committee.

WORK SLACK.

Pond Machine Works to Close Friday Nights Instead of Saturday Noons.

Notices have been posted in the Pond Machine Tool Company's works which state that hereafter the pay day will be Friday instead of Saturday. The shop will close down each week on Fridays instead of on Saturday. It is said that there are good prospects of the company opening up again by the first of March with a full force of men. It was stated yesterday that the moulders would probably be taken on in large numbers towards the latter part of this month. The machinists will be taken on for full time later.

Prosperous Year.

In the reports presented by the secretary and treasurer of the Union Building and Loan Association at the annual meeting Monday night, it was shown that the past year was the most successful since the association was organized in 1899. A new series was opened and a number of applications for loans were received and acted upon.

Women Bowlers.

Several women members of the Park Club visited the clubhouse yesterday and enjoyed the exercise of bowling on the alleys. This is becoming quite a feature of club life, for nearly every day the women gather to participate in the various amusements offered.

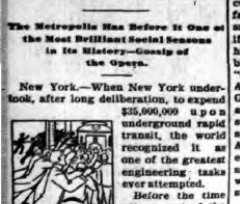
GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

Rapid Transit Is Costing the City Vast Sums of Money.

PROBLEM OF BRIDGE BUILDING

The Metropolis Has Before It One of the Most Brilliant Social Seasons in Its History—Gossip of the Opera.

New York.—When New York undertook, after long deliberation, to expend $35,000,000 upon underground rapid transit, the world recognized it as one of the greatest engineering tasks ever attempted.



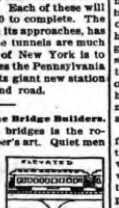
The Jam at Brooklyn Bridge

Before the time set, a part of the road is practically ready for opening. Already extensions and auxiliary lines that will cost $70,000,000 are planned. Some of them, probably most of them, will soon be under way. About $8,000,000 worth of extensions, including a tunnel under East river, are begun.

The difficulties of getting about in New York are unmatched anywhere else in the world. Manhattan island is 11 miles long and nowhere more than two miles wide. Brooklyn is separated from it by a turbulent tide sweeping through a channel of soft mud on one side and rock on the other, a channel never less than 1,500 feet in width. The new Williamsburg bridge, which will be opened on December 19, is the greatest structure of the kind in the world. It is 110 feet wide in the middle, much wider at the ends, and stands 335 feet high. It carries four lines of trolley cars, two of elevated railway cars, two wagon roads wide enough for teams to pass, two wide footpaths and a bicycle track. A third great bridge is being built which will be even more powerful. Each of these will cost some $15,000,000 to complete. The present bridge, with its approaches, has cost $24,000,000. The tunnels are much cheaper. The city of New York is to construct two, besides the Pennsylvania tunnel, to connect its giant new station with the Long Island road.

The Romance of the Bridge Builders.

Building the big bridges is the romance of the engineer's art. Quiet men sit in quiet offices year after year, undisturbed by changes of administration. They plan and order; and out on the giant spider web the structure grows. Men work at a height of over 300 feet above the city. Occasionally one falls. If it is over the river there is a chance for him.



Local Travel in New York

I have said that the tower foundations upon one side of the river have had to contend with. It is little known or soon forgotten how nearly the Williamsburg bridge came to being a costly failure for this cause.

In sinking the caissons, huge boxes of solid timber, bottom side up to keep the water out, air pressure must constantly be increased to balance the pressure of the water. As the caisson sinks, as the pressure increases, the danger grows. Men can at first work almost as long as upon the surface; then only four hours, then three, then two. There comes a time when they cannot work at all. Beyond that limit caisson work is impossible, or can only be prosecuted a few minutes at a time by men of the hardiest physique—conditions that would make it all but impossible. In sinking the caissons for the towers of the second bridge this limit was nearly reached. Men came up gasping for breath from their long struggle with the water far above them; others went to relieve them, and the engineers' faces grew longer. Work was far advanced upon the foundations upon the Manhattan side before bottom was finally reached on the Brooklyn side and the caisson could at last rest on solid rock. The Manhattan caissons were founded 55 feet and 70 feet, respectively, below water. That is bad enough. Those on the Brooklyn side are 81 feet and 95 feet.

A Brilliant Society Season.

The most successful horse show ever held has given place to the most successful opera season, to judge from samples presented. Already New York is well under way in what promises to be a brilliant social season. A ducal wedding started it off with eclat, everything favors continued liveliness.

Conreid in Action

Conreid's opera season is criticised in details; as a whole it is the most patient, thoughtful, intelligent New York has known. Those who go to the opera house to hear some particular singer "do" Carmen or "reach for a high C" may have been as well suited in the past, but care in details, historical accuracy in costumes and scenery, in a word, German thoroughness and art sense, have told with the discerning.

Oh, the operas there have been, the managers! What a procession of human curios! Why should an opera manager be always easy to caricature?

Marteack and Stralnoch; the impecunious Mapleson, the very image of a fat and oleaginous Col. Sellers, with his smile that faded never at deputy sheriffs or warring tenors; Mapleson, with his mellow "me boy!" and his delicious blarney; then Abbey, businesslike, the "Ohio idea" on the stage, Abbey from Akron; Schoeffel and Grau, his partners; Grau, who lingered from the strangely assorted trio to make alone a greater success; now comes Conreid, who speaks New Yorker and Fields German-American dialect that only his intense earnestness and his impatient genius save from being ludicrous. Conreid, who will surpass them all either as a success or as a failure.

Conreid is disciplinarian. In the little German theater far down the East side, where for years he has given the best dramatic art in the city its modest showing, he is famous for stage strictness. He has no "stars," who are by their stardom absolved from obeying. Before the first opera was given under the new management, he insisted upon the unheard-of innovation of a dress parade of the supers, to detect any such anachronisms as wearing patent leather shoes with a knight's armor.

Why Not an "American Opera?"

Some of the memories evoked by the great horseshoe at the Metropolitan are rather sad.

"American Opera"

How many people remember—yet it was not much more than 15 years ago—the "American opera" was on foot with such a blast of trumpets by Mrs. Jeannette Thurber? Why, asked this ambitious lady, should not America, which has the voices, the money, the dramatic instinct, have the American opera? It should have it. She engaged singers, she contrived expensive scenery and costumes, she hired writers to make translations of the "books o' th' opry's"—that the German singers made hash of the English words was a minor matter. It was English in the libretto, at any rate.

Manifold were the difficulties. The foreign orchestra players could not keep the run of the score when the singers were using English. The Italian opera was a strong competitor. Fashion turned up its nose at anything that even pretended to be native American. In the end a really intelligent and bold attempt to give New York what other capitals have except London—an opera in the town tongue—failed. So did the lady's capital. And her husband's.

For awhile after that German and Italian opera ran a disastrous race for favor, one in the new opera house, one in the old. Now society has adopted the Metropolitan as its own, prices have been run to an almost prohibitive pitch, and if Conreid cannot make a "go" it will not be because there is not money enough.

An Irish Poet Comes.

In truth, there is no room for an American opera in New York, because there is no American language. When Duce gave her marvelous performances here she faced audiences strange to New York theaters. Society coldly passed her by. The theater was almost filled with Italians. Now that Mme. Wiehe is presenting her marvelous art, French speaking audiences are in the great majority in her nightly group of admirers.

Mr. Yeats, Poet

An Irish poet has just come to town. It is his purpose to speak eloquently as the blood gives him eloquence for the ancient language that was in danger of perishing until the modern Celtic movement began, with W. B. Yeats and Moore and Sharp and a few others in the van. These rescuers of the Erse tongue from oblivion gave plays in Dublin in Irish. They would find in New York more people who could understand them than in the ancient capital of Erin itself.

Now the devoted band of Irish patriots give plays in the vernacular in Connaught, that "Ultima Thule" of Irishry when oppressed in the bad old days, with talented and equally devoted workingmen as the actors. It is one of the most interesting literary revivals in a day of many such.

Mr. Yeats is a poet, a very real poet if not a great one. His song has the Celtic melancholy, the yearning, the musical cadence. The trick of the refrain is his—and he does not lecture for money. He did so before college audiences where there is more interest than gate receipts. Hence the most suspicious persons can concede his main purpose to be just what he says it is—to awaken interest in the Irish drama and literature. Can we not?

LAWS TO BE REVISED

President Roosevelt Determined to Save Public Lands.

Commission Appointed to Determine What Ground There Is for Divergence in Opinion Regarding Repeal of Statutes.

President Roosevelt has appointed a commission, which includes Commissioner William A. Richards, of the general land office, Mr. F. H. Newell, chief engineer of the United States' reclamation land service, and Prof. Gifford Pinchot, to consider in detail all the land laws of the United States and determine what ground there is for the wide divergence of opinion concerning the repeal of the present laws and the need of prompt consideration by the government of the questions involved.

This is regarded as an important step in advance and the appointments have been most heartily commended. The powers of the commission have been made almost unlimited, as far as the character of the investigation will permit. It is the determination of the president to permit nothing to interfere with a careful and exhaustive investigation of this question, which has been more or less uppermost in the interior department for many years. The diversity of laws relating to the public lands and the peculiar and distinct conditions in different sections of the country, making laws beneficial in some sections hardships in others, have caused an urgent necessity for some codification of the statutes now on the books and a general rearrangement to fit the conditions.

The commission has been requested to report upon the effect and condition of all the present land laws, and especially what changes in organization, laws, disposal and settlement would be the greatest benefit to the entire mass of present and prospective land seekers. The desire of the president first is to effect the largest practicable disposition of public lands to actual settlers who will build permanent homes on their holdings; second, to secure in perpetuity the fullest and most complete use of public lands, and, third, to make such other suggestions and recommendations as the questions that come up in the consideration of these two problems may suggest. The commission is authorized to avail itself of every means to obtain the information it desires. It is charged with a full and free examination of all records of the government and of all the executive departments, especially the records and papers of the department of justice, the general land office and its branches, the reclamation service and the bureau of forestry.

WILLIAM A. RICHARDS

Commissioner Richards, who will be chairman of the commission, is probably one of the best equipped men in the country to deal with questions relating to land laws. He is one of the western pioneers, and has had wide experience as an official of the government in the execution and administration of the land laws. As surveyor general of the land office for Wyoming and as state governor and land officer both in Wyoming, Colorado and California, as governor of Wyoming and as assistant commissioner and finally commissioner of the general land office, his experience is such that he ranks among the first men of available men in the country for the position. Gov. Richards is at present in California, attending at the bedside of his sick daughter. It is not probable that he will be able to come east until after the first of January.

Mr. F. H. Newell, the second member of the commission, has given many years to the study and development of the irrigation problem, and has been particularly interested in the development and settlement of the vast tracts of arid lands in the western country. His familiarity with the conditions as they exist and of the land laws is unquestioned, and his ability as an engineer makes him an aid of more than ordinary value to his associates on the board.

Prof. Pinchot, chief of the bureau of forestry of the department of agriculture, is a national authority on timber and timber lands. He has been an invaluable aid to the officers of the land office in the settlement of questions arising in the timber lands, and is familiar with all the land laws and their effect.

Brass Band Kills a Mule.

Some deadly music was discovered by a theatrical brass band in Jackson, Mississippi. To advertise the show, the band paraded the streets. A mule stiffened its ears as it heard the wails from the brass band, dropped to the earth and gave up the ghost. The theatrical manager settled a claim made by the owner of the dead mule.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON

How It Is Kept by Both Rich and Poor in Chicago.

WORK OF SOCIAL SETTLEMENTS

Salvation Army Provides Christmas Cheer for Many Thousands—The Public Shall Not the Turkey—Festivities of Middle Classes.

Chicago.—As the holiday season draws near interests in the social settlements and the missions of every large city increases among the poor, for whose benefit they are maintained. It is at the social settlements and the missions of the latter that thousands of the city poor get their only taste of Christmas.

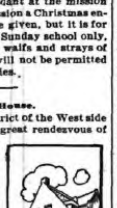
There are Christmas festivities and a certain amount provided. Some even undertake to provide Christmas presents especially for the children, and Christmas dinners, either at home or at the settlement houses for the families. At practically all of the social settlement houses no discrimination is made so far as creed is concerned, and all are given an equal welcome without having any special religious teachings forced upon them. The same is true in the majority of mission churches and Sunday schools, though at times one will find one that is narrower than the general rule.

An instance of this kind may be cited in the poor district of the South side. A wealthy Michigan avenue congregation maintains a mission there attached to which is both a kindergarten and a sewing class as well as a Sunday school. The pastor of the church objects to any child receiving the benefit of the kindergarten who does not attend the Sunday school, or any mother receiving any benefit from the sewing circle who is not a regular attendant at the mission church. At this mission a Christmas entertainment is to be given, but it is for the members of the Sunday school only, and the other little waifs and strays of the neighborhood will not be permitted to view the festivities.

Hull House.

In the Ghetto district of the West side Hull House is the great rendezvous of the poor at Christmas time. Miss Jane Addams exerts a wider influence among the poor of Chicago than any other one person engaged in philanthropic work in the city, and she does nothing that is not practical for them. Every Christmas arrangement at Hull House is devised for practical purposes, and though the charities distributed through this great institution at this time of the year are manifold they are not indiscriminate.



Hull House

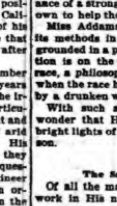
Hull House as it stands to-day, with its commodious buildings, its far-reaching influence, is a growth of a little more than 14 years. It is the product of an European trip by Miss Addams and Miss Ellen G. Starr. On that trip they studied conditions among the poor of Europe, and determined to do something for the poor of Chicago. They had nothing to start with but their own indomitable courage, but they rented one floor of a building—a ramshackle affair erected by Charles Hull in 1859, and in 1889 used by sweat shop proprietors, old clothes and old rag men—and here began attracting about them the poor and unfortunate of the west side. The splendid influence of a stronger personality than their own to help them upward.

Miss Addams Explains Its Object and Its Methods in This Way: "It must be grounded in a philosophy whose foundation is on the solidarity of the human race, a philosophy which will not waver when the race happens to be represented by a drunken woman or an idiotic boy."

With such a foundation it is small wonder that Hull House is one of the bright lights of the Chicago holiday season.

The Salvation Army.

Of all the many organizations which work in His name for the poor of the city none are more appreciated or accomplish greater results than the Salvation Army.



Securing Stuffing for the Turkey

For days past a Salvation Army lassie has stood on every corner of the downtown streets holding a stuffed turkey, from which was suspended an artificial turkey, into which the public were invited to drop their spare change as stuffing." The artificial turkey was emblematic of the use to which the money collected was to be put—the purchasing of a Christmas dinner for 10,000 or more of Chicago's poor. Nor is the dinner all that is to be given. The sad-faced child, into whose life Christmas festivities do not come, is made happy by the present of a small toy. The thinly-clad boy or girl or man or woman is provided with some article of suitable clothing.

This is the one time in the year when the army gives without demanding something in return. The rule of compensation for the assistance given at other times is dispensed with during this one day. It is a Christmas present in the full sense of the term that is received.

It was some five years ago that the Christmas dinner idea was first attempted on a large scale by the Army. At that time they undertook to feed 20,000 people in New York, and fed instead 50,000. From that the idea grew to a national effort, and last year it fed 300,000, ranging from 200,000 in New York to a few hundred, or even down to a few dozen in the smaller cities and towns.

Families are provided with basket dinners. Into each basket must go a turkey, cranberries, mince meat, flour, fruit, and in fact everything that goes to make a Christmas dinner. In cases where it is needed, the fuel to cook the dinner is supplied, and even the car fare needed to come and get the dinner is provided. The basket dinner idea is growing, and its growth is encouraged by the army. It not only provides a cheerfulness in an otherwise dreary home for the day, but it helps to maintain a feeling of self-respect on the part of the recipient as well. For the homeless, including the newsboys and other street waifs, the great public dinner, with its after entertainment, is one of the bright spots of the year.

Christmas Pleasures.

The Christmas festivities of those not dependent upon the charitable organizations for their share of seasonable cheer is varied. In the wealthy homes it is becoming more and more a day devoted to the children. The Chicago millionaire is a home lover, a family lover. On Christmas day the children and grandchildren are gathered about the home parlor, and the little ones are made happy with an over-abundance of costly toys. With this class the day is typical of the farm Christmas in many ways—it is a family reunion day.

Outdoor Christmas Pleasures

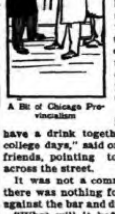
The middle classes take to the theaters in the afternoon and evening. The Christmas matinee is one of the most profitable performances of the year, and for the evening every house is sold out days ahead. Church entertainments provide amusement for thousands of others, and still others, especially the younger element, turn to outdoor sports.

Should Jack Frost fail to cover the park lakes with a heavy coating of ice it would spoil the Christmas pleasure of thousands. This is the most popular of outdoor winter sport in Chicago, because it is the most practical. There are no hills for coasting, though in some of the parks artificial ones are built. The middle classes are not owners of horses and sleighs, and the supply at the livelies are both limited and costly.

To no other city in America probably has the country contributed so large a percentage of the population, as back to the country go thousands for the holiday season, there to find a mirth and enjoyment that is not possible in the city, and in the foreign settlements the Christmas festivities are patterned after those of the fatherland.

Chicago Provincialism.

Chicago provincialism was illustrated to a Harvard man, direct from the effete east, during the recent stock show at the stock yards. It was the easterner's first visit to Chicago, and he came to believe most anything of the woolly west. Of course, he visited the stock show, and while there met two or three friends of his college days, now prominently connected with the packing industries of the city.



A Bit of Chicago Province

"Let all of us go in over here and have a drink together for the sake of college days," said one of the Chicago friends, pointing to a small saloon across the street.

It was not a commodious place, and there was nothing for it but to line up against the bar and drink.

"What will it be?" asked the Chicagoan.

"Is it possible to secure an old-fashioned cocktail?" asked the Harvard man, with trepidation, after looking about the place.

"Would you can't go in this crowd," retured his friend. "Champagne isn't half good enough. Give us a quart of it, Mike."

The bartender opened up the bottle just as though he was used to it, and he is, and the trio disposed of two or three of them before quitting, but the Harvard man pronounced that the Hilt when he told me of it.

"Drinking champagne, of genuine French vintage at that, over a stock yards bar," said he. "Why, I wouldn't have believed it, even of Chicago, if I hadn't been there myself. Such a proceeding is wilder and woollier than anything I ever dreamed of."

But drinking champagne over a bar is an every day occurrence in Chicago.

WILBUR A. PATTERSON

POLITICAL LEADERS

The Men Who Dominate in the Senate and House.

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS

Personal Characteristics of Congressmen Williams and Senators Aldrich and Gorman—How They Rule Their Parties.

Washington.—John Sharpe Williams is the most efficient leader the democrats in the house have had since the days of Crisp. In some respects he is better than Crisp, for he can keep his temper under provocation and that is what Crisp could never do. Besides, Williams has the faculty of getting along personally with the leaders of the opposition. He is about as well liked on the republican side of the house as he is among his own party followers.

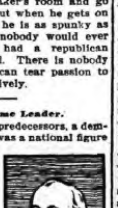
Hon. John Sharpe Williams

Williams and Speaker Cannon have become decidedly chummy. Williams appreciates the courtesy shown him when Cannon permitted him to pick out the democratic members of the committees and he doesn't hesitate to show his gratitude on all occasions when a matter of party advantage is not at stake—and there are plenty of opportunities during a session when the legitimate business of the house can be impeded or expedited according as the rival leaders are in a mood of mutual good fellowship or not.

Both Williams and Cannon have an abounding sense of humor. When they are together they call each other "John" and "Joe" and they crack jokes and tell stories with as much gusto as if they had never had a political difference in their lives. The democratic leader likes nothing better than to stroll into the speaker's room and go over the points. But when he gets on the floor in debate he is as spunky as a game cock and nobody would ever imagine that he had a republican friend in the world. There is nobody in the house who can tear passion to tatters more effectively.

An Old-Time Leader.

One of Williams' predecessors, a democratic leader who was a national figure when Williams was a boy, died only the other day. William M. Springer during the past ten years had not figured in politics; but prior to that time he was regarded as one of the democratic reliabilities in the house for almost a generation.



The Late William M. Springer

After he left congress Springer was for a time a judge in the Indian territory. Of late years he has been a lawyer here in Washington, scarcely more than a memory of the robust congressman who contested the nomination for the speakership with Crisp and Mills, and who afterwards stirred the economies with his famous series of pop-gun tariff bills carrying out the democratic scheme to revise the tariff one item at a time.

Personally, Springer was a lovable man, without even a remote sense of humor. Probably it was the latter failing that made him one of Tom Reed's pet aversions when the great speaker was the leader of the republicans in the house.

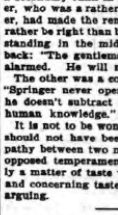
Two of Reed's most famous shafts were thrown at Springer. One was in a debate while Reed was still holding a secondary rank in the house. Springer, who was a rather ponderous speaker, had made the remark that he would rather be right than be president. Reed, standing in the middle aisle, drawled back: "The gentleman need not be alarmed. He will never be either."

The other was a conversational quip: "Springer never opens his mouth that he doesn't subtract from the sum of human knowledge."

It is not to be wondered at that there should not have been any great sympathy between two men of such widely opposed temperaments. It was largely a matter of taste with each of them, and concerning taste there is no use in arguing.

Leadership of the Senate.

The leadership of Senator Aldrich in the senate has been pretty completely demonstrated more than once in recent years, but never more thoroughly than during the extraordinary session just closed. The republican majority were altogether in Aldrich's hands. What he suggested they did, and sometimes they did it without putting him even to the trouble of suggesting it.

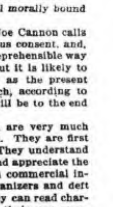


He was one who made the arrangement with the democratic minority by which the business of the extraordinary session was brought to a close and an agreement made by unanimous consent to vote on the Cuban reciprocity bill on the 16th of December.

In fact, he was the only man on the republican side who understood exactly what the terms of the arrangement were, a circumstance which led to a somewhat embarrassing incident one afternoon in executive session. Senator Lodge tried to bring up a matter which was of no particular consequence, but which as it happened did not relate to the Cuban situation. Senator Gorman promptly objected. He said it was contrary to the agreement between the two sides of the chamber. The republicans who were present protested. They had never heard of any such agreement which would put it out of their power to do business of any kind. But Gorman was insistent. And when they pressed him for an explanation, he gave one. He said Senator Aldrich had promised him that if the democrats would consent to the vote on the 16th of December, nothing whatever would be done in the meantime during the extraordinary session except to discuss Cuban reciprocity. Aldrich had left the city without telling anybody on his own side of the chamber about what he had done, but they accepted Gorman's statement, and that was the end of it.

Gorman as a Leader.

Gorman, on the democratic side, occupies just about the same kind of position that Aldrich occupies on the republican side of the chamber. It may be that he hasn't quite the same degree of control of the machinery; but whatever he says goes, despite rumors to the contrary. He is the man to do business with, and when he makes a promise as to what the democrats will do, they feel morally bound to do it.



Senator Gorman

That is what Uncle Joe Cannon calls legislation by unanimous consent, and, of course, it is a very reprehensible way of doing business. But it is likely to continue just as long as the present senate rules live, which, according to present appearances, will be to the end of time.

Gorman and Aldrich are very much the same type of men. They are first of all business men. They understand the economics of legislation and appreciate the effect of legislation on commercial interests. They are organizers and deft handlers of men. They can read character and they can keep their own counsel. They understand weaknesses in others to which they can appeal. They are skilful in the game.

Gorman is more of a public speaker than Aldrich. He is not an orator in any way, but he has a faculty of aggressiveness in debate which Aldrich has never shown. Aldrich when he does use a conversational tone, and goes about it as if he were explaining something before the board of directors of a railroad. Gorman is never exactly conversational. There is always some little touch of mystery in everything he says, and his face is beautifully non-committal. Aldrich, on the other hand, is seemingly the most frank and confiding of men. One wonders how it can be that this smiling, easy-going, companionable fellow can have so many tricks up his sleeve.

New Railroad Station.

The ways are cleared already for the great Union station, which is to be completed for the 4th of March, 1905, and which will be when completed the largest thing of its kind in the world.

Plans for the New Depot

By contrast with the present wretched avenues of approach to Washington will be almost inconceivably splendid.

The new station, which will be only a stone's throw from the capitol, will be built of white granite—a peculiarly white and dazzling stone, quarried at Bethel, Vt., which will surpass marble in architectural effect.

The station will face directly toward the dome of the capitol, and the entire facade will be cleared to permit the capitol steps at the end of the broad avenue. The architectural effects have been drawn from the triumphal arches of Rome. Sloping gently away from the building will be a plaza 500 feet wide and 3,000 feet long, adorned with balustrades and fountains, while there will be a terrace 100 feet wide surrounding the structure.

The station itself will be 620 feet long and from 65 to 120 feet in height. The three entrance arches, each 50 feet in height, will be on a scale of grandeur anything in Roman architecture. The waiting-rooms will be dreams of luxury compared with anything that has ever before been suggested for a railway station, and the dining-room will be equal to anything that can be found in a first-class hotel. There will be all sorts of unusual conveniences. One of these is an invalid's room, easily accessible from the street.

Another is a special entrance for the president of the United States. Besides there will be barbering rooms and baths for men and turkish bath and swimming pool. The entire cost of the station with approaches will be $14,000,000, of which the government pays $7,000,000.

POPULAR HOSTESS

What She Ought to Be

"THERE are some houses to which I never go unless I am dragged by the hair of my head," remarked the woman who knew what she was talking about.

"I suppose those are the houses at which they don't give you truffles and French cooking," remarked the bachelor.

"Not a bit of it! They are the houses where I feel I am being entertained."

"Is that a joke?"

"By no means. There is a great difference between having a good time and being entertained, as you would find out if you went around as much as I do. It reminds me of the story of the young man and the girl who were engaged. They had had a very good time one evening sitting in two rockers very close together on the piazza and watching the moon. The next time he called she plotted to reward the same chairs the minute he took his hat off, and in spite of himself he exclaimed boyishly, 'Oh, don't make me do it!' with the accent on the 'make.' Well, I would like to exclaim the same thing to some of my hostesses—'Oh, don't make me have a good time!'"

"Contrary human nature!"

"The trouble with large gatherings—teas and such—is that they are so artificial. There is no opportunity to create the right sort of atmosphere, and, after all, it is the atmosphere which counts. I have been to little dinners in studios where I enjoyed myself thoroughly, and, on the other hand, I have been to dinners of the wealthy where I was so bored it seemed as if I never would get home. Let me tell you about the studio affair. It was all the more remarkable because the two girls themselves cooked everything and only had the assistance of a little maid for the occasion to help serve. In the first place, the fine, spacious room was entirely lighted by candles, having soft green shades. Garlands of green leaves were festooned here and there on the wall, and there was a mat of them in the center of the round table—for the table was round—another aid to conviviality. On the hearth a wood fire crackled and threw a pleasant, flickering light over everything. The courses were few, but beautifully cooked and well chosen. For an appetizer there were oyster cocktails in pale green glasses. Then came some soup with bits of lettuce leaf in it and a delicious cold entree in a cup (it was some sort of mayonnaise, with nuts and celery chopped up in it); then a beautifully roasted little chicken and its accompaniments, and after a few more things a ruby tinted jelly, with whipped cream and a generous silver plate of chocolates and green and white peppermints. Afterward together the men smoked their cigarettes, while the girls drank their coffee around the big fireplace and the hostess played softly on the piano and hummed snatches of popular songs. It was all so refreshingly informal and homey."

"I don't suppose those girls lack for men," chuckled the bachelor. "Your description appeals to me."

"They certainly do not," she answered. "Men like a place where they can drop in, find good smoke, a cigarette and have a nice, quiet chat, and they will go there again and again when you couldn't for love or money rope them into a family dinner, with its solitary cigar smoked with paterfamilias, and then the stiff after dinner talk in the parlor with mother and the girls, and the beginnings of an indigestion caused by too much pudding and too little sauce."

"What would you describe as the perfect hostess, then?" pursued the man.

"The woman—old maid or girl—who doesn't need two weeks' notice to plan anything enjoyable, who can make her guest feel as if he were a part of the furniture—I mean as if he belonged in the room; who can laugh and jolly and entertain him in a careless, comfortable way; who can play a bit on the piano or be quiet, just as the mood suits him; who appreciates a man's liking for prettily shaded lamps and open fires and doesn't mind if he strews ashes all over the carpet and smokes up her portieres. The 'comfy' girl or woman—she's the hostess for you and for me."

THE LONDON GHETTO

Two Impressions Which the Observer Receives on Visit There.

Tireless Energy of the Jews Both Old and Young—The Religious Devotion Which Makes Up a Large Part of Life.

In the great London ghetto, each year growing larger, the observer is perpetually asking himself which of his two impressions is the chief. His first impression is of the extraordinary energy of the Jew. It continues from morning until night; the loafer is as conspicuously absent in the Yiddish quarter as once he was conspicuously present in these streets of East London; and the energy lasts from childhood unto age—old and young seem ever occupied. By this we do not mean that the Jew is always at work. In the long array of restaurants which have sprung up to meet his foreign habit of taking his meals abroad, he spends a larger part of his time than does the English worker of the same class in any such places; a larger time, indeed, than any but the more leisured classes in England. But in his restaurants he is still busy, voluubly arguing, busily writing, sometimes dictating to the professional letter-writer; and even when playing dominoes, still doing it with an air of concentrated business.

It is the same with the children as with their elders. The Yiddish child, when the board school lessons are done, promptly goes to the Talmud Torah school, where, with unaltered energy, he attacks the rhythmic verses whose learning gives him at least one more language than the English child with whom he will one day be a competitor, and that a language which is a kind of Volapuk, a passport, a free-masonry, among the most pushing of races. Here, in the Talmud Torah school, the Jewish child learns the beginning of that ritual which, however diminished in its effects by his after career, must remain a lasting influence in the life of the great number of Jews.

And that leads us to the second impression which is created in the mind of the observer in Yiddish East London, which is the large share that religion plays in the lives of the alien immigrants. Heine once wrote of the different ways in which various peoples regard liberty. One might in the same way think of the differing regards that people have for religions; and think of the religion of the Jew as a thing which through centuries he has died for and suffered for, enduring prisons and stripes and many fears.

The synagogue is not closed as our churches are on a weekday to those who would commune apart in meditation and prayer. It is always open; a perpetual token that religion is not a weekly exercise, but daily bread. It opens at five o'clock in the morning. One poor Jew told the writer that for many weeks, when he was out of work and homeless, he used to wait for the synagogue to open at early morning, so that he might slip in and stay there for a few hours. But go as early as you will, there in the dingy pews, with the faint light struggling through the dingier panes, Jews will be bending and swaying in prayer. "Lord, I love the habitation of Thy House, and the place where Thy glory dwelleth." These are the words with which each Jew enters the synagogue; and if in the dark synagogue the words, "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, thy dwelling places, O Israel," have no material appropriateness, their spiritual fitness in the mouths of the reverent worshippers who utter them is apparent.

There is a wonderful fervor in the service; not the hysterical fervor of the Salvationist, or of that weird sect known a generation ago in England as the Ranters, but the fervor of emotion deeply felt and half suppressed. In one of M. Renouard's drawings he has depicted a woman in mourning. There was something so poignant in her grief that one almost expected to hear the congregation break into tears and lamentations; to see them rending their clothes and pouring ashes on their heads.

There are not, as we have said, many ceremonial occasions in the Jewish service. On some feast days, the Scrolls of the Law are taken from the Ark, and are carried by the priesthood round the synagogue, and the people leaning forward to touch them, and to hold up their children so that they may be blessed by the sacred writings. But in all that goes on within the synagogue there is a solemnity and sincerity which confers a splendid impressiveness; and perhaps not the least of the factors of its attribute lies in the demeanor of the congregation.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Gowns and Wraps and How They Are Made.

Combinations of white chiffon and black lace or even of white lace and of black lace make handsome and effective evening gowns.

While elbow sleeves are still used, they are immensely full and frilly at the elbow, and a good way of renovating an old sleeve is to cut it off at the elbow, slash it and fill it in with closely gathered lace.

The loose hanging jacket effect is all the rage for gowns of lace or veiling. The little jacket is edged with narrow lace fringe, taffeta or satin ruching or chiffon applique. Accompanying it is always the wide swather belt of lustrous silk or velvet.

Accordion plaited waists and skirts are very smart for the slender woman, but no one else should attempt them. The accordion plaited skirts are especially pretty in crepe de chine or veiling with a nicely fitted hip yoke of lace.

Shirred skirts of the new chiffon voile have a pretty fullness broken by horizontal lines of embroidery done on bands of white taffeta or louisine. The girdle is formed of this, and it also appears on the fluffy waist in the shape of detached motifs.

The very latest thing in furs is a wide shawl-like scarf of ermine with long ends edged with chiffon, the whole being clasped in front by a jeweled slide. A hat recently seen with this kind of scarf was also of ermine trimmed with two large drooping silver tassels.

The illustration shows an evening dress of figured crepe de chine trimmed with chantilly lace and chiffon roses.

DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Tassels, Cords, Braid, Lace Fringe and Ruchings All Popular.

Cloth gowns are almost invariably combined with beautiful embroideries of the same shade, particularly if the gown is of pale colored cloth and intended for dressy occasions. These embroideries are a feature of the princess gown in cloth. This gown very often in reality has its waist and skirt separate, but so draped and arranged that they appear as one.

Cords and tassels and all sorts of braids are favorite trimmings, and very few gowns are evolved by the best dressmakers without the addition of some of these fussy, dangling little ornaments.

Dyed lace and beautiful wide fringe constitute the trimming of many crepe de chine gowns. One of these seen recently was of pale blue crepe de chine trimmed with wide straight bands of cluny lace dyed to match. The tucked square yoke was edged with a wide fringe.

Moleskin is used to trim many gowns, especially those of gray cloth. The illustration shows a costume of this description, but in this case the moleskin bands are crossed with black and white braid. The very full skirt is trimmed with horizontal tucks.

COREA PROGRESSING

Foreign Traders Seeking Acquaintance with the Hermit Nation.

America's Part in Revolutionizing the Quaint, Antique Methods of the Empire—Pressed on All Sides by Conflicting Interests.

Corea, once happily a hermit nation, practically out of the world, ever since attaining to the dignity of an independent state and the publicity attendant upon the change, has had her hands full of responsibility. And being new to the business, the responsibility has proved irksome, perplexing, and is proving so now. Would-be acquaintances from far-off lands continually knocking at her doors asking that her ports be opened to grant King Commerce, whilst equally troublesome neighbors forbid her acceding to the request. The problem of the present moment is this—the United States respectfully request that the city of Wiji on the Yalu river be opened for free trade. The Russians oppose the opening.

From a political point of view Corea's position is most unfortunate; there is Russia, colossal, energetic on one side; China, with her ancient claims, pressing close; and nearby Japan, whose history and traditions are so closely linked with her own. Then there are the energetic foreigners, interested in the resources of her 82,000 square miles.

Poor Corea! And yet what would she be in this day and age if foreign enterprise were to let her alone, had let her alone?

Missionary, trader and engineer have worked their influences, and Corea to-day has Christian churches and schools, has hospitals, dispensaries, newspapers, railways, iron bridges, electric lights and street railways. Mr. William Elliot Griffis, in his book "America in the East," thus lauds the part our own countrymen have taken in modernizing Corea: "The first railway from Chemulpo to Seoul, with its iron bridges and modern equipments, and the first electric lights and street railways in Seoul, the exploitation and development of the mines, have been begun and carried out by Americans. The renovation of the capital city from the similitude of a pigsty to one of the brightest and cleanest cities in the east is the work of native officers who had experience in Washington."

Of course it was the war of 1894-5 that made preparation for the nation's progress, and in these subsequent years the progress has been almost revolutionary. In and about Seoul is an electric railway 18 miles in length; a railway that is now very popular with the natives, although at first they disapproved of the innovation to such an extent they tore up the tracks and destroyed buildings. The railway from the seaport Chemulpo to the capital Seoul, a distance of 26 miles, is in successful operation.

miles in length, have 40 stations and 20,500 feet of bridges. As Corea is mountainous the road will have to follow river valleys and mountain gaps where possible and provision has been made for 31 tunnels, one of them a mile long. The first section is already open to travel. The Seoul-Wiji railway (under the auspices of the Corean government, with French engineers and French material) is designed to tap the coal and gold mining regions, but though there has already occurred the official opening of the section from Seoul to Sangdo, owing to a lack of Corean funds the road has been temporarily abandoned.

A system of waterworks in Seoul has been begun by the American company that furnishes light for the city. The telephone is in use in Seoul, and lines are being extended to Chemulpo. Telegrams may be sent in Corea in certain specified foreign languages, in the Corean, Chinese and Japanese tongues. The postal system, a highly satisfactory one, is under French direction.

SEEN ON THE STREET.

Shawl-like Fur Stoles—Black Velvet and Chiffon Velours.

One of the most novel walking costumes seen recently was of almond green cloth, trimmed with tiny green buttons. The coat was trimmed with four little capes, and the large sleeves appeared to be laid in successive folds after the fashion of the cape. The skirt of the coat was also trimmed at the lower edge with tucks, and the skirt proper was trimmed at the bottom with five similar folds. This skirt was very full and barely escaped the ground.

Some of the new stoles are much too wide and are likely to detract from one's height. The well dressed woman will take these matters into consideration and only choose what is in good proportion according to her height.

Black chiffon velours and velvet are the very smartest black materials. Black broadcloth is not seen so much this winter as formerly.

The wide lace collar and the fichu are godsends to the girl who must occasionally renovate her old frocks.

The illustration shows a gown of cream crepe de chine trimmed with shirring and having accordion plaited angel sleeves.

COSTLY WRAPS.

The All White Garment Has Lost Its Popularity.

So far as wraps are concerned brown and gray are the leading colors. The all white wrap is not so fashionable and is seen only in the evening.

There is a craze in Europe for all the deep shades of red, and these appear in chiffon and ordinary velvet, plain or spotted.

The new walking skirts are more trimmed than formerly and are stiffened ed at the bottom to give them that desirable flare. They are trimmed horizontally with folds and bands of stitched cloth. They are sometimes plaited vertically.

Loose sack coats of high priced plushes, particularly in the crushed varieties, are very smart in gray, black and white. A rich coat of this gray plush with a narrow stole collar and gauntlet cuffs of ermine is a sumptuous garment, especially when lined with white satin and incrusted down the front with ecru lace motifs. It can be worn either open or closed and is suitable for many occasions.

Moleskin and ermine make a very fashionable combination in millinery. Shirred hats and muffs of chiffon velvet are worn to match with afternoon gowns.

There is a marked tendency toward the 1830 modes. Shoulders are being made long, and the sleeves puff more than ever at the elbow, while the additional fullness in skirts is marked. Then, too, we have the wide cape effects and big hats projecting over the face.

A great many dressy tailor mades are cut just to clear the ground without any dip whatever in the back.

The cut shows a plain shirt waist of fine cloth trimmed with tucks and three bands of fagoting.

ON BEAUTIFUL CAPRI

The Charming Little Island in the Gulf of Naples.

It Is One of the Picturesque Spots of Europe Much Sought After by Tourists—Some of Its Attractions.

Few tourists doing Europe pass beautiful Capri by. The little island lying at the mouth of the Gulf of Naples offers more than its share of natural beauty and romance to the searcher after that which is interesting and picturesque. Capri has, in times past, been a favorite winter resort for a select few, but in recent years its attractions have been so advertised that it is now overrun with tourists, much to the dissatisfaction of the old-timers.

Among these old-timers is a considerable Germany colony, of which Herr Krupp was a distinguished member previous to his death, and to this colony, and more especially to its leader, Herr Krupp, is the world indebted for the many paths and pleasant driveways that have brought the beauties of the island and its romantic spots within easy access. To the increasing popularity may also be attributed the increase in accommodations for travelers. But a few years ago the tourist who included Capri in his list of places to visit found there but the scantest accommodations, and these of but poor quality. Now, however, thanks to the increased number of visitors, the hotels are commodious and comfortable, affording attractive stopping places for either a few days or a considerable time at but small expense.

Because of the comparative cheapness of living at Capri a considerable number of Americans of the kind who travel for pleasure rather than because it is fashionable, find it an inviting place to spend a winter. Neatly furnished cottages may be had for from $25 to $30 per month, or for those who prefer it hotel rates are so low as to make housekeeping unnecessary as a matter of economy. These low rates make the island society rather cosmopolitan, a feature not despised by the pleasure seeker.

To describe the loveliness of this enchanting spot would indeed be to paint the lily fair. Its rocky and picturesque outline, its towering precipitous cliffs, its white-walled, palm-shaded villages, and its seemingly magical grottoes justly entitle it to the name of "the loveliest pearl in Naples' crown." Few travelers to that city omit to pay at least a flying visit to Capri.

The sights of Capri are more numerous than one would expect in such a limited area. The most celebrated is, of course, the marvelous Blue Grotto, which has so often been described that we need do no more than refer to it here. As is the case with most islands, the finest scenery is the coast line itself, and no one should fail to make the tour of the island in a rowboat, which takes about four hours and costs about ten francs. This trip will include visits to the Blue Grotto and to the less known but almost equally beautiful grotte Verde and Rossa. Other fine objects of natural interest are the Arco Naturale, the Grotto Mitromania, and the magnificent cliff, surmounted by the ruins of the villa in which Emperor Tiberius passed his declining years, and from which he is said to have cast his victims into the waves below. This villa should also be visited on foot if only for the unsurpassed view which it affords of the gulfs of Naples and Salerno and of the snow-clad Apennines beyond. There is a fine old ruined castle, named after Barbarossa, which deserves a visit; and another fine view is to be obtained from the summit of Monte Solaro, the highest point of the island.

The "towns" consist of the picturesque oriental-looking villages of Capri and Anacapri. Visitors from Naples are landed at the Marina, where the picturesquely got-up natives are always ready to dance the tarantella, dive for coins, or turn an honest penny in any way that may please the traveler's fancy. The people are, however, a really interesting race, noted for their fine Greek features, and appear to the best advantage, from the spectacular point of view, on the occasion of one of their numerous festivals, particularly that of San Costanzo, the patron saint of the island. The Capriotes are said to be becoming less and less simple and unsophisticated every year, but the scenic glories of this Mediterranean fairyland can never depart, and after a single visit one can understand the fascination which they exercised over the English artist who left Naples one morning, intending to spend the afternoon in Capri, and has remained there ever since. And that morning was seven years ago.

Materials and Styles Which Are Smart This Season.

Evening capes are again coming into vogue, and one of the prettiest seen recently was of white chiffon velvet shirred into deep bands and appliqued down the front with silver embroidery.

A white cloth skirt is a useful adjunct to a winter wardrobe, for, worn with one's best white lace waist, it makes a dressy costume. Many of these skirts are elaborately trimmed, but perhaps the prettiest style consists of plaits from the hips, while down the front there is a panel fastened at each side with tiny gold buttons the size of a pea.

Crepe lisse is an old fashioned material which is coming back into use. It is especially pretty for evening gowns.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Fewer Hair Ornaments—Bands of Fur Used For Trimming.

Sashes brought twice around the waist and finished in the back with a loose knot and fringed ends are a smart addition to a gown.

Hair ornaments are not so pronounced now as formerly, and more attention is given to the elaborate dressing of the hair itself.

Bands of fur are a great deal used as trimmings. Sable, mink and even ermine are seen on white and pale colored cloth gowns.

The new fur toques are high in the back and filled in with shaded flowers, while in front a pointed effect is striven for. As the only trimming on this sort of toque seems to consist of flat wings or bows, it will be seen that it is not becoming to every one.

Gold and silver braids appear on many hats in the shape of bands across the top of the crown or rosettes under the brim. These rosettes, however, are flat, being appliqued to the felt.

Pale fawn and gray are sharing the honors with mixed black and white for visiting costumes, and at a recent fashionable wedding a great many chiffon velvet gowns were seen in soft tinted shades of the new red.

Zibeline is all the rage for street, for skating and for walking costumes. It comes in all the odd shades of blue and lavender.

The picture shows a tailor made gown of moleskin velvet and crepe de chine. The bolero has a cape effect, piped in white. White embroidery appears on the wide girdle. The skirt is made of alternate bands of closely shirred crepe de chine and moleskin velvet.

Any suggestion made by Rev. Dr. Richards, whose name is inseparately connected with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will not only receive from the people of this city the attention it deserves but will be viewed in a respectful way by a great body of Christian people in this section of the county who appreciate him as a scholarly man. Hence his idea of holding services hourly on Sunday mornings and of keeping the doors of the church edifice open throughout the week is becoming a subject for public discussion. The Newark Evening News dwells on the propositions advanced by the learned clergyman at some length and as its view will be of interest to Plainfielders it is here-with reproduced:

"Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, formerly of Plainfield, but now of the Brick Church, Fifth avenue, New York, has recently touched upon a subject that has been in and on the minds of a great many people for many years. It has long been a matter of comment in church congregations, and even outside of them, that buildings so costly and beautiful as churches are, especially in the large cities, should be in actual use only three hours each week, and all the rest of the time, 165 hours, be closed to the people and seemingly of no use whatever. Dr. Richards does not seek to utilize church edifices by constant services throughout the week, but he claims, in the year book he has recently issued, that his church, and as many others as may choose to adopt his suggestion, should have hourly services on Sunday mornings, as Roman Catholic churches have, thus accommodating many people who may be unable to attend the regular service. He has also started Sunday evening services and Friday twilight services, and the front doors of his church are always open. As yet no crowds are attracted to these special services at unusual hours, but Dr. Richards claims that he sees his ideas developing in them. It will be generally conceded that there is abundant room, occasion and opportunity for the experiment Rev. Dr. Richards is making. If the practice of having the churches always open to any desiring to worship is good for the Catholic churches, there is as yet no known reason why it would not be good for the Protestant."

AMUSEMENTS.

Paula Edwardes and the "Winsome Winnie" Company are reaping the reward of their efforts and drawing great audiences at the famous Casino. It is now a matter of regret with Messrs. Sam. S. Shubert, Nixon and Zimmerman that the tuneful comedy triumph was not booked for a longer stay at Broadway's most popular playhouse. The eight weeks' of the original hocking are nearly finished and Miss Edwardes and her merry band will journey on to Pittsburg, Chicago and the other big cities of the West.

Chuck full of realism and great scenes, "No wedding bells for her" is keeping the box office, and incidently a fine cast, busy these days at the Murray Hill, Forty-second street and Lexington avenue. Even the successful run of Harrigan at this playhouse is likely to be surpassed by the patronage now being enjoyed there. The dramatic critics have nothing but praise for the play and the cast, and dramatic critics are a severe lot of taskmasters.

Lew Dockstader, the only Lew Dockstader, funnier than ever before and you know he is the synonym of funniness, is at the Victoria Theatre, in all his glory. His big minstrel troupe is lined up behind him and the asbestos curtain every night and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons as well. There is no danger in that playhouse even though the side-splitting jokes of Dockstader are enough to raise the roof.

To feel the pulse of the amusement loving public and to present an entertainment that will meet with unanimous approval is the top notch of theatrical genius. To accomplish this not only requires keen judgment but the outlay of enormous sums of money. We are in an era where the public demand the most livish that money can furnish, and any attempt at cheapness lowers the standard of any theatre that makes the experiment. This is a few words gives the keynote of Mr. Keith's success. His shows always please all, and to attain this end he spares no expense. As Keith's one will always find the best to be had at any price, and better still at a cost so small as to be within the reach of all.

AMUSEMENTS.

Klaw & Erlanger's great spectacle, "Mother Goose," at the New Amsterdam Theatre, is a marvelously interesting entertainment, presenting a more generous measure of amusement than was ever before afforded by any theatrical production. For three solid hours, from the rise to the final fall of the curtain, an unbroken procession of comicality and novelty is seen. Laughter and wonder are the keynotes of the piece—laughter at the humor of the comedians and wonder over its remarkably beautiful spectacular features and the unusually brilliant specialties.

At no time in the twenty-five years' history of the Eden Musee has the management provided so many and so interesting attractions as now. During the entire winter the Musee will be one of the most pleasing amusement places in the city. A large number of new wax groupes have been made and double the regular number of artists are employed. In every way possible the Musee is managing to keep its wax works collection thoroughly up to date. But the wax groups are only a small feature of the Musee. Moving pictures have become an important factor.

Chauncey Olcott, whose name is made famous by song and story, is filling an engagement at the New York theatre. He is starring in "Terence," a play of exceptional merit which is drawing big houses. Olcott has been such a general favorite that there is no need of saying that he is making a great hit and that the box office will be kept busy during the run of the show. The highest price seat in the house is $1.50, so you see the Manhattan is not the only theatre which answers the public's demand for low rates. Enclose check with your order for seats.

Impressed by the New York success of Bertha Galland in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," Julia Neilson and Fred Terry have secured the English rights to the play lately produced extraordinarily at the New York Theatre. Negotiations between the English players and J. Fred Zimmerman, Jr., have been in progress for some time. While it is considered unfortunate that Miss Galland cannot make her London debut in the best role she has yet had, those saw Miss Neilson's work here may imagine what she will do as "Dorothy." Moreover, the London players have heard such complimentary reports of Manager Zimmerman's pictorial production of the Elizabethan play that they have cabled for the scenic models and costume plates, with the intention of reproducing the New York production in London, which is decidedly a reverse of the usual rule. Miss Galland's engagement in "Dorothy Vernon" began at the Lyric Theatre Monday evening.

The engagement of William A. Brady's celebrated rural play continues at the Academy of Music, New York. The last performance will be given on Saturday night, Jan. 23. The 300th performance of the play at the Academy will be given tomorrow night, and the occasion will be made memorable by the distribution of souvenirs. Saturday after season it has gone to the same cities—Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and other places—and with each succeeding visit its takings have increased. The natural deduction is that it is a play that the masses and the classes want. The same people go to see "Way Down East" again and again. The so-called city folk who originally came from the rural districts, seem to find keen pleasure in being carried back, by a series of beautiful stage pictures to scenes of youthful days.

There has been nothing so far for intensity of purpose, realism in action or fidelity to locale that can equal Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryer's "Our New Minister," the latest product of "The Old Homestead" authors, which has completely captured and brought all New York to its feet at the American Theatre, where it is now in its second month. As a success it is simply sweeping everything before it, it is certainly the most talked of play of the day and has set the theatrical world by the ears. One sits down to this play as he would to a good dinner. The heartiness and wholesomeness of the characters, the New England setting, in which simple country life is so excellently portrayed, together with the theme of the play itself, the right fighting against the evil, charity displacing bigotry—these are among the things that give the performance its human quality and cause it to appeal to all. The character studies are delightful creations, strong and convincing, and thoroughly in keeping with their surroundings. Ernest Hastings, Joseph Conyers, Charles Stedman, John Barker, Louise Pierce, John P. Brown, Fred Mower, Grant Foreman, W. C. Tanner, Grace Hanson, Clara Rainford and Phila May make up what is practically an all star cast. Tonight will occur the fiftieth performance in New York, on which occasion elegant souvenirs will be distributed to the ladies.

RANDOLPH G. SILVERS BURIED

REV. DR. J. A. CHAMBLISS AND REV. G. M. SHOTT OFFICIATED.

The funeral services of Randolph G. Silvers, a well-known resident of North Plainfield, were held from the late home, 119 Westervelt avenue, Saturday afternoon. There was present a large company of friends who had known Mr. Silvers for a number of years. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which the dead man was a member. The excellent Christian qualities of the dead man, his devotion to his church and his quiet unassuming ways were referred to in the remarks by Dr. Chambliss. The interment took place in the Baptist church cemetery, Scotch Plains, where Rev. G. M. Shott, the pastor of the Baptist church, in that place, officiated.

LITERARY.

There is a striking article in the January Leslie's Monthly on the Gambling Spirit, on the passion that pervades our modern American life, with portraits of W. C. Whitney, Keene, Canfield, Yerkes, Al. Adams and others, and also the first chapter of the experience of a special correspondent of the magazine who lived in sicily with a peasant family and emigranted with them to America, with the object of investigating that side of our emigration problem. The number gives a large amount of space to the automobile, with a series of explanatory articles by experts, and an illustrated catalogue of the pleasure vehicles now on the American market. There are nine short stories, business, society, automobile, political, dramatic and humorous ones, with another chapter of "A Few Real Boys" and a most amusing sketch by Charles Battell Loomis, called "Miss Flutterly, on What is Doing." There are twenty items in all on the contents page.

"I cannot but think that Mr. Kipling took Pierre Loti as his model, thinking that he might do for India what Loti had done for Arabia," says George Moore in January Lippincott's Magazine. "That is how the newspapers would word it. But where Mr. Kipling found the peg whereon to hang his descriptions matters little; it is much more to our purpose to note that there is an idea behind Loti's descriptions, that a generation is but a caravan wandering through eternal nature; and it is the continual presence of this idea that makes Loti a poet. Mr. Kipling commands the service of a military band, and the service of a camera, and the service of electic light, and a large audience assembles to see India in cinematography."

The Burr McIntosh Monthly reflects the latest achievements in the art of reproduction. Each number contains about forty handsome panel photographs 6 inches by 12 inches of beautiful women, famous men, interesting events, art studies, a number of magnificent colored prints and gravures. Enfolded with the handsomest multicolor cover ever presented and bound with silk cord. All pictures are of convenient size for matting, passe-partouting, framing and for decorating your home. The year's collection will be of great value.

"Among the Eastern nations the beginning of school life is a critical time for the child" says Beatrice C. Wilcox, in Everybody's Magazine for January. "The priest or astrologer must be consulted to choose a lucky day. Every precaution must be taken to avert the jealousy of the gods, whose malice is especially directed against a fine boy. "The Chinese father who adores his son will take the utmost pains to convince the powers of the air that the boy is of no account. The child may be given a despisable name, like flea, or Chu-tze, a pig, or more insulting still, he may be given a girl's name. The boy may be started off to school wearing a girl's dress and one carring, and if the deception is complete this will be the most effectual of all, for even the gods do not care for girls in China.

The January magazine of The Outlook is especially notable for the number of interesting portraits contained in it. Thus, a fine full page picture of Herbert Spencer precedes an anecdotal, personal article on Spencer by George Iles, who knew him well; Sargent's portrait of President Roosevelt precedes the instalment of Jacob A. Riis' "Theodore Roosevelt the Citizen," which deals with Mr. Roosevelt's share in the work of civil service reform; St. Gaudens' portrait of the Puritan precedes Mr. Henry Hoyt Moore's entertaining and graphic article called "The Puritan and the Cavalier," which is further well illustrated by the author's photographs taken at Plymouth and Jamestown; the visit of Mr. W. B. Feats, the Irish poet, dramatist and critic, is made the occasion of an article on the Irish Literary Revival, by Mr. H. S. Krans, with a fine portrait of Mr. Yeats.

FREHOLDERS' BOARD, REP. 11; DEM. 9

Two Rahway Democrats Sworn in as Members, Succeeding Two Republicans.

CONDITION OF FINANCES

FORMER CONGRESSMAN DUNN'S PLEA FOR NEWARK BAY BRIDGE.

Freeholders' Committee to Look After Union County's Interests at the Legislature's Sessions — Westphal on Two Committees.

The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders met Thursday afternoon and George Cladek and John J. Marsh, Democrats, succeeding John Farrell and Peter Tillman, Republicans, of Rahway, were sworn in as members.

This cuts down the Republican majority to two and it is fortunate for the majority that Westfield was incorporated as a town, or it would have left the board a tie. The board now stands eleven Republicans and nine Democrats.

Former Congressman John T. Dunn appeared before the board and was given the privilege of addressing the members on the subject of a bridge across Newark bay. He said: "The late Senator Kyte told me, at the time we were contemplating the project, that there was at least $10,000,000 in it for Union County. E. G. Brown, a bridge builder, estimated that the cost would be $500,000. The tolls collected from wagons and trolleys would pay the interest on the investment, and at the same time create a sinking fund which would soon pay for the bridge itself. He said that at least $45,000 a year could be secured in tolls.

Freeholder Krouse presented a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of five to look after the interests of Union County at the sessions of the State Legislature and it was adopted. Freeholders Krouse, King, Adams, Brucklacher and Swain were delegated to this duty.

The committee appointed to settle with the collector reported that the receipts for the year had been $400,000, and the disbursements $368,135.23, leaving a balance of $181,919.57.

Director Hubbard announced several committee changes. William A. Westphal, of this city, is chairman of the jail inspection committee and a member of the appropriation's committee.

The board is comprised of the following members: Clark—Benjamin King, R.; Cranford—E. K. Adams, R.; Elizabeth—Jacob Brucklacher, D., Joseph McCandless, D., Thomas J. Pierson, D., Emil Hess, D.; Fanwood—John Robison, R.; Linden—Henry Krouse, R.; New Providence—John F. Wahl, R.; Plainfield—J. Frank Hubbard, R., William A. Westphal, R.; Rahway—George Cladek, D., John J. Marsh, D.; Springfield—N. W. Bonnel, D.; Summit—John N. Clady, R., William H. Swain, D.; Union—Noah Woodruff, D.; Westfield (town) — George H. Embree, R., Charles A. Smith, R.; Westfield (township)—W. W. Connolly, R.

TO REVOKE TROLLEY CHARTER?

CORPORATION COUNSEL INVESTIGATING ALLEGED POOR SERVICE GIVEN.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has started an investigation into the local trolley service. He has conferred with several members of the Board of Trade, which at its recent meeting, made strenuous objection to the sort of service that is afforded Plainfield by the Public Service Corporation. It is understood that if the investigation results in the discovery of any violations of the charter of the P. S. C. in regard to arrangements for the safety and convenience of patrons, action against the corporation will be begun at once.

STATE Y. M. C. A. MEET.

Inter-Association Athletic Contests —Eight Branches Will Compete.

The inter-association athletic meet of the Y. M. C. A.'s of Northern New Jersey will be held with the local association, February 8. Eight associations have already signified their intention of entering teams. They are Jersey City, Hudson and Central branches, Newark, Summit, Montclair, Orange, Morristown and Plainfield. It is probable that most of the other seven associations, having physical departments, will decide to compete.

Dahl Bankruptcy Proceedings.

Before Referee DeKoster, of Newark, application to sell the lands of John Dahl, who filed a petition in bankruptcy some time ago, has been granted, and the order to sell issued. F. J. Biatz, Esq., of this city, is a trustee of the estate.

J. ACKERMAN COLES' VALUABLE PRESENT

Life-Sized Bronze Bust of Washington Given to Hope College by a Plains Man.

HONDEN'S LIFE MODEL

STORY RELATING TO BUST AS DOLD BY THE DONOR.

Five Per Cent. Gold Bond of U. S. Steel Co. Presented to College at Same Time—Interest to be Used for Oratorical Contest Prize.

J. Ackerman Coles, of Deerhurst, Scotch Plains, has presented to Hope College, Mich., a life-sized bronze bust of George Washington, cast expressly for the college at the Barbedienne foundry, Paris, France, from the original model of Antoine Houdon, taken from life at Mount Vernon, Virginia.

The bust bears the following inscription: "Cast for Hope College, Holland, Mich. Garret J. Kollen, LL.D., President. A gift from J. Ackerman Coles, M.D., LL.D. Dec. 25, 1903."

The following statement from the donor in connection with the gift will be of further interest: "It was while Benjamin Franklin was our minister at the court of Paris, France, that the Legislature of the State of Virginia requested him to bring with him to America Antoine Houdon to have this then the most famous artist model from life Washington, for a life-size statue for the State House at Richmond. In compliance with such directions Houdon accompanied Franklin from Paris to Mount Vernon, where he spent three weeks taking casts and measurements of Washington, after which he returned to Paris, and the statue, now in the State House at Richmond, was made from said measurements. At the same time as the execution of the full statue a life-size bust was made and the model preserved to the present time, so that in this bust of Washington we have an accurate copy of the features of him who was first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

The same donor of the bust accompanied his gift by a five per cent. gold bond, registered, of the United States Steel Company. "The interest accrued, $150, to be used at the expiration of each three years hereafter for the purchase of a similar bronze bust to be awarded as a triennial prize to that student of Hope College who, in the judgment of the faculty, shall deliver the best original patriotic address."

GERMANS TO REBUILD HALL

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN DECIDE TO ERECT A BETTER BUILDING.

The Gesang and Turn Verein met in a business session Sunday afternoon in the old North Plainfield Democratic headquarters on Somerset street and discussed relative to the adjusting of the insurance and of rebuilding the structure. The members favor constructing another and better house on the same site. The nomination and election of officers was postponed until Thursday night.

President William Gardner was in the chair. A committee was appointed to thank the firemen of both the city and borough, as well as Henry Rummell, John Retzer and Rudolph Kersting, who saved valuable property. The committee consists of Henry Haurand, Fred J. Huff and Charles Dresselt. A letter from former President Charles Maass, now of Somerville, in which he congratulated the organization on the fact that the flag and other property were saved and expressed his sorrow over the fact that the organization suffered such a heavy loss was read. Henry Haurand was authorized to assist the trustees in making the insurance adjustments.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Lady Windermer's Fan," one of the smartest society dramas of the present day, has been selected by Mr. Proctor for presentation by the excellent stock company located at his Fifth Avenue Theatre. It will be the first time in some years that this play, with its scintillating comedy and careful dissection of human nature, has been presented in this city. Recognizing the value of the production, Mr. Proctor has provided an entirely new set of scenery, thoroughly in keeping with the ultra fashionable tone of the play. It will be excellently interpreted by Malcolm Williams, Miss Lotta Linthcum (who has made a decided success) Charles Lane, Miss Rose Stuart, Gerald Griffin, Miss Loretta Healy, etc. In addition to this production a lengthy vaudeville bill will be presented.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY

The contents of the December Number include the following articles....

Recent Theories in Regard to the Determination of Sex. Professor T. H. Morgan.
The Academy of Science of St. Louis. Professor William Trelease.
The Tetrahedral Idea of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. Gilbert H. Grosvenor.
Herzian Wave Wireless Telegraphy. Dr. J. A. Fleming.
The Salmon and Salmon Streams of Alaska. President David Starr Jordan.
The Storm Center in the Atlantic. Dr. Allan McLaughlin.
The Growth of Rural Population. Professor Frank T. Carlton.
Rear Admiral Melville, U. S. N., and Applied Science in the Construction of the New Navy. The late Professor R. H. Thurston.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY has had for sale and no equal in the educative service it has done for the American people. A complete set of the volumes thus far published is a library of history of science for the period covered and at the same time a pretty complete cyclopedia of natural science. There is nothing to fill its place, and there will be no manufacture of it to the public.—W. T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

CHRISTIAN SCHEPFLIN GOES TO HIS REWARD

Plainfield Clothing Manufacturer Passes Away at His Home in Dunellen.

FATHER OF THAT PLACE

FOR MANY YEARS ENGAGED IN BUSINESS IN THIS CITY.

Came to America in 1847—Located Here in 1868—Prospered and Then Overtaken by Misfortune—Prominent in Dunellen.

In the death of Christian Schepflin, which occurred Sunday morning at 10:20 at his home in Dunellen, there is removed one of the best known citizens of that place and one, who for the past thirty-five years, has been prominently identified with the business interests of Plainfield. He was stricken with apoplexy on December 31, and from that time until his death he was in an unconscious state. Every known medical device was used to restore Mr. Schepflin to consciousness, but to no avail.

Mr. Schepflin was born in Germany in 1826 and he came to this country when he was twenty-one years old. At first he secured employment as foreman in the clothing establishment of the late Mr. Baldwin in New York, where he remained until 1868, when he came to Plainfield. He soon afterward made his home in Dunellen and at the same time there was organized the clothing firm of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co. The business was carried on for some time at the corner of Front and Grove streets. In the winter of 1870 the place was destroyed by fire, which was the largest conflagration in the history of Plainfield up to that time. The firm then rebuilt on the same site, where for years a flourishing and successful wholesale clothing business was conducted, the goods being sold in all parts of the country.

In later years Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Tweedy died and Mr. Schepflin continued the business, at one time as Schepflin & Schultz, then as C. Schepflin & Co. He met with reverses and at the time of his death was in moderate circumstances.

At Dunellen Mr. Schepflin was known as the "Father of the Borough," it being through his efforts that it became such. He served for years in the Council, School Board and was a member of the directors of the Building and Loan Association in that place. He was universally known as generous and public spirited man and always a friend to the poor. When he possessed wealth he never turned a deaf ear to any worthy charity or one seeking aid.

Through the Middlesex Bowling Green Club he became prominent. He organized this club and was each year elected its president. During the season, for years, the club met at his home frequently and would bowl on the handsome green there, after which entertainment was always provided. Mr. Schepflin was a lover of fine art and included in his collections were some exceeding rare paintings by well-known masters. Some of these were sold a few years ago, but there is still a good sized collection remaining.

Mr. Schepflin is survived by a widow and an adopted son, Peter Schultz, formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York.

NETHERWOOD'S OFFICERS.

Were Elected by the East End Athletic Club at Meeting Saturday.

The members of the Netherwood Club known as the Suburban A. C. with quarters in the Fanwood clubhouses have elected these officers: President, Matthew Stewart; vice president, Charles Farlee; secretary, George Tester; treasurer, Augustus Sheelen; sergeant at arms, Peter Uhdal. Albert Stewart has been elected captain of all the athletic teams which will include basket ball, bowling, baseball, football, hockey, tennis and bicycle racing in their season. A meeting will be held tonight to appoint a committee for a dance to take place some time this month.

Charges Against Fireman.

Charges of careless driving and other improper conduct will be preferred against Frank Hart, driver of Hose Wagon No. 2, before a meeting of the Fire Board. Hart has been suspended since the Scotch Plains Hall fire when the hose wagon was damaged. It is said, through his carelessness. The charges will be thoroughly investigated and any laxness discovered rigorously penalized.

Riderton to Leave Journal.

Millard F. Riderton, of East Front street, will sever his connection with the Elizabeth Journal of which he has been city editor for the past eight months. John Kent, of the reportorial staff of the Journal, will succeed him. The change will take effect Feb. 1

BOROUGHITES CLAMOR FOR A NEW SCHOOL

Congested Condition Compels the Authorities to Resort to Half-Time System.

THE ACTUAL SITUATION

DIFFICULTIES UNDER WHICH TEACHERS AND PUPILS WORK AT PRESENT.

To be Worse Than Ever After February 1—Both Somerset and Watchung Schools Overcrowded—Conditions as Seen by a Reporter.

A new problem has arisen in North Plainfield in accommodating the school children in that vicinity, and parents are being stared in the face with the prospect of having their children placed on the school roll on "part time," as thousands of children in New York receive their education today. The crowded condition of the borough schools will be made much worse after February 1 when the semi-annual promotions will take place.

That a new school building is sorely needed, and wanted at once is seen from the fact that in the school today there are in each class at least three "floating pupils"—children who have no regular seats, but who locate in the seat of an absent pupil one day; is perched up on a chair, with his slate and book on his knee for a desk during another session; or takes the best standing space he can get, the third day. When the present grade pupils are promoted at the first of the month and new ones come into the lower grades a more serious congestion will take place in the Somerset street school. The same is quite as true of the Watchung school.

It is being said by some in North Plainfield that the need of a new school building is greatly exaggerated. It is claimed that the Somerset street school seats 1,000 children. This is erroneous. The high school building has accommodations for only 700. It is claimed that there are class room accommodations for fifty. The class rooms in the North Plainfield schools are small and will only accommodate thirty-five. A visit to the school was made by a reporter for The Daily Press this morning and the congested condition and the difficulties under which the teachers and scholars work, were plainly evident.

AUXILIARY FIRE ALARMS

DIFFICULTY EXPERIENCED AT HEADQUARTERS TO BE REMEDIED.

An auxiliary battery system is being installed in the fire headquarters on East Second street which will supply the fire alarm system with current should the telephone electric plant become disabled at any time.

The fire alarm telegraph service is supplied with power from a series of dynamos at the central telephone station. Alarms are also frequently sent in over the telephone, which has no connection whatever with the Gamewell boxes, the power being derived from a distinct electrical apparatus.

Profiting by the experience during the heavy sleet storm of last winter, when some of the wires were down and the whole service was temporarily crippled, the fire department has decided to refill the old batteries in the rear room of the headquarters. These have been practically abandoned since the care of the electrical service was placed in the hands of the telephone company. They will be connected so that at any instant should the present system become seriously crippled, they can be put into immediate use, thus giving the city perfect fire alarm protection no matter how serious the weather may be.

Miss Clara Long, of Park avenue, has been visiting her cousin at Somerville.

Robert Kyle, of Avon Park, is recovering from his recent illness of pneumonia.

Miss Addie Winter, of East Fifth street, has resigned her position with a local milliner.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mandy, of Beverly, Mass., are visiting their parents in Plainfield.

Mrs. Robert Lowry, of East Seventh street, has gone to Philadelphia for a visit with friends.

Miss Catharine Blimm, of Somerset street, has been entertaining friends from Philadelphia.

Miss Hurley, of Ridgewood, has been the guest of Miss May Rodman, of East Seventh street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stetter, of Plainfield, have returned from a visit of several days with Bound Brook relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Serrell, of Brooklyn, have returned home after a visit with Mr. Serrell's parents on Myrtle avenue.

DISTRICT MEETING OF PYTHIAN KNIGHTS

Perseverance and Unity Lodges Choose Jeremiah VanWinkle Deputy.

MANY ADDRESSES MADE

AN ENTERTAINMENT FOLLOWED THE BUSINESS SESSION.

District Deputy Grand Chancellor Charles McGinley Presided at the Meeting—Supper Served at Timbo's Resturant.

[Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, and Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., held a district meeting, Friday, in this city, at which time Jeremiah VanWinkle was chosen as the successor to Deputy Grand Chancellor Charles McGinley. This recommendation will be made to the Grand Lodge and there is no doubt but what he will be appointed by the Grand Chancellor at the meeting of the Grand Lodge, February 22 at Trenton.

Deputy Grand Chancellor Charles McGinley presided at the meeting and together with Grand Vice Chancellor J. W. Laws, of Jersey City; General William Hitchcock, supreme representative, of Newark, and State Organizer Hourist, of the Endowment Rank, made excellent addresses. Mr. Laws, who at the meeting of the Grand Lodge, will be elected Grand Chancellor, has been acting in that position for some time past, owing to the severe illness of Grand Chancellor Shanley, of Jersey City.

Following the business session there were songs by City Judge W. N. Runyon, John H. Cose, E. D. Cutting and Thomas Muir, while the Jews-harp quartette, composed of A. D. Pope, Frank Putnam, Jeremiah VanWinkle and Ephraim Compton, rendered several choice selections, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Runyon. At the conclusion of the meeting an adjournment was made to T. Timbo & Co.'s restaurant on North avenue, where supper was served.

JOHN MOODY RE-ELECTED

UNION COUNTY DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE MEET AND ELECT OFFICERS.

The Democratic County Committee held annual election of officers Monday at the Young Men's Democratic Club rooms in Elizabeth. John Moody was chosen chairman; Judge Owen F. Mahon, vice chairman; J. William Crane, treasurer; Edward M. Meek, secretary; George W. Harrison, sergeant-at-arms. The choice was made unanimously and in every case with the exception of that of Mr. Harrison, the present incumbent, was re-elected.

The matter of amending the by-laws of the committee was discussed and definite action laid over until a later meeting. The possible changes are increasing the dues from $3 to $3 annually and a rule for members of the committee not to appoint themselves to the Board of Elections.

Sunday-School Officers.

These officers were chosen at the annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Saturday night, held at the home of Miss Florence G. Hawkins, 437 East Seventh street: Superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; assistant superintendent, George E. Hall; secretary, Henry B. Cumming; treasurer, Jos. M. Hawkins; librarian, E. Frank Vail; pianist, Miss Mary Clark; superintendent primary department, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; superintendent home department, Mrs. D. M. Runyon. Yearly reports were presented by the several officers and committees, all of which showed the school to be in a prosperous condition. A social hour with refreshments closed the meeting.

Barbers to Meet.

The meeting of the New Jersey State Barbers' Association will be held in Turner Hall, Trenton, Sunday afternoon and knights of the razor from all parts of the State are expected to attend. The main purpose of the meeting is to get the opinions of men of this calling in regard to proper legislation for sanitary arrangements in the barber shops of the larger cities in the State. The local associations have met with great success in arousing interest among citizens in regard to more stringent laws to govern barber shops.

Uniform Choir Costume.

The uniform costume adopted by the young women who sing in the choir of the First Baptist church, pictures a very good effect. The uncovered heads and white waists of the dozen singers give a simplicity and harmony to their dress that can never be attained when bats of varied shapes and incongruous trimmings and particolored gowns of contrasting shades are worn.

COREMAKER FOUND GOLD IN DEATH

Body of James A. Anderson Lay in Bed Room of the Dead Man's Home.

MISSED SINCE SUNDAY

HEART DISEASE THE CAUSE OF HIS SUDEEN END.

Dead Man a Member of A. O. H., C. B. L. and A. O. U. W.—Was Employed in Pond Works—Left No Immediate Family.

Found Monday at 8 o'clock lying alongside his bed, James A. Anderson, of 716 West Third street, had probably been dead since early Sunday morning. When discovered by a searching party of friends who had missed him from his work and who surmised that something was wrong, he was found clutching the side of the bed with his head resting against it as though he had made a last effort to raise himself before death overtook him. The peculiar circumstances of his death was that his wife had died in precisely the same way eleven months before, on February 16, 1903. Death, according to Dr. Brennan, who was called in on the case, resulted from heart failure.

Anderson is the owner of the house at 716 West Third street, of which the upper floor is occupied by tenants. Moans were heard issuing from his room at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning but no special significance was attached to the fact. When Anderson failed to appear yesterday, his neighbors and fellow shopmen, Martin Regan, Martin Wheelan and Michael Mack, started to investigate, and though the door of his room was locked, managed to enter by another way, to find him lying unclothed upon the floor.

Mr. Anderson was the chief coremaker at Pond's Machine Tool Works. He leaves no immediate family, but is survived by a father and two sisters who live in New Brunswick and two other sisters who live in New England. He has also a brother living in Pennsylvania. He is a brother-in-law of Bryan Hammell, of New Brunswick. He had lived in Plainfield many years, coming here from New Brunswick.

The dead man was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Benevolent Legion, and A. O. U. W., all of which organizations will be represented at the funeral to take place Thursday at St. Mary's church.

State Fair Prosperous.

State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs has been re-elected president of the Inter-State Fair Association, of Trenton; Dr. William S. Lalor, vice president, and the nine members of the board of directors have been re elected. After paying all expenses the association has a balance of $12,700 with which to commence the year.

Independent Republicans.

Former Congressman Thomas McEwan, of Hudson County, says he is going to form an independent Republican party that will take in every county in the State.

RETAIL LIQUOR MAN AGAINST HIGH FEE

Arguments Advanced by a Cafe Manager Who Opposes Increase of Fee to $1,000.

REMEDY HE PROPOSES

SALOONS KEEPERS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO SELL TO DRUNKARDS.

Suggests That List be Kept in Police Court of All Convicted of Being Intoxicated—Crusade to Stop Sale of Poor Liquor.

The reasons why the retail liquor dealers in this city are not in favor of a $1,000 liquor license were given today by one of the leading cafe managers in this city to a reporter for The Daily Press. "Higher license," said he, "will work more damage than if the licenses were granted at the present rate, because the profits of the liquor dealers here are not what people think they are and they cannot afford to pay $350 more a year, without selling inferior wines, which do more real damage to liquor drinkers than the pure stock which is generally sold here at present."

A liquor store in Plainfield is not a gold mind, according to the statement of this man. Saloons depend on their patronge from the working men. Plainfield people, who use wines on their tables, generally buy their stock in New York. This is true of at least one-half of the drinking people here. It is proved by the large number of demijohns which are purchased each week by the dealers in this city. These bear the names of New York department stores and the "empties" are purchased in quantities from the homes of well-to-do residents, and from junkmen at the rate of a hundred a week in some seasons of the year, especially during the winter, for then is the time when the man-of-the-house enjoys his "appetizer," "night cap," "morning bracer" and "social bumper."

"The Newark Evening News in a recent edition," the saloon proprietor said, "had an article in which it said that there was one saloon in this city to every 1,285 people. This cannot be figured in this way. It must be con*sidered that out of Plainfield's population* only one-half enters a saloon. This city has a population of 17,000, which includes men, women and children. Taking, for example, 16,000 persons in this city, perhaps but one out of every five indulges in spirituous liquors and of the remaining 3,000 there is about one-half that number who patronize the saloon; the other half buy their supply in New York. That leaves only 1,500 people in this city to patronize the liquor dealers. There are thirty-one saloons and hotels in Plainfield, and this leaves one saloon to every forty men."

Continuing the cafe manager said: "In Orange the license is, I believe, $300. In Newark it is only $350 and in New Brunswick it is only $150. Those places cannot be compared with Plainfield. In those towns there are manufacturing interests which are of a different class from those in Plainfield. A different class of labor is employed and consequently the consumption of liquor is greater. High license in those towns would be well enough, perhaps, but in this city it is different.

"I think the best way to fight the liquor traffic as it is called," said he, "is to begin inside the saloon and in the police court. The fight cannot be successfully waged unless the aid of the police is secured and it cannot be downed by fighting outside the liquor store. First secure pure goods, which should be enforced by the crusaders through the Board of Health and then have a system of blacklisting on which are the names of the men who spend all their earnings in saloons instead of supporting their families. Each time a man is brought up in the police court for drunkenness, or for non-support, his name should be added to the list and posted in each barroom in the city. The police should then see that the blacklisting is strictly carried out. If a blacklisted man secures liquor from a go-better, the alleged friend should be amendable to the law by a heavy fine. That, in my opinion, is the only way the temperance cause can be fought successfully."

Miss Lavina Dickson, of Verbank, N. Y., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. E. A. Heywood, of Grandview avenue.

Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Whitford, who have been in Plainfield on their wedding trip, left Sunday for their home in Westerly, R. I. The groom is a brother of Dr. O. B. Whitford, of this city.

Peter B. Matthews, of Grove street, returned yesterday from a stay in Philadelphia. While in the Quaker City he witnessed the New Year's shooters parade, which is a feature of the holiday season there.

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION ENTERTAINMENT

Recitations, Duetts and Songs by Little Ones, and the Distribution of Gifts.

M. E. HOWLETT PRESIDED

MRS. M. C. DOBBINS MADE AN ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Largely Attended Affair in W. C. T. U. Rooms—The Programme Consisted of Recitations and Duetts—Remarks by Mrs. R. K. Case.

The last Christmas entertainment was held Saturday night in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union rooms under the auspices of the Loyal Temperance Legion. There was a large attendance, including the members of the legion and those of the colored legion from the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Miss May E. Howlett, superintendent, was in charge. The programme was opened with a welcome song. After a few words of welcome to the colored legion by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, recitations and songs was given.

These were the recitations: "Christmas Morning," Ethel Vail; "Good Old Nick," Elsie Perrine; "Luck," Hilda Bennett; "Happy Day," Sadie Estile; "Happy New Year," Miss Try Mason and Miss Minnie McKane; "Little Secret," Lizzie Frank; "Christmas," Clara Weber; "Merry Christmas," Hazel Todd; "December," Pearl Webster; "Little Sunbeams," Laura Connett; "Christmas Night," Marie Longhead; "You and Me," Florence Washington; "New Year Thoughts," Cynthia Henry.

In addition to these were mandolin duetts by Clifford Vail and Russell Miller; piano duetts by Charles and Ethel Schuck; "Temperance Town," a motion song by several children; songs by both legions and an address by Mrs R. K. Case, after which little automobiles filled with candy were distributed generously among the children. The entertainment was concluded with a "Good Night" song.

MR. SCHEPFLIN AT REST

FUNERAL OF DEAD MANUFACTURER YESTERDAY LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral services of the late Christian Schepflin, were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 from the house, where a large number of friends gathered to honor his memory. There was a large delegation from the Gesang and Turn Verein, of North Plainfield, of which Mr. Schepflin was an honorary member, and there was also a delegation from the Middlesex Bowling Green Club.

There were many handsome floral tributes, including a pillow from the Bowling Green Club and other friends. During the service Mrs. Giddis, of Dunellen, sang appropriate selections.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, spoke eloquently of the noble qualities in Mr. Schepflin's character. He referred of his identification with the interests of Dunellen and Plainfield and of his generous nature.

The interment was made in Hillside Cemetery, and the bearers were Isaac Giddes, Charles Lake and Lloyd Nelson, of Dunellen, and Charles Dobbins, of New York City.

SAENGERBUND HALL DESTROYED BY FLAMES, BUT REST OF BLOCK SAVED FROM DESTRUCTION

An Overheated Stove in Basement of Gesang and Turn Verein's Home Responsible for the Loss.

WHEN FIRE WAS RAGING, MAYOR SMALLEY, OF THE BOROUGH, SUMMONED HELP AND CITY DEPARTMENT RESPONDED—ONLY THE WALLS LEFT—TOTAL LOSS ESTIMATED AT $12,000—HOW THE FLAMES WERE FOUGHT BY THE LOCAL AND CITY FIREMEN.

Saengerbund Hall, in Somerset street, was destroyed by fire Wednesday, Jan. 6, entailing a loss of $9,000. Adjoining properties were also damaged. All that is left of the Gesang and Turn Verein's home are four blackened walls and a heap of debris. An overheated stove in the bar room in the basement was responsible for the loss. The fire started about 2:30 o'clock. Hampered by the cold the volunteer firemen of the borough and hook and ladder truck and hose company No. 2 of this city, struggled with the fire for a long time before it was finally subdued. They were unable to prevent the flames from spreading to the adjoining building owned by Jacob Voehl, occupied as a bake shop and residence by Henry Voehl.

The fire was discovered by Louis Mensenbach, the son of Matthias Mensenbach, the janitor, when he entered the hall to clean its preparatory to the annual meeting which was to have been held there tonight. As he opened the front doors a cloud of smoke enveloped him and he found the interior of the place in flames. He rushed back to his father's store across the street. While the latter was making heroic efforts to save the books of the society, which were in the main room down-stairs, the lad turned in the alarm from box 143 at the corner of Manning avenue and Somerset street. Chief J. J. Stahl and W. G. Debele were the first firemen on the scene.

In the meantime Matthias Mensenbach, in trying to save the society's books, had a narrow escape from being smothered to death by the smoke. His wife had seen him enter the burning building. She found that the door had swung to and her husband was a prisoner in the building. Quickly opening the doors she released him but not before he was partially overcome by the dense smoke. He had saved the society's documents.

Warren Engine Company, located directly across the street from the conflagration, was the first on the scene but the West End Company got the first stream on the fire. The Warren Company delayed taking its hose wagon from the house until a team was procured. The Warren Engine Company made an attempt to extinguish the flames with chemical extinguishers but found that they had already gained too much headway. Three lengths of the company's hose burst before they had a stream playing on the flames.

In spite of the efforts of the North Plainfield firemen the flames gained headway and the adjoining buildings were in danger of being destroyed. Mayor Smalley, who arrived on the scene shortly after the alarm was turned in, ordered that assistance be secured from this city. When the hook and ladder truck and hose company No. 2, from the city's headquarters arrived in response to a telephone call, the rear end of the Voehl building was afire and the properties on the north side of the hall were threatened.

Chief Deane, of the city department, ordered ladders raised in the rear of the burning structures and within a short time the fire was under control. Five electric light wires leading into the hall from the front made the work of the firemen quite dangerous. Lineman Crawley, of the local electric light station, climbed an icy electric light pole and cut the wires. Escaping gas from the basement, which threatened an explosion, was shut off by an employe from the gas company's office. Five horses in the barn of Henry Voehl were rescued by the North Plainfield firemen.

Four men were at work on the roof of Saengerbund Hall pouring water through an aperture cut in the top of the building. When Chief J. J. Stahl, of the North Plainfield department, observed that the roof was liable to collapse at any moment, he ordered his men to an adjoining roof. Shortly afterwards there was a heavy crash. The roof had collapsed, leaving only the stone wall in front and the recently constructed addition in the rear. Five men, under the direction of Captain William Townley, of the city department, were in the structure when the roof caved in. Chief Stahl had warned the firemen who were working inside. Hardly had he done so then the crash occurred. Those in the building were Theodore LaRue, John C. Young, George Mehl, Henry Haurand, Frank Kesselring and Capt. William Townley. The force of the concussion hurled all these firefighters through the door to the pavement. They all received bruises. As soon as the roof dropped there was a rush for the interior some supposing that the men were buried in the debris.

When the local department arrived ten streams were directed against the blazing structure and after the roof fell the attention of the firemen was directed in saving the barn in the rear and the two adjoining houses. They fought for over an hour before they had the flames under control.

None of the firemen was seriously injured. Frank Hart, of the headquarters hook and ladder company, had his finger severely crushed and Dr. Probasco dressed the wound. Louis Bimble, of the West End Company, had his hand severely cut. Henry Voehl, while trying to save some of his property, had a narrow escape from being cut by falling glass. John Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, while riding behind No. 2 hose wagon from this city, was thrown from the wagon at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and struck the cub. One leg was broken and his eye severely cut. He was taken into a nearby store and later removed home in a carriage.

Henry Haurand, one of the officers of the society, when asked if the building would be reconstructed, said: "It is very probable that the building will be erected on a much finer scale than before as soon as the insurance has been adjusted. The matter will probably be brought up at the annual meeting which will be held Sunday."

The loss to the Gesang and Turn Verein will probably amount to $8,000, of which $7,000 is on the building and between $900 and $1,000 on the contents. Recently, he said, has recently expended $600 on addition and repairs. This was not insured. Henry Leifke, representing the Germania Insurance Company, had $4,500, and William A. Woodruff, representing several companies, held $3,500 in policies on the building and other insurance on the contents. The loss is mostly covered by insurance. Other losses are estimated as follows: Henry Voehl, to bake shop, stock and damage by water and smoke, $1,000; in residence over store, $1,500; Walter Smalley, furniture damaged by water and smoke, $300; William Campbell, damage to rear of residence of firemen cutting through partition, $100; Henry Block, butcher, damage to stock and fixures by water and smoke, $1,000, insured. Nearly all of those who sustained losses are protected by insurance.

Several valuable mementos were served from the flames by the members. Henry Rummel carried out the valuable collection of butterflies and Rudolph Kersting and John Betzer succeeded in rescuing the flag presented to the society years ago by Christian Scheptlin.

Walter Bennett, a member of Warren Company, did good work at the fire. When the local fire department arrived with the ladders he climbed to the roof with a hose and although his clothing was frozen stiff he stood for two hours in the freezing wind, patiently directing a stream into the hottest part of the building.

Louis Mensenbach, who discovered the fire, told this story to a reporter for The Daily Press: "Shortly after 10 o'clock my father and I went to the hall to clean it. We lighted the stove to keep the water pipes from freezing and about 11 o'clock we left the building. Shortly before 2 o'clock I returned to complete my work and when I opened the front door I was blinded by a dense cloud of smoke. I rushed back to the store to tell my father and then ran to turn in an alarm. Soon the whole interior of the building was like a roaring furnace."

For two hours last night the fire engine of the Warren Company pumped the water out of the cellar of the burned hall in order to save the stock of Henry Voehl, next door from being damaged. During the fire, George F. Brown, the borough tax collector and treasurer, locked all his valuable papers in the safe and closed his office in the building adjoining the burning hall.

History of Saengerbund Hall.

Saengerbund Hall, which was the largest amusement house in this vicinity, was erected in 1885 by the Plainfield Saengerbund. The origin of the society dates back to 1861 when the Leidertafel was organized. It continued under that name until 1878, during which time it met in the General Hall in North avenue, and later in the hall over the store then occupied by C. Frank French, on Somerset street. On account of being unable to secure a meeting place suitable for singing and for the purpose of starting a school to teach the children of German parents English, the German singing societies of Plainfield and North Plainfield united for the purpose of erecting a home of their own. The society became known as the Gesang and Turn Verein. The cost of the hall was $6,000 but two years ago an addition was built costing a little over $4,000. When the German Reformed church started in the borough, the German school, then well organized, was given over in charge of the church. It was to the original German singing society that Christian Scheptlin presented the $500 flag which he had made in Switzerland, and which was saved at yesterday's fire. The officers of the society are: President, William Gardner; vice president, Joseph Haurand; corresponding secretary, John Retzer; financial secretary, Matthias Mensenbach; treasurer, Carl Felber. The officers was the trustees.

WHY CITY FIREMEN AIDED

INSURANCE MEN DEMANDED OF BOROUGH MAYOR THAT HELP BE ASKED.

Because the Plainfield fire department was called upon to assist the North Plainfield firemen in fighting a fire, which, owing to a lack of proper facilities, was too great for the borough fire laddies, deep feeling exists against the Plainfielders across the brook today in fire department circles. The borough firemen claim they could easily have kept the flames within the walls of Saengerbund Hall without the assistance of the city firemen and that their presence at the scene of the borough's most dangerous conflagration was unwelcome. It is said that some of the North Plainfield firemen have threatened to resign because their chief acquiesced in asking for help when a whole business block was threatened.

The truth of the matter is that when it was apparent to many of the bystanders that the North Plainfield firemen had not the proper facilities with which to fight the flames and when the fire threatened adjoining property, two insurance men, who had issued policies on the burning building and adjoining structures went to Mayor Smalley and demanded that Plainfield be asked for assistance. The Mayor conferred with Chief Stahl, who saw that ladders were sorely needed and more hose was wanted. The Chief Engineer of the Plainfield department, was officially requested to bring his hook and ladder truck and hose wagon across the brook and he did so. It is plain to all who witnessed the fire that not until assistance arrived were the flames under control. A property owner whose building was near the fire also requested that assistance be secured from this city.

It was a fire which required trained men to combat and while it is thought the work of the borough volunteers was commendable, their action in engendering bitter feeling because Plainfield assisted in saving valuable property is considered open to criticism.

Mayor Smalley said this morning: "In my opinion the Plainfield hook and ladder truck was not called soon enough. If it had been summoned before it was no doubt much of the damage to Mr. Voehl's place would have been avoided. While several insurance men came to me and asked for the Plainfield department, I summoned them because valuable property was being destroyed.

SOMERVILLE BASEBALL.

Plans Next Season to Have a Battling Good Article of Ball.

The baseball enthusiasts at Somerville are interesting themselves in the organization of a baseball club that will be a credit to the town. A meeting will be held at Cawley's Hotel, Saturday, January 23, when a permanent organization will be effected. Surrogate W. J. DeMond, who is an ardent admirer of the National game and a lover of clean sport, is at the head of the movement and behind him are some of the best citizens of Somerville.

The plan is to engage a battery and use the best players from Somerville and Raritan for the remaining positions on the team. "Jack" McFetridge, formerly with the Philadelphia Nationals, is among the pitchers being considered.

Charles Voss's Patent.

Charles Voss, of Clinton avenue, a machinist at Potter's Press Works, has patented a device for moistening stamps. It is said he has been offered $2,500 for it by a New York firm.

The officers elected, but who were not installed last night, will be inducted into office at the next meeting.

In charge of the entertainment which provided a programme of music and an oyster supper, was this committee: Mrs. Edward A. Townley, Mrs. Elizabeth Naylor, Miss Anna Johnson, Mrs. Catherine Perry, Mrs. Charles Westphal and Albert Perry and J. C. Vanderweg.

CELEBRATED FIFTH BIRTHDAY.

Little Miss E. G. Dobbins and Her Friends Had a Jolly Good Time.

In honor of the fifth anniversary of her birthday, Erma Gordon Dobbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, of West End avenue, was given a party Wednesday, Jan. 6, by her grandmother, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, at her home in Elmwood place, to which a few friends were invited. The time was spent in playing games and having a general good time and later the young guests partook of a bountiful supper. Several useful gifts were received by little Miss Dobbins. These children were present: Cora Gray, Mildred Hand, Ethel Vail, Hazel Davis, Anna Vail, Grace Vail, Theodore Vail and Ernest Conover.

The table was prettily decorated in green, white and yellow and the crowning ornament upon it was a birthday cake with five lighted candles, the whole making a beautiful picture. "A Quaker meeting" was a novelty in the entertainment. Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins and Miss May Howlett assisted in receiving.

MOODY ON TRUSTS.

Democratic County Chairman Has Compiled an Exhaustive Work on Forms of Monopoly.

During the year 1903 John Moody of Cranford, editor of Moody's Manual of Corporation Securities, has devoted much time to the compilation and writing of a book which will shortly be issued for general circulation, under the title of "The Truth About the Trusts: a Description and Analysis of the American Trust Movement." The contents of this book are based chiefly on this invaluable data and general information which the author has been so carefully accumulating during these years. It is to be a large volume of over five hundred pages and is probably the first attempt to present, in uniform and accurate shape, an actual impartial history of the Trust movement, as well as an unbiased and fair treatment of the subject from the standpoints of both Wall Street and the public in general.

G. W. Wagner, of Clinton, Hunterdon county, who has been visiting friends in Plainfield during the past week, has returned home.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH ON MERCANTILE MARINE

Blot on America's Commerce That Her Products Are Marketed in Foreign Vessels.

PLAINFIELDER'S SPEECH

ADDRESS MADE AT OPENING OF MARITIME EXCHANGE IN NEW YORK.

History of the American Navy—Hatred for Partisan Who Stands in the Way of the Panama Canal —The American Flag.

L. V. F. Randolph, of this city, president of the New York Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, responded to the toast "Our Flag," at the ceremonies Monday, Jan. 4, incident to the opening of the home of the Maritime Association, of the Port of New York. A nation's flag, he said, is the insignia of its life, its history, its purpose and its power. It seems to speak of what the nation has done and of what it wills to do. "It is worthy of note," said he, "that our own splendid flag is almost if not quite the very dean of flags among the nations of today." After commenting on flags of various countries, he said incidently:

"Do you need to be exhorted to stand by the flag? Let me tell you one way in which you should do it. Exert every influence you can to build up a strong American marine. From this Maritime Association of the Port of New York let a compelling power go forth to accomplish this. Let every man lift his pound, and let the Government lift its ton. It is chiefly for the nation that it is needed. The nation is not safe without it. It is a shame to American's commerce that her products are marketed by foreign vessels. It is a peril to our country that she is so slenderly supplied with American seamen experienced in service on American ships.

"It was George Washington who in 1775 laid the foundation of the American navy, and without even the consent of the slow Colonial Congress. Washington then issued an order to a captain in the army of the United Colonies 'to take command of a detachment of the said army and proceed on board the schooner Hannah at Beverly.' Fortunately Congress followed; and soon after a dozen vessels fairly manned and equipped, were chasing and being chased over the waters of Massachusetts Bay and along the neighboring coast. And thus it was that the schooner Hannah was the beginning of the American navy.

"It might now be an interesting coincidence if a great point of departure for our mercantile marine were initiated and started by another Hannah.

"There is another way to stand by the flag. Forbid its removal from any spot on which it has been honorably planted. Heap your opprobrium, and if need be, your imprecations, on any paltry partisan such as (for example, when a Panama Canal is at last to be completed) would offer puerile obstruction to a great world-enterprise by a cheap factional fence for mean political ends."

TAXING SEPARATELY.

Under New Law the Land and Then the Building Must be Taxed.

The State Board of Taxation calls attention to this paragraph in the new tax law, which applies to Plainfield: "All assessments of real estate in certain taxing districts of this State, the assessor or other taxing officer whose duty it is by law to make such assessments, shall determine the true value of each parcel, lot or tract of real estate assessed in such taxing district, without the buildings and improvements, and shall note the same, and shall determine the note separately the true value of every house and other building or structure on each parcel, lot or tract of real estate, and the whole shall be added and carried out as the value of such parcel, lot or tract."

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books on a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

MISS GASKILL, BRIDE OF DR. E. A. GIDDES

Ceremony in First Baptist Church, New Market, Witnessed by Many Friends.

RECEPTION FOLLOWED

MISS JOSEPHINE DEALAMAN, OF DUNELLEN, MAID-OF-HONOR.

Rev. Frank Fletcher Officiated—Charles Coriell, Jr., Best Man, and Fred VanEps and Robert Carpenter Ushers—Their Honeymoon.

In the presence of large numbers of friends, Miss Mildred Gaskill, of Dunellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reynolds, became the wife of Dr. Elmer A. Giddes, of Dunellen, at 8 p. m. Jan. 6, in the First Baptist church, of New Market. Rev. Frank Fletcher performed the ceremony.

The church was handsomely decorated, the altar being covered with an archway of greens with the pulpit platform covered with a profusion of flowers, palms and potted plants. The bride was conducted to the altar by her uncle, Randolph Gaskill, who gave her away. She was gowned in white crepe de chine trimmed with Irish point lace and carried a bouquet of bride roses. A tulle veil was caught up with white roses on her head.

The bride was attended by Miss Josephine Dealaman, of Dunellen, as maid of honor. She also was gowned in crepe de chine trimmed with Irish point lace. Charles Coriell, Jr., of this city, was best man, and the ushers were Fred VanEps and Robert Carpenter, both of this city.

The wedding procession was headed by two flowers girls, Miss Hazel Runyon, cousin of the groom, and Miss Grace Coriell, niece of the bride. The organist, Miss Irene Day, played the customary wedding marches and preceding and following the ceremony solos were sung by William H. Holmes, Jr.

A reception at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac T. Giddes, of North avenue, Dunellen, followed the ceremony. Guests were present from New York, Dover, Rahway, Elizabeth, Morristown, Philadelphia and Cuba.

After a ten days' wedding trip South, Dr. and Mrs. Giddes will reside in Dunellen. Dr. Giddes is a practising dentist, with offices on Grove street, North Plainfield. He is a graduate of the New York Dental College, and is a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 249, F. and A. M., of this city, and of other fraternal organizations.

SOMERVILLE'S VIEW OF US

PLAINFIELD'S EXPERIMENT ON LIQUOR QUESTION WILL BE INSTRUCTIVE.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette says: "The city of Plainfield is testing the merits of high license and the result will be watched with interest The license fee for saloons is already the highest paid in the State, being $750 annually. But Mayor Jenkins has recommended to the Common Council that it be increased to $1,000, and an ordinance to that effect has already passed first and second reading. This is said not to be for the purpose of revenue, but to limit the number of saloons and improve the moral tone of the community. This has already been effected to a marked degree. There are only twenty saloons in Plainfield and North Plainfield, or one to every 1,250 persons. The Newark News thinks that the system is a good one. It says that many low groggeries would be wiped out in that city of the license fees were increased, and there would be a moral advance in the standing of the community. This question of high license, however, does not meet the approval of many temperance men who argue that it proves a discrimination against the small places in favor of the larger ones and that it creates places with greater attractions for those who are susceptible to temptation.

"We are not prepared to say that high license is the best way to limit and control the liquor traffic, but we believe it is an effective way and should be used where practicable. In Newark the fee is nearly one-third less than in Plainfield and there is a saloon to every 182 persons. Plainfield's experiment on the license question will be instructive in municipal government."

Colored Man's Park.

Alexander Kane, who is the owner of Galvin's Park on the Fanwood road, is negotiating for the sale of the property to a syndicate of colored people here in town who wish to make the resort a summer play ground for colored people exclusively. George Searing, of Brooklyn, is also reported to be negotiating for the property.

BOARD OF TRADE RAPS THE P. S. C.

Steps Taken to Have Common Council Commence Action for Better Trolley Service.

PAVEMENT QUESTION

COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE SUBJECT OF STREET PAVE.

Agitation for Lower Gas Rate—Communications From Concerns Considering Sites Here—Date of Banquet Conflicts With Charity Ball.

Plainfield's poor trolley service, "the worst in the country," and the matter of improving the pavement of some of the more important of the city's business streets, were the principal subjects of discussion at Thursday's meeting of the Board of Trade. The meeting was well attended, fifteen members being present.

The discussion of the city's miserable trolley service was opened by President Woolston who said that arrangements should be made by the trolley company to have cars meet the Central Railroad trains. H. C. Runyon, commenting on the generally unsatisfactory service, said that the Common Council lacks the backbone or the proper spirit of initiative to insist upon better conditions and urged that all citizens should give their support to Councilman Lee who alone has worked in the cause of improved service. Justice V. W. Nash stated that in the course of a considerable journey through the country last summer he had never seen in any town such wretched trolley service as is forced upon Plainfield.

Formal motion was made by Mr. Nash that the Board of Trade through its secretary, Frank H. Smith, communicate with the Common Council protesting against the service in the cars of the Public Service Corporation and recommending immediate action in the matter. It was urged that, if this message failed to have effect on the Common Council, petitions should be circulated among the people or that the members of the Board attend the Council's meetings in a body and insist upon action.

The subject of street pavements was introduced by H. C. Runyon who said that such pavements should be laid at least on Front street. The improvement would favor merchants doing business along that street and should be approved by the street railway company by giving a better foundation for the tracks. The company, it is said, would necessarily share in the expense. Mr. Runyon mentioned as a pavement that might prove satisfactory, the bituminous asphalt macadam pavement which has been tried with good results in Newark.

Upon Mr. Runyon's motion a committee was appointed by the president to look into the advisability and practicability of obtaining improved pavements for the principal business streets Harry O. Runyon, E. A. Laing and William A. Woodruff compose the committee.

Secretary Frank H. Smith reported that he had written the City Clerk and Board of Trade of Atlantic City on the matter of lower gas rates but had received no response. President Woolston suggested that it might be well to write the Public Service Corporation to see if lower rates were obtainable from the present company, and Charles W. Runyon urged that conditions in surrounding towns be investigated.

A letter received by E. A. Laing from Gaddis & Company, of New York, was read asking for information regarding an available building for use as a factory. Mr. Laing was instructed to reply that the factory soon to be vacated by the Aluminum Press Company would probably answer all the requirements stated. A communication from a Philadelphia concern, J. S. McElroy, secretary, asking if there was a chance that the city of Plainfield would donate the ground and building for a machine shop was referred back to Postmaster Silas Dewey Drake, of Lincoln.

Some question was raised as to the exact date for the annual banquet of the Board. Former Mayor Asaander Gilbert had set January 28 as the day, but it was thought that the fact of the holding of the charity ball for Muhlenberg Hospital on the same night might interfere. The general sentiment was that the original date should not be changed as it had been announced first.

The prosperous financial condition of the Board of Indicated by the fact of a balance in the treasury of $121.30 as reported by the auditing committee.

Receiver Appointed.

E. S. Campbell, of Newark, has been appointed receiver for I. Sternberg, & Co., a department store, with branch stores in this city and through the State of New Jersey. The liabilities of the concern are placed at $118,[illegible] and the assets $185,985

FORMER POSTMASTER BORNE TO GRAVE

Funeral Services Over Remains of Wallace Vail Held in First M. E. Church.

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES

REV. DR. SNODGRASS AND REV. MR. BRYAN OFFICIATED.

Friends Given a Last Opportunity of Seeing the Face of the Dead Man—Interment in Evergreen Cemetery — The Pallbearers.

Impressive funeral services were held Thursday afternoon in the First M. E. church over the remains of Wallace Vail, whose death at the age of seventy-five years occurred Tuesday morning at his home at the corner of Clinton and Dunellen avenues. The services were attended by many persons who knew the dead man nearly all their lives. The family originally planned to hold short services at the house but when several friends of the dead former postmaster pointed out that there would be many who would like to pay their last respects to Mr. Vail, the family finally decided to hold the services in the First M. E. church.

Shortly after 2:30 the casket was borne into the church and was taken to a place in front of the pulpit. The casket was almost entirely covered with flowers, sent in many instances by politicians in this city and by the Exempt Firemen's Association, of which Mr. Vail was a member.

The services were in charge of Rev. J. B. Bryan, who, when he was pastor in this city, was a personal friend of Mr. Vail, who was then postmaster. Assisting him was Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church. Both ministers made addresses in which they referred to the departed. Their discourses were comforting as well as spiritually helpful to those who heard them. There was no music at the services.

At the close of the services the casket was opened and the friends were given an opportunity of once more looking upon the face of the man, who thirty years ago was the most familiar person about town and who was known as one of the leading politicians of the county.

The remains were borne to the burial place by these pall bearers, all members of the Exempt Firemen's Association: Thaddeous O. Doane, Elias H. Bird, V. W. Nash, Sr., L. E. Barkalew, Guillermo Thorn and W. A. Woodruff.

TALK OF A HORSE SHOW

DISCUSSION OF ADVISIBILITY OF HOLDING AN EXHIBITION HERE ANNUALLY.

The question of having some kind of an annual show in Plainfield is receiving much consideration on the part of the best citizens. Orange and Morristown have their horse shows, and in point of importance neither place exceeds Plainfield. It is the opinion of many that this town can afford an annual show of horses, poultry or dogs that will not only be attractive, but will be a source of advertising to the city. There are a number of thoroughbred horses here, animals that have taken valuable prizes. It is argued that if these horses can make such a good showing elsewhere why not have an exhibition here and make it an inducement for owners of thoroughbred stock to make entries.

Aside from the advertising to the place and the general interest it would afford an opportunity for society people to have a good time. Hundreds of people from all parts of the State as well as New York, would visit the show, and should it be held in the winter it would make it an event of pleasure at a time when outdoor sports do not attract. It is said that several owners of fine stock have been discussing the question recently and it is believed that before another winter rolls around arrangements may be made to hold a horse show.

COLORED ANNUAL TRAINING.

Pupils in Grace Church Mission Being Taught Various Arts.

There has been instituted in the parish house of Grace church a manual training school for the children of the colored mission. Miss Gilmore Dravton, assisted by Miss Marie Finch, is in charge. Classes in sewing and whittling have been formed and other branches of the work will be started as soon as practicable.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 17—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—How may I overcome my temptations?—1 Cor. x. 12, 13; Heb. iv, 14-16.

There is great hope and encouragement in this topic in that it suggests that temptations may be overcome. It would be useless to ask how to overcome them unless first convinced that they may be overcome. And this is the glorious truth. Temptations may be overcome. The adversary of the human soul has supreme power. There is a power above his that has overcome and can still overcome him. We are not therefore to grow discouraged in our struggle against temptation and against sin. We are not engaged in a hopeless conflict. The battle may be won, and, this glorious fact being true, we should prayerfully and earnestly seek the method and, having it, use it.

Temptations cannot be overcome in our own strength. This has been the delusion that has resulted in the ruin of many in the conflict with temptation. Self confidence caused Samson's downfall. He trusted in himself more than in God, played with the tempter and was finally overcome. Self confidence also led to Bigon Peter's overthrow. Trusting in himself, he proudly boasted: "Yea, though all forsake Thee, yet will not I. Though I die with Thee, I will not leave Thee." Yet a few hours after this proud boast Simon denied with an oath that he ever knew his Master. Self confidence is forerunner of defeat. Man has some power of resistance, and he should use all his power against sin, but the power of Satan is greater than human power; hence that alone cannot save us. For this reason the Bible warns us against trust in self. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Since we cannot overcome temptation in our own strength, in whose strength can we? Only in the strength of God and Christ. "Christ was tempted in no temptation taken you but such as is common to all men. But God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above what ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape that ye may be able to bear it." Christ was "tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin," and now as our great high priest He is at the right hand of God making continual intercession for us and willing to present our petitions to the Father. Therefore we come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." God's power through Jesus Christ can save us from being overcome by the temptations and trials of life. God has a purpose in temptation. It is the common lot of all men to be tempted. Concerning temptation we need not complain. No favor is shown. All are tempted alike. But what does temptation matter if with the temptation God provides a way of escape or the power to bear it? This He can do and will do if we trust him. Realizing our own weakness, let us put all our trust in God, and then we can say with the apostle, "When I am weak, I am strong."

BIBLE READINGS.

Job i, 1-10; Ps. cvii, 1-8; Isa. i, 16-18; Jer. xxix, 12; Matt. iv, 1-11; vii, 13; Luke xxii, 40-46; Phil. iv, 13; Heb. xii, 1, 2; Rev. iii, 7-10.

Gifts For Benevolence.

These young people have not only given themselves; they have also given their money. In addition to their gifts in other channels, the societies gave last year for benevolence an average of over $50 for each society by actual detailed report, a total for all the societies that would have to be expressed in millions.

Three societies deserve special mention—first, the Oxford Presbyterian, Philadelphia, which gave for missions last year $1,100; second, the Chinese C. E. society in the Congregational mission, San Francisco, which gave $1,516, and, third, the Presbyterian society, Clinton, Ill., which gave $1,125.—William Shaw in General Secretary's Report at Denver Convention.

Christian Endeavor In Egypt.

The oldest civilization in the world and the youngest Christian organization in the world have met together. Egypt and Christian Endeavor have kissed each other, to adopt the oriental imagery of the country. Here, under the very eyes of the "farseeing sphinx," I find a Christian Endeavor welcome and the Christian Endeavor spirit. At last "forty centuries look down" on this child of less than twenty-two winters.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in "Fellow Travelers."

Pen Points.

A monthly business meeting is a necessity in every society.

The ideal president is the best pastor of person in the society on every phase of its work.

The foolish committee chairman is the one who does all the work of the committee himself.

The society that does not give attention to its business side will soon suffer on every other side.

The Christian Endeavor society ought to be the pastor's right arm—hard to get along without it.

A written report of every committee at every business meeting ought to be the inflexible rule of every society.

The wise committee chairman does his hardest work in planning to keep the members of the committee busy.

The Christian Endeavor society ought to be in the Sunday school, and the Sunday school ought to be in the Christian Endeavor society.—John R. Clements.

The corresponding secretary who does not give attention to every communication should take note of the amended adage, "A prompt answer turneth away wrath."

SUN AS HEALTH RESORT.

The Great Luminary Is Not a Molten Sphere, But a Shining Luminous.

The western astronomer who announces that the sun is not a molten mass, but, on the contrary, a delightful place to inhabit, will receive more respectful attention than would have been possible ten years ago, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. That the sun is the source of practically all the light and heat we receive is undoubted, but the nature of these two forces is not only a mystery to us, but the theories which have from time to time been advanced concerning them have been found untenable. Although we have immeasurably increased our knowledge concerning the universes and some of its laws in the last four centuries, we are not much nearer any appreciation of the causes underlying them.

The ignorant talk glibly about the "subtle ether," gravitation, light, heat and electricity, but the wisest admit that nothing is can be positively asserted about any of them aside from observed phenomena. No reasonable explanation has ever been given that explains the law of gravitation, which alone of all these in the universe seems to work exactly the same at all times and under all conditions. No one can explain how the rays of the sun pass through the fringed space for 90,000,000 of miles and yield us the warmth and light without which life is impossible. Very plausible theories have been advanced to explain how the sun maintains its volume of heat in spite of the constant loss through emanation, but they are theories only.

The atomic theory was used for decades to explain many things, but now it has been destroyed or made doubtful through the discoveries dependent upon the Hertzian waves and the emanation of ions, scientists are at sea where once they felt secure. Radium exhibits phenomena that are thus far inexplicable, and it is probable that the western astronomer has arranged his theory of an inhabitable sun largely because of these recent discoveries, which have done much more to destroy former views than to construct new ones. He thinks that the sun is the great dynamo of our system, and that light and heat are mere effects of electricity as locally manifested when in contact with matter. This sounds well, but it means little. It does not dispose of the difficulties attendant upon the theory afforded by other known conditions.

What can be said is that no one with any intelligence will at once categorically disput the theory. That period has gone by. What is demanded is that he who propounds this or any other hypothesis shall back it up with reasonable proof of a scientific nature. We are unlearning many things just now, and are preparing to learn new ones, and we must all approach any subject with an open mind, devoid of prejudice. The sun may or may not be habitable. It is going to be difficult to establish either proposition.

HOW WE CATCH COLDS.

The Old Notion About Exposure to Draughts Has Been Abandoned.

The London Hospital, a medical magazine, maintains that colds are caught, the colds that have nasal catarrh for their chief symptom, in the same way that other infectious diseases are caught—by the agency of a germ, says the Boston Herald. The character of the germ is not specified. This is no new discovery or theory. Knowing persons have long been careful about exposing themselves to infection by persons who have a cold, lest they "catch" it. The old notion that a cold is the result of exposure to draught or to cold air or getting the feet wet has been abandoned, although it is true that one may get a chill in that way which will afford some of the symptoms and sometimes of the nasal catarrh caused by a noxious germ. It is safer to avoid close contact and all unnecessary contact with a person who has this cold. A horse that has been wintered out often catches a cold upon being brought into the stable in the spring. Experiments with disinfectants have shown that it is not the warmth of the stable that induces the cold. Arctic voyagers are frequently free of colds until their return to a community where they prevail. In the small rocky island of St. Kilda, one of the western Hebrides, colds are unknown except when it is visited by some vessel, and it is said the inhabitants can distinguish between the different kinds of colds brought by different ships. There is much similar evidence relating to the subject, and the Hospital declares that "some source of infection must be present before it is possible to catch cold." What appears to be needed is a specific germicide which may be used for prevention or cure.

Why He Didn't Marry.

One of the best of the Bulletin sketches hangs in the library of Joseph Chamberlain. It portrays a thin, hangdog man in the prisoners' bar, talking to a very mild and sympathetic-looking judge. Phil May's story of the sketch is that the prisoner had been dragged before the court every few months for a number of years.

"Your face is familiar here," the latter now said.

"It is, your honor—worse luck," returned the prisoner.

"Are you married yet?"

"Not yet, sir."

"Not yet, eh? How long is it now that you have been engaged?"

"Seven years, your honor."

"So long as that? Why in the world haven't you got married in all that time?"

"Because, your honor," the prisoner explained, "Ann and I haven't managed to be both out of jail at the same time."—Boston Post.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 21—"My Place in the War Against Intemperance"—Jas. xiv, 9-11; Hab. xi, 15; 1 Thess. v, 6-8.

This war is not of recent origin. We need not be discouraged nor faint hearted if the last battle is not fought at once. Because we are of the day we need to be sober and calculate well our campaigns. We cannot afford to make mistakes. We need continual vigilance and ever increasing knowledge and a settled principle based on profound convictions of right so that we can be steadfast. Some things should be settled, at least so far as we are concerned—settled so completely that they will never more need to be debated.

1. What will you do about the use of alcoholic liquors in your own practice? Will you cut them out completely and keep them out? This may cost some sacrifice of pride and perhaps also the society of some with whom you have associated. Think it over, count the cost, consider the worth of the result to be reached and decide. The gain from entire abstinence is worth considering. A sober head, sober body, sober soul mean much in the world's battle for supremacy. A little liquor may not be harmful, apparently, but helpful socially, in business barter, gaining, in intellectual brilliancy and physical enjoyment. You may be able to keep yourself within bounds of moderation, perhaps. But, candidly and seriously, every prize in pure social life, business, literature and health is surer to the sober man than to the same man with any quantity of alcohol, great or small. Study the case well. If you allow yourself to use liquor at all, you run a risk that some time you will take too much or take it at the wrong time or become dependent on it. In fact, you become the subject and servant and maybe slave before you know it. Let it entirely alone, and you are safe, and there is safety in no other course.

2. How about the sale of liquors in community? Shall we advocate license or work for abolition of the saloon? Indifference and noncommittal attitude are not allowable in our nation where the people are the rulers. You are responsible to take the right attitude. What is right? What is expedient? Beware of ever sanctioning a wrong because there is cash in it. A man may sell his Lord for thirty pieces of silver only to find he has cheated his own soul. You can afford to do an evil thing for any amount of cash. "Graft" may be popular, but it is fatal to the man who indulges. You may rent your property for the sale of liquor, you may desire the lower taxes on your property because of the liquor money and so vote for license, you may even share in the profits of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants and at the same time believe yourself a good follower of Jesus Christ. The fact remains, however, you may fail to recognize its force and truth, that you are on the side of all the evil which has been pointed out by the prophets of God for ages as ruinous to body and soul, both in this world and the next. For pleasure and profit in cash you sell your own manhood and the happiness and well being of your fellow man.

What is your place? It is to make no partnership with the evil, but in the best ways you can find to oppose the wrong and to keep from any entanglements with iniquity.

Restore the Balance.

Every solitary kind action that is done the world over is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance between right and wrong. Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence or learning, and these three never converted any one unless they were kind also. The "continual sense which a kind heart has of its own need of kindness keeps it humble. Perhaps an act of kindness never dies, but extends the invisible undulations of its influence over the centuries.—F. W. Faber.

Christian Faith.

Christian faith is a grand cathedral with divinely pictured windows. Standing without, you see no glory nor can possibly imagine any; standing within, every ray of light reveals a harmony of unspeakable splendors.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

My Psalm.

It may be dark, it may be light,
The way my path is leading;
But He who formed the day and night
My footfall aye is heading.

My fields may all be sown with tears,
And grief grow in each furrow,
I shall reap joy in future years,
And—I may reap tomorrow.

Those hills I climb seem steep and high,
They will afford me by and by
Of the fair fields Elysian.

Each bitter cup He bids me drink
Is mingled with His sweetness,
And, changed to nectar on the lip,
So I taste love's completeness.

I sleep, but my heart waketh—still
I find Him ever near me.
He giveth songs, and fills will
In dark hours most to cheer me.

And like the happy bird that sings
All night for very gladness
My heart shall bear me on its wings
From out the realm of sadness.

My wants are to my Shepherd known,
And He will gently guide me.
He tends and guards me as His own
And will not turn aside me.

When tired, He maketh me lie down
Till heavenly dreams, like pastures green
And flowers of sweet peace, have flown
My spirit and her cares between.

And when my pageantry shall be
The shadows of the silent land
His rod and staff will comfort me,
And I shall sing: He leadeth.

Then He will bring me to His feast,
The banquet of eternal love;
And, though of all His saints the least,
Admit me to the host above.

FORMER SENATOR REED WINS GREAT VICTORY

In Long Fought Equity Proceedings a Precedent is Established.

LEGAL LIGHTS IN CASE

HARPER, HOLLINGSWORTH & DARBY CO., AGAINST MOUNTAIN WATER CO.

Vice Chancellor Decides That Concern Can Not Pump Water From Well on to Its Own Land, If It is Detrimental to a Mill.

Vice Chancellor Emery's decision in the test case of Harper, Hollingsworth & Darby Co. against the Mountain Water Co., which has been handed down brings fresh laurels to Former State Senator Charles A. Reed, of this city. It holds, for the first time in New Jersey, that an injunction may be had to stop a water company from pumping water out of the ground upon their own premises, if it has been established by the verdict of a jury that the effect of such pumping is to diminish the flow of a stream which supplies water power to a mill.

"The series of suits, in one of which this opinion was filed, was begun on behalf of a number of the owners of mills along Green brook. The water company claimed that so long as they took nothing but water pumped out of wells entirely on their own land, they were not liable, and the only legal decisions were in their favor.

Senator Reed, who has represented the mill owners throughout their long fight, claimed that if the operation of the water paint reduced the natural flow of the stream, the water company was liable, no matter where they got the water, and apparently he has convinced the courts that the proposition is sound.

The water company has been represented at different times during the long fight, by Riker & Riker, Frank Bergen and R. V. Lindabury.

TAX LAW CHANGES EFFECT

CHRISTMAS TRADE HURT BY FACT THAT TAXES FALL DUE IN DECEMBER.

A few years ago, the Common Council recognizing the fact that in having taxes fall due on December 20 it took a great deal of money out of local trade at a time when a majority of the people would like to purchase Christmas presents. In consequence, the time was changed to a month earlier, November 20. This change was generally popular.

At the last meeting of the Council it was learned through the Mayor's message that according to the new law it is obligatory in the future to have taxes become due on December 20. For many reasons this is unfortunate. The date is within five days of Christmas and if taxpayers settle at that time it is sure to affect local trade.

Another disadvantage will be that while Plainfield for many years was accustomed to December 20 as the time when all taxes were due, it is so near the end of the year that it makes the tax collector and city treasurer hustle in preparing their reports before Jan. 1.

Concert by Plainfielders.

A banjo and mandolin concert will be given in Somerset Hall, Somerville, Thursday night, Jan. 21, by Fred VanEps, banjoist; William E. MacClymont, pianist; W. P. VanEps, mandolin; assisted by Miss Aimee Emmons, reader, and other talent.

CITY FATHERS ON GARBAGE COLLECTION

Opinions of Councilmen Regarding Advisability of Inaugurating a System.

EXPENSE AN OBSTACLE.

SOME RETICENT BECAUSE SUBJECT HAS NOT BEEN OFFICIALLY CONSIDERED.

Health Board in Conference With Councilmanic Committee—Thurlow's Figures An Agreeable Surprise—To Inspect Other Plants.

Notwithstanding the attitude of Mayor Jenkins on the subject of municipal collection and disposal of garbage, as presented in his annual message, it is quite likely that in the near future Plainfield will have the improvement. The Councilmanic committee has held one conference with the Board of Health and another will be held at which it is expected progress will be made. That some well organized system is needed in Plainfield is apparent not only to members of the Council as well as the Board of Health but to a great many citizens, who deplore the present antiquated method employed in a city the size of this.

The Board of Health feels sure that such a system as it has in mind, which is set forth in a detailed report now in the hands of the Councilmanic committee, is practical in Plainfield, and that the per capita tax would be low. Most of the Councilmen at present are reticent in expressing an opinion on the subject for the reason that the report has not been made known to them and they prefer first to have an opportunity to study the report.

President Tolles, of the Council, favors a municipal control of the collection of garbage, just as he favored the street sprinking under municipal direction. He believes that if garbage can be collected at such an estimate as presented by the Board of Health, it would not only be the part of wisdom to adopt it, but it would improve the general sanitary condition of the city. Recently, a date was fixed for certain members of the Council and the Board of Health to visit one ideal plant in operation at Atlantic City, but the trip had to be abandoned for the present owing to unforseen circumstances.

Mr. Tolles, when asked about advertising for bids to collect the garbage, according to the method employed in larger cities, said that he did not believe there would be enough business here to make that phase of the scheme practical. He thought it might be wise for the city to purchase a sufficient number of horses and wagons, collect the garbage and dispose of it. He admitted that the committee and the Board of Health are now collecting data and statistics on the matter and in a short time will be able to give exact figures.

Councilman Murphy, when asked for his opinion on the subject, said he did not want to express an unqualified approval of the municipal system until he had seen or heard more about the Board of Health report. He said, however, that if the system is practical he saw no good reason why it should not be adopted.

Councilman Leslie M. Daniel when questioned said that his first impressions were that the expense would be too great. The fact that the city limits are about seventy miles of streets in Plainfield and it makes a great territory to cover. On a rough estimate he thought it might cost Plainfield about $800 a month to collect the garbage and dispose of it. Mr. Daniel believed the question of expense would enter largely into a final decision. It is impossible in his opinion to keep the tax rate down and at the same time give the city all the improvements one would find in New York for instance, besides if the rate is raised he believed it would have a tendency to keep intending residents away.

Councilman William S. Tyler, who as chairman of the Public Service Committee which together with the Board of Health has been giving the matter some attention, was asked for his opinion concerning the matter. He preferred to wait until all the facts have been gathered before expressing himself. He stated that the joint committee had planned to visit several garbage disposal plants, including the ones in Scranton, Pa., and Long Island, but the holiday season caused an interruption of the plans. The facts gathered by Health Officer Thurlow he considered as somewhat startling as to the low cost of the work if undertaken by the city. He believed Mr. Thurlow a most careful and thorough official and if the facts as presented by him give a conservative estimate of the cost he thought it might be to the advantage of the city to undertake the work. These figures, Mr. Tyler said, show that garbage can be collected from the whole city and disposed of almost as cheaply for the taxpayer as the present expense which does not include the whole city. Mr. Tyler expressed the opinion that the joint committee would probably take up the work soon and that a definite report would be ready within a short time.

Councilman J. Stephen Higham said that he was not in a position to give his opinion on the subject, owing to the fact that he is a new member of the Council and had little or no opportunity to consider it. He said he preferred to wait until a report is presented to the Council before saying anything.

Councilman Theodore D. Wilson considered an expression of opinion a little premature and said he would rather wait until he has an opportunity to learn more about the matter before he talks on the subject.

MRS. BROWN'S SECOND TEA

MISS HELEN LOUISE BROWN INTRODUCED TO PLAINFIELD SOCIETY.

The second and last tea given by Mrs. Irving Brown, of Central avenue, at which her daughter, Miss Helen Louise Brown, was introduced to Plainfield society, was a charming affair and Saturday afternoon. The weather conditions of a week ago kept many from attending the first tea, but fully one hundred and fifty society folk were present on Saturday, between the hours of 4 and 7. The color scheme was pink, there being pink roses in the dining room and reception hall, while in the sitting room American Beauty roses were used.

Mrs. Irving Brown, Miss Helen Louise Brown, Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Julius J. H. Seymour, of New York, and her niece, Mrs. W. B. De Haven, of Plainfield, received, assisted by Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. E. H. Booth, of Plainfield, and Miss S. E. Brown, of New York.

The young women assisting were Miss Agnes Strong, Miss Charlotte Lowe, Miss Harriett Goddard, of Plainfield, and Miss May Billings, of New York.

THEY MARRIED ON CHRISTMAS.

Bride's Parents Resided in Plainfield Some Years Ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ochs have gone to their new home at Lititz, Pa., after a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. R. F. R. Hunteman, of East Front street. Mrs. Ochs was Miss Augustine Lisnigenlo, whose parents were residents of Plainfield for many years. Her marriage to Mr. Ochs took place at her mother's home in Belmar, N. J., on Christmas Day, only members of her family and very close friends being present at the wedding ceremony. Mr. Ochs is a native of Lititz, Pa., and he and his wife will reside there.

Rector to Leave.

Rev. W. Vincent Dawson, rector of St. Stephen's church, will relinquish his duties at the church, Sunday, Jan. 24, and soon afterward will leave for Elk Rapids, Mich., where he enters upon his new duties at St. Paul's church. Rev. Mr. Harris, of Martine avenue, will succeed Mr. Dawson.

COURT PLAINFIELD'S AFFAIR

WILLARD DRAMATIC CLUB TO FURNISH ENTERTAINMENT FOR FORESTERS.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, will entertain its friends royally next Friday night, January 15, with the assistance of the members of the Willard Dramatic Club. A programme of dramatic sketches and specialities will be presented at the Casino which it is expected will eclipse all previous efforts of the order in the line of entertainment.

The programme will open with a presentation of "Rooney's Restaurant," an Irish farce comedy in one act of the side-splitting variety. The parts will be taken by members of the Willard Dramatic Club, including Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Willard in the leading parts, Miss Ethel Reynolds, Miss Bertha Toms, F. Mortimer Slater, Fred Finnegan and Fred Long.

A number of specialities will follow. Joseph Loughead and Fred Finnegan will give a negro plantation sketch that will be an effective mirth-maker and the Misses Rothberg and Rothstein will dance a French dance that will cause admiration. Master Harold Willard, about whose talents columns of flattering newspaper criticisms have been written, will appear as an "infant Irish comedian."

A. E. Willard will present a monologue sketch, "Hey, Rube, just come to town" and Fred Finnegan will deal out some choice humor in the Dutch dialect. Mrs. A. E. Willard will appear in a fire dance which will be one of the prettiest acts of the evening.

Illustrated songs by William Jeffery and a farce, "Who Died First," as presented by the talented comedians, Bertram Firstbrook and Matthew D. Sweeney, will complete the dramatic part of the programme. There will be violin solos by F. Frank Malin, of this city, formerly a leading soloist of Philadelphia and mandolin solos by Miss Claribel Jeffery, of Newark.

The committee from the Foresters in charge of the affair consists of Otto Moor, D. C. Patterson, James Smith, Henry Hansen and James Patterson. At the close of the entertainment there will be dancing with music by Suhr's orchestra.

More Telephones.

Manager C. W. Runyon, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, is preparing to increase the capacity of his exchange, by adding another section to his switchboard. This will make room for many additional telephones.

He Got the Piano Housed.

Because he had no windows in the second floor of his combined store and house, West Third street, large enough to permit a piano to pass through, Kalman Rottberg had a considerable portion of the side of the house torn away Saturday. The operation of lifting the piano through proved interesting enough to attract a crowd of about 150 people.

Merry Little Party.

William Uhrbahas, of Regent street, took a load of twenty-one happy children for a sleigh ride Saturday afternoon to Cranford and back. His kind act gave the little ones a pleasant afternoon.

WAR NOW IMMINENT

Japan's Inaction Not Due to Wish For Intervention.

HER STRENGTH UNDERESTIMATED.

Should Mikado's Troops Occupy Korea the Belief Prevails That Russia Would Not Risk Naval Engagement With Weak Fleet.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A dispatch from Tokyo says that Japan has informed Great Britain and the United States that her apparent inaction is not due to a desire for foreign mediation, but to a policy deliberately adopted.

A dispatch from Tientsin says that the Russians have had a severe brush with brigands at Hsiaokuan, near Kirin, Manchuria.

Mr. Kurino, the Japanese minister, in an interview, said that if war should come he believed it would be a prolonged one. He said it was difficult now to see how it could be decisive, considered solely from a military point of view. "The majority of the people of Russia," said the minister, "and many persons abroad have underestimated Japan's strength, the idea prevailing in some otherwise well informed quarters that Japan would be unable to put more than 200,000 soldiers in the field. This idea is entirely erroneous."

Minister Kurino said he was still hopeful of peace, but was confident that if necessary a Japanese army of more than 600,000 men would give a good account of itself and do credit to Japan's military system and that country's system of compulsory education. He said that Japan's coast defenses were so strong that General Kuropatkin, the Russian minister of war, had freely admitted that even a coalition of the powers would be unable to effect a landing on Japanese soil.

The opinion prevailing abroad that the termination of negotiations would mean hostilities was not held strongly here. It is pointed out that Russia has never declared what she intends to do.

If Japan occupies Korea the belief prevails in some quarters that Russia would not risk a naval engagement, but would occupy northern Korea. Japan meanwhile possibly intrenching herself on the southern slope above Gonsan, 115 miles northeast of Seoul. While this is merely speculation, in diplomatic circles it is given as one of the reasons for believing that even in the event of the failure of the present negotiations the desire of both sides to avoid the odium of an attack might lead to a final delimitation of the boundaries on the basis of the territory occupied.

The opinion prevailing abroad that the termination of negotiations would mean hostilities was not held strongly here. It is pointed out that Russia has never declared what she intends to do.

To Blow Up Transsiberian Road.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 13.—An interesting statement in connection with the strategic value of the Transsiberian railway has been made by Fulford Bush, a member of a British mercantile firm at Newchwang. Addressing the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Bush, after covering the question of the light construction of the railway and the probability of the line being blocked if subjected to heavy military traffic, said that his own observations, coupled with trustworthy native information, convinced him that at least 200 Japanese military engineers disguised as Chinese coolies, barbers and other menials had already been distributed at points along the railway and that it would not be a fortnight after the declaration of war before the line would be blown up at a dozen places.

IN THE SENATE.

Discussion on Panama Was the Main Business.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—For almost five hours the senate debated the Panama question, and it was still under consideration when the senate adjourned. The discussion arose over a resolution looking to the arbitration of Colombia's claims on account of the Panama revolution.

It was introduced early in the day by Mr. Bacon and was met promptly by a motion on the part of Mr. Lodge to table it. This motion aroused the feeling of senators on the Democratic side, who construed the motion as intended to cut off debate and said they would debate the Panama question on some other resolution if not on this.

Finally Mr. Lodge consented to withhold his motion, and discussion proceeded throughout the day, with the understanding that it should be renewed again.

Big Fire at Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., Jan. 13.—The third big fire to visit this city within a week has gutted three business blocks on Merrimac street, entailing a loss estimated at $250,000. Five firemen were injured during the fire, which quickly assumed threatening proportions and proved the most stubborn that the firemen have had to do with in years. Loss, $180,000.

Hanna Reelected.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 13.—The Ohio legislature by a seperate ballot of the house and senate has voted to return Marcus A. Hanna to the United States senate for a second term. The result will be formally announced at a joint session today, a joint ballot being unnecessary by reason of Senator Hanna having a clear majority in each branch.

Pennypacker Receptive Kruger.

THE WORLD'S PEACE

Arbitration Assembly Wants Universal Amity.

CARNEGIE IS THE GREAT APOSTLE

"We Have Abolished the Duel," He Said; "Let Us Take the First Step to Abolish International Quelling."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—A conference called to frame a basis for an arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain and for extension of arbitration throughout the world has opened in this city. There was a notable array of speakers, and messages were received from many prominent men, including the governor of California, the mayors of Boston and Baltimore and John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers.

The meeting was attended by Andrew Carnegie, ex-Senator Gray of Delaware, now circuit court judge; Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, President David Starr Jordan of Stanford university, ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster, Jaques Cardinal Gibbons, Francis Lynde Stetson of New York, Robert Treat Paine of Boston, president of the American Peace society, and others. Ex-Secretary Foster was chosen president and Thomas Nelson Page secretary.

General Foster reviewed the previous arbitration movements and said that no question can hereafter arise between the United States and Great Britain which will more seriously involve the territorial integrity, the honor or of the nation, its vital interests or its independence than those which already have been submitted to arbitration without serious injury to our interests. He said there never was a time when the two countries were more closely united.

Mr. Emanuel of New York city spoke of the general trend toward arbitration. "There is some justification," he said, "however, for impugning the motives of a man who advises peace on the one hand and permits thousands of his subjects to be butchered on the other hand. As long as the world is armed to the teeth, as long as nations will have large standing armies and navies, arbitration will not be enough and nations will find some way to evade the decision arrived at by arbitration. The world must be for general disarmament and only maintain such armies as are needed for the internal peace of the particular country. He said that Israel always has advocated peace and that nations generally were finding that they cannot get along in the world by brute force alone.

J. M. Dickinson, who was senior counsel before the Alaskan boundary tribunal, said that it was fitting that arbitration overtures should be made by this country, which always had been successful at arms and had nothing to fear. Mr. Carnegie was introduced as "the great advocate of arbitration and peace." He recalled that it was eighteen years ago when he first appeared in Washington to urge arbitration. He said he appeared again to labor in the same cause, which had risen phoenix-like and could not fail. He said that Great Britain was longing for such a treaty as the conference contemplated. He (Carnegie) cared less for the provisions of the treaty than for the treaty itself. He said that never before had the English speaking race been so close together. The establishment of an international tribunal would be the twentieth century's greatest achievement. Speaking on insistence on points of honor, he declared that the most dishonorable word in the English language is honor. "We have abolished the duel," said he. "Let it be our race that takes the first step to abolish international quelling."

Later General Foster gave a reception to Governor Durbin of Indiana and the members of the arbitration conference.

The following letter was received from former President Cleveland:

"I have received through Mr. Straus your very courteous invitation to attend the arbitration conference to be held on the 12th of January next and to preside over it on that occasion.

"I need not say to you how much I am interested in the object which the conference has in view and which the contemplated meeting is called to further, and yet, much to my regret, I am obliged to say in response to your invitation that engagements already made and an unusual pressure of work will prevent my attending the meeting."

Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago sent the following:

"Owing to the terrible calamity which has been visited upon our people here in Chicago and the demands upon my time in consequence it will be impossible for me to be with you, much as I would like to.

"In my opinion arbitration should al*ways be resorted to between civilized* countries when differences arise. The world is surely far enough advanced by this time to be willing to make an appeal to arms the last resort where nations fall out. Christianity, humanity and all of the higher motives of men make it imperative that before a war is declared every peaceful means of settling matters in controversy should have been employed."

Destroyers as Ocean Goers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—That the destroyers comprising the first torpedo flotilla are able to cross the ocean under their own steam with absolute safety is, in the opinion of Lieutenant L. H. Chandler, commanding, expressed in a report to the navy department on the trip of the destroyers from Hampton Roads to San Francisco, during which, he says, they clearly demonstrated their seaworthiness and coal endurance.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY "OUT IN THE RAIN"

Political Club Vacates Ulrich Building Which Will Undergo Extensive Alterations.

PLANS OF THE OWNER

LOWER FLOOR FOR A HALL AND SECOND STORY FOR LODGE ROOM.

A. D. Findlay, Present Owner, Purchased Property a Short Time Since—Originally the Home of the Crescent Wheelmen.

A. D. Findlay, of East Second street, who recently purchased the Ulrich property adjoining his place of business near Park avenue, is arranging to make extensive alterations to the building which has been for over a year the home of the Democratic party here. The Democratic Club *moved out yesterday and is now with*out a home, although it is probable that rooms will be secured in a few days

The property was purchased by Mr. Findlay at auction, a short time ago. He has decided to thoroughly remodel the interior of the structure and make the upper floor suitable for lodge rooms and the lower floor, now occupied as a carriage repository by the Plainfield Club Company, an assembly room for dances and mass meetings.

Mr. Findlay has not yet completed his arrangements for the improvements. He plans to spend about $2,500 on the building. The place has had a varied history. It was originally built by the Ulrich estate for the Crescent League. It has since been used for various purposes. About eighteen months ago the Democratic Club leased the upper rooms for a meeting place and the first floor was rented as a carriage repository.

MISS BURT ENGAGED.

"Bosey" Ketter, of Princeton, Wins the Hand of Plainfield Belle.

The engagement of H. R. Ketter, Princeton's famous halfback of the 1895-1900 championship teams, and Miss Edith Louise Burt, of West Eighth street, is announced.

Miss Burt is a granddaughter of the late Obanoxy Schafter, a distinguished lawyer of the New York bar.

Reiter graduated from Princeton in 1898 and last June from the theological seminary. His football prowess made the name of "Bosey" Reiter known all over the country. Miss Burt and Mr. Reiter rescued a man from drowning at Asbury Park last summer.

Plainfielder Accused of Fraud.

Augustus R. Keller, of this city, at the firm of Keller, Loomis & Company, New York, selling agents for Gebbie & Company, publishers of a limited edition of the works of Theodore Roosevelt, have been made defendants in a suit brought in the United States District Court of New York by Mrs. Elma A. Sanderson, a bibliophile who alleges fraud in that the books are claimed not to be as represented.

Jolly Sleighing Crowd.

William Townley, of fire headquarters, took a jolly lot of young people on a sleighride to Westfield, Saturday afternoon. Supper was had before the return. The party was composed of Miss Margaret Townley, Miss Irene Voehl, Miss Jennie Hand, Miss Gertrude Schlief, Miss Adelaide Stiglitz, Miss Lillie Schlief, Miss May Breem, Miss Grace Cole and Albert Prentiss, Herman Stansberry, Frank Hand, George Cole.

Map of Union County.

Jacob L. Bauer, county engineer, of Elizabeth, has just completed a new map of Union county. It is accurately drawn to scale, and neatly executed in four colors on heavy paper, 24x38 inches in size. The map shows all municipalities including Plainfield, Elizabeth, Rahway and Summit and it shows the steam and electric railroads, roads and streets with the names and watercourses.

Sweet Sixteen.

In honor of the anniversary of her sixteenth birthday, a number of friends attended a party given by Miss Hattie Brown at the home of Mrs. A. Robison, Cottage place, Saturday night. Music and games were the features. Miss Brown received a number of gifts, including a birthday cake from Mrs. T. Doane.

After Encampment.

C. E. Hall Post, No. 41, G. A. R., of Asbury Park, intends to make an effort to have the annual encampment of the order again held at Asbury Park next summer.

Sleighing to Somerville.

A sleighing party under the management of Arthur Calcen and Charles Booker went to Somerville Saturday evening. There were about twenty in the party.

TWENTY-THIRD STREET FERRYHOUSE BEGUN

Work Started on Structure to be Used by Jersey Central and Two Other Roads.

DESCRIPTION OF GROUP

LACKAWANNA, ERIE THE OTHER ROADS TO HAVE ACCOMMODATIONS THERE.

An Immense Arch in Front of Central's Section of Building—Architecturally Handsome—Cost of the Group $850,000.

Work has just been started on the large group of ferry houses at the foot of West Twenty-third street for the Erie Railroad, Lackawanna Railroad and the Central Railroad of New Jersey. It has been aimed to make all the structures harmonize in general proportions and architectural treatment, and to that end one architect has been employed to design the three buildings. The terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey will be situated in Twenty-second street, and its front elevation, 100 feet wide, one immense arch, will be almost at a right angle to the other ferry houses.

A prominent feature of the whole group will be an immense iron and glass shed or marquise 50 feet wide and some 600 feet long. Under the edge of this shed will run the Twenty-third street cars.

It is the intention of the city to acquire the block immediately in front of these ferry houses and transform it into an esplanade or approach.

The cost of the group will approximate $850,000, and the completion of it is expected within a year's time.

The Erie Railroad Company will replace its present ferry houses with the new structure at the right of the group, a composition of three arches crowned by a huge electric light sign, this in turn being surmounted by an architectural motive of an ancient ship's prow.

The Lackawanna ferry house will have a tower 135 feet high, bearing an illuminated clock dial.

THE GREATEST GIFT.

Rev. Dr. Schenck Draws a Lesson From the Love of God for the World.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck preached an excellent sermon at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning on the subject "God's Free Gift." He began by referring to the spirit of giving that is universal at Christmas time, and that is in practically every instance characterized by good and pure motives. He then revealed how much greater than the gift of parents to their children or the love of parents for their children is the gift of God and the love of God as expressed in his gift of his son to the world.

A Possession From New Possession.

City Treasurer William F. Arnold is the proud possessor of a split bamboo straw hat, the gift of an army officer in the Philippine Islands, in acknowledgement of kind services performed by Mr. Arnold to a member of the army officer's family. The hat is made of split bamboo and weighs 1¼ ounces. Mr. Arnold is in a quandary whether to wear the headgear this summer or to hang it up as an object of curiosity.

PECULIAR CASE.

Mrs. C. B. Stephens Becomes Violently Ill and Suffered Intensity After Eating Ice Cream.

Mrs. Charles B. Stephens, wife of Letter-Carrier Stephens, of Duer street, is just recovering from a severe illness which almost threatened her life. Recently she attended the annual inspection of the Woman's Relief Corps, after which ice cream was served. In partaking of the cream Mrs. Stephens was taken violently ill. She summoned a physician and for several days the illness was of an alarming nature. Her body assumed unusual proportions and she experienced the most intense suffering. Heroic treatment was given and the patient is now able to go out again. A peculiar co-incidence in connection with the eating of the ice cream was that no one else who partook of it was ill.

Mr. Hooley to Resume.

The latest bull "tip" was in Des Moines and Fort Dodge, and the stock was bought this week by well-informed people. Coincidently with these rumors was the intimation that E. S. Hooley & Co. would probably resume business within a very short time. This will please, though scarcely surprise, Mr. Hooley's numerous friends in this city and Boston, who know that bad Mr. Hooley availed himself of the offers of assistance extended to him last summer there would have been no suspension.—Commercial Advertiser.

SIMONSON DAMAGE CASE COMPLETED

Suit Against R. R. Companies for Injuries Received in the Wreck Brought for $10,000.

VERDICT WAS FOR $1,350

CONFLICTING TESTIMONY OF MISS BILYEU AND THE INJURED GIRL.

Principal Injury From Shock at the Scenes About Wreck—Plaintiff Represented by VanWinkle & Son and C. A. Marsh.

The case of Miss Evelyn Simonson, of Deer street, against the Philadelphia and Reading and New Jersey Central for injuries alleged to have been sustained in the Westfield wreck January 27, 1903, was completed yesterday in the Supreme Court and a verdict given of $1,350. The jury retired at 12:45 in the afternoon and returned with a verdict at 6 o'clock. Miss Simonson's suit was for $10,000. She was represented by John H. VanWinkle & Son, Esq., and Craig A. Marsh, Esq. R. V. Lindabury, Esq., represented the railroad companies.

The case occupied two days and the most damaging evidence presented against the plaintiff was by Miss Bilyeu, of this city, who testified that when the crash came she was seated beside Miss Simonson, who was reading a magazine, that the effect on the car was nothing more than would be felt by an ordinary application of brakes. When the collision occurred the witness said she was looking directly at the plaintiff and that Miss Simonson was not thrown forward from the seat. These statements were denied by Miss Simonson, when called in rebuttal.

Frank J. Quase, of West Second street, a clerk for the New Jersey Central, was one of the interesting witnesses called yesterday. He testified that he had met the plaintiff in August before the accident and had since then seen her two or three times a week, and obliefly when she was in bed. He said she had then complained of pains in her back and told him that Dr. Boston, an osteopath, had been treating her for some time before the accident occurred.

It was put in evidence that Quase was a discarded suitor of the plaintiff, and is employed by the Central road, and that Miss Bilyeu had received $100 in settlement from the railroad.

The sum given Miss Bilyeu, it was explained by her, was in settlement of damages to her clothes.

It was admitted by the railroad company's doctors that Miss Simonson was suffering from neurosthenia, nervous prostration due entirely, they claimed, to what she had seen at the wreck. They believed she would recover in a short time after the trial and the excitement attending it had passed away. Mr. Lindabury, for the defence, in his summing up, insisted that Miss Simonson's condition was due to the terrible scene she witnessed after leaving the train.

This case was bitterly fought by counsel on both sides from the start. When it was first called a few months ago, it was abruptly terminated through a technical error and papers were at once filed for a new suit, which was concluded yesterday. The railroad company's counsel stoutly maintained throughout that Miss Simonson was not injured beyond a severe nervous shock. Miss Simonson has not since the wreck returned to the position of typewriter and stenographer, which she held in New York.

The next case of a similar character will be that of Percy Ising, of Dunellen, against the same companies. He also sues for $10,000.

To Aid Teachers.

Two bills providing State aid for the teachers' retirement fund were introduced in the assembly yesterday by Mr. Swackhamer, of Somerset. Mr. Swackhamer wants the State to repay to the retirement fund all the money that has been paid to the State treasurer since its establishment for administration. This sum, with interest, now amounts to $12,235.42. In addition, Mr. Swackhamer asks the legislature for the future to appropriate $2,500 a year for the administration expenses of the fund.

Mrs. Emmons' Funeral.

Mrs. Elizabeth Emmons will be buried from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Reighton, in Park avenue, Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

POLITICS IN SCOTCH PLAINS

LIKELY THAT PRESENT FREEHOLDER AND COMMITTEEMAN WILL BE NAMED.

The buzz of the political bee is already being heard in Scotch Plains and Fanwood for the spring election is only about six weeks away. The two principal offices to be filled are a chosen Freeholder and a member of the Township Committee.

John Robison, who is the present representative in the Board of Freeholders, will no doubt receive a renomination, as his work in the Board has been fearless and above party lines. He has made many friends among Democrats as well as Republicans. The Democrats, whoever their candidate, appear to have little chance of victory.

The member of the Township Committee whose term expires is Theodore Bruchman, who has been treasurer of the township for several years. Mr. Bruchman has served several terms in the committee and will no doubt receive a renomination on the Democratic ticket. His work in the past has made him a hard man to defeat, even with a Republican majority of 45. From present indications the retiring officers will both receive a renomination and their chances of election are good.

MINSTREL SHOW POSTPONED

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS WILL GO ON THE BOARDS ON THE IDES OF MARCH.

The dates for the great Hope chapel minstrel show were set last night at a rehearsal. Because of a lack of time for preparation, the show is postponed from February 9, 10 and 12 to March 15, 16 and 18, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. A good rehearsal was held with most of those in the cast present. William Holbert did the coaching, instructing the end men particularly in some new steps for dancing. He was assisted by W. N. Runyon. Several new features were introduced.

The names of the end men were announced. They were Bertram C. Firstbrook, M. D. Sweeney, Leonce Texfer, William Holbert, Allen E. Beals and George B. Cose. John H. Cose will be interlocutor.

There will be a special rehearsal Saturday night. The meeting will be of a social nature. Refreshments will be served.

OBJECTIONABLE PARK.

No Truth in Story That a Colored People's Pleasure Ground Will be Established in Plainfield.

An item is going the rounds of the State papers to the effect that the Plainfield negroes propose to buy a park in that city's fashionable section, and to allow no white people to it enter. This is said to be a retaliatory measure, because the negroes were barred from the park last summer. There is also a hint of still broader revenge, because the negro candidate for coroner was overwhelmingly defeated last November, and an additional incentive to "get even" with the white people, because they objected to the erection of a negro orphanage in the really fashionable residential section of the city. About all the truth there is in the item is the fact that the owner of a popular picnic resort located about three miles east if Plainfield refused last summer to rent it to an association of negroes, claiming that it would discredit his place and damage his business. It may be that the negroes intend to buy it and have it all to themselves; but, this is very doubtful; and if they do it will disturb Plainfield not in the least. As for any retaliatory measures, the colored citizens of Plainfield are far too shrewd to indulge in them. —Newark Evening News.

Little Boy Dead.

Marion Reed, aged two and a half years, son of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Reed of New York, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Compton, of West Front street, died yesterday morning at the home of his parents in New York, following a short illness with pneumonia. The interment was in Hillside cemetery this morning.

Rough on the Boys.

Young women have replaced the young men as night telephone operators in the Westfield exchange of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and an improvement in the service is reported.

Boys' Secretaries Convene Here.

A conference of boys' secretaries of the various branches of the Y. M. C. A. in New Jersey will be held with the local association tomorrow morning from 10 to 12 o'clock.

WESTFIELD BOWLERS DEFEATED CRANFORD

The Leaders Won Two Out of Three Games in Contest on Defeated Team's Alleys.

SOME EXCELLENT WORK

THE WINNING TEAM MADE 927 IN THE FINAL GAME.

Smith Rolled a 224, Hegeman a 200 and Woodward a 199—Park, of Cranford, Made a 209—Westfield Has 14 Games to Its Credit.

The Westfield Club bowling team met Cranford Casino on the alleys of the latter, last night, in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament, and captured two of the three games in the series. Cranford rolled good scores on the average, but Westfield put up too strong a game for the home team. The best work was done in the last game of the series, when Westfield rolled a score of 927 against 811 for Cranford. This is the second time this season that Westfield has gone over the 900 mark.

Cranford took the first game by a score of 866 to 854, the second game they lost by a score of 816 to 719 and the third as told above. High scores were the rule for Westfield, Smith rolling a 224 and Hegeman 200, while Woodward rolled 199. The other scores were above the average. Park was high man for Cranford with a score of 209 in the first game, while Crane was second with a 194 in the third game.

As a result of last night's series Westfield now leads in the tournament with a total of fourteen wins and four defeats. With such a lead and in view of the fine work being done by Westfield the other teams will have to hustle very much to catch up.

These are the detailed scores for last night's series:

WESTFIELD.			CRANFORD.
Forster	136	179 147	Park	209	145 143
Halsted	177	161 174	Dohrman	180	129 145

THIRTY-SEVEN RABBITS, $740

J. B. DUKE'S AGENT MISCONSTRUES A PERMIT, WHICH MAY PROVE COSTLY.

James B. Duke, in his efforts to rid his 2,000 acre estate near Somerville of a plague of rabbits, has become a victim of the New Jersey game laws. The State game law permits the killing of rabbits only in November and December, but empowers the president of the State Game Commission to issue a permit to trap the rabbits in box traps.

An agent of Mr. Duke used the long distance telephone in stating Mr. Duke's troubles with the rabbits to Benjamin P. Morris, president of the State Game Commission, in Long Branch. Mr. Morris instructed the agent to catch the rabbits. The agent believed it was immaterial whether the rabbits were caught dead or alive. It is alleged that four gunners killed thirty-seven rabbits in less than two hours.

Deputy Game Warden Miller is prosecuting the case and it is probable that Mr. Duke will be compelled to pay $20 for each rabbit, a total of $740 for the day's hunt. Formal permission to trap the rabbits was given to Mr. Duke's agent yesterday. Extensive preparations for trapping the animals are now being made on the estate. They must be turned over alive to the deputy game warden, who will use them to stock hunting grounds in other parts of the State.

Girl Shot in Play Will Recover.

In the opinion of the attending physician, Loretta Waldron, the colored girl, who was shot in the face recently by Maggie Benford, will recover. She is improving every day and her symptoms are quite favorable.

Annual Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow. Reports will be received and six directors and other officers will be elected.

—The entertainment in the boys' course at the Y. M. C. A., by Roland Reeder, will take place Friday, January 22.

SUING TO RECOVER FOR LAD'S DEATH

Seeking Damages for Death of Joseph Walls, Jr., Who Killed by a Live Wire.

NOW IN JURY'S HANDS

GROSS NEGLIGENCE CHARGED TO DEFENDANT COMPANY.

Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company Allege Contributory Negligence—School Teachers as Witnesses.

The case of Joseph Walls, administrator, against the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, in a suit for damages for the death of Mr. Walls' son several months ago, was called at Elizabeth yesterday and today noon the case was given to the jury. It will be remembered that Joseph Walls, Jr., met his death one night, after a severe storm, the result of coming in contact with a broken electric light wire on Essex street.

An attempt was made to show that the lad's death was due to gross carelessness on the part of the company in not getting broken wires out of harm's way. Employes of the company, called as witnesses, stated that they were aware of numerous breaks about the city, but were living the same as fast as possible. It was stated that the wires had been up in Essex street about ten years and it might be possible that the insulation was off.

Among the witnesses called were Miss Petrie, principal of the Irving School, and Miss Emma Cory, a teacher in the Washington School, each having had the boy under instruction. They testified that on the day when young Walls met his death that they warned the children to look out for broken electric light wires.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., represents the plaintiff, and R. V. Lindabury, Esq., the defendant.

VERDICT FOR WALLS.

In the case of Joseph Walls against the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company the jury brought in a verdict of $3,500 this afternoon. The amount of the claim was $15,000.

TO RESTORE TAX EXEMPTION

HOUSE ASKS OPINION AND SENATE HAS RESOLUTION ON SUBJECT.

A prominent feature of the session in the Legislature is the tax-exemption-of-firemen topic. A recent decision of the Supreme Court held that the $500 exemption which firemen have enjoyed in this State for a long time was unconstitutional. This has not been received by the volunteer firemen throughout the State with complaisance, and they have been considering ways and means of getting round the decision, if such a thing was possible. In the House, Mr. Miller, of Cumberland, has offered a resolution to the effect that, as there was a doubt through the State generally as to whether the volunteer fireman and members of the various firemen's relief associations of the State are exempt of $500 under the provisions of the general tax act of 1903, the attorney-general be requested to convey to the House information as to whether, in his opinion, the general act of 1903 allows such exemption, and whether the act in that respect has been declared unconstitutional.

In speaking in support of his resolution Mr. Miller said that the act of 1903, which went into effect December 20, allowed the exemption in other terms, and it would be a great relief to the firemen in his county to have the matter definitely settled. The resolution was adopted.

In the House yesterday Mr. Buck, of Cumberland, introduced another petition for the enactment of a law granting a $500 exemption to firemen.

In the New Jersey Senate Senior Ferrell, of Gloucester, has offered a resolution requesting that some legislation be enacted restoring to the firemen their $500 exemption. The Senator said that he introduced the resolution on behalf of the firemen and the firemen's relief association of this county. They were worried over the present situation, and felt that they ought to have the exemption continued.

Senator Strimple, of Salem, has offered a resolution to a similar effect.

Mrs. John H. French, of West Seventh street, has returned from a several weeks' visit in Brookline, Mass.

KEAN AND FOWLER INVITED TO BANQUET

Union County's Distinguished Sons in Congress to Attend Board of Trade's Dinner.

JUDGE COMPOSING SONGS

MARSH, 'MARTINE, SAUNDERS AND SWACKHAMER TO SPEAK.

VanEps Brothers to Furnish the Music—Politics to be Eschewed—Former Mayor Gilbert to Act as Toastmaster—Menu to be Good.

United States Senator John Kean and Congressman Charles N. Fowler will sit as the same festive board in this city and drink to Plainfield's prosperity if the plans of Former President of the State Senate Charles A. Reed do not fall amiss. The two distinguished citizens of Union County, who are supposed to be enemies politically, have been invited to offer toasts at the banquet to be held by the Plainfield-North Plainfield Board of Trade on Thursday night, January 28, and it is supposed that because of the peculiar condition in politics here both will accept the invitations.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, whose name has been mentioned in connection with a renomination for the office he held here sometime ago, will act as toastmaster. Among the other speakers will be former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield; Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city; Samuel St. John McCutchen, of North Plainfield, a member of the State Board of Education; James E. Martine, of this city, "the farmer orator of Cedar Brook," and Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield.

City Judge William N. Runyon has consented to compose some songs for the occasion and he is now engaged in grinding out "poesry" which he will set to music. He will lead the singing. Music for the banquet will be furnished by Fred and William VanEps, two popular young Plainfielders.

The menu has been arranged by the chef of a New York dining club and it promises to be particularly enjoyable. Some novel features will be introduced during the course of the banquet. Politics will not be mentioned, the ban having been placed on it by the committee in charge of the affair.

ALLEGED MIXUP IN ESTATE

JAMES P. NORTHROP, AN EXECUTOR, IN ESTATE SAID TO BE TANGLED.

According to the report of Charles E. Hendrickson, Jr., master in chancery, appointed to look into the affairs of the estate of the late Charles A. Woodsley, there is a discrepancy of $27,000 between the account of moneys received and disbursed by the executors, one of whom is James P. Northrop, a Jersey City lawyer, who resides in this city. Mr. Hendrickson's report was filed yesterday in the Hudson County Orphans' Court, and among other things he reports to the Court that the terms of the will have been disregarded and that the money ordered to be invested has not been so applied. He also declares that the executors did not pay the two legacies of $5,000 and $10,000. On the other hand he says the executors increased their own salaries from $3,500 to $6,000 as officers of the paint company.

At the end of eight years the company under the management of the executors was declared insolvent. Mr. Hendrickson calls attention to the fact that the executors never filed an inventory of the estate nor an account until August 6 of last year.

Changing Time of Meeting.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold a special meeting Friday night, Jan. 29, at which time a vote will be taken on the question of changing the time of meeting from Sunday night to some night during the week, it being the opinion of many that the present time is not as convenient as a week-day night would be.

To Increase Her Pension.

Senator Kean has introduced a bill to increase the pension of Mrs. Jennie Long, of North Plainfield, widow of General Eli Long, to $100. General Long received 26 wounds in the Civil War. The bill was introduced earlier in the session, and through a clerical error was made $50 a month. Mrs. Long received a pension of $8 a month.

PRACTICING FOR BIG MEET

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE STRONG TEAM IN STATE Y. M. C. A. GAMES HERE.

Practise preliminary to the choosing of a team to represent the local Y. M. C. A. in the inter-association athletic meet to be held here February 8, began last night. The excellent showing made by the competitors in the recent games for the individual championship of the association indicate that Plainfield will make a strong bid to win the meet.

The five events to be contested are the running high jump, running high dive, potato race, three standing broad jumps and shot put. In the high jump and high dive, McNaughton demonstrated his ability Saturday night by breaking records in both events. Caboone in the high jump and Neal in the high dive are other good men. In the shot put, Munger is a record breaker, though not so greatly in advance of Marclay. Smith seems to be the leading light in the three standing broad jumps and potato race. None of the men can be sure of their positions on the team, however, and a good string of second men is necessary in case of accident.

There will be a trying-out for many of the candidates for the team next Saturday night.

THE MAYOR'S PRECAUTION

ARRANGES WITH CITY FOR GIVING OF ASSISTANCE AT FIRES IN BOROUGH.

With his usual foresight and desire to take time by the forelock, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, has made arrangements with Plainfield's Mayor and fire committee, whereby they have agreed to provide assistance to the borough in case of fire, should occasion demand.

While it is not anticipated that there will be any serious trouble attending the changing of the system from a volunteer to a paid one, Mayor Smalley shows his shrewd business tact by making provisions in advance for any emergency that may arise.

Converts to the proposed change to a paid department are being made every day, the Mayor says, and he has received on all sides assurances that the organization of a paid department will be for the best interests of the borough. Many borough officials have declared that the delay in sending for the Plainfield apparatus at the time of the Saengerbund fire undoubtedly resulted in considerable loss, and they unite in commending Mayor Smalley, who is determined that the interests of the borough shall be looked after and its property protected with Plainfield's assistance if necessary.

PALMA SHOOT.

International Contests for Riflemen to Take Place at Sea Girt September 3.

The board of directors of the National Rifle Association have selected September 3 as the date for the next international rifle match for the historic Palma trophy. The shooting will be at the New Jersey State rifle ranges at Sea Girt. The date selected for the match comes at the time when the national shooting tournament will be held at Sea Girt.

The trophy was won back by the Americans from Great Britain in the international shoot at Bisley, England, last June, when Uncle Sam's marksmen defeated the best shots of England, Canada, France, Australia, Natal and Norway. The trophy was created in 1876 in the name of the United States, to the marksmen of the world. Its value is $1,500, and is contested for yearly by teams of eight men from any country with any rifle, at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, thirty shots to a man at each distance.

Big Collateral Tax.

Representatives of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York Monday paid to the State Treasurer $267,322.-63, being the collateral inheritance tax due the State from the bequest made to the museum by Jacob S. Rogers, the Paterson millionaire, who died about two or three years ago.

Henry Compton Buried.

The funeral services of the late Henry Compton were held yesterday afternoon from the M. E. church, Metuchen, the pastor of the church, officiating. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors. The interment was in the Metuchen cemetery.

To Rest From Their Labors.

It is believed that the jury work of the present Grand Jury will occupy over two or three days more and it is quite likely that by the latter part of next week the labors of the juror will be completed.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF PLEADS INNOCENCE

Charles Brown, Suspected of Stealing Pocock's Horse, to be Given a Hearing.

STABLE BOY A SLEUTH

EDWARD FOGARTY'S CUNNING WORK RESPONSIBLE FOR CAPTURE.

Dr. Pocock Identified Brown—A Hearing Tomorrow Afternoon—Fogarty Followed Suspected Man to This City.

Charles Brown, the supposed horse thief who was captured here yesterday, will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Justice Hoff's court. He still asserts his innocence.

A clever bit of detective work was done by Edward Fogarty, the young man employed at A. E. Decker's livery stable in Westfield, who was mainly responsible for the capture. Fogarty suspected Brown as soon as he entered the stable and requested a horse and carriage to deliver a sewing machine "to a woman named Smith." He remembered that a man answering Brown's description was wanted for the theft of a horse from a man named Keenan, and telephoned to the Elizabeth police who asked that Brown be held until they could arrive on the scene. As there was no direct evidence against the man, this could not be done and he was allowed to carry out his intention of going to this city. Meanwhile a description was telephoned to the local police.

When Brown boarded a Plainfield car Fogarty followed him, shadowing him to this city until he met Patrolman Vanderweg on North avenue. Vanderweg then made the capture as told in yesterday's Daily Press and Fogarty, Vanderweg's suggestion, went in search of Dr. Pocock, who was able to identify Brown as the man who had stolen a rig from him several months ago.

ON A BOND TO HIS SORROW

CHARLES H. HAND WISHES TO RECOVER FROM TUNISON WHO DISAPPEARED.

Harry C. Runyon, Esq., representing Charles H. Hand, was yesterday authorized by Chief Justice Gummere, of Elizabeth, to serve a summons upon Watson J. Tunison by publication. This method is one adopted only in emergencies and when other methods of reaching the desired party have failed. The summons against Tunison will hold in and out of the State.

Tunison is alleged to have induced the plaintiff six years ago to go on his bond for a considerable sum. He then disappeared and has not been heard of since. He is thought to hold attachable property which can be reached through the serving of summons by publication.

NEW WARREN CHAPEL.

Work Will Begin This Spring on the Structure Which Will be Built Mostly of Stone.

The plans for the new Warren chapel to be erected on Watchung avenue in the borough, have been completed by the architect, A. L. C. Marsh and the officers of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, together with a committee from Warren chapel have examined them. It is now hoped to have the work of building begun this spring.

The idea is, according to the plans, to have the structure mostly of stone, with separate compartments for the Sunday-school, church and social affairs. The sum of $5,000, one quarter of the amount necessary to complete the building, was given by James Clark, of West Seventh street, and it is estimated that about one-half the total amount is now in hand. The building is so be located on Watchung avenue near the corner of Fairview avenue, an especially attractive site having been purchased.

Miss Phillips to Marry.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, of 401 Plainfield avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Georgie Anna, to Ernest William Stones, on Wednesday night, February 10, at 8:30, at the home of the bride's parents.

Fireman Off Duty.

Fred Breem, of fire headquarters, has been suffering for the past week from an attack of rheumatism. He expects to return to duty tomorrow.

THE GIANT OF GIANTS.

He Is Twenty-Two Years Old and Almost Eight Feet High, in His Stocking Feet.

According to scientists who have carefully examined him, the man whose picture accompanies this story enjoys the distinction of being the tallest person in the world. His name is Feodore Machow, and he comes of an old Russian family. He is now about 22 years old and is 238 centimeters in height. He especially surpasses all other giants now living in the length of his head, and in every other respect he is of the greatest scientific interest. The New York Herald says that all the other giants who have been seen in Europe were from ten to 15 centimeters smaller than he is, their average height, according to the late Prof. Virchow, who made a thorough study of the subject, being from 210 to 227 centimeters. Those who have not seen Machow can obtain an adequate idea of his height from the fact that the top boots which he wears, and which hardly reach to his knees, would cover two ordinary persons up to the waist and could be used by two 12-year-old boys as places in which they could completely conceal themselves. Moreover, the mattress on which he sleeps is nine feet long, and at every meal he eats three pounds of meat, together with a large quantity of bread, potatoes and other vegetables.

IMPROVING HIS STYLE.

Experience of a Young Reporter Who Took the Kentucky Editor's Advice Too Literally.

Col. Henry Watterson, the editor, believes in good English, and not only writes it himself, but tries to get his young men to write it also.

The Philadelphia Post says that a bright young fellow who went to report a national convention with Col. Watterson turned in an article one night that was loosely written and somewhat slangy.

The colonel read it with portentous frowns. "Here, here, young man," he said, "this will never do. You must improve your style."

"What can I do to improve it, colonel?" the young man asked.

"Read, sir, read; read books."

"Yes, colonel, but what books?"

"Read Thackeray; start with 'Pendennis.'"

That night there was much excitement. Important news developed. Col.

COL. HENRY WATTERSON.
(Famous Kentucky Editor, Lecturer and Story Teller.)

Watterson waited for his young man's report. It came to be 11 o'clock at night, and he had not submitted a line. The colonel started on a search and found the young man in his room with his feet on a table, smoking a cigar and reading a book.

"Here, sir," shouted the colonel, "what are you doing? Where is your article? You have written nothing that I can find. What are you doing here loafing in this manner while the paper is waiting for the news?"

"Why, colonel," the young man replied with pained surprise, "I am carrying out your orders. I am reading 'Pendennis' to improve my style."

Discouragers of Suicide.

A favorite method of suicide in Japan lately has been to leap over certain waterfalls. So frequent have such occurrences become that police are now constantly stationed in their neighborhood, and large notice boards are erected bearing inscriptions in large letters, of which the following translation is an example: "Do not drown yourself here! Intended suicides are warned that heaven disapproves of the utilization of Kegon waterfall for the purpose. This is certified to on the best priestly authority, and serious consequences to the hero after are guaranteed. The [illegible] is also forbidden by the [illegible] authorities."

HEN SAW PINK BEAR.

Wife Thought for a Time That Husband Was Crazy.

Subsequent Events Proved, However, That the Old Man Knew What He Was Talking About—A Complete Vindication.

From Bridgewater, Vt., the cheerful news comes to the New York World that the mystery of Hen White's pink bear has been cleared, and Hen has been restored to his old place among the sane-minded and truthful citizens of the Corners. There was a time a few weeks ago when he was looked at askance and classed with Mose Perkins, who, while haying, declared he had run across a nest of purple anacus, with eyes in their tails.

The pink bear first put in an appearance at the Bigelow abandoned farm, whither Hen had gone alone to gather butternuts. It was investigating an old bee tree when the farmer first laid eyes on it and then was so spellbound at the sight that he swallowed a lump of spruce gum he was chewing. The bear had his head in the bee hole and hadn't seen Hen.

When Hen arrived he was so out of breath that it was a considerable time before he could explain matters to his wife. Mrs. White is a practical woman and she advised her spouse to put his feet in hot water, take a pint of catnip tea and go to bed.

When, after a night's rest, Hen still declared he had seen a pink bear, Mrs. White said "Fallow!" There must be something in it, but strongly advised that the story be kept for home use. But Hen insisted on telling the neighbors. They treated the man kindly, but shook their heads and spoke to Mrs. White about the state insane asylum at Waterbury. Her husband might get dangerous at any time, they told her, and urged her to take time by the forelock and send him away before he murdered the baby. The arguments were beginning to have effect when the vindication of Hen came in a most unexpected manner.

John Bugbee, who lives back in the hills on a farm he bought in the spring, both vindicated Hen and killed the pink bear. The farm buildings needed much fixing up when Bugbee took the place, and the first thing he did was to lay in a supply of red paint. In fair weather he tilled the soil, and when it rained he painted. The soil was pretty rocky and promised little the first year, so Bugbee bought a dozen hives of bees. He figured that the honey with what crops he could raise would carry him over the first winter, and then the sailing would be before a fair wind. The bees thrived and the farmer hived several swarms and then built a bee house. This he completed about a week before Hen saw his bear.

Ordinarily Bugbee wouldn't have painted the bee house, but inasmuch as he had some red paint he thought he would make a good job of it. There wasn't enough of the red paint to do the work, and he added some white lead and spread a coat over the house, inside and out, floor and ceiling. The next morning he awoke to find that a bear had invaded the bee house and ripped open several hives. The newly painted floor showed many tracks, and the walls were scratched where Bruin had attempted to climb them. It then developed that he had eaten so much honey that he had difficulty in making an exit through the low narrow door through which he had entered, and that he had been forced to lay down and worm his way to freedom.

Bugbee would have taken the news to the village and Hen would have been cleared at once, but the farmer had too much to do to gather his slim crops and repair the bee house to indulge in an afternoon off. Then, too, he was bound to get the bear, and sat up several hours every night awaiting his return. Finally, early in the week, he was rewarded.

It was a moon in full come up when Bugbee heard a movement back of the bee house and soon discerned an odd-appearing animal sniff around the corner and look in the door. He was a dirty pink and the farmer knew the old marauder had come back for more honey. After a few more sniffs the bear crawled inside and Bugbee sneaked up and pounded on the side of the house with the stock of his rifle.

Instantly the bear stuck his head out of the hole and, seeing the farmer, growled. The moon gave plenty of light to shoot at ten paces, and Bugbee fired, catching the animal between the eyes and killing him instantly. When he was drawn from the bee house Bruin was found to be a faded and soiled pink, the paint having dried on the hair and then become dirty through contact with the woods.

PROPER WINTER DIET.

Rich Dishes Appropriate to the Season and Ways to Prepare Them —Use of Spices.

Winter is the season for rich pies, fruit cake and sweet preserves, as well as for heavy meats, says the New York Tribune. The diet most agreeable to a man of normal appetite in winter is the one which is most wholesome and necessary for him. The flesh of full grown animals, such as beef or mutton, is better in the months of December and January than at any other time, because it can be hung to ripen in the open air, instead of in close icehouses or refrigerators.

Rich soups, made of the tougher portions of these nourishing meats, as well as roasts, braises and boiling pieces, should be regularly served in winter. In summer considerably less meat, and that of a more delicate nature, such as young lamb, veal or poultry, is required.

Preserved fruits and rich spiced puddings are more valuable winter food than fresh fruits, which are always scarce in the depth of winter, and proportionately expensive. Sweet marmalades and jellies that call for a great deal of sugar are also necessary in winter, as the human system needs the heating qualities of sugar more in cold than in warm weather.

It is not always a degenerate taste that prompts delicate children to cry for candies in winter; it is generally because their systems actually need the sugar, which science recognizes as a food necessary to keep the fires of life burning. It would be foolish to imagine, however, because a certain amount of sugar is necessary that a larger amount will do no harm. When too much sugar is taken into the system the stomach has no chance to digest bread and meat.

The housekeeper should not be afraid to use spices and seasoning in a reasonable manner, for they help to digest the rich fats so necessary to winter diet.

GARDEN NEEDLE PAINTING.

Reproduction in Fine Crewels on Canvas—Some Sketch of a Pleasing Spot in the Latest.

A new fashion in needlework is coming a good deal in favor. It is for the worker to reproduce in fine crewels on canvas some sketch or picture of her own or a friend's garden. The work is carried out on very fine single thread canvas, with the finest of fine crewel wools, the stitch used being the old petit point, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The designs are first painted roughly on the canvas, and here a happy opportunity presents itself to the worker who can handle the paint brush as well as the needle, for the pictures may be original sketches or adaptations from finished paintings. The work itself is not by any means difficult, as it merely involves following out the coloring suggested by the smooth painted lines; but great care must be taken to work perfectly evenly and to preserve the forms, while blending the colors softly and gradually. It is always better to carry out this kind of work in a frame rather than in the hand. Another way in which these garden pictures may be carried out, and which, less exquisitely minute, is easier to work and can be done in about a quarter of the time that it would take if executed in petit point. The canvas used is of coarse texture, somewhat resembling that of huckaback. The garden scene is roughly painted upon it, as for the smaller pictures. The details are then darned in with much coarser crewel wools than those used for the finer work, the entire picture being thus filled. When a strong touch of massed color is needed, satin stitch may be used. Most of the forms are outlined in hemstitch. For boldly decorative effect, or from a position in which it has to be looked at from a distance, this kind of garden picture is much commended; the first mentioned has, however, the characteristic charm of delicate needle-painting.

A Medicine Cupboard.

A useful and inexpensive little medicine cupboard for a bedroom can be made out of two cigar boxes of equal size. Glue them together at the sides, so that the lids of the boxes come together like cupboard doors. Then paint or enamel them both inside and out, or, if preferred, cover with a pretty, small pattern wallpaper. For handles use two small rings, such as are used for hanging pictures, and also fasten two at the top to hang the cupboard on the wall.—Chicago Tribune.

Maple Candy.

Boil together for five minutes one cup of maple sirup and one cup of sugar; add one-quarter of a teaspoon of cream of tartar, two teaspoons of butter, and two teaspoons of vinegar. After it has boiled until it is brittle when tried in water, pour it into buttered pans to cool. When cool enough to handle, pull it until it becomes hard, then cut it in pieces and allow it to stand two or three days to become "ripened."—Good Housekeeping.

Nut Cake.

One and one-half cupfuls sugar, one-half cupful butter, four eggs, one-third cupful milk, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful soda; add hickorynut, butternut or walnut meats (as much in quantity as you use flour is a good rule, but some cooks prefer less); bake in a moderate oven.—Good Literature.

To Freshen Stale Doughnuts.

Doughnuts or biscuits may be heated "amaist as good as new" by putting them in a whole paper bag, sprinkling a few drops only of water in the ends, putting in the oven, raised a little from the bottom on a grate. The oven must be very hot.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

The remarkable showing of Mrs. Bernard Horne, formerly and better known as

as Miss Bessie Anthony, as a golfer during the last season has left her as the undisputed premier woman golfer in the west, and last victory was the woman's western championship, at Belmoor, which made her the fourth-time winner of the greatest golfing honor that can be gained outside of the national championship. Mrs. Horne, since engaging in matrimony, has announced that she will not defend her title next year. She has been the winner of 16 open tournaments, and has a collection of some fifteen medals, fobs and other prizes. Her string of victories far surpass that of any other golfer west of the Alleghenies and probably very closely approaches the number of honors that any one golfer in the country can lay claim to. Mrs. Horne began playing golf in 1899, and though she did not devote much attention to her game until 1900, she was able to play very cleverly after about four months' practice. In 1900, however, she spent much of her time on the links, and before the year was out succeeded in performing the remarkable feat of winning the governor's cup at Onwentsia, which was considered the western championship. Her play the past year was but a repetition of her work of the two previous seasons. Consistency always was Miss Anthony's long suit, and it "pull indeed very seldom that she was off her game. She was not inclined to be erratic and was probably the coolest woman player on a western course. One of her finest characteristics as a golfer was her nerve. On more than one occasion when her match was all but finished and defeat seemed evident, she buckled down and did what had to be done in order to win —namely, play better golf than her opponent. Miss Anthony's nerve was usually the strongest in the last few holes of her matches, where most other golfers are generally shy. Not a few matches and honors were won by the remarkable nerve that the champion was able to muster in the most trying stage of a match, and this is probably one reason why she annexed so many tournaments.

President John H. York, of the Cleveland Bowling association, is making extraordinary efforts to interest the bowlers of Greater New York in the national championship tournament to be held next February in Cleveland. Mr. York has issued a special invitation to the eastern men, and, while he has undertaken a big task, repeats from the east would indicate that his efforts may bear fruit. Enough interest has been stirred up in New York to start the bowlers discussing the proposition, and westerners would not be surprised to see New York well represented in the big annual event. Only two men were entered from Greater New York in the Indianapolis tourney, but at that time the absence of the Gothamites was attributed to the long journey as much as to the loaded ball question. If Mr. York succeeds in bringing the eastern cracks into line again, he will be credited with a notable accomplishment. Western tenpin men would like to see the easterners compete in the next year's affair, as without the Gothamites it loses some of its national aspects, as well as losing the inter-city rivalry between Chicago and New York. Since the easterners split with the western men two years ago at the Buffalo convention they have not taken any active participation in the affairs of the congress, organizing instead a local association in New York to govern their affairs. The chief reason for the split between the east and the west was the loaded ball, and, while the present rules limit the weight of a ball to 16½ pounds, the New Yorkers insist on an all-wood ball. However, the men in the metropolis are still rolling under the A. B. C. rules and regulations, and while a few leagues retained their membership in the national organization last year, they failed to enter a team in the Indianapolis events. With the adoption of the new constitution and by-laws by the A. B. C. the situation as to membership has been changed entirely. Formerly the A. B. C. was composed of leagues, but now it does exclusively with clubs through city associations.

J. H. York

J. S. Westney, the old University of Pennsylvania track captain, has been suspended by the English Amateur Athletic association until after the intervening date to enter without the necessary fee. Next to Duffy, Westney was considered the best man in Europe in the sprints last year, and with a yard and a half handicap in the Glasgow games defeated Scott Georgetown sprinter by inches in the fast time of 9 4-5 seconds. Westney has a record of ten seconds for the hundred and during the past three years has been competing in England.

F. D. Colson, for four years coxswain of the Cornell varsity crew, will coach the Harvard varsity crew for the annual race with Yale next June. It is expected that a radical change will be made in the methods of rowing at Harvard.

A WOODCHUCK STORY

Joys and Sorrows in the Life of the Little Animal.

Her History from the Coming of Spring to the Closing Chapter of Life in the Late Summer.

Very early last spring, a woodchuck poked her black nose from the mouth of the burrow in which she had spent the winter, and blinked her little round black eyes in the sunlight. Then she came out, and lay basking on the mound of hard earth before her doorway. She looked very weak, and she was certainly dreadfully thin. Her grizzled pelt hung loosely on her bony frame, and when she moved it was with a languor not usually observed in woodchucks. The fact is that she had but just awakened from an all-winter sleep, and as she had fasted since the previous October, she was not only crowsy but famished. Soon she found strength to go out in search of some food.

One morning, after the little rodent had had her morning meal of clover, and she was taking a sun-bath on the mound of earth in front of her doorway, some small object struck the mould about six inches in front of her face, and threw a pinch of the dirt sharply in her eyes. She did not know what the trouble was, and she did not stop to find out, but ducked her head into the burrow and stayed there. As she disappeared, a small boy, brandishing a Flobert rifle and followed by a little yellow dog, jumped from behind a hillock, and ran up to see how near he had come to the chuck. He pulled a grimace when he saw where his bullet had pitted the earth, reloaded his weapon and went back to his hiding place. But the woodchuck, not being quite a fool, remained where she was safe until the boy became tired of waiting and came back to the hole, the yellow dog still at his heels. The boy now picked up the dog and put its nose to the mouth of the burrow, and after a few words of encouragement the cur, which had more assurance than wisdom, plunged into the black hole. The boy sat down on the mound of earth and yelled "Sic 'em, Prince!" and for about a minute no doubt Prince was doing as he was bid. After that, it seems that the woodchuck did most of the "sicking," for the dog backed out of the burrow with two terrible cuts on his head, and howling in a most unprincely manner. Then, tucking his tail as far between his legs as he could get it, he made for home by a short cut, and at his very best pace.

Not long after, the woodchuck appeared at the mouth of the burrow with a family of five little ones. They had been born some time before, but this was their first appearance in the open. They were pretty, dark-eyed, soft-coated little fellows, ready to topple back again out of sight at a sign from their mother.

Every morning now, the whole family might have been seen moving through the grass to the spots where the clover grew the thickest. For a short time they lived in peace, but one evening they made themselves a powerful enemy by journeying into the next field and eating off, close to the ground, three long rows of young peas. The owner of the peas said very little, but he drove to town and brought back a stick of dynamite, which he thrust far into the burrow. A minute later there was a muffled boom, and the farmer went off, satisfied that he would not be bothered again by that family of woodchucks. But in the evening a cautious gray head was thrust from the mouth of the hole, and soon our old woodchuck crawled from her home and made off slowly across the field. The dynamite had killed the young ones, but their mother had only been stunned. She went directly to an old burrow which she had occupied two years before, and next morning there was a large heap of fresh earth in front of it. She lived there quietly until the latter part of the summer, when, returning after an absence somewhat longer than usual, she found the entrance guarded by a large and snarling black head, with a white stripe down the front. The premises had been seized by a skunk, and the woodchuck was obliged to seek a residence elsewhere. She started to dig a fresh tunnel on the other side of the field and for hours she threw out the soil with her strong claws. The following afternoon she was still at work, when the figure of a man, in brown overalls, crept under the brow of the hill, and dropped behind a rock at the top. For half an hour the woodchuck worked on, and at last she appeared at the doorway for a breathing spell. A little curl of white smoke [illegible] from behind the rock, there was a sharp report, and the wood chuck dropped back into a newly made grave.

Little Woman at Bargain Sale.

She Knew the Whole Thing Was a Cheat, Didn't Want Any of the Goods Advertised, Wouldn't Make a Fool of Herself, Yet in the End Succumbed to the Temptation Against Which No Woman Is Proof.

"Well, I'm glad of it!" exclaimed the little woman, as she got out of the jam and straightened her hat and borrowed two pins to make repairs to her dress. "I might have known better than to come to this sale. This bargain-counter business is all a cheat, and I'll be glad to know that all these women are sure to be swindled. Just look at 'em, will you? They are almost tearing the clothes off each other to get at those stockings.

I didn't intend to buy any—not me. I know all about 50-cent stockings marked down to 17 cents. They are simply 18-cent stockings marked up to 17, just as my husband says. They are not fast colors, and they have been kicking around the store for the last year. I simply wanted to look at 'em and see—"

Here the little woman paused, drew a long breath, and dashed at an opening in the crowd. It closed up before she could reach it, however, and she was flung back again.

"I wasn't trying to get in there," she explained to herself, as she leaned against a pillar to recover her breath. "I know all about that toilet soap, and not only report for orders to his divorced wife, but he must pay her alimony of $5 weekly, and that may come hard, for Mrs. Helmess told the court that heretofore she had always supported her husband.

"I paid the rent and household expenses for six years," the wife explained, "and gave John a little money each week to spend. He got only a small salary and spent it all on himself."

"You have not asked for alimony," said the court.

"No," Mrs. Helmess replied, with a smile; "all I care for is the divorce."

"Well, I'll allow you alimony of $5 a week. As head of Mr. Helmess' department I suppose you can see that he pays it."

"I can," the department head answered.

"I wonder whether she will discharge her ex-husband or raise his salary when she gets back to the store?" whispered a woman who was waiting her own turn for a divorce.

Queer Trade Commodities.

Most people nowadays bear a lot about the conservation of waste, but looking through the catalogue of traders of various kinds it is astounding what a number of eccentric commodities are utilized for trade purposes. The skins of millions of eels are tanned and used as leather for bootlaces; frogskin has become one of the most beautiful and useful articles known to the binders of fancy books and the makers of fans; walrus whiskers provide the most elegant toothpicks; [illegible] fashion; and [illegible] are exported by the [illegible] for use on [illegible].

Where Money Talks.

A quiet little [illegible] money does nearly all [illegible]

I wouldn't give it to a tramp to wash his feet with. A friend of mine bought some a few days ago and it gave her a skin disease and made her look a fright. My toilet soap costs 30 cents a cake, and my husband would divorce me if I used anything cheaper! There are two ladies whose husbands allow them $200 a month pin money, and yet they are ready to scratch each other's eyes out over three-cent cakes of toilet soap! There's a sign of pins at three cents a paper. I don't want any, you know, but I'd just like—"

She made a jump and followed a cash girl into the press. That is, she managed to squeeze ahead of an old lady with gold glasses and a young woman with a Roman nose and take them by surprise. They recovered after a moment, however, and crowded her against a dumpy woman with such force that she was glad to get back to the corset counter alive.

"Never again in all my life will I make a fool of myself by attending another bargain sale!" she gasped, as the tears came to her eyes. "I didn't want those pins, as I said to myself, but I had a curiosity to see them. They are just what I thought they were—brass corset pins, with points so dull you couldn't stick 'em into pumpkin pie. Think of a lady using three-cent pins around her house, when the cheapest second girl or cook would be ashamed to ask for anything under seven! There's a lawyer's wife with a $100 dress and a $25 hat, and yet she's got her elbows into everybody's ribs in her mad desire to buy five papers of pins at a saving of four cents a paper. I'm going home, I am. I just dropped in to see the women make idiots of themselves. When you catch me—"

At that instant, says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, her eye caught sight of a sign: "Corset covers for seven cents," and with a push and a jam and a rush she made her way into the crowd and finally reached the counter and ordered two. She was a wreck from hat to shoes, and had broken her parasol and lost her shopping bag, but she had found a real bargain, and was happy at last.

WIFE IS HIS BOSS.

And She Wouldn't Let Her Husband Off to Defend Himself in a Suit for Divorce.

John Helmess could not attend his wife's divorce suit in Judge Tuthill's court at Chicago the other day, because Mrs. Helmess, who is head of the department in which he is employed in a downtown department store, would not let him off. Hereafter Helmess must

"I'LL ALLOW YOU ALIMONY."

BEANS LEAD TO ALTAR.

Boston Baked Variety No Longer Has Any Terrors for This Smart Young Jerseyman.

There isn't much romance in the common or garden variety of beans, and most girls are willing to admit that, but when baked in the Boston manner they seemed to promote matrimony if in the meantime they do not swell the membership of the suicide club.

Otto L. Stoeffler formerly lived in Jersey City. Not long ago he went to Boston—that is, most of him did—and obtained a position.

His heart—as the story book tells it —was left behind in the keeping of Miss Josephine Staubinger, of Griffith street, Jersey City. Otto and Josephine were both young and were to have been married in a few years.

But they had reckoned without the Boston baked beans. Otto took up the burden of life in Boston and daily the burden became increased by baked beans. This went on for some time and then he sent a call of distress, headed towards Jersey City. A letter from him to a friend announcing that he is to be married soon throws light on the subject. It is as follows:

"Dear John: I cannot stand Boston baked beans much longer. For nearly a year this dish has been set before me three times a day—for breakfast, dinner and supper. As you know, I have strong will power, but it has been broken down completely by the everlasting and ever present baked bean. After due deliberation I have decided to get married at once, so that I may have something else for meals besides beans. Josephine has consented, and thank goodness there is a prospect of my sitting down to a table and not finding beans on it. The Boston baked have no more terrors for me now. Rejoice with me for my lucky escape."

Boy Caught by a Catfish.

Otto Scavinsky, 11 years old, had an exciting experience with a fish weighing 32 pounds, and but for the timely assistance of two men would probably have lost his life. The boy was fishing on the river bank at the foot of Chestnut street, in St. Paul, Minn., when suddenly his line was jerked violently, and he was yanked headlong into the river. He cried loudly for help, but held on to the line. James Goodhue and Thomas Murphy heard his cries and pulled him out of the water. They landed the catfish after a struggle.

THE COMING MODES.

Spring Styles and Materials Forecasted by Miss Rousseau.

No wonder women like the soft moleskin fur, for it is very beautiful, with such a fine and delicate surface, even softer and more enticing than seal, and that is so fine and silky that I at least always want to pass it across my cheeks. A short and tight fitting jacket of this fur was made in such a way that each tiny skin formed a diamond, and the seam had not been pressed flat after it was sewed, which gave the whole garment the appearance of being quilted.

The long stole shaped fur neck pieces are running close rivalry with the long and fluffy boas, which are so much more becoming than the flat and almost if not quite collarless shapes in the 1830 styles.

Speaking of these styles, it appears that we are really in for them, as every new thing has something reminiscent of them. The ugly, flabby, flat muffs and the hourglass stoles and the shorter and more extensive sweep of skirt all point to. The many flounces are indications, and for these last we should be grateful, as flounces understandingly applied are very pretty and graceful. A few of these harbingers of spring have from two to three flounces eight to ten inches deep. Where they are put straight around the skirt they are not ungraceful, but the worst feature is that the modiste is trying to follow the olden styles too literally and puts them on in festoons or scallops, with homely rosettes at the apex. But as the fashion becomes a settled fact all these queer fancies will give place to a modified style.

This week has been prolific in the bringing to our shores of millions of dollars' worth of new dress goods for early spring and even for the coming summer. Of these I shall not speak, lest the gloss of newness be worn off before the warm days come. But a few words about the pretty spring woolens may not be amiss, for I have often remarked that it seems but a short time after Christmas has come and gone until spring is with us.

In the first place, we may say that mohair is to be a leading fabric, not the old mohair that we knew as a glossy but harsh stuff, but a new one, soft and silky, with none of the old roughness which made it a dubious pleasure to have one of the gowns. Besides, the new mohair is produced in so many novel and pretty styles that it would be an impossibility to mention half of them. The main point is that they are woven into pin head and graduated stripes, white on gray and white on black, in many designs. But all are marked by great fineness in weave and delicacy of design. Indeed the material looks like the richest silk. Another excellence has been added to these new goods. They have all been crayeheited, which means that some process of the manufacture has rendered them absolutely waterproof. This is a great thing, as now we can wear the pretty and serviceable mohairs out in the heaviest rain without danger to the fabric. Nearly all of the best goods are now crayenetted.

The handsonest of these new mohairs show striped effects, mostly white and pepper and salt, though occasionally there is one with a red or blue hair line stripe. There are tans, olives, grays and many other colors. The new silk warp henriettas show small brocaded designs in sunburst patterns and others all small and fine. This material is too well known to require any description other than to mention that it is now produced with brocaded figures. There is another mohair with a deep twill something like armure silk and quite as rich and heavy, with a frosty bloom, and it is also rendered unspotable. There is still another rather lighter, and this will be made up, like the others, into handsome tailored suits. There is also a heavy twill something like prunella, and this is exceptionally rich and with a deep luster.

The costume represented here is made of the tan shade as a pattern gown and is finished simply to show the beauty of the mohair. It is trimmed at the yoke in simple plain white silk castle braid and darker braid ending with fancy breloques.

These braids, breloques and buttons and many other things all fashioned by the same process are in the highest style now, and it may almost be said that they are displacing lace as trimming of fine dresses. Hats are also made of the suitable braids.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

ABOUT DABBLERS

They Do Many Things a Little, None Well

A WISE woman has written, "It is better to do one thing well than to dabble in forty things."

Our time is crowded full of pleasant things to know and to do. A woman of lively imagination and warm sympathies looks over the field of feminine activities and many a time wishes to do a dozen things at once. Let us say she is a girl just out of school. She has been made to take piano and singing lessons. She has a voice that might be made a fine one with practice. But she desires a good time socially, so is content to remain an indifferent musical thrumster. She sees other girls taking up as a fad a little embroidery and fancy knitting work, so into that she goes headlong. After she has learned even it only half she gets wearied of it and throws it aside.

Then the girls decide they will form a French literary and conversation class and improve their minds. They are to meet twice a week for three months. Ten girls are of the class in the beginning. At the end of a dozen lessons one girl is left. The others dropped out, being taken up with skating parties or dancing or a fad of slumming. The superior fascinations of slumming and becoming a teacher in a Chinese Sunday school quite blotted out the claims of the French language and the improvement of the mind.

Our young lady keeps up the slumming and the Chinese Sunday school for a whole six months. Then she sees a girl who is "just wild" over gymnastics and is developing her chest and her back muscles at a great rate. Miss Amarilda, our young lady, has her imagination captivated at once by the fine physical proportions possible for her to acquire. She goes in furiously for athletics, and the fit lasts only two months this time.

Miss Amarilda's next fad, maybe, is learning to cook. She takes lessons, she gets half a dozen newfangled egg beaters and at length makes a cake and some charlotte russe. The cake is a failure, the charlotte is successful, but Amarilda decides to take another whack at cookery. Miss Amarilda goes off to spend the winter with a cousin.

She meets at the cousin's a fascinating young man. She gets a new fad, and the new fad is matrimony. Mrs. Amarilda settles down. Shortly the novelty of matrimony wears off. By that time the fad for painting china and porcelain shirt waist buttons is on violently among the feminine sex, and Mrs. Amarilda paints buttons "to beat the band." She has really artistic talent that might be made worth while if she would only learn to draw well. But drawing well means drudgery, working year after year. Mrs. Amarilda's scheme of life is that of the amateur and diversion seeker. Maybe she gets far enough along to do some pretty rose and fern plaques or even get a photo of her husband transferred to a china plate. That is the end of high art with Mrs. Amarilda. A woman friend comes along and interests her in what the friend proudly calls "new thought," though it was enunciated ages ago by Socrates and other philosophers. Mrs. Amarilda is going to do things by force of thought and will, forgetful that she, on the other hand, cannot thus do anything. The little brain that sits up aloft in the brain long ago abdicated to Mrs. Amarilda's mere fancy. She has no more steady power of will or concentration than a baby. She practices concentration a whole week, then quits.

She goes in for women's clubs. In the midst of it all her husband is stricken with incurable invalidism, and Mrs. Amarilda must earn her own living.

What can she do? That is a question for thousands of Amarildas to put to themselves this day.

Our age requires as no age has before required perfection of work. There can be no perfection unless the worker gives herself heart and soul and with all enthusiasm to her task. Life is not long enough to do many things well. Let not women fritter it away nibbling faddish at this, that and the other. A woman may gain success in an art or profession quite as well as a man, but she must task herself like a man to do it. She cannot work and go into society too; she cannot even work in a half hearted way at anything and attain excellence. She must give herself whole souled to her labor.

WHAT IS WORN.

Gray Cloth Combined With Chinchilla—Blue Dinner Frocks.

The wreath of small flowers has long been a favorite evening headdress, but it is now a trifle out of style. At any rate it is only becoming to a well shaped head and hair dressed low.

Gray ball gowns are a novelty of the season, but this demands bright hair and a brilliant complexion. An evening gown of pale gray oriental satin was recently had a wide girdle of silver ribbon and a white bertha of creamy duchess lace. The skirt was laid in flat plaits at the waist and flared out into a pretty fullness.

Chinchilla is the fur to go with gray materials, and when this is combined with silver embroidery and cream lace the effect is very rich.

touches of bronze velvet or mink. They are trimmed in addition with bands and applications of heavy lace dyed ecru to match.

Bright blues if becoming to their wearer make stunning dinner and theater frocks, but they must be trimmed in the same tone with dyed lace, lequins or cheuille fringe.

The picture shows a gown of gray cloth trimmed with chiffon of the same shade and bands of oriental embroidery in red and green. The hat is of gray felt trimmed with a greenish owl.

Dyed Brussels Net—Cheuille and Velvet Embroideries.

Brussels net is dyed in all the fashionable pale shades, and when this is made up over chiffon and silk it forms a beautiful and dainty costume. A gown of this description seen recently was in pale turquoise blue. The bodice, made decollete, had a draped bertha of dyed lace and chiffon, with tiny bows of velvet. The skirt and bodice were laid in graduated horizontal tucks, growing wider as they reached the bottom, and the belt was of swathed velvet, with a beautiful jeweled buckle having stones of a much darker shade of blue.

Jet robes have returned to favor, and they are made up with much chiffon and a spray of beautifully shaded velvet roses.

Black and white chiffon effects are particularly smart in evening gowns.

A DAINTY WAIST.

and Parisians are especially fond of black chiffon gowns trimmed with medallions of lace embroidered in black and white sequins.

All kinds of mirror velvets are worn, both plain and spotted, but chiffon velours in black, gun metal and a new shade of brown is the leading fabric for reception gowns.

Cloth gowns are trimmed with fanciful applications of velvet, diamonds, squares or round spots, and these spots are worked into a shaded design, interwoven sometimes with embroidery in leaf design.

Chenille is frequently seen not only in fringe, but in embroidery designs. Cut jet ornaments and even those of amber and pearl are being used on lace gowns.

The picture shows a cream crepe de chine waist made up of wide and narrow tucks and cordings.

THE FASHIONS.

Gorgeous Evening Gowns Worn on Opening of the Opera—How Jewels Are Worn.

The opening night at the opera is always a great dress event. Both in the boxes and in the stalls are seen the newest and most beautiful evening gowns. It is now almost the rule that low-necked gowns shall be worn in the opera house, except in the balcony and family circle. The evening dress would be entirely out of place, says the New York Post.

One had an impression of white and pale colors in the boxes, with an occasional brilliant note of color. The jewels were not worn too aggressively, but seemed a fit part of the general light and glitter of the scene. Not many heavy silks and satin gowns were worn anywhere in the house, black or white lace, chiffon, and airy materials taking the place of heavy fabrics.

A great many spangled gowns appeared. One striking example was a dark claret colored net entirely covered with fish-scale spangles of the same rich hue. Not a touch of white disturbed the harmony of the red gown, the glint of the spangles giving sufficient variety.

A lovely black gauze costume over white chiffon had a skirt in many gores, separated by bands of oblong jet and steel spangles. The skirt had a deep circular flounce covered with leaf and grape design in jet and cut steel, mingled with some dark green spangles. The bodice was outlined with the same design, and it appeared again on the elbow sleeves. A line of white tulle under the spangled border of the bodice relieved the somber effect, and the sleeves were furnished with full ruffles of tulle and lace under the jet.

A princess gown of turquiose blue chiffon had a high girdle and hip yoke of close shirring, from which the accordion-plaited skirt fell in long lines crossed by several groups of shirred tucks The waist above the shirred girdle was accordion plaited and had a close band of shirred tucks around the upper part. Below this fell two ruffles of the chiffon, forming a bertha. Many strings of pearls and turquoise pendants were worn.

The one-color effect was marked in most of the gowns. All white or all blue, or all pink was seen everywhere one looked. Colors relieved by white lace were infrequently observed. The one-color idea seems to prevail.

Two more general tendencies were noted: cut paste flowers were little worn, there being few bouquets in the boxes, and practically none at all elsewhere. A girl in white with a mass of American Beauty roses covering her corsage was a conspicuous figure in one of the boxes, these roses of like size of flowers around her. A few great bunches of violets, with a purple orchid or a gardenia in the center, were seen, but in general it may be said that flowers are a little passe this season. Another notable fact was the matter of the coiffure. The hair is worn lower and less elaborately puffed this year than last. No one wears the English "fringe." Many and beautiful, however, are the hair ornaments worn. All sorts of ribbon decorations, roses, rosettes, twisted bows, etc., are popular, and for state occasions like the opera, jewels, aigrettes and ostrich feathers are to be fashionable. One beautifully dressed woman wore in her hair a jeweled ornament from which rose a stiff feather fully six inches long. A few young girls had their hair dressed with flowers, artificial, of course. Natural flowers are out of place in the hair. One very blonde girl in white lace had her abundant locks decorated with scarlet poppies, the one touch of color in her costume.

A simple but charming white lace gown had a circular skirt with four graduated circular flounces. The low bodice had a high crush girdle of turquoise blue chiffon velvet fastened in front with a peacock buckle set with rhinestones. There was a deep bertha of lace which fell over the shoulders and did duty for sleeves.

Another white lace dress was more elaborate. Two rows of gold rosettes crossed the bodice, and there was a wide belt of gold gauze, or fine cloth of gold. The elbow sleeve was bordered on the upper half with a wide band of sable, the fur dotted with gold dots. A deep full of lace completed the sleeve. With this gown was worn a large three-cornered hat of purple violets, the only trimming being two huge cockade bows and ends of light blue satin ribbon. One of these was placed at the back and the other in the indentation on the left side of the hat.

The wraps worn would make a chapter by themselves. They were much more elaborate, and often more costly, than the gowns worn under them. White and cream-colored cloth predominated, but there were many exquisite red and pale rose-colored ones, all lace or fur trimmed.

The portrait show is calling out many handsome afternoon gowns, especially on the days when celebrities are there to pour tea. An occasion of this kind demands handsome cloth or velvet costumes, and picture hats. A style of dress is seen which French women call American, and rather disapprove of as being over-trimmed. Certainly it is a distinct style, not at all French, and, of course, not English. There is no doubt that American women do like elaborate gowns, and eschew the simplicity, elegant though it be, of the well-dressed Parisian woman. At the portrait show were seen a number of gowns too intricate and elaborate for words to make up to describe. There was a blac' velvet combined with taffets, the latter manipulated into huge chrysanthemums and embroidered in chenille. These were inset in the velvet, which was tucked and gauged all over. It looked as if the labor of months had been lavished on the making of this one gown.

TWIN SCHOLARS.

They Discovered New Scriptural Writings In a Monastery.

Two English ladies, twin sisters, were deeply interested in Bible manuscript studies. They pursued their studies with enthusiasm year after year. It was their life work. They had heard it suggested that there might be undiscovered ancient writings hidden away in the monasteries of Syria and Mount Sinai.

The idea fixed itself in their minds, which are more like the mind of one person than of two. Scholars say the language Christ himself spoke was Syriac, so the sisters, Mrs. Agnes L. Lewis and Mrs. Y. L. Gibson, began the study of that tongue. When they had familiarized themselves with it they started on a quest among the half hidden monasteries that lie in the mountains one sees while passing through the Suez canal. One, St. Catherine's, is on the slope of Mount Sinai itself. It is the most difficult to obtain entrance to of any of the eastern religious establishments; consequently there, if anywhere, the ladies would be apt to get results from their search. So they knocked at the doors of St. Catherine's.

It was difficult indeed to get in. But the fame of the twin sisters as Biblical scholars was wide. They were Ph. D.'s of the University of Halle and LL. D.'s of St. Andrew's. After they found what they did find at St. Catherine's the University of Leipsic bestowed on them also the degree of D. D. The sisters had letters of introduction to the abbot of St. Catherine's from some of the most distinguished theologians and scholars of Europe, so rope besides their university degrees. Although oriental monks consider woman a creature to be horribly afraid of, these two seemed entirely harmless, and they proved by the letters they brought that their intention was just to look for old documents and not at all for men, so they were allowed to enter and go at will through the monastery. There was an unused cell that had a lot of rubbish, even some faded writings, in it, but the monks had never taken the trouble to investigate these.

The sisters searched every nook and cranny in their devoted quest. And finally how their hearts bounded at the find! They came upon a batch of New Testament writings older than any extant in the known world, and in fact that the date showed them to reach within a century and a half of the time of Christ himself. The writings were upon papyrus, which at first appeared to contain something quite different from original Scripture sayings. But the sisters scanned it closely, and, lo, it was a palimpsest! Paper was scarce in those days.

From a word here and there that had escaped the eraser's touch when he rubbed out the first writing preparatory to inscribing the second the learned twins found there really was an old document under the later one. With infinite pains they applied chemicals to the superposed inscription and effaced it, leaving the older one to be made out with difficulty and with patient study. And their patient study was rewarded by discovering here in the monastery of St. Catherine's an undoubted transcription of teachings of Christ, some new, others different from the ordinary version of them.

One of the most important discoveries of the sisters is that, as is claimed by Jewish rabbis and scholars, the Golden Rule itself is a saying of Rabbi Hillel of Babylon fifty years before the time of Christ. Jesus was not a plagiarist, and he himself in this newly discovered document quotes the saying as from Rabbi Hillel. As found in the Talmud it differs somewhat from the ordinary version. The story there is that a scoffer went to Rabbi Hillel and asked him to state the moral principles of Judaism while standing upon one foot. Instantly the rabbi answered:

"That which ye would not that others should do unto you do you not also unto others."

The ladies at once took photographs, a great number of them, of the precious writings, which of course they were not allowed to remove. The second writing, which they effaced with chemicals, was a later review of some Scriptures of a certain Father Sebastian, one Father Sebastianan, who thought his comment was of more value than the original sayings. Father Sebastianan long since turned to dust. Nobody even knows who he was, but the writings he erased in order to use the papyrus for recording his own thoughts has now come to be of priceless value because of the original writing, and this writing was brought to light through the labors of two new women of a nation in the shadow of Sinai—a nation that exists when the precious record was made.

Drs. Lewis and Gibson hurried with their treasures over the sands of Arabia by camel back and returned home rejoicing. They will shortly embody their discoveries in a book called "Under the Shadow of Sinai."

MARCIA W. CAMPBELL.

THE NEW WOMAN

Her Words and Deeds

IT'S a queer world this. On the other hand, preachers, high dignitaries and solemn old owls of college men and judges rail venomously and vociferously at woman for constantly straining in the leash to get out of her "sphere," as Artemus Ward used to call it. "Go back home," they cry, "marry, raise children, large families! The more children you give to this wicked and perverse world, no matter what their quality or bringing up, the nearer to exactness you will be in fulfilling woman's only sphere. And marry, marry, marry! Whatever else you don't do, marry and stay at home with your little ones." This is their preaching. Now for their practice: Just so sure as a woman engaged in any professional employment loves a man and weds him, and, loving also her profession, desires to continue it, then these same would be final authorities on the woman question raise the most awful howl you ever heard. "Get out," they say; "get out of school teaching; get out of government clerkships and postoffices. We won't have a married woman in our employ. Get out, I say! Starve if you must, but get out!" After bounding women into matrimony on all sides these gentlemen who think they understand a woman's business better than she does herself at once deprive her of a livelihood. A late instance of this is the cruel taking away from a married woman of the Nordica musical prize after she had actually won it. It was refused to her because she had had the temerity to marry. The prize carried with it a five years' course in musical instruction, and the lady from whom it was taken was the wife of a minister. Let officials and authorities take notice. They themselves are steadily discriminating against marriage and discouraging all intellectual and aspiring women from entering into it.

Helen Wilmans says, "Of all the so called virtues humility is the most accursed."

There are times when even I feel discouraged over women. These times come after I read of some sloppy, false, foolish, flabbergasted testimonial outbreak on the part of members of my sex. There is little George Howard Meredith, the child orchestra conductor, five years old. After some of his performances in New York he is mobbed by fashionable women who try to smother him in kisses till policemen have to keep the effusive females off. Heaven send them at least a little sense!

Dr. Emily Dunning, the New York woman ambulance surgeon, is winning a noble reputation by the able, thorough, dignified way in which she discharges her duties. She was recently called as a witness in a case where the decision hinged on the sanity or insanity of a man who had murdered his wife. The man had tried also to kill himself, but failed, and Dr. Dunning was the ambulance surgeon who took him wounded to the hospital. She said in her judgment the man was irrational, and she gave her reasons in the clearest, most scientific way, a way that commanded admiration.

Miss Florence Offutt, teacher of physical culture in the State college at Lexington, Ky., announces that, though she is going to be married to an admirable young man, she is not going to give up her professorship. She says that any woman can attend to a home and a profession, too, if she cares enough for her profession to do so. Miss Offutt prefers her profession to the "senseless round of gayety" of a young married woman in society.

An infallible test of a man is his views on the woman question. If he is willing to accord to woman all the rights he claims for himself in the industrial, social and political realms, then he is a man of large brain and heart; if not, then he is a man of small brain and narrow, pettily jealous nature. Steer away from the man who is opposed to woman's rights.

The most awfully overworked word in the English language is that word "tot" as applied to children, especially around the winter and summer holidays. I'm so tired of it that I would it had never been invented.

A solemn college president declares through his nose—I am sure he talked through his nose, if not through his hat—that woman may never hope to compete with man in athletics. Well, what woman wants to compete with man in athletics? What woman cares a rap about it one way or the other? All women desire is how speedily to develop their health and physical powers to the highest and most nearly perfect condition without reference to college presidents or men.

A girl lately wore to a business office a pretty new shirt waist of black and white. There were large but not offensively obtrusive squares in the pattern, suggesting only to a very lively imagination a checkerboard. A gentleman saw her first thing in the office and remarked, "My motto next!" Men don't notice women's clothes?

In one respect at least Dowie's Zion City is superior to any other city in all the realm of our boasted civilization. Zion has a woman on its board of aldermen.

THE MASSEUSE.

A Profession That Says Well—Also the Visiting Maid.

"Yes, isn't it awful? It is all falling out, but it costs so much to go to a good masseuse." Mrs. Binks charges two and a half a treatment, and it only consists of rubbing the head for about an hour."

"My dear, I know of a charming little masseuse who has a most electric touch. She could make hair grow on a billiard ball, and she only charges a dollar an hour."

"Give me her address. I will send for her immediately."

"The only trouble is I don't know that she will have time for you, she is so much in demand."

It has come to be recognized that massage is the one grand remedy for nearly every mark of care or age. If madame's cheeks are sallow, to the masseuse she goes. If her throat is thin and she lacks the neck which goes with a Parisian evening gown, to the masseuse again. And, last and not least, if comb and brush show the mournful remains of a once luxuriant head of hair, then the last resort of all. It is a case for the masseuse, for tonics avail nothing when it is electricity and new life that the scalp needs.

Considering the good profits, it is a wonder that more girls do not adopt this profession. The work is not unpleasant, the hours are your own, and it only requires the right touch and a short course of study. I know of the case of a Swedish girl who came over to this country as a maid and who in six months opened a place as masseuse where she is now earning a more than comfortable income.

Then, as an additional branch, the masseuse may include manicuring, pedicuring, the treatment of freckles, coarse pores, etc. Besides the development of thin busts and arms she should be able to give a Turkish bath and a cold spray. She should shampoo, singe, curl and wave the hair. It might not be a bad thing either if she learned how to dress it becomingly.

In fact, a clever woman could become visiting maid to several women and make a good income by getting a stated weekly sum from each woman and having a certain number of customers.

THE COZY LIBRARY.

A Pretty Combination of Book Room and Living Room.

In many houses the library and the living room are one, and that this is an attractive combination is proved by the illustration.

The woodwork, cases, etc., are of fumed oak. The mantel is well worth noticing on account of the diamond effect and the pretty pieces of china. The fender is brass, of course, and the fittings of the antique desk, which do

There is an artistic touch of color in the shape of the palm in the dark red jardiniere, and the greenish tint is reproduced in the beamed ceiling. The floors are of hard wood, well polished.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor.

Thursday, Jan. 21, 1904.

The dignified and concise message of Governor Franklin Murphy is receiving marked attention on the part of the public press, and all regular to relate even the minority party's "organ" have nothing but praise to sound in reviewing it. Its business-like tone and brevity commend it to the perusal of the citizen who takes an interest in the State's affair and the subjects of which it treats makes it especially valuable to the members of the Legislature, to whom it is addressed.

After calling attention to the prosperity New Jersey enjoyed during 1903, the Governor speaks of the highly satisfactory condition of the finances, there being a balance of $2,861,687.17 in the treasury at the close of the fiscal year, "the largest in the history of the State."

Admitting that the receipts from incorporation fees are falling off, the Governor at the same time declares that there is no cause for alarm and no fear that a State tax will be imposed.

Passing on from this subject he recommends the creation of the office of auditor of State accounts and he wants the office filled, not by a politician but by an expert accountant, who will make his report to the Legislature annually.

The abolition of the fee system in county offices, a source of great abuse in this State, is again recommended by him.

The deplorable condition at the State prison in Trenton comes in for a share of attention, the statement being made that more than 300 cells are occupied by not less than two persons at the same time. The Rahway reformatory is also over-crowded and a recommendation is made that it be enlarged.

Governor Murphy is much interested in the erection of a State consumptive's home and naturally he wishes to have the oversight of the last Legislature, which failed to pass the measure, remedied as soon as possible, inasmuch as an appropriation for the construction of the building has been made.

Following his statement that the State's hospitals and homes are all doing good work, he refers to a growing evil, the disfigurement of the landscape near railroad tracks by ugly and grotesque signs. Between Jersey City and Trenton on a single line of a railroad there are 1,601 of these signs all obnoxious to the eye. In concluding, a reference to the views from railroad cars he says: "They are disfigured by all sorts of effigies of impossible men and women, and they advertise remedies for all the ills that human flesh is heir to, as well as all sorts of foods and drinks, and the various contrivances born of human ingenuity. In the interest of a suffering and indignant public I present the subject to the Legislature, in the hope that they may be able to find a remedy."

As expected attention is called to the fact that the voting machines introduced at the last election are decidedly advantageous and a recommendation is made that as quickly as possible the improved method of registering the votes be established generally in the State.

A particularly lucid discussion of the child labor law and other labor matters is made a feature of the message and following it is a subject also of much importance. This is the suggestion that the State Board of Taxation and the State Board of Assessors be consolidated in the interests of public economy and because of the similarity of duties of the members of the two bodies.

The Governor again asks that the State Board of Arbitration be abolished.

The results of the new primary election law is a source of gratification to him, but he recommends that some needed amendments be made.

All in all, the Governor's message to the 128 Legislature of New Jersey is a good one.

Firemen Respond Promptly.

As a test of the promptness of the local fire department Councilmen Lee, Randolph and Bullock, of the fire committee, rang in a house alarm at headquarters at 11 o'clock Saturday night, just as the firemen were retiring. Some of the men were in bed, while others were preparing to "turn in" when the gong downstairs clanged. Hardly had the gong stopped sounding when all the firemen were in their places in different stages of attire.

After spending a few days with Somerville friends, Miss Tillie Coddington, of Grove street, has resumed her studies at Coleman's Business College, Newark.

AMUSEMENTS.

Children and women have a feeling of safety in the Majestic where the pleasing extravaganza "Babes in Toyland" is drawing the crowds, because they can see the exits at every hand. The little ones and their elders are this week enjoying a new stanza which has been added to the catchy song "Put Down Sis and Carry Two," the new one runs as follows:

If a man who raised some cotton
Had also raised some corn,
And had also raised some whiskers
That the wind blew through each morn.
If he also raised some rabbits,
And shamrocks that are red,
How much would John D. pay him
To raise hair upon his head.

The most successful productions presented in New York during the past three seasons have been Klaw & Erlanger's Drury Lane spectacles, the greatest of which, "Mother Goose," is now drawing wonderfully large and enthusiastic audiences to the New Amsterdam Theatre. The secret of the success of these remarkable attractions, if it be a secret, is that each has given the auditor his money's worth of wholesome and unusually novel amusement. The specialties are numerous, entirely new and original and cleverly interpolated, the music is fascinating, appealing particularly to the popular taste, and the two ballets, "L'Art Nouveau" and "The Land of Hearts-ease," represent the most gorgeous and artistic conceptions in ballet features ever seen on the American stage.

The latest addition to the list of musical plays in New York is "The Medal and the Maid," now being presented at the Broadway Theatre. Probably the strongest list of principals that has ever been seen in one organization has been furnished by Messrs. John C. Fisher and Thomas Ryley for this attraction. Headed by the popular comedian, James T. Powers, it includes such well-known people as Cyril Scott, W. T. Carleton, Ignacio Hartlonetti, Jeannette Lowrie, Emma Carus, Cecil Engelbart, Stanley H. Forde, Tom Herring and Miss Vinton, the latter brought from London to play her original role. The piece has been very favorably received as the Broadway and will undoubtedly attract crowded houses for many weeks to come, for it is the only novelty in a musical way that will be forthcoming for some weeks. The New York Herald pronounces the new offering bright and amusing and commends it to the playgoers of the metropolis.

Frank Daniels and his opera company, which only recently closed a long and prosperous engagement in the laughable musical comedy, "The Office Boy," at the Victoria Theatre here, has been brought back to New York by Manager Charles B. Dillingham and is presented this week at the Grand Opera House. The popularity of "The Office Boy" during its nine weeks' *run on Broadway should in*sure a big engagement at the Grand. "The Office Boy" is the best vehicle Daniels has yet had for a display of his unique fun-making abilities and the chubby star is surrounded by a more than capable company of singers, dancers, comedians and show girls. Daniels himself was long ago voted a favorite at this theatre, and he seems in for a flattering reception. After "The Office Boy" will come two non-musical plays, thus giving our patrons a breathing spell from the reigning style of entertainment. The two attractions secured are of widely different variety but each is a masterpiece in its line.

The fact that an interesting vaudeville programme can be arranged without the adventurous aid of "featured" or "star" numbers will be demonstrated during the coming week at Keith's Union Square Theatre, New York. The bill will afford four hours and more of solid entertainment, and yet it is difficult to select any one feature that is to be set above another. In the whole entertainment there will not be a moment that will not have its special appeal, and dullness will find no place for its unwelcomed entrance.

Mr. Kyrle Bellew, as "Raffles, The Amateur Cracksman," now enjoying a sensational run at The Princess Theatre, New York, is beyond question or dispute the most pronounced success of the season. The New York press has so decreed, and the theatre-going public has indorsed the sentiment and in the most emphatic way. The first burlesque of a New York success that Weber & Fields have undertaken this season was the burlesque they gave of "The Amateur Cracksman" on the evening of the 17th inst., and it promises to be the greatest hit Weber & Fields have so far made in this peculiar line of work. This is a tribute to the popularity of the Kyrle Bellew play which those residing here in New York, who know that Weber & Fields never burlesque aught but the most marked successes, will understand.

The annual masquerade ball of the Imperial Social Club will be held in the Olympia Hall, 416 Sycamore street, Friday night, Jan. 29. Music will be furnished by Suhr's orchestra.

FORESTERS ENTERTAIN FRIENDS AT CASINO

An Excellent Programme Presented by Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. O. F.

CHIEF RANGER TALKS

MEMBERS OF THE WILLARD AMATEUR DRAMATIC CLUB PARTICIPATE.

Dancing a Feature—"Rooney's Restaurant," a Clever Skit, in Which Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Willard Play Their Parts Well.

A big crowd, an excellent entertainment and a successful dance made Friday memorable for the members of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, and their friends. There was hardly room enough in the ball at the Casino to accommodate the numbers that were anxious to join in the celebration on behalf of the order and witness the wealth of entertainment provided by the Willard Dramatic Club.

The programme opened with a selection by the orchestra followed by a skit called "Rooney's Restaurant" which presented A. E. Willard with splendid opportunities to display his talents in a humorous part. Mortimer Slater was clever as a very English dude and the other parts were well taken by Mrs. A. E. Willard, Walter Emmons, George Bird and Miss Ethel Reynolds. Mrs. Willard was especially good as Catchem, an old maid.

W. Frank Malin was encored for his violin renditions, and the Misses Rothberg and Rothstein danced a graceful French dance. Master Harold Willard in an Irish song and dance made a hit. The little fellow certainly showed astonishing cleverness. Miss Clara Mears sang a pleasing solo. John Taylor and "Skinny" Wilson, the negro specialists, did some original dancing and a few other stunts that captured the crowd.

One of the best numbers on the programme was the acting of a "Rube" by A. E. Willard, who introduced some unique musical effects with the mouth organ. Mrs. Willard in a dramatic recitation and in her always fascinating fire dance, William Jeffery in some beautifully illustrated songs, and M. D. Sweeney, Bertram Firstbrook and Mortimer Slater in a laughable farce, "Who Died First," presented the remaining numbers.

David F. Howell, of Newark, high chief ranger of the Foresters, made a speech in which he described the flourishing condition of the local court and the rapid growth and strong influence of the order in general.

The floor was cleared for dancing at the conclusion of the programme. Music was by C. D. Mead, of New York. The committee of arrangements from the Foresters consisted of Otto Moor, chairman; D. C. Patterson, Henry Hansen, James M. Smith and James Patterson. The floor manager was Frank J. McCabe and his assistants were Louis Feirling and William Waglow.

LITERARY.

The Red Book continues to increase in size and improve in quality. In the February number, now on the news stands, fourteen clever stories well illustrated, and seventeen photo*graphic portrait studies of various* types of beauty offer entertainment, heralded by a cover of striking beauty. The authors who contribute the fiction are M. J. Reynolds, Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., Norman H. Crowell, Mary B. Mallett, A. Shackelford Sullivan, Leo Crane, Edna Kingsley Wallace, Hayden Carruth, Clinton Dangerfield, Edgar Franklin, D. H. Talmadge, Ethel Shackelford, Isola L. Forrester and John H. Whitson. A page of personal paragraphs by the publishers relates some interesting facts about the growth of The Red Book which is attested by the visible improvement in the magazine itself and by the remarkable increase in its advertising patronage.

Work of Plainfield Artist.

The world-known decorative artist, George W. Maynard, son of Frank. lin place, has made the design for the January number of the Critic which is printed in black and red and has all the dignity that comes from simplicity and artistic composition. Mr. Edwards has expressed a number of new ideas in his design, which is thoroughly up-to-date.

Mr. McCann's Excellent Position.

Charles McCann, who has been employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone company in this city for several years, has accepted a position with the Inter-State Telephone Company and for the present will be located at the Atlantic City exchange of the company.

The Y. M. A. will meet this evening at the home of Wm. Pennington.

OBSERVED BIRTHDAY OF M'ALL AUXILIARY

Wants of the Mission at Limoges, France, Told by Two Speakers.

URGENTLY NEEDS $1,000

MRS. FREDERICK G. MEAD'S INTERESTING TALK ON LOCAL WORK.

George Soltau, of London, Makes *an Address—Meeting in Congre*gational Church — Rev. Mr. Goodrich Participates.

The anniversary of the founding of the McAll Mission work in France was observed at a meeting held Sunday p. m. at the Congregational church. Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, who is deeply interested in this work, and who is prominently identified with the local branch of the Auxiliary, gave a brief summary of the work being conducted at Limoges, this work being supported by the Plainfield branch.

Mrs. Mead stated that the local branch was organized November 5, 1888, and on August 28, 1892, took up the special work at Limoges, the money necessary to do so being subscribed in Plainfield. She then told of her visit to Limoges and of the excellent work being carried on there. She said that the people were anxious to hear the Gospel and eagerly attended every meeting held in the McAll Halls. In conclusion, Mrs. Mead said that $1,000 is needed to continue the work and hoped that the necessary sum would be received.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Mead's talk she introduced George Soltau, of London, a brother of William Soltau, who is actively engaged in the McAll work in Paris. Mr. Soltau said at the beginning of his talk that it was his brother who had such a personal knowledge of the work and thus the light of that work would be reflected through him. Mr. Soltau did not dwell particularly upon the work being done by the McAll Missions, but rather told of the needs as they present themselves in France. He referred to the fact that Roman Catholicism has a strong hold on the people in that country. Yet, notwithstanding this the people were eager to hear the Gospel as preached at the McAll Missions.

He said he deplored the fact that so many persons who have been members of churches for thirty years or more do not understand the Gospel of Christ and cannot give inquiring persons the help they need when they seek salvation. They do not seem able to tell, said he, why they are Christians. Mr. Soltau spoke of the Gospel's saving of the sinner and of this power working so wonderfully in the McAll missions.

Through the talk given by Mrs. Mead, as well as that by Mr. Soltau, considerable interest was aroused among the large number present and no doubt additional support will be given to this work as a result. The meeting was held under the auspices of the McAll Auxiliary of Plainfield, and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the church, was in charge, reading the Scripture lesson and offering prayer.

RIDING TO HOUNDS.

Dr. Knott's Pack Out Saturday for First Time—Club May be Formed for the "Chase."

Dr. M. O'M. Knott, of this city, took his pack of eighs hounds out Saturday afternoon for the first time on a "chase." A number of people with Dr. Knott followed them. The hounds, although not thoroughly broken in, followed the scent furnished by the scattering of anis seed, remarkably well. The start was made at Woodland avenue, and the course was followed past the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, through the woods to Park avenue, past Holly's place and through the Vail property. In all about three miles were covered.

Dr. Knott proposes to take his hounds out every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon and no doubt many persons will follow the "chase." It is not at all unlikely that in the near future a club will be organized among those interested in hound chases.

Casino Safe.

Mase Edwards, manager for the Casino, has complied with all the ordinance relative to making that place of amusement safe in case of fire or accidents and the several exits in the building have been conspicuously designated by large signs.

Mrs. VanDeventer Buried.

The remains of the late Mrs. Van Deventer, widow of William G. Van Deventer, whose death occurred Saturday morning at her home at 305 Orange place, were taken to Newark for interment Tuesday morning. The burial was in Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

M'NAUGHTON WRECKS Y. M. C. A. RECORDS

Beats Marks of Local Association, State and Eastern Sections in Running High Dive.

CLEARS 5 FT. 9 1-2 INCHES

FINAL EVENTS IN Y. M. C. A. INDIVIDUAL CHAMPIONSHIP CONTESTS.

Raymond Smith Won Championship Title, With C. B. Koons Second—The High Jump Record Also Broken by McNaughton.

Sensational work was done Saturday night by W. C. McNaughton in the running high dive in the athletic games at the Y. M. C. A. Not only did McNaughton break the local and State Association records but the mark established in the Eastern section of Y. M. C. A.'s, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia. The national record of five feet ten inches is held by Connecticut but the mark is not registered for the Eastern section. McNaughton's record was five feet nine and one-half inches. The previous local record was five feet eight inches made last year by McNaughton himself.

After the record had been made McNaughton made three trials at five feet ten inches and was all but successful. He was easily the star of Saturday night's events, breaking the local high jump record. His winning jump was five feet two inches, but on the trial for the record he cleared five feet three and one-half with ease, beating the best previous record established in 1899 by Raymond Carroll.

Raymond Smith is Y. M. C. A. individual athletic champion having won the title by consistent work throughout the contests which closed Saturday night. He scored 570 points. C. B. Koons was second with 444 points, W. C. McNaughton third, with 323 and William D. Mundy and Irving Stevens tied for fourth with 278 points. McNaughton entered but five of the twelve events, however, and in all probability would have held his championship won last year had he made the attempt.

In the running high dive, second place to McNaughton was one by Neal who cleared five feet. W. Mundy was third and Raymond Smith fourth. In the high jump Stewart, with four feet, eight inches was second to the record-breaker. C. B. Koons was third. Smith, Mundy and Neal also contested in this event.

The rope climb was won by Smith in 7 1-5 seconds. Smith and Neal were tied on the first trial, Smith winning the run-off. Other entries were Mundy, Stewart and Koons.

Smith, as the winner of the champ*ionship title will receive a silver* medal, and Koons, second man, wins a bronze. Winners of individual events receive silver buttons and badges. The officials at the events Saturday were C. B. Egan and C. Heywood scorers and judges; H. S. Brokaw, measurer.

GRATIFYING REPORT.

The Treasurer of Crescent Avenue Church Makes Financial Statement.

William F. Arnold, treasurer for the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, has just issued the statement of the church's finances for the past year. The report shows the receipts for the year to be $30,460 17. The disbursements, including a balance, are the same as expenditures, notwithstanding that there were extra expenses during the year amounting to $1,994.97, which included chiefly the work of obtaining pulpit supplies, securing a new pastor and making alterations and repairs to the new parsonage on Park avenue.

The estimated expenses for 1904 are $12,690. In the report of the chapels, Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels, the receipts for the year are reported to be $8,400.80. After meeting obligations there is a balance on hand of $960. The expense of the chapels to April 1, 1904, is given as $1,560. There is $6,375 on hand for the purpose of erecting a new building in the borough for Warren chapel.

Westfield Doesn't Want Them.

*If the two large grocery establish*ments—one in Plainfield and one in Elizabeth—are waiting until spring to see if they can obtain liquor licenses before they open branch stores in Westfield, they will have a very long wait. It is hardly probable that the town council would grant a liquor license to any liquor grocery combination. At the present time Westfield supplied with liquor establishments and has a goodly number of up-to-date grocery stores. If the proprietors of the two stores in question desire to conduct a straight out and out grocery business, all well and good; let 'em come.—Westfield Standard.

WAS ARRESTED FOR FRAUD

BARTZ SAID TO HAVE PASSED WORTHLESS CHECK ON HARRY WERNER.

Chief of Police P. S. Kiely Sunday arrested Theodore Bartz, alias Ritter, charged with passing a worthless check upon Harry Werner to the amount of $36. Justice Huff, Monday morning, held Bartz without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Bartz is the man whom Patrolman Saunders failed to arrest several weeks ago when he was pointed out to the patrolman on a trolley car. Saunders was reprimanded for the neglect.

Bartz had been held on another charge in Rahway where he was arrested.

SINGLE TAX ADVOCATE ADDRESSES MINISTERS

Bolton Hall Made Interesting Speech Illustrating His Theory.

POVERTY NOT RIGHT

LACK OF EMPLOYMENT, NOT INTEMPERANCE, CAUSES MOST POVERTY.

Landholders Should Pay State for Use of Property—All Vacant Land Should be Assessed to Full Value to Prevent Dog-in-Manger Act.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association held a meeting Monday afternoon of unusual interest, at which time Bolton Hall, son of the late Dr. John Hall, of New York, gave an address on the subject of "Taxation." Mr. Hall is considered one of the foremost exponents of the single tax idea in the country. He came to Plainfield through the efforts of William Jeffery, a personal friend, who served him as secretary for ten years. There was a large attendance of members of the association and during the twenty-five minutes following the address, Mr. Hall was kept busy answering questions put to him by the ministers.

In part Mr. Hall spoke as follows: "It seems to me unnatural that the church with its tremendous influence and vast membership should continually be in straits for money. The Church of God ought not to be oppressed by financial difficulties. God is by no means poor and it does not seem as if it could be his intention to let his work suffer for lack of funds. Every clergyman knows that it is from persons in moderate circumstances that the church derives its chief support; that it is they who give really in proportion to their means, and it appears to me that if the natural order, which is the order of God, were followed, these person of moderate means would have such resources and ability to contribute as would put the church forever beyond the reach of want and deliver its clergy forever from the dominance of a plutocracy which in the temporal interests of the church, the clergy feel that they can ill afford to offend.

"These people have to provide first for their ordinary needs, and with them it is a hard struggle to give anything, but it ought not to be so. It seems clear that if we obey the law of God we must get our daily bread. Physical and social sins have their physical and social punishment and we must believe that if we observe God's laws in temporal things we will find temporal things added unto us.

"Physical right doing is rewarded by physical well-being the world over, and the same with spiritual well-doing. We live in this world, then we must walk in the right path in this world, not wait until we get into the next. Everything that man has comes out of the earth by labor. Labor and land enter into everything man uses, yet we find thousands of men able and willing to work who can find nothing to do. It was never God's intention that men should be involuntarily poor; such a condition is the work of the devil, that is to say of selfish stupidity. We are too prone to belief in the doctrine of total depravity.

"Some men attribute the needs of the poorer classes to intemperance. This is not the chief cause of poverty. Reports of the associated charities from New York, Boston, and Toronto show that of the needy over one-third are so through lack of employment, about five per cent. through shiftlessness; seventeen per cent. through sickness and 12½ per cent. through drunkenness. I am not trying to minimize the effects of intemperance, because there are more things than poverty flow from intemperance, but the statement of some that most people are out of work because they are lazy and drunken is untrue. Of the very poor of the cities I have mentioned, 66 per cent. wanted work rather than relief. Is there anybody so blasphemous as to say this condition of affairs is the will of God? Such would be to charge God with folly and to impute to the Almighty lack of understanding.

"We ought not to divide up all the land, or to put a farmer off his farm and give it to somebody else. What we should do is to make all the landholders pay a fee to the State for the use of it. The fee is called the single tax, though it would not really be a tax, and all other taxes should be abolished. The fee would vary with the value of the land. At a corner one man sits in the front seat and pays fifty cents for it, and another pays twenty-five cents for a rear seat, another goes into the peanut gallery for five cents, and the man who stands on the sidewalk and listens to the music pays nothing. Each pays according to location. Suppose two men occupy two fifty cent seats in the theatre and one goes to sleep. After the performance he tackles the box office. 'Here, I want my money back.' 'What for?' 'Because I slept in my seat.' 'Oh, but you kept somebody else off it.' He is like the man who holds lots vacant awaiting the rise in value which will follow his neighbor's improvements and industry.

"The first step should be to assess for the purpose of taxation all vacant land up to its full value, so as to compel men either to use it in order to get the taxes back from it or to quit their dog-in-the manger policy and let someone else use it. In the meantime, and until we exempt all improvements from all taxation we shall have a considerable number of vacant lots which ought to be used and we can find an immediate use for those."

A CONCERT AT ST. MARY'S

PUPILS PLEASE THEIR FRIENDS BY WORK WITH VOICE AND INSTRUMENT.

Music, song and recitation cleverly rendered made the first concert given by the members of St. Mary's Convent and friends of the institution, Monday, a great success. The attendance was large and the renditions by the members of the different classes and departments were well done and received unstinted applause.

Miss Mary Smith in a solo "Tarentella," opened the programme and was followed by Miss Elizabeth Day who gave a vocal selection. Charles Schuck and Jule Lincke, sang a duet. A piano selection by Edward Hanrahan, was well received. A vocal selection by Miss Alice Keeley was also heartily applauded as was a piano selection by Miss Elizabeth Brown.

"Snow Bells," a duet by Warren Seaman and Miss Madeline Seaman, was exceptionally well produced and a trio singing Schneider's "Bridal March," rendered by Miss Mollie Traynor, Miss Ethel Schuck and Miss Lillie McInerny was one of the most delightful numbers on the programme. Charles Matthews sang a pleasing selection and Miss Catherine Galbraith rendered, "Sylvana," from Bohm on the piano in a masterful manner. Edward Hanrahan and Miss Margaret Watson, rendered a duet from Ringuet and a recitation by Miss Jennie Murphy proved to be another bright number in the programme.

Miss Katherine Quinn rendered on the piano a selection from Bohm and Joseph O'Keeffe in a vocal selection sang "Queen of the Earth." "The Caliph of Bagdad" by Boieldieu, was rendered by Miss Mary Murphy, first violin; A. Quinn, second violin and K. Quinn, piano. On the piano Miss Etta Trembly, favored with a selection and Miss Etta Trembly and Miss Catherine Kelly played a duet, entitled "The Gypsy Dance."

The programme closed with a vocal selection in two parts, by Miss Anna Daley. The pupils all acquitted themselves in a commendable manner and credit is not only due the pupils for the success of the affair but to the sisters who drilled them.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER'S LUCK

ARTHUR L. LONGWORTH BENEFITS BY SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE IN ENGLAND.

Wm. Donaldson, of East Fifth street, has received word from Arthur L. Longworth, who formerly lived here, that the estate left Longworth by the decease of an uncle in England has been settled and that his share is $12,450. Mr. Longworth has been in England for the past six weeks during the settlement of the claims of the heirs and has just returned. Mr. Longworth was at one time a gas engine expert at the Cambell Printing Press Works, but resigned his position there to take another with the Holland Submarine Boat Company. In his letter Mr. Longworth states that he will prepare for a course in Cornell University, where he will study physics and mechanical engineering.

MISS WINN MARRIED.

Edward Baker the Groom—The Announcement Surprised Friends of the Couple.

Many friends were surprised today to learn of the marriage of Miss Deborah C. Winn, daughter of Captain and Mrs. W. W. Winn, of 112 Madison avenue, and Edward Baker, Jr., of Somerset street, which took place Sunday at Perth Amboy, where Mr. Baker has an uncle. The young couple are now enjoying a wedding trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker are both members of the First Baptist church and for some time past have been actively engaged in religious work at the East Third Street chapel, in the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society. Mr. Baker is employed at M. C. VanArsdale's shoe store as a salesman and both he and his wife are popular in a large circle of friends.

COLORED VETERAN FROZEN TO DEATH

He Was Found Sunday in His Hermit's Home in Westfield Several Days After.

CRIPPLED IN CIVIL WAR

HAD BEEN SUPPLIED BY OVERSEER OF THE POOR WITH COAL AND WOOD.

Charles Holmes His Name—Was Evidently Too Weak to Start a Fire—His Leg Shot Off While Holding a Horse During Battle.

Lying frozen to death on the floor of his miserable hovel in the woods in back of Westfield, Charles Holmes, an aged colored man, was found Sunday afternoon by Overseer of the Poor Hamilton and Elston Darby. Although the unfortunate man had been supplied by the overseer with coal and wood, none of it had been used. The old man was probably enfeebled by the intense cold, and with the added difficulty of getting about with only one leg, was evidently too weak to build the fire.

Holmes lived a hermit's life in the woods. He was known throughout the town as one of its characters. He appeared to have been dead several days, perhaps a week.

Holmes was a cripple, having lost a leg during the Civil War. While holding a physician's horse during a battle, a cannon ball shot off the member. Not having enlisted he could not receive a pension. He was provided with an artificial leg but of late had hobbled about with an artificial limb made of a piece of broomstick.

County Physician Westcott viewed the remains and gave a permit for burial. The remains were taken to Undertaker Conly's morgue.

TO OPEN UP DUNELLEN AVE.

COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO ACT IN THE MATTER HELD DISCUSSION.

J. Wesley Johnson, David O. Smalley and George M. Griffin, commissioners appointed by the Common Council to meet and treat with the property-owners regarding the opening of Dunellen avenue in the city to Myrtle avenue in the borough, met in the Common Council rooms Monday, and made a favorable start toward securing the project. There were about eight property-owners present who were concerned in the matter. No one of them expressed himself as against the improvement and there seems to be every indication that it will eventually be carried out. The commissioners adjourned to meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, when further business will be considered regarding the matter.

This improvement is desired by residents of both city and borough as it will give a desirable boulevard direct from Compton avenue through to the heart of the borough. One of the strong advantages will be that it will give persons a thoroughfare through which to drive apart from the trolley tracks. It will necessitate the building of a bridge across Green brook at a point south of the West End avenue bridge. It is proposed to make the avenue or street an attractive one and if it should be laid out it will open up a most desirable lot of property which will no doubt be used for building purposes in the near future.

LITERARY.

The American Boy for January contains five complete short stories, namely: "The Defender of Arcona," by William Murray Graydon—a New Mexican Indian story; "The Boy of Many Tongues," by the author of "Dickey Downey"—a school story; 'An Adventure With Wolves," by Tom Chapman—an animal story; "A Real Pirate," by George H. Coomer—a story of the sea; and "My First Steeple Chase," by T. E. Donaldson—an English story of sport. It also contains further chapters of Kirk Munroe's Sue story, "The Blue Dragon," and the editor's "Three Yankee Boys in Ireland."

The Chief February issue of The Metropolitan Magazine contains what is unquestionably the best story by Anthony Hope ever published. This story is entitled, "Mrs. Thistleton's Princess." It has all the charm of a new "Zenda" story, and is profusely illustrated by Cushman Parker. Even without this exceptional feature, the February issue is unusual in the quality and character of its contents. George Ade has again appeared in the field of literature, and the first of this series of new Ade articles to appear in The Metropolitan is Mr. Ade's appreciation of New York. E. H. Sothern, the actor, is another of the noted contributors to this issue.

GREAT VICTORY FOR LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Newark Basket Ball Players Defeated in a Hot Battle in the Plainfield Gymnasium.

WON BY A SINGLE GOAL

NEWARK LED AT END OF FIRST HALF AND PUT UP STIFF FIGHT.

Denton's Throwing of Goals a Feature—Jones Was Newark's Strongest Player—Score Was 27 to 25—Another Game February 6.

Plainfield won a splendid victory in basket ball Monday in one of the hottest games ever played in the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Newark Y. M. C. A., considered one of the foremost teams in the State, presented a formidable line-up and contested every bit of the going with a vigor that left the result in doubt until the last second of play. A single goal, two points, was the margin by which the local association won out, the final score being 27 to 25.

Newark led at the end of the first half, 15 to 12 and the outlook was dubious for Plainfield. The local athletes quickly got into their stride, however, and opened the second half with a dash that for a few minutes carried the visitors off their feet. They took the lead quickly and maintained it to the end.

Denton, Whitley and Neal succeeded Smith, Caboone and Neill in the second half for Plainfield and the infusion of new blood gave impetus to the whole team. Denton made astonishing plays, scoring seemingly impossible shots for baskets from all positions on the floor. Jones played a strong game for Newark. The feature of the first half was his one-handed throw for a basket the entire length of the floor. Long at forward, proved an almost equally powerful player for the visitors. The team work on both sides was excellent.

Enthusiasm ran high throughout the game and especially in the latter part of the second half when a single score was likely to turn the tide. The summary:

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. — Hand, Smith and Denton, forwards; Caboone and Whitley, centre; Seull, Neal and Heinecke, guards. Newark Y. M. C. A. — Stager and Long, forwards; Jones, centre; Pollard and Dalrymple, guards. Score, Plainfield 27, Newark 25. Goals from the floor, Hand 3, Smith, Caboone, Denton 4, Whitley 2, Heinecke, Stager 2, Jones 3, Long, Dalrymple 2. Goals from fouls, Heinecke 2, Denton, Jones.

Referee, C. B. Morse. Umpire, Myers, of Newark. Timers, Doane and Collin. Scorer, Weintraub. Time, 20-min. periods.

The teams will meet again at Newark February 6.

Between the halves of the game a close and well played hockey game proved an attraction. The opposing teams were composed of Y. M. C. A men captained respectively by Bentliff and Schring, each team having previously won a game. Bentliff's men captured the rubber 10 to 9.

FIREMEN WILL NOT RESIGN

BOROUGH VOLUNTEERS TO SERVE UNTIL PAID DEPARTMENT IS IN POWER.

Warren Engine Company met in special session Monday for the purpose of transacting important business. Resolutions were unanimously adopted by the members of the company, contradicting the reports that the borough firemen are to resign their positions as firemen before the paid department goes into commission.

In answer to a question as to whether anything was brought up about the matter of forming an Exempt Firemen's Association in the borough, several members of the department said this morning that nothing had been done. No information was given out as to the nature of the business transacted. It is stated by one member who was present that the forming of the fire companies was discussed informally. Bert Bodine, former Chief Fairchild and Charles Keller were appointed a press committee.

—Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, is among the latest of the local clergy to have a telephone installed in his home.

EVENING OF SCOTTISH SONG

MISS AMY MURRAY GAVE DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT AT PARK CLUB.

Under the auspices of the entertainment committee of the Park Club an evening of Scottish song was given Monday by Miss Amy Murray before more than two hundred people. Miss Murray sang the songs and described them charmingly. She was accompanied on the piano by Charles Edmund Wark, of New York.

The entertainment was unique and a pleasure in every way. Miss Murray opened her programme with the old Scottish song written by Dr. James Bethune, in 1830, entitled "O Sing to me the Auld Scots Sangs" and "Annie Laurie" by Douglas of Fingland. Sir Walter Scott's "Bonnie Dundee" was also sung. These were rendered in the true Gaelic tongue. "Wha'll be King but Charlie," "Hey Johnnie Cope" and the "Skye Boat Song" with Robert Louis Stevenson's words; all songs of the Jacobite Revolution, were rendered in a sympathetic manner.

"Bey, the Bonnie Briest-Knots" a traditional selection and "Bonnie Doon" by Robert Burns, were exceptionally well rendered. "When the Kye Comes Hame" from James Hogg, in the "Estrick Shepherd" also received unusual applause.

"Taladh," and "Mo Mhairi Bhan," two old Hebridean songs, were sung in the Gaelic with accompaniment upon the ancient celtic harp. These were the real treats of the evening and Miss Murray was loudly encored. The programme closed with an Old Folks Song, entitled, "The Barrin' o' the Door." Some of the songs were produced in costume, the most cleverly rendered being the imitation of the fisher woman.

In charge of the arrangements was the entertainment committee of the club which is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. George Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Heely, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McGee and Everett Murray.

AMUSEMENTS.

An event of more than usual importance will be the revival, at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, of "The Brixton Burglary," with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sidney heading the cast. Mr. Sidney, the author of this clever comedy, will make his first appearance in this country in some time, in the part of Septimus Green, while Mr. Al. Roberts, son of R. A. Roberts, the well known actor, will assume the role of Pontifex, one of the best drawn low comedy characters in the play catalogue.

Mme. Adelaide Herrmann, in her novel magical seance, "A Dream of the Orient," heads the interesting bill at Proctor's Newark Theatre next week. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins D. Fisher share the stella honors in the presentation of Ezra Kendall's clever comedy sketch, "The Half-way House" Hoey and Lee, Hebrew impersonators and parodists; Lotta Gladstone, a clever delineator of rural types; James B. Donovan, "The Comic King of Ireland;" Burnett and Wyerson, in a singing and dancing sketch; the Four Lukens, in a contesting act of merit, and the Kalatechnoscope, completes the entertainment. The latter will present a special novelty, "The Damnation of Faust."

"The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre, New York, continues in office despite the change in the city administration. He is a holdover, as it were, and likely to remain in possession of his place of unbounded popularity for a long time to come. George Ade's rural comedy, with its strong love story, droll characters, intensely laughable situations and continuously sparkling dialogue, has in fact captured public approbation far more firmly than any other example of play writing this season. At night the playhouse is crowded with persons more mature but not more sedate than those of the afternoons, for "The County Chairman" banishes solemnity from the moment the curtain goes up.

"Whoop Dee-Doo" and "Waffles," with the Weber & Fields all-star cast, continues to create merriment at the comedians' Music Hall. Many changes have been made in the stage pictures and the dual entertainment has altogether been subjected to the renewing process which characterizes the Weber & Fields' shows. The new year will be celebrated by Miss Lillian Russell with a new set of gorgeous gowns. Weber & Fields will have a new set of resolutions to distort the English language more than ever. Louis Mann is to have a new pair of fawns for the "chicken" scene. Peter F. Dailey is to have a new song and John T. Kelly a new stage suit of more exaggerated pattern. Evie Stetson will introduce her "show" girls with a new verse of song and, in short, the Weberfield performance will be, as ever, up to the times.

—The North Plainfield Board of Education will hold its regular meeting Monday night.

ALLEGED FORGER IN ROMANTIC LOVE AFFAIR

Theo. Bartz, Accused of Passing Worthless Check Here, Was Loved by Rahway Girl.

SHE SAYS HE'S INNOCENT

LOVE LETTERS BRIMMING WITH ENDEARMENTS WERE FOUND ON HIM.

Bartz Made Pathetic Appeal to Chief Kiely Against the Disgrace of Arrest—Charge of Larceny Entered Against Him in Rahway.

A romantic love story surrounds the case of Theodore Bartz, who is held to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of forgery, preferred by Harry Werner, of this city.

For some time past Bartz has been keeping company with a young girl working in Rahway, whose home is in Elizabeth, and when he was arrested Thursday night a number of letters written to Bartz by the young woman were found in his possession. The letters were brimming over with endearments.

On hearing that her sweetheart had been arrested the young woman hastened to police headquarters and did her utmost to have the news of his arrest kept out of the papers.

Notwithstanding the positive proof presented of Bartz's guilt, she still believes him innocent.

Bartz was arrested Thursday evening last, in Rahway, on the charge of entering the office of his former employer, Captain William H. Cloke, and stealing therefrom a check for $6 75, a gold fountain pen and a number of postage stamps. He was re-arrested Sunday afternoon and taken to this city to answer to the charge of passing a forged check.

Chief of Police Kiely having, in the Elizabeth Journal of Friday last, read the story of Bartz's arrested in Rahway, became convinced that Bartz was the man who, during the holidays, visited Plainfield and succeeded in cashing a check for $26, made payable on the Rahway bank to the order of Elmer Oliver, dealer in coal and mason materials in Rahway. Bartz cashed the check in Werner's clothing store, and receiving a check in change, passed that in turn at James Blair's men's furnishings store.

Chief Kiely, on visiting Rahway Saturday, was accompanied by the young man who sold Bartz the clothing, for which he had fraudulently obtained it. The young man who had sold Bartz the coat identified it as well as the man himself.

Bartz, not abashed, declared the accusation false. A few minutes later, however, he wilted and confessed all. When asked how he came in possession of the $26 check, he swore that it was given him by some man in East Rahway. Who the man was, however, he was unable to say.

When Chief Kiely proceeded to place handcuffs on Bartz previous to starting with him to this city, Bartz begged him not to disgrace him.

The reply he received was, "Don't talk about disgracing you, you've done that yourself, and, as for trusting you, I wouldn't trust you an inch."

When arrested Thursday last on complaint of Captain Cloke, Bartz succeeded in getting out on bail, August Ritter, of Clark township, becoming his surety in the sum of $500.

John McGinley, of Terrill road, is seriously ill.

Miss Beekman, of Martinsville, has returned home after a visit with her sister, Mrs. Frank Cleaves, of West Front street.

N. P. FIRE ORDINANCE BEFORE THE COUNCIL

Borough Fathers Pass on First Reading Measure to Change Department to Paid System.

THE CHANGES PROPOSED

MODELED AFTER ORDINANCE IN FORCE IN THIS CITY.

Two Men to be Constantly on Duty at Engine House — Some Call Men—Half of Whom Will be Provided for West End Hose House.

Warren Engine Company and the West End Hose Company, of North Plainfield, were well represented at an adjourned session of the borough Common Council, last night, to listen to the death knell of the volunteer fire department. Councilman Northrup occupied the chair in the absence of Mayor Smalley who is ill. Being an adjourned meeting the regular routine of business was dispensed with and the fire department ordinance was read by the clerk. The ordinance was prepared by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed.

The new ordinance is quite similar to that which has proved so successful in this city and while there is necessarily a large number of sections to provide for the various contingencies which may arise, yet the practical operation under the new ordinance will be simple. The ordinance contemplates that the officers of the department shall consists of a Chief, and also one captain to each company. These may be filled by citizens who are not supposed to devote their whole time to the duties of the office, but who shall receive salaries similar to those now paid to the volunteer officers.

It also contemplates the employment of two or possibly three men whose entire time shall be devoted to fire duty and who shall sleep in the engine house. It is intended that at least one of these men shall be in the house at all times, day and night, to answer all alarms of fire, whether sent in by telephone or otherwise. One of these men will act as lieutenant of the main company and as such shall be in charge of the house and apparatus in the absence of superior officers. These regular men will be paid under the ordinance at the rate of $40 a month. If there are two men the salaries for their services will amount to $80 a month.

The remainder of the department is to be made up of call men who are to be located in different parts of the borough and will respond to alarms of fire in their district. They are not to *exceed ten in number for each com*pany and the salary of each will be $10 a year. The disbandment of both volunteer systems is also provided for in the ordinance and in their stead the establishment of Hose Company No. 1, which will have its headquarters in the present house of Warren Engine Company until the new structure is completed and Hose Company No. 2, which will supplant the West End Hose Company.

According to the ordinance, Hose Company No. 2 will be manned en*tirely by call men.* The members of this company will reside in that locality and no regular men need be kept in that house unless the Council see fit to station one there. The engineer of the steamer may be one of the call men or one of those regularly employed, as the Council may see fit.

The Board of Engineers will consist of the chief and the captains and lieutenants. They are to be borough citizens and are not to be removed from office for political reasons. The members of the department must pass a physical and mental examination and must sign an agreement to obey the rules of the company and the ordinances of the borough. The salaries of the firemen will be arranged according to the length of service. In the first class, those who have been in the department for five years, the men will receive $60 a month. The other salaries shall range from $55 to $40, according to the length of service. If any fireman refuses to pay any debts for personal bills, or assigns his wages, he will be dismissed, and no fireman will be allowed to take part in politics. Canvassing for subscriptions for balls, dances, fairs and other events of the kind, is prohibited. The borough will take possession of the property it owns at the West End Hose Company. The ordinance will take effect in March, 1904.

The ordinance passed its second reading.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed said last night: "The result should be a compact, well organized, efficient department, with men on duty day and night in the engine house, ready to answer instantly any alarm, whether rung in from a box or by telephone, and the expense need not be greatly in excess of the present appropriations. And that expense will be shared equally by all taxpayers, in proportion to their taxable property.

"The ordinance prohibits soliciting subscriptions and the like, by means of which volunteer companies frequently collect large sums of money from a comparatively few.

"The question of purchasing horses, new truck and apparatus, is not at all dependent upon the establishment of a paid department. It is generally conceded that a new truck, new hose and some other new apparatus are necessary in any event, and horses are necessary or unnecessary without regard to whether the department be volunteer or paid."

Dr. D. C. Adams, upon the recommendation of the Mayor, was reappointed a member of the Board of Health.

A serious condition confronts the people of North Plainfield since the ordinance was introduced in the Council last night, substituting a paid fire department for the volunteer system, and if the statement of some of the firemen is true, and the threat they make is carried out, the property interests in the borough will be seriously jeopardized.

Now that the paid system seems an assured fact, it is said that many of the volunteers threaten to resign before the time for the paid department to go into commission arrives. Such action would leave the borough in a bad plight in case of fire.

Just how many will carry out this threat cannot be learned. It was ascertained this morning that the majority of the members are opposed to such action and inclined to discredit the story. Two borough firemen were seen last night, however, and declared that the introduction of the new system showed that the volunteer firemen's services were not appreciated and that for them to work without receiving credit would be foolish.

A special meeting of Warren Engine Company will be called Monday night, and at that time the future of the company will be discussed and possible resignations considered.

Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., who has championed the firemen's cause during the heated debates in the Council, when the paid department was talked of, was absent last night.

ST. JOHN TO LEAVE "TIMES"

FOUNDER AND EDITOR OF ELIZABETH'S DEMOCRATIC PAPER TO QUIT FEB. 1.

It is announced that the half interest in the Elizabeth Evening and Sunday Times which was bought by Nelson E. Barton, of Binghamton, N. Y., from William W. St. John, will be as*sumed by Mr. Barton, February 1.*

For several years Mr. Barton was circulation manager of the Binghamton Republican and also conducted the Afton, (N. Y.) Enterprise, a weekly newspaper.

The other interest in the Evening and Sunday Times is held by John Moody, of Cranford. Mr. St. John says that he had no plans just now for the future. He intended to take a long vacation and recuperate his health, which had become considerably run down. Mr. St. John was the founder and editor of The Times and through his persevering work the paper has grown to occupy its present position. He was secretary and treasurer of The Evening Times Publishing Company. He did not care to say for publication how much he got for interest in the plant.

EXPLAIN TAX LAW.

State Board Fixes Dates for Meetings With Union and Somerset Boards.

§ The State Board of Taxation will meet the Union County assessors at Elizabeth on Thursday, March 10, and the Somerset County assessors at Somerville on Friday, April 22. This cir*cular has been sent to the assessors of* the two counties: "The revised tax act, which went into effect December 20, 1903, has made a number of changes in the time and manner of assessing and collecting taxes in New Jersey. It is the duty of the State Board of Taxation, under the law, to investigate the methods used by the local assessors in assessing real and personal property, and to furnish them with such information as will assist them in the discharge of their official duties."

Improvement in Party Wires.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is supplanting all party line telephones with what is *known as the selective system instru*ment. The change simplifies and makes work easier for the telephone operator. Where before she was obliged to give a certain number of rings for a party she now only gives one ring and no other party on the line is troubled with the ringing of the bell.

Charles E. Vail, Park avenue jeweler, is able to be out again, having recovered from a recent severe illness.

CHURCH SOCIETY'S BIG SALE

CAKES AND CANDIES RETAILED BY FIRST BAPTIST ORGANIZATION.

Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, a successful cake and candy sale was held Friday afternoon at the home of Miss Florence Serrell, of Myrtle avenue. The attendance was large and the patronage liberal, all the cakes and the candy being disposed of at good prices. As yet the exact amount realized as profit is not known, but a goodly sum will be placed in the treasury for mission purposes.

The guests were received by Miss Ada Fountain, president of the society, and Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Florence Serrell, Mrs. F. W. Jones and Miss Hattie French. The decorations were attractive, red being the prevailing color.

In the dining room Miss Edith Cairns poured tea and Miss Bessie Wilson poured chocolate. They were assisted by Miss Bessie TenEyck and Miss Helen Robins. At the cake table Mrs. R. W. Barnes was in charge and Miss Pauline Denton and Miss Bessie Flanders assisted. Mrs. W. B. Vail presided at the candy table, assisted by Miss Mae Batchelor.

Aside from the sale the social features were greatly enjoyed by all and the affair was not only one of profit, but socially a great success.

BURIED AT HER OLD HOME

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER MRS. ELIZABETH SMALLEY AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Smalley, of Buffalo, N. Y., who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cora Loper, at Cleveland, O., Monday, were held in the Scotch Plains Baptist church Friday afternoon. A touching tribute to the departed was the large attendance of old friends who had known Mrs. Smalley during her residence here, nearly twenty years ago. At that time both she and her husband, the late L. H. E. Smalley, who preminently worked in the First Baptist church of Newark. Rev. G. M. Shott, pastor of the church, had charge of the services yesterday, taking for his text "The Shortness of Life." A comparison was drawn to the weaver's shuttle, which soon runs out. During his remarks he spoke of the departed as one who had only several earthly ties to go on before to the reward of the faithful. Interment was made in the family plot in the cemetery adjoining the church. The dead woman is survived by two daughters, one at Cleveland and another at Buffalo.

FIGHT OVER THE BIRD WILL

SURROGATE IN NEW YORK RESERVES DECISION—BEING TWO TESTAMENTS.

The contest over the estate of William Bird, who died at Dunellen on December 30, leaving an estate valued as a quarter of a million dollars, came up in New York, Wednesday, when one of the wills left by Mr. Bird was offered for probate. The other will is on file at the Surrogate's office in New Brunswick and the hearing on it has been set down for Feb. 18.

Major Harrison Kerr Bird, military secretary to Governor Odell, whose residence is given as New York, filed a will in New York, executed by his father on April 4 last, by which he is appointed sole executive This will leaves the son all his property.

Counsel to Mr. Bird, of Larchmont, and Joseph Bird, of Dunellen, both *object to the probate of this will, say*ing that it is not the last will, and was obtained by fraud and undue influence on the part of Harrison K. Bird or someone else. They contend that a will filed in New Brunswick, making a more general contribution of the estate, is the valid testament. Surrogate Fitzgerald, who heard the case, reserved decision on the point of the priority of the wills.

TRINITY'S MEN TO ORGANIZE

ASSOCIATION TO BE FORMED BY MEMBERS OF REFORMED CHURCH.

It having been definitely decided to form a Men's Association at Trinity Reformed church, the committee in charge of the preliminary plans, composed of E. F. Sheppard, F. E. Smith and A. E. Willets, Jan. 13, at a meeting of the Consistory of the church, submitted by-laws for the organization and they were adopted. The committee was instructed to issue invitations for a meeting of the men of the congregation at which time the objects and benefits of the association will be presented and there will be an address by the pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, to be followed by an enrollment of members. The success of the movement seems assured judging by the enthusiasm manifested on the part of those in charge of it.

C. F. A. Organized.

A Children's Protective Alliance has been organized in Newark for purposes of co-operation with officials and others interested in the enforcement of the State child labor law. Among the members of the alliance is Henry M. Maxson, president of the Organized Aid Association and superintendent of schools of this city.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

What the Public Library is circulating.

Fiction here, as in every public library leads, though with the comparatively low percentage of 499, or including the juvenile fiction 64 plus. Those to whom this seems large may find comfort in the fact that library users are taking less fiction now than ten years ago by 6 per cent. Quality as well as quantity should also be considered. If the works of authors like Harris, and Roe show but little falling off, those of George Eliot, Trollope, Jane Austen, Thackeray and Balzac increase in popularity, while of present day writers the demand is steady for Howells, Besant, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Meredith, Aldrich, Crawford, Parker, Page, Conan Doyle and Mrs. Deland.

Next fiction in favor is the department of literature. Here collections of prose and poetry lead, but following these in demand, although with no one to often hears it stated that people no longer read essays, are the English essayists, those chiefly read being Stevenson, Matthew Arnold, Macaulay, Carlyle, Addison and Bacon. American essayists come next, the most read being Emerson, though with the reign of the Nature boom, Thoreau, Burroughs and Torrey have a large following. British poets and dramatists are next in demand, nearly twice as much English as American poetry being read. The poets and dramatists most read are Shakespeare, Sheridan, the Brownings, Tennyson, Shelley, Matthew Arnold, Chaucer, Spenser, Milton, Scott, Kipling, Longfellow, Poe and Bryant.

Biography comes next in interest. While this may be partly accounted for by the fact that it is easy reading, records would seem to indicate that it is more read for the side lights *thus obtained upon a period or sub*ject, or, for inspiration. Of the former class are the much read Morley's Gladstone, Boswell's Johnson and the Nicolay-Hay Lincoln, while of the latter a good example would be Sabatsier's St. Francis of Assisi.

Following biography is the department of travel, the most popular division being general travels, such as Stoddard's lectures. The demand for books on our own country comes next, greatly exceeding that for works on any other country. England is next in popularity, closely followed by Japan and China. Apart from their large use by the general reader, large demands are made upon this department by the modern methods of teaching geography, which calls for abundance of supplementary matter to aid in deepening the impression made by the lesson.

Next in favor are historical books. Here as in travel, this country is by far the most read about, and the experience of this Library is the common one, that much of this comes from children of foreign-born parents, a hopeful sign. Of United States histories one-tenth read are the present tense, relate to the Civil War period, a seemingly large proportion. Again as in travel, England is next in favor, then general histories of Europe, and next Ancient history.

Scientific books come next, with Natural history books ahead. Among these are classed the delightful books of Seton, Long and Roberts, which continue to be read notwithstanding the recent dogmatic utterances of Mr. Burroughs concerning them. Next to animals, plants follow. The interest in these subjects being evidently greatly stimulated by the emphasis placed upon Nature study. That mathematics should come next is a fact for which the general reader is not accountable, as practically all these books are text-books, and are evidently used for the most serious study. At the present time, of all the sciences, geology is least in demand.

That general periodicals come next is the result of the successful experiment of circulating current numbers of the popular magazines.

Of the main divisions fine arts is next. Books of amusements, classed here are most used, but of fine arts proper, those on design, art industries and beautifying the home lead. The wide circulation of books of this character cannot fail to have its effect in the formation of higher standards of taste. The popularisation by good and inexpensive reprints of the masterpieces of great artists has largely affected the demand for popular art books.

Following fine arts in popularity are the books on useful arts, in which recent figures show nearly one fourth of the entire total to have been on engineering, showing that the library's notably fine collection on civil, mechanical and electrical engineering is appreciated. Following are general works on useful arts, domestic science and the building trades.

Sociology is next in order. Here, if folklore is excluded, the largest demand is for books on education, a fact which must have its share in accounting for the excellence of our public school system. Following this is the literature of political economy and *the political institutions of this coun*try. The growing interest in "how the other half lives" is reflected in the demand for such books as those of Riis, Willard and VanVorst. As yet comparatively few care for books which aim to do more than to give interesting description of existing conditions.

§ Religion comes next, and here the books most read are those relating to the Bible, then those on religious history. Books on the life of Christ, and those of a homiletic or devotional character are much read. Of religious writers, the author most continuously read is Phillips Brooks.

Next religion, though far below it in demand is philosophy. Its division of psychology, especially that phase of it dealing with child study, is most read. This demand is largely from teachers. The author most popular is James. That ethics comes next in favor is a good sign.

Philology tempts but few, its percentage of the whole being but 002.

JAMES A. ANDERSON BURIED

SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS IN ST. MARY'S ATTENDED BY FRATERNAL ORDERS.

Delegations from the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Catholic Benevolent Legion and the Ancient Order of Hibernians attended the funeral last Thursday morning of James A. Anderson, who was found dead at his home on West Third street Monday. Solemn requiem mass was celebrated in St. Mary's church. Rev. Father Delehanty was the celebrant, and was assisted by Rev. Father Egan and Rev. Father Westman. Beautiful floral set pieces were contributed by each of the orders with which he had been associated. The pall bearers were Patrick Nugent and Michael Regan, of the C. B. L., Dennis Regan and John Mooney, of the A. O. U. W., and Daniel Sullivan and James Fitzpatrick, of the A. O. H. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

OFFICIAL SCORES SHOW CO. K WINS

Sergeant A. I. Littell, of Local Company, Receives Prize as Best Marksman in Company.

DESCRIPTION OF MEDALS

ONLY CLOSE RIVAL IN THE REGIMENT IS CO. L, OF PRINCETON.

Announcement of Results Made by Col. Collins at Trenton—Official Results Prove Plainfielders Superiority—The Scores.

Lieutenant J. M. Lewis, of Company K, has issued the official results of the summer shooting tournament at Sea Girt last summer. They were announced at the quarterly meeting of Board of Officers at Trenton Jan. 13, by Colonel Collins. The comparative standing of the companies are given, showing Company K, of this city, well in the lead.

The experts, sharpshooters, marksmen and first class men are these: Field officers and staff, 6, 0, 3, 2; music and band, 0, 0, 0, 0; Company A, 0, 0, 1, 1; Company B, 0, 0, 12, 0; Company C, 0, 0, 9, 1; Company D, 0, 0, 0, 3; Company E, 0, 0, 0, 2; Company F, 0, 0, 4, 3; Company G, 0, 0, 4, 3; Company H, 1, 0, 4, 3; Company I, 0, 0, 3, 2; Company K, 21, 2, 17, 6; Company L, 4, 1, 1 3, 3; Company M, 1, 1, 11, 1.

These are the totals: Experts, 15; sharpshooters, 4; marksmen, 62; first class, 31.

Colonel Collins announced that Company K won the regimental trophy. The style has not yet been decided upon although it is probably it will be a cup.

In the competition started by the Inspector of Rifle Practice the high man receives the medal. Sergeant A. I. Littell, of the local company, wins the prize with a score of 129 out of a possible 150 points on two, three and five hundred yard ranges. Sergeant Spencer, of Company M, of Somerville, wins the second prize with a score of 126 out of the same possible total, and Corporal Williams, of Company L, of Princeton, wins the third prize with a total of 124 points.

The marksmen's medal is of bronze with a bronze bar on which is the number of years in which the bearer had qualified and on it is the word "Marksman." The sharpshooters have a silver bar added on which is the name of their rank and the experts have a gold bar with the word "Expert" engraved upon it. The experts in Company K are Captain William B. Martin and Private Terhune and the sharpshooters are Sergeant A. I. Littell and Captain Phillips.

Lieutenant Lewis calls the particular attention of the members of his company to the figures given above, as they show interesting comparisons with those records of other years.

ABOUT THE MAN-HOLE COVERS

LOT FURNISHED ON CONTRACT CONDEMNED AND ANOTHER ORDERED.

Man hole covers, ordered some time ago from James Mabery & Son, of Passaic, and which were recently received here, have been found to be of faulty construction and a new contract has had to be let out to the Pond Machine Tool Company which concern has recently completed the work at the expense of the Passaic concern. The fault in the ones sent from Passaic is that they were below the grade called for in the specifications. They are too light and therefore could not stand the heavy travel. A new pattern of casting was made. The old covers have been stored away and will be kept awaiting the company's orders. About thirty-five covers were put in place. The specifications called for a weight of 150 pounds apiece.

MAYOR JENKINS' GIFT.

Presents His Salary as City Official to Children's Home.

Mayor O. L. Jenkins, in accordance with his custom in former years, has presented the Plainfield Children's Home Association with a check for $100, one-half of his yearly salary. The association acknowledges the receipt of the money and wishes to express its appreciation for the same.

Mrs. Dennis Regan, of Plainfield, has returned from a visit with her parents at High Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Jackson, of Milltown, N. J., are the guest of friends in this city.

HASN'T BEEN SEEN SINCE CHRISTMAS

Unaccountable Disappearance of Thomas J. Donahue, a Local Insurance Man.

DEATH OR INSANITY?

LEFT PLAINFIELD DECEMBER 24, TO VISIT NEW YORK FRIENDS.

No Trace of Him in New York Hospitals or Morgues—Had Been Sick for Some Time—Employed by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

By his unaccountable disappearance for three weeks, Thomas J. Donahue, an insurance man of this city, has caused much worriment among his friends who think that he has either been dealt with foully or has lost his mind and is wandering aimlessly about the country. Donahue is an insurance agent and has been in the employ of the local branch of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company since November 1902, coming here from Brooklyn. He lived at the Belmont Hotel on North avenue. His employer, Joseph W. Graham, the company's superintendent, told the story of his disappearance to a Daily Press representative this morning.

On December 24, Donahue announced to his friends that he intended going to New York city to visit friends over Christmas Day. That he did this is known, for it has been learned that he called at the home of his former landlady at 231 West 23d street on Thursday afternoon. What happened to him thereafter is swallowed up in mystery. Not the slightest trace of him has been obtainable, from the time he made his call on the day before Christmas.

Donahue had been in ill health for some months before his disappearance, though, for the three weeks directly preceding, his condition had been somewhat improved. The New York police have been notified of his disappearance and several of the city's hospitals and the morgues have been visited without the discovery of any clue. It is Mr. Graham's theory that the man is dead or has lost his mind, for otherwise, he would certainly have notified Mr. Graham of the reason for his absence. The superintendent was practically the only friend Donahue is known to have had in Plainfield.

Donahue was of a somewhat morose disposition and made few friends. He was forty-seven to forty-eight years old, though appearing older. He was slightly built, weighing probably 140 pounds. His hair was white, his moustache red turning gray.

No possible reason for his disappearance can be conceived. He was absolutely correct and up-to-date in his accounts. He had no immediate family and no relatives whatever so far as known beyond a brother living somewhere in the vicinity of Boston, Mass. It is not thought that he carried a large sum of money when he disappeared. All of his personal belongings he left at the Belmont Hotel where they still await his return.

MFG. CONCERN TO LEAVE.

Wallace M. Brown, Clothing Maker, to Remove His Plant to New York City.

Wallace M. Brown, who has been engaged in the manufacture of clothing on West Front street, will, on February 1, transfer his factory to Grand and Wooster streets, New York. Mr. Brown has informed his men here that they may continue in his employment at the new place. This means that Plainfield will not only loose a prominent business man and his strong concern but some of its industrious citizens who help the city in many ways.

TRIBUTE TO MR. SCHEPFLIN.

Middlesex Bowling Club to Present a Memorial Volume to His Family.

A tribute in memory of Christian Schepflin, late president of the Middlesex Bowling Green Club, will be arranged by the club and will consist of his photograph, a brief history of the club, its charter and present members, and the resolutions adopted by the club in regard to his life and character. The committee from the club appointed to draw up the memorial consists of H. B. Willis, R. M. Pettit and T. E. Schenck.

To be Married in March.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Nettie Leichtentritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mayer Leichtentritt, of West Front street, to Nathan Samuels, of Brooklyn. The wedding will take place Tuesday, March 1.

Dinner to Employees.

A dinner was served Thursday night at the Potter Press Works to the officers of the company. The object of holding the dinner could not be learned.

ADVANTAGES OF PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT

Volunteer System in the Borough Said to be More Expensive in the Long Run.

A CITIZEN'S ARGUMENT

A NEW APPARATUS NEEDED IN ANY EVENT.

West End Would be a Call Company Horses Not Required at Present —Salaries to be Paid the Regular Firemen.

It has been stated by advocates of a volunteer fire department in North Plainfield that a paid system will be an expensive luxury and that for that reason many of the tax payers are in favor of the continuation of the present fire fighting force. That a paid department will not be any more expensive than the present plan is the claim made by an official of the borough yesterday. The question of cost has been fully considered and the North Plainfield Council is of the opinion that a paid fire department would be cheaper than the present volunteer system.

"When it is considered," said the official in question, "that many tax payers are called upon each year by the volunteer firemen for subscriptions to balls, fairs, bazaars and parades, and the loss of property occasioned by lack of proper dicipline at fires, a paid system properly officered would in the long run be cheaper."

"Many have advanced the argument," said he, "that if a paid system is secured for the borough, a new equipment would be necessary. This does not stand to reason. It is generally admitted that outside of the West End Company's apparatus new apparatus is sorely needed and it is only a question of time when new wagons and, perhaps, a new engine will have to be secured. These would have to be gotten even if the volunteer system is continued. A new truck will have to be secured at some later date, but this too would have to be purchased whether a paid department was inocorporated or not."

At present the Chief of the fire department in North Plainfield gets a salary of $150, the electrician $—, and the janitors receive small compensations. Continuing the boroughite said: "A chief of the paid department could be secured at small additional cost, which with his position of building inspector, and fire marshal would give him a good salary. It would not be necessary for him to devote all his time to the fire department. In Warren Engine Company there would practically be two regular men on duty at all hours. One man being in the engine house during the day time and one at night. Each of these could be secured at a cost of $40 a month."

"The West End Company would be made a call company, the Council buying its apparatus. It would be in charge of call men exclusively and arrangements will probably be made to have it respond to all fires within a certain district, probably that prescribed by the new fire ordinance."

"The matter of horses also comes up for discussion. The system followed will probably be that in use at present in which horses are rented; the first team arriving at the house, taking out the apparatus. This would be cheaper than buying horses. It is stated that as soon as the Warren Engine Company was located in the new quarters, it was to have applied for a team of horses, but the rental system appeals more to the economic councilmen as being the cheaper."

If the New Amsterdam and New Lyceum theatres which have recently been erected in New York, two important public buildings, to which the architects, Messrs. Herts & Tallant, have tried to substitute for the earnest routine a certain originality of conception and treatment; they have tried to give their individual powers of designer a freer expression than has been customary. This individuality of expression, exhibited in absolute freedom in the New Amsterdam Theatre, under self-imposed freedom in the New Lyceum, is evident in all the work of this firm. They did not, however, permit themselves such complete liberty of expression until they had schooled themselves to avoid the excesses of their qualities, first by as good an art education as the world affords, and second by the execution of several important buildings designed along the standard architectural lines.—The Architectural Record Magazine.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 24: "If Christ Should Come to Our Town."—John iv, 28-30; 39-42.

Has He not come? Is He not ever coming? He may often be unrecognized, for He must be sought to be known. He is at Jacob's well, where our ancestors found refreshment. You will need to go there if you would see Him.

If He should come!

His intimate friends might wonder at what He would do. While they are busy getting dinner and fixing things He might refuse to eat and might do things contrary to all their notions of propriety. It would be embarrassing. He would companion with people to whom we would not dare be seen to speak. While we were thinking of our physical comfort He would be setting before some starved life the rich things of His Father's providing and arousing appetite in them and feeding the new hunger.

If He should come!

He would tell her all she did.

Not all the details and incidents of the long course of wrongdoing. That would be worse than waste of time. He would show her what it all meant in waste of life when He set before her in clear light all the beauty and charm of the better way. He would show her the abhorrence of the evil until her soul would recoil, and all this by the opening of the vision of God's purity. When she caught the glimpse of His glory and true worship in spirit and truth she saw what she had done. She stands before what it meant. The well was deep, deeper than that into whose depths she had so often lowered her earthen pitcher for filling. He knew the "abyssmal depths of personality." And He had wherewith to draw from them something better than "sore despair."

He knew the hidden springs long choked by worldliness and lust and was able to touch them until they should pour out the waters of everlasting life. Where she before was hopelessly bad He had found possibilities of purity and started into action the powers of goodness.

If He should come!

He would set feet and tongues in motion.

She forgot her usual work, the time of day, the water pitcher and all the old mode of life and went into the city to find her friends. "Come and see a man who told me what I have been doing!" They knew understood all along what her life meant and knew she was blind. Something has happened surely if a man has told her what she did. "Can this be the Christ?" she asks. "Come and see Him!" Can it be any but the Christ who could so change her? Surely they will go. Work, dinner, everything is left, and they go. Feet and tongues are active. And these are Samaritans, sinners, the defiled and ungodly!

What can the disciples say or do? Defilement is imminent if this crowd presses around the Master, and is not dinner ready and the time past for eating and we all tired and hungry? And here comes that woman also! Master, tell her! They speak out, but fail to gain their purpose. He will talk with her and the people whom she brings. And they believe Him to be the Christ, not because of what He told her, but they have heard Him themselves.

Do you like Him, my child come?

Why would you do if He should come?

Why not do it now and see if He has not been coming and is here?

"In His Name."

We must pray "in His name." As the ambassador speaks in the name of the queen and country, as the tax collector appeals in the name of the authorities, both deriving from their identification with their superiors in authority they could not otherwise exercise, so our words become weighted with a great importance when we can say to our Father: "We are so one with Jesus that we are asking in and through us. These words are His. These desires His, these objects those on which His heart is set. We have His sanction and authority to use His name." When we ask a favor in the name of brother, that other is the petitioner through us. So when we approach God in the name of Jesus it is not enough to append His sacred name as a formula, but we must see to it that Jesus is pleading in us, asking through our lips, as He is asking though He sits on the heart of the sapphire throne.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

The Truest and Highest.

Let us have the courage to live by the truest and highest revealed to us. The life of our best hours and experiences is our true life. Not to strive to make these best hours the standard by which we daily live; to be disloyal to that which we see and worship and love in the most exalted and most radiant moments of our existence; to make no effort to preserve and perpetuate the glory of this occasional spiritual life is to resist and quench the spirit.—Churchman.

Preceding the Light.

It is important to wait the moment of God to correct others. We may see real faults, but the person may not be in a state to profit by being told the faults. It is not wise to give more than one can receive. This is what I call preceding the light—the light shines so far in advance of the person that it does not benefit him. Our Lord said to His apostles, "I have many things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now."—Mme. Guyon.

Thankfulness.

Thankfulness is a most becoming grace. Its spirit adorns all acceptable worship. Most people have at least a hundred reasons for being thankful for one for being sad and melancholy.—Religious Telescope.

OWNED BY THE PEOPLE.

American Railways Divide Two-Thirds of Earnings with People Directly Interested.

"In one way and another the people of the United States own the railways of the United States, and something like 2,000,000 persons, through wages, interest and dividends, divide two-thirds of their gross earnings of $1,726,280,267 (1901-02) among them, and the other third goes for fuel, taxes, supplies and equipment." This statement, says the Railway World, Slason Thompson, [illegible] one of the bureaus of the General Managers' association, with headquarters in Chicago, was led to make as a result of replies to the question: "Are there 1,000,000 owners of railway securities in the United States?" received from 29 of the leading railway companies of the country. These roads represent 107,640 miles out of the 202,471 of single-track mileage in the United States. They gave the total number of stockholders on their books as 191,287.

"This is pretty nearly equal to two stockholders of every mile of railway," says Mr. Thompson. "The ratio on the Illinois Central, as given by Stuyvesant Fish, is a little over two to one. On some of the railroads the ratio rises to three to one, and in two cases as high as eight to one. While in one case the ratio swung as far as one to six the other way. Applying two to one as the ratio, approximated in the total, would give 400,000 stockholders in round numbers for the 200,000 miles of railway in the United States as owning $6,084,201,296 of capital stock, as reported June 30, 1902. Assuming that the $6,109,981,669 funded debt is as widely distributed among bondholders, the railway ownership would appear to be held in something like 800,000 hands. But, large as these figures are, and approximating the total of railway employes (1,189,215), as they do, they by no means represent the total of those interested in railway ownership. The figures given are for registered stock, and, as the controller of one of the leading systems wrote: 'It is very probable that the number of actual stockholders is twice as great as the number of registered stockholders.' Then there is the holding of railway stock by insurance companies, savings banks and trust companies, extending their ownership among thousands. And what is true of these institutions as to stocks, is also true as to railway bonds —only more so."

President Stuyvesant Fish, of the Illinois Central railroad, at the recent annual meeting of that company, presented statistics showing that one year ago the company had a total of 7,128 stockholders, and among them were 5,599 persons who owned less than 100 shares each, and 1,529 who, combined, owned $13,152,000 of a total capital stock issued amounting to $95,038,400. During the year the total number of stockholders increased to 8,647, out of whom 6,728 owned collectively $15,947,600. This shows that the Illinois Central railway is a property of stockholders came mainly from the small investor.

It is a matter of considerable importance that the people residing along the lines of great railway systems are becoming more and more financially interested in these companies, as is evidenced by the fact that 2,218 of the Illinois Central stockholders reside in the 12 states in which the company has lines and 1,324 are residents of the state of Illinois, the home of the company.

FRENCH DETECTIVES.

Police Service in Paris Much Superior to That of Many Other European Cities.

When the emperor and empress of Russia had arranged to visit Paris and Compiegne the efficiency of the French detective police was thus tested: The chief of the Russian police came secretly to Paris with orders to lie quietly by in a hotel and only to report himself at the embassy after a stay of a week. But in less than half the hours in Paris, says London Truth, before the prefect of police learned of his arrival from a French detective. At St. Petersburg they thought this a satisfactory test, but when the Russian gala ventured to come to Paris and drive down the Champs Elysees without cavalry round their carriage. A similar test applied in Rome brought to light a police slackness there. The head of the Russian police in Rome for a whole week without his arrival being suspected. On the evening of the sixth day he called on Count Nelidoff to report himself, to the great astonishment of that ambassador. They both agreed that if the Roman police had not scented out the head of the greatest police force in the world, they could not be depended upon to know much about the goings on of anarchists and nihilists. Nicholas is glad to be, they say, relieved of the unwelcome visit of the czar's guest in Rome, but nettled at the hatred manifested by the Italian socialists.

Primitive People.

If it is hard to know anything about the surface life of the Bigoudines, it is still more difficult to penetrate their thought; to know whether their brains are shaped like ours. But in the simple ideas of the very primitive peoples, the naive reveries of children, or whether they have preserved some vague traditions of the upheavals of humanity which have ended by casting them upon this extreme point of land. They speak a language which has no affiliation with any ordinary tongue. It is Breton, but a Breton full of unknown words and strange idioms, as yet unstudied by any philologist. As to the French language, they ignore it, intentionally ignore it.—Century.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 24.—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—What if Christ came to our town?—John iv, 28-30; 39-42.

There is very little in the life of the Lord Jesus Christ to suggest the idea that the servants of God should become hermits, hidden from the world. Christ moved among men. Forty days were spent in the wilderness that Satan might be met and overcome, but beyond that Christ spent little time from the people except an occasional night in communion and prayer to God. He went about through all the towns of Judea and Galilee, even into Samaria and as far as Tyre and Sidon. His ministry was an active, busy ministry. His time was not spent in religious seclusion, but He constantly went about doing good. In this respect the disciple of Christ should imitate his Lord. We can bring Christ to our town if in the spirit of Christ we go about among the people doing as He did.

The hypothetical case of Christ coming to congress, to church or to town is rather an unnecessary one. What Christ would do if He came to our town no one knows. When He visited the towns of Palestine He usually did the thing that was least expected of Him. As a boy He visited Jerusalem. Who would have thought of His remaining to discuss profound questions with the doctors of law? He visited Jerusalem at the first Passover of His public ministry, but no one would have thought that He would have scourged the temple of time with whip. He visited Cana of Galilee, but would any one have dreamed of His changing water into wine at a wedding feast? What Jesus would do under given circumstances no one can prophesy with any degree of success, and it is little short of folly and presumption even to make the attempt. But we do know from sacred history what Christ did at Sychar, in Samaria, and this may be helpful and suggestive.

1. Christ at Sychar sacrificed Himself for others. He came to Jacob's well near evening, wearied with His journey, thirsty and hungry. The disciples left Him that they might procure food, and in their absence the woman of Samaria appeared. Immediately Jesus forgot His own needs and thought only of the spiritual needs of the sinful woman before Him. He at once sacrificed His wants to her wants. This was always characteristic of the Master. He "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." Today He would do the same and is doing it through those who are His disciples in all our towns.

2. Christ at Sychar put aside national and ecclesiastical prejudices to save a soul. The Jews and the Samaritans had no dealings with each other. Nationally and ecclesiastically there was enmity between them. But did Christ allow this to stand between Him and an opportunity to speak a kind word to one needing it? No. In the face of all national and ecclesiastical prejudice He sat down on the curb of Jacob's well and preached the gospel to a poor sinful Samaritan woman. No doubt He would do the same today, and we as His disciples we should do it for Him. No class or race prejudice should interfere with our giving the gospel to all men, for all need it.

3. Christ at Sychar emphasized the value of the spiritual above the material. He soon turned from the water in Jacob's well to Himself, the living water. Nor was He unsuccessful. The woman believed and many of the people of Sychar. Representing Christ in our own town, we should always put special stress upon spiritual things. The soul is far superior in value to the body and should receive the greater care by all men.

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. xviii, 1-14; Mark ii, 1-12; vi, 1-6; xi, 1-11; Luke ii, 40-52; viii, 1; xv, 1-10; John ii, 1-11; xiv, 1-12; xv, 1-16.

Evangelistic Effort.

The season for active evangelistic work is here, and we need to bestir ourselves and multiply our activities. Let us work along three lines:

First.—Our prayer life. Let us not put aside the morning hour or let anything interfere with its observance. If rushed at first in business we let us "chop off" a half or three-quarters of an hour from the morning drowsiness and profit by an early rising to seek the face of God.

Second.—Our Bible study life. This can be combined with the early "morning watch" and thus make the time doubly profitable. Let us try to digest what we read. Better get the full meaning of five verses than skim over five chapters. Let God's word get a hold on our lives and become a part of our daily experience.

Third.—Our personal work. Oh, that Endeavorers could feel the importance of this daily seeking to reach a soul for Christ. If you observe the former two suggestions there will be natural outgrowth in the line of reaching some one for Christ.

Our opportunities will increase and multiply as we embrace them from day to day or they will grow less and less as the days and years slip away when unimproved. "He that winneth souls is wise."—Rev. F. H. Jacobs.

EXCUSES FOR NOT BUILDING BRIDGE

Representative of Company Tells Freeholders Why the Structure is Delayed.

MORE TIME IS GRANTED

STRIKES AND HIGH PRICE OF MATERIAL THE ALLEGED CAUSES.

Claim Made That Condition of the Weather Prevents Laying Masonry for Girders—Temporary Bridge Over Green Brook.

More time has been granted the Dover Boiler Works, which has the contract for the erection of an iron bridge across Green brook at Girard avenue. The Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset Counties met Thursday afternoon in the water company's office on North avenue and a representative of the company explained why the delay had taken place in shipping the iron. Strikes and labor difficulties were his reasons, together with the high price of materials and difficulty in securing transportation.

It was reported that the girders had arrived and were on the site of the bridge and that work would be commenced at once towards arranging for a temporary structure until the bridge can be built.

The company claims that cold weather has made it impossible to lay masonry on which to place the girders but when pressed to do something by both boards the company's representative stated that by next Wednesday a temporary structure will be built over which teams may pass. It will be necessary to wait until spring before the work on the permanent structure can be done.

The full boards of both counties were present at the meeting with their counsel. Another meeting will be held at the call of the chairman of the bridge committees of the two Boards.

LITERARY.

The varying possibilities of the next Presidential election are forecasted and analyzed by Mr. Henry Litchfield West in the January-March Forum. He reaches the conclusion that the campaign of 1904 will be fought out upon the tariff issue, and that a continuance of the present business conditions will result in a vote of confidence in the Administration.

The January issue of the Metropolitan Magazine is an extraordinary number, as it contains a Christmas story as well as "A Christmas Reverie," and is on the news-stands some days before Christmas. "The Christmas Peace," by Thomas Nelson Page, is the strongest, most appealing, most engaging short story ever written by this undisputed master of fiction. Like most of Mr. Page's stories, the scene of this narrative is laid in the South during the period of reconstruction, and it glows with kindly philosophy and keen character portrayals. This story is beautifully illustrated with drawings by Blendon Campbell. The other Christmas contribution, "A Christmas Reverie," by Bliss Carman, is written in the inimitable fashion which makes Mr. Carman's writing of such unusual literary importance.

Mr. Bryan's Demeanor Abroad is treated with forced and persistent laughter by those organs in the press which happen to be his political opponents. Is this application of the partisan spirit altogether necessary? Mr. Bryan's conduct on the other side has been admirable, and has been properly appreciated by his hosts. He has behaved not as a politician, with certain principles to exploit, but as a serious American, interested in all he could learn about other governments and glad to discuss his own country with as little bias as might be. He will probably come back with less of the feeling that it is his duty, or his necessity, to see only one side of many - sided questions. Foreigners have enjoyed him because he was representative of the North Western Americanism, and, at least in casual relations, they are more likely to enjoy that type than the cultivated Eastern type, which is more like themselves. They breathe freshness from a man like Mr. Bryan, and he learns intellectual ripeness and tolerance from them.—Collier's Weekly.

LOCAL COUNCIL, R. A., IN ITS NEW ROOMS

Celebrated the Beginning of a New Era by Entertainment and Banquet.

SEVERAL ADDRESSES

ELLIOT BURR, RETIRING COLLECTOR, PRESENTED WITH CHAIN AND CHARM.

Vaudeville Sketches by New York Talent Kept Members Amused— New Rooms Are Ones Used by Local Lodges of Odd Fellows.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, took possession of their new rooms in the Babcock building, Thursday, the occasion marking the beginning of a new era in the history of this Council. The new rooms are those used by the local lodges of Odd Fellows and are considered among the best-appointed in the city. There was a large attendance of members and many friends to enjoy the most excellent programme presented.

Rev. Dr. Redman made the address of welcome, in which he gave a few interesting facts concerning the Royal Arcanum and its growth during the last twenty-seven years. He extended to all a hearty welcome. Then followed the entertainment of the evening by "Foster's Funny Fellows," of New York. There were three of them. Mr. Simmons, who put on character sketches and sang several topical songs; Mr. Readner, a sketch artist, who drew amusing pictures with crayon on paper. The third artist presided at the piano, accompanying his companions. The work of all three was clever and kept the audience convulsed with laughter.

Following the entertainment all adjourned to the banquet room, where W. W. Warnock, the caterer, served a collation. The rest of the evening was spent in listening to short addresses by Grand Secretary Albers, of Jersey City; Rev. Mr. Love, orator Plainfield Council, and Rev. Dr. Redman, also of the local Council, and Supervising Deputy Krennell, of Cranford.

A pleasant feature of this speechmaking was the presentation to Elliot Burr, the retiring collector, a gold watch chain with a diamond studded Royal Arcanum charm. Orator Love made the speech which led up to the presentation, and Dr. Redman presented the token. Mr. Burr expressed his hearty appreciation and thanked one and all for the beautiful gift.

In conclusion other remarks were made by some of the officers.

This committee was in charge of the entertainment and other details: Robert E. Lowry, chairman; Edward T. VanWinkle, D. W. Littell, Fred'k J. Pope and Clarence Goss, regent of Plainfield Council.

CHIEF ORDERS FIRE ESCAPES

PROPERTY OWNERS VIOLATING ORDINANCE MUST COMPLY AT ONCE.

Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane has given notice to all property owners who are violating ordinances in regard to fire protection that they must put proper fire escapes on their buildings at once. He stated this morning that the number of property owners in the city who are at fault is not great, most of the violations coming in the case of buildings which have been long unoccupied. In case of accident, following neglect to provide fire escapes approved by the building inspector, the owner of the building becomes liable for damage.

The Central Theatre has been provided with all the means of safety in case of fire as ordered by Building Inspector Doane.

STOLE FROM EMPLOYER.

Hired Man Relieved A. M. Foote, a Farmer, of Watches and Money.

A. M. Foote, who lives on Plainfield avenue, outside the city limits, is minus a large quantity of jewelry, including two gold watches, and about $7 in money, of which he has been relieved by his hired man, Herman Wagner. Wagner has been in his employ for about four months, having been hired at an intelligence office, in New York city. After he had filled his pockets, Wagner took the 2:31 train for New York Wednesday, Jan. 13. The local police have been notified and the Middlesex County authorities will be requested to act.

Miss Alene Jameson, of Jersey City, is visiting Miss Bowan, of West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Knox Taylor, of Plainfield, have been spending several days at High Bridge.

Mrs. Weiss is confined to her home on Park avenue by illness.

TALK TO TOILERS BY REV. MR. LEGGETT

Some Lessons Drawn From the Life of the Great Carpenter.

FOR BREAD WINNERS

SERMON PREACHED IN THE EAST THIRD STREET CHAPEL.

Text of Rev. Mr. Leggett's Remarks—Upon the Life of the Toiler as the Royal Seal of Honor—Class Among Whom Christ Associated.

Rev. L. G. Leggett, who has taken up the work at the East Third Street chapel, preached a sermon in that edifice Sunday p. m. expressly intended for toilers. His text was: "Is Not This the Carpetner?" Mark VI, 4 He said in part:

"The great majority of human lives are spent in comparative seclusion; the greater number of homes are humble and modest ones; the vast majority of the human race toil for their daily bread. The luxuries and elegancies of life are denied them; toil with a few simple pleasures is their lot. Among this class Christ spent the greater portion of his life. We know Him best from three epochs in His life. His birth, ministry and resurrection.

"'Tis sad but true we seldom think of the toiling years at Nazareth. Years veiled behind modesty, yet teeming with love. True, the curtain of mystery dropped and hid from view those years in their entirety yet the hands of Luke and Mark, part the curtains a little way and we catch a glimpse of the hidden years in the life of our Lord. Years made sweeter and holier for their very seclusion. 'Is not this the carpenter' Ah, the revelation in the question. Jesus Christ the Son of God was a toiler! A mechanic, a bread winner, wearing the garb of the artisan. 'The village carpenter,' as some have termed him.

"There is a tradition that Joseph, his foster father, died while he was still a youth and that the responsibility to provide for his master and his brothers and sisters fell upon him. Be this true or otherwise, this we know that He knew what it was to toil and to economize. He knew what it means to be hidden away in obscurity, to feel the weariness of toil, and to eat the bread of economy, He knew what it is to count the ways to make both ends meet. No one can stand closer to the life of a toiler than Jesus Christ. No one can be in closer touch or sympathy. It is His hand, his life moving upon the sea of commerce that is leveling the mighty and lifting the lowly, compelling the financial forces to listen to the voice of labor.

"Pessimism lifts her face, wet with tears and declares that the fires of hate and malice are burning so hot in the hearts of labor and capital, they never can be quenched, but optimism lifts her smiling face declaring that the grace of Christ will cool the fires and love shall embrace them. Abraham Lincoln said, 'God must have loved the common people because He made so many of them!' One of the most comforting things I bring you tonight is that your Lord was a toiler, a bread winner once upon the earth.

"Now I want you for a moment to look upon the other text. 'Thou art my beloved son in whom I am well pleased.' What was God pleased with son for. He had not entered yet upon His public ministry. He was pleased with those toiling years in Nazareth, pleased with Him as a toiler and a caretaker of the family, and in this declaration of His Son. God set the seal of divine approval upon every legitimate branch of labor in His universe.

"If you are a toiler, an honest toiler, I care not how humble the position you occupy upon your life is the royal seal of honor. If you toil honestly and conscientiously, if you give the best there is in you to your working hours and serve God, at eventide you may look up into your Heavenly Father's face and hear Him say, 'Thou art my beloved child in whom I am well pleased.' Every working man's home is dear to the Master's heart Every working man's home may entertain the royal guest. All this! His life Jesus loved as the toiler. It was the toilers he called to be His disciples. It was the toilers He labored among. When He gazed upon sect, class and conditions of humanity, 'the poor was the first word that dropped from His lips.' Do you sometimes halt in the fields of toil, as you catch the laughter of the pleasure seeker and the worldly, or the flash of the wheels dazzle your eyes or spatter you with mud? Do you sigh and sometimes murmur in discontent, as you wipe the perspiration from your brow, pause a moment to remember that His brow was wet with honest sweat and the dew upon your brow is sweeter than the dew of Heaven to your Heavenly Father.—

"Oh ye jaded mothers, trying hard to make both ends meet. Oh ye ministering Marthas. Ye sons of toil, look up at eventide and let your Heavenly Father take your face flushed with the weariness of the work of the day into His strong loving hands and listen wolle He says: 'Thou art My beloved child in whom I Am well pleased.'"

WESTFELD BOWLERS WON

DETAILED RESULT OF MATCH WITH ROSELLE CASINO.

The series of games in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament, rolled between Westfield Club and the Roselle Casino on the alleys of the latter on Friday night last, resulted in Westfield taking two of the three games. The visiting team, while not altogether up to their best bowling, rolled good scores on the average. The first game went to Westfield by a score of 844 to 838 and the second game they lost by a score of 838 to 790. They rallied in the last game, winning by a score of 830 to 756.

The detailed scores arrived too late to be published on Saturday and they are herewith given:

WESTFIELD.			ROSELLE.
Forster	151	182	160	S. Smith	145	205	146
Condit	187	128	168	C. Smith	152	176	133

A SUCCESSFUL TEST.

Plainfielders' Patent Covered Car to Prevent Freezing of Black Diamonds Given Trial.

The storm on Saturday assisted materially in the test which was made at the freight station of the Hetfield patent covered coal car. There were a number of interested people present including William R. Codington and J. TenEyck and the patentee, J. M. Hetfield J. D. Loizeaux is an owner of the patent. The car will be taken to the coal fields where a more practical demonstration will be made.

General manger of the Central Railroad W. G. Besler has taken an interest in the invention and loaned Mr. Hetfield a car on which to demonstrate the appliance. He is loud in his praise of the contrivance, and in a statement, said that it is something that has been needed for some time. Much time is lost, he says, in thawing out a carload of coal after it arrives at its destination.

Farmers Petition Legislature.

The State Board of Agriculture passed a resolution Friday asking the Legislature to amend the existing law to permit farmers to kill robins when they are actually destroying the fruit on the farms. They also passed a resolution to compel railroads either to abolish grade crossings or maintain gates or flagmen at the crossings.

FIREMAN HART REINSTATED

REPRIMANDED, HOWEVER, FOR CARELESS DRIVING, BY FIRE COMMITTEE.

Fireman Frank Hart, driver of No. 2 hose wagon, who has been off duty for two weeks, pending an investigation into his conduct on the day of the Saengerbund Hall fire, has been placed in service again.

It was alleged that Hart had been acting improperly at the time the alarm for assistance from North Plainfield was rung in and that he was incompetent to drive the fire team across the brook. The fire committee took up the investigation and found that Hart was not guilty. He was reprimanded, however, for reckless driving, which, it is alleged, was the cause of John Rafferty's fall from the rear of the wagon.

JOHN SCHENCK'S FUNERAL

SERVICES AT DUNELLEN LARGELY ATTENDED BY FELLOW-EMPLOYES.

The funeral services over the remains of the late John Schenck whose tragic death occurred in Jersey City Wednesday, were held Saturday evening from his late residence on Front street, Dunellen, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city, officiating. The services were largely attended and the array of floral remembrances was handsome.

"Abide With Me" and Lead Kindly Light," two favorite hymns of the dead, man, were sung by a quartette from the Presbyterian church in Dunellen. Many of the employes of the railroad company in Jersey City and members of the Trainmen's Brotherhood were present at the services. The pall bearers were Arthur Vail, of Dunellen; James McLane and Edward Vail, of this city, and Albert and John Tappin and James Martin, of Boonton, N. J. From the Trainmen's Brotherhood a handsome floral piece, representing the "Gates Ajar" was conspicuous among the floral pieces which covered the casket. The employes of Woodhull & Martin, where the dead man's sister is employed, also sent a large floral piece. The services at the grave were conducted Sunday a. m. in Somerville by Rev. Augustus F. Todd, of Dunellen.

A QUESTION OF WATER.

Plainfield Supply Co. Defendants in Suit of South Plainfielder.

A suit has been instituted against the Plainfield Water Supply Company by John Otto, of South Plainfield, who runs a mill at that place. He claims that the water company has been taking water from the pond thereby interfering with the operation of his mill. Justice vonMinden, of New Market, has been retained as counsel for Mr. Otto.

Union Men at Brunswick.

The members of Typographical Union, No. 309, of this city, visited New Brunswick Saturday afternoon to aid in the celebration and fair of the union at that place. There were 800 men in line in the parade.

TROUBLED KOREANS

Russia Complains of Rioting Soldiery In Seoul.

OUR MINISTER FEARS AN OUTBREAK

Emperor of Korea Will Have No Interference From Czar's Troops. Russian Division Bound Northward—Threatening Outlook.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A dispatch from Seoul says Russia complains that Korean soldiers are causing trouble. Korea answers that Russia must not interfere.

The tension in Seoul is increasing, and the native press, which probably is inspired, is more bitter against foreigners than formerly. The emperor's trusted advisers have a daily council. The Russian and British legations have increased their guards by sixteen. The Japanese are buying and storing much rice in northern Korea. The ginseng trade is dead.

The Korean General Yihak Kium, whose sympathies are pro-Russian, has made a veiled threat against foreigners.

Additional advices received overnight at the state department from the east came from Minister Allen, at Seoul. He reports that Korea is in a panicky condition, and there is apprehension of a riotous outbreak at any moment.

The intimation is conveyed that interested foreign emissaries are at the bottom of these disturbances, the result of which may be to afford an excuse for intervention and the placing of large forces in Korea, thus precipitating a hostile collision between Russia and Japan.

It is understood that the matter of re-enforcing the United States legation guard at Seoul will be left to the discretion of Mr. Allen and Rear Admiral Evans.

Reports from Port Arthur say that 4,000 Russian troops left there today, bound northward. Otherwise city life is normal, and there has been no exodus of families.

Applications by correspondents desiring to accompany the forces were met with a reply that hostilities are not expected, and therefore it would be premature to issue permits.

The authorities here state definitely that Russia has no intention or desire to interfere in Korea, even should Japan continue to land small bodies of troops there in contravention of the existing treaties, as the Russians assert the Japanese are doing, under the pretext that they are only railway guards.

ALEXIEFF HOPES FOR PEACE.

The Russian Viceroy May Be Able to Arrange Modus Vivendi.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A correspondent at Port Arthur has had an interview with Admiral Alexieff, the Russian viceroy. He left with a gold watch and hopefully of the possibility of arranging a modus vivendi with Japan. The viceroy referred the correspondent to his diplomatic agent, M. Piarcon, who emphasized the impossibility of Russia's evacuation of Manchuria and said:

"Orders were given six months ago to evacuate Newchwang and Manchuria provided the Chinese would agree to simple terms, but owing to the intrigues of the Japanese minister with the several wu pu Chinese foreign board these orders were countermanded."

Stenographer Assaulted by Negro.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 20.—Mrs. Stella Applegate of this city was brutally assaulted in the outskirts of the town by an unknown negro. She was on her way home when the negro jumped from a clump of bushes, hurled her to the ground and choked her to insensibility. Her cries brought aid, but the negro escaped with a gold watch and $15, leaving her in a critical condition. Mrs. Applegate, who is about thirty *years old, is the wife of Frank Apple*gate of this city and is in the employ of the Princeton Lighting company as a stenographer.

Boston Warehouse Burned.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—While all of the *fire apparatus of the vicinity was re*sponding to another alarm a blaze broke out in the four story wool warehouse of H. P. Garrity & Co., 200 Purchase street, last night, and before a stream could be directed upon the flames the building was gutted and its contents destroyed. The fire leaped across an alley in the rear and caused considerable damage to the large building of the Associated Wool Growers' company. The loss is $75,000.

A Dozen Widows Claimed Estate.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 20.—The estate of Charles Hall, to which more than a dozen widows have entered claims, was distributed by order of court. The entire estate, amounting to $144,000, goes to heirs in Boston. The successful claimants are Salem D. Charles, Helen A Bliss, Mrs. Leonard A. Hyde, Myron W. Charles, Fred M. Charles, Jennie M. Skerry, Mrs. Mary L. Charles and Mrs. Sarah F. C. Barrett.

Soldiers Leave Telluride.

THIRTY-FIVE HELD.

Battle at Boswell Between Miners and Sheriff's Officers.

LABOR RIOT MAY END WITH DEATHS

Meyersdale Company's Men Held Up Train With Strike Breakers, and Fifteen Were Hurt in the Fight Which Ensued.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 20.—In a battle at Boswell, near here, between strike breakers and deputy sheriffs on the one side and sympathizers of striking coal miners on the other at least two men were fatally wounded, three or four seriously hurt and half a score slightly injured.

More than 100 shots were fired from revolvers, shotguns and rifles, and it was feared for a time that the trouble would get beyond the control of the local authorities.

The trouble began at Zimmerman, near Boswell, where the employees of the Meyersdale Coal company are on strike. A train bearing a squad of strike breakers was held up there by rioters, who went through it and tried to get the strike breakers to leave.

Sheriff Coleman, with his force of fifty deputies at Boswell, arrested thirty-five of the men and women who took part in the riot, and they were given a hearing before Justices Ickes and Rauch. The justices fixed the bail at $2,000 each, which the strikers are hardly able to furnish, and those who are held for court were brought to Somerset on a special train. In a roundup the detectives visited in a body all the places where the rioters are harbored, sheering them in as they went, and the posse met with no resistance. One of the men caught is said to be the man who shot Deputy William Begley. Deputy George Sayler, who is thought to be mortally wounded, is still living, but in a very critical condition. It was stated by Deputy Sheriff Begley that more arrests would be made. The situation in the town warrants the belief that the disorder on the part of the strikers is at an end.

PANAMA'S PARLIAMENT.

Minister of War Reported the Army Prepared to Defend the Republic.

PANAMA, Jan. 20.—The constitutional convention met in open session. It was originally intended to have the session a secret one, but Senor Obarrio, minister of war, announced that there was no business before the convention which it was needful to hide from the country, and consequently the session was public.

Senor Obarrio said the Panamanian army was prepared and ready to defend the independence of Panama and that the reported invasions of Panamanian territory by Colombian troops lacked confirmation. He reported upon the number of Panamanian garrisons throughout the Darien country and upon their state of preparedness, mentioning also the large quantity of munitions of war recently received in the isthmus. The other matters discussed before the convention were unimportant.

Feud Over Girl Caused Death.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 20.—The murder for which Giuseento, or Tomasso Caruso, is under arrest in New York was committed in this city. It was the result, it is said, of a quarrel over an Italian girl for whose hand Caruso and Vincenzo Carbone, the murdered man, were rivals in their native town of Italy. Caruso came to this country about seven months ago and was followed shortly afterward by Carbone. The men met in this city, and the feud was renewed. In the fight that followed Caruso was assisted by two companions who have so far eluded the police. The authorities say they have an eye witness who will testify that Caruso fired the shot that killed Carbone.

Brave Rochester Man Rewarded.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—On the recommendation of General Superintendent Kimball of the life saving service a silver life saving medal of honor has been awarded to William E. Cope of Rochester, N. COLUMBIA LODGE FAVORS SECESSION Sentiment of Local A. O. U. W. Members Strongly Against Supreme Lodge.

SEPARATE JURISDICTION

MR. M'CULLOUGH AND V. W. NASH ARGUE IN OPPOSITION TO NEW PLAN.

Installation of Officers Witnessed by Members of Central Lodge, of This City, and Upchurch Lodge, of Westfield—Several Addresses.

Officers were installed and the matter of assessments thoroughly discussed Friday by Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W. The meeting was one of the most largely attended in the history of the lodge, there being one hundred present, including many members of Central Lodge, No. 48, of this city, and Upchurch Lodge, No. 50, of Westfield, who came to hear the arguments against the new plan of assessments adopted by the Supreme Lodge.

As a result of speeches by Past Grand Master Workman McCullough, of Swedesboro, and Supreme Representative Nash, of this city, it was given as the unanimous sentiment of the lodge that New Jersey should vote to withdraw from the Supreme Lodge and continue as a separate jurisdiction.

Mr. McCullough, in arguing against the new plan which will be decided upon at the meeting of the Grand Lodge in March, claimed that the State had been deceived by the supreme body when the classified plan was adopted a year ago. He believed that the adoption would mean a return to the old level rate and a consequent financial failure of the State jurisdiction. He contended that the A. O. U. W. is the strongest opponent of the Old Line insurance companies and intimated that they are back of a movement to force the A. O. U. W. to the ist, not desirous of the rivalry of the oldest fraternal insurance order. He said that under the present plan New Jersey can lay aside $2,000 monthly as a surplus fund which would by the adoption of the new plan be paid into the treasury of the Supreme Lodge.

Supreme Representative Nash contended that the State, with a gain of 400 members yearly, could continue under the present plan with highest success. He said that many other jurisdictions are bankrupt and that the Supreme Lodge desires New Jersey to make up the deficiency.

The officers installed by Past Grand Master Workman McCullough, Supreme Representative Nash and J. W. A. Bauersachs, of the State finance committee, were: Past master workman, J. H. Buchanan; master workman, Frank M. Lunger; foreman, John Bicknell; overseer, Charles S. Wilson; guide, Clarence H. Leland; recorder, R. H. Loughlin; financier, V. W. Nash, Jr.; receiver, Henry Leitz; inside watchman, James Forrestel; outside watchman, Michael Koller; trustees, Henry Nischwitz, Peter Doeringer.

At Children's Home.

At the January meeting of the board of officers, a vote of thanks was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beaton for the entertainment of the Punch and Judy show they provided for the children on Dec. 24, and to Ernest R. Ackerman, who on the last day of the year, gave a phonographic entertainment *in connection with the Christ*mas tree. Space will not allow the long list of many other friends whose names will stand on the books in grateful remembrance of their kindness. In recognition of the long and faithful services of Mrs. Emma Utter, on our board of managers, a vote of sympathy was sent to her daughter, Miss Jessie.

An Heroic Act.

Miss Edith Squier, of the borough, while skating Saturday, severely sprained her thumb in saving her companion, Miss Josie Redmond, of the borough, from being thrown down and injured on the ice at Cortell's lake. The smaller child was directly in the path of some older boys who were playing "snap the whip" when little Miss Squiers rushed in front of her and received the blow herself.

City Purchases Fine Team.

The city has purchased a new team of horses for Hose Company No. 3 in the West End from Stonewall Jackson for $650. They are the team which drew the Warren engine through Somerville on the recent parade there. The team is gray with white manes and tails.

Henry Rogers Honored.

At the meeting of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society in Trenton, Saturday, W. H. Rogers, of North Plainfield township, was re-elected on the executive committee. The old board of officers was re-elected.

STRONG BASEBALL TEAM FOR ALIS

Arrangements Now Being Made to Secure Crack Players for the Coming Season.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

GREATER SEATING CAPACITY AND POSSIBLY ENCLOSED GROUNDS.

Impartial Umpire Wanted—Contracts to Be Made With All Players—Season to Open in April—Some Possible Games.

The baseball management of the Alis Club has been hustling of late and will soon be able to report the result of its labors in getting a team for next season. It is promised that the team will be the strongest to represent the city in several years. It is said that several former college players will be found in the aggregation.

It is proposed to have a team that will be able to meet any of the semi-professional nines in the Metropolitan district and when the members are secured by contract, the work of preparing a schedule of games will begin at once. It is expected that there will be a series with Westfield, but all of the games will not take place on the Westfield diamond. The probabilities are that an equal number of games will be played at each place and if there should be a "rubber" an agreement will then be made as to where it shall be played.

There are a number of other strong teams in and around New York and dates will be arranged with the best of them. The idea is to give the baseball loving public an article of baseball that will warrant liberal patronage. When Sk. Marg's management organizes a team a series of games will be arranged with them and the same will be true no doubt with Scotch Plains.

Having become members of the New Jersey State Baseball Associations, the management of the Alis Club is in a position to make contracts with players and hold them just the same as they are held by the big league managers. The contracts have now been sent out by the Alis management and as soon as they are signed announcement of the names will be made. Among the improvements planned are greater seating capacity at Crescent Oval and possibly inclosed grounds. It is likely that the grandstand will be enlarged by building two wings one at either end.

Arrangements will be made for a first class umpire. Last year's experience at some of the games was not pleasing and the management hopes to get an umpire whose decisions will be impartial. The date for opening the season has not yet been decided upon, but no doubt it will be early in April provided the weather is favorable. Last year the season opened late. The club will also endeavor to obtain satisfactory trolley service so that patrons of the game will have no trouble in getting to and from the grounds.

POPULAR GIRL DEAD.

Florence E. VanSickle Buried This Morning—Dr. Schenck Officiated.

Florence E. VanSickle, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. VanSickels, died Saturday afternoon at her home, 313 East Third street, following an illness of twelve days with diphtheria. Death was due to paralysis of the heart. The young girl was nearly eight years old and was a favorite in her home as well as with many companions. She was a member of the primary department of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school. The funeral services, which were private, were held at 9 o'clock Monday a. m., Rev. Dr. Cornelius Sobenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted a short service at the grave in the North Plainfield cemetery, where the interment took place.

Camera Club Lecture.

The Plainfield Camera Club has arranged with John L. Yatman, an expert on lenses, for the latter to give a lecture and demonstration of lenses at the club rooms on Monday night, January 23. Every amateur and in fact any one who is interested in the subject of lenses or photography, is invited not only to attend the lecture, but to send any questions on the subject to J. Hervey Deane in advance and they will be fully answered the night of the lecture by Mr. Yatman.

Little Boy Lost.

The five-year-old son of Frederick P. Todd, of Orchard place, was lost Saturday morning on Front street, and taken to police headquarters. His father was notified.

IMPORTANT MEASURES IN THE LEGISLATURE

Bill Giving Boroughs, of More Than 2,500 Population, Control of Liquor Licenses.

DOLLAR GAS DEMANDED

PROPOSED LAW TO COMPEL USE OF ASBESTOS CURTAINS IN HALLS.

State Board to Examine and License Barbers—Time Fixed in One Measure for Municipal Department Reports—Other Interesting Bills.

A batch of bills was submitted by Assemblyman McGleenon in the House Monday night, among them being one which gives boroughs of more than 2,500 inhabitants control over liquor licenses. Another was his measure abolishing the election of fire chiefs in boroughs, and a third gives boroughs of 2,500 or more population one member in the Board of Freeholders.

Among Assemblyman Duff's measures was a dollar gas bill, and his measures to compell all wires to be put underground.

Mr. Taylor introduced a measure requiring all departments of first-class cities to submits reports within ninety days after the first of each year, the Common Council or Board of Finance of such city to have charge of the printing of such reports.

Mr. Lehlbach, of Essex, introduced his bill for a State board to examine and license barbers, the board to consist of a boss barber, a journeyman barber and a physician of "good standing."

Mr. Ernst, of Hudson, one of the youngest men in the House, got in an echo of the Chicago theatre horror in the shape of a bill making it a misdemeanor to use any other than an asbestos curtain in any public hall, theatre or assembly-room, or to permit any camp stools, or chairs, or other obstructions, to be placed in the aisles in any place where any lecture, performance, entertainment or sermon is being delivered or presented.

PRAYED FOR MRS. BECHTEL

MRS. O'BRIEN HAS MISUNDERSTANDING WITH JOHN GOODWIN.

Mrs. Lou O'Brien, the evangelist, approves of the acquittal of Mrs. Bechtel of the charge of the murder of her daughter, Mabel Bechtel. She said so Monday night. She announced that she was rejoiced to find that her prayers for the acquittal were granted and said that if Judge Trexler had not been animated with a Christian spirit, Mrs. Bechtel could not have been proved innocent.

Mrs. O'Brien, as previously announced, has severed all connection with a mission on Grove street and established a home for fallen women in the Lindsay house on West Front street. This she has named the Celia Home for the child of one of her coworkers. Her meetings have been attended each night by big crowds which have frequently been not sufficiently sparing of their enthusiasm. Three young men who became too open in their manifestations of interest were informally ejected through a side window Sunday night.

It is said that Mrs. O'Brien's separation from the mission was attended by more or less disorder. Mrs. O'Brien, it is alleged, considers that her services for the mission were not rewarded with that large munificence which they deserved, and takes issue in this matter with the leading spirit of the concern, John Goodwin. It is reported that John Goodwin alleges that Mrs. O'Brien says that, etc., ad libitum; the effect of the sum total of the allegations and surmises and suppositions being that Mrs. O'B. confiscated John's hymn books by way of forcing a satisfactory recompense for her services in bringing thirty odd sinners to the light and that John intends to get the books back if he has to go to law about it.

Loretta Waldron Well.

Loretta Waldron, a colored girl, who was shot in the face by Maggie Bentford, a couple of weeks ago and who has been in the hospital under treatment, has been discharged. No attempt was made to extract the bullet and as it apparently is giving no trouble, no efforts will be made to locate it at present.

Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Grove street, is the guest of friends in Paterson.

THE BUILDING BEING MOVED

ALTERATIONS TO BE MADE TO DURLACK STRUCTURE WHEN IN NEW POSITION.

The Durlach building at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue is being moved by the owners to a point on Watchung avenue in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. building on a lot owned by the Durlach brothers. By this move they have altered their original plans to raise the structure two stories and place beneath it a stone foundation for store purposes.

The present plan is to place the building on the new site and remodel it entirely and on the corner of Watchung avenue to erect a store and flats. The work on this will probably be commenced in the spring and during the winter the work on the other building will be pushed forward to completion.

AS TO OSTEOPHS LICENSE

NONE NEEDED IN NEW JERSEY ACCORDING TO RECENT DECISION.

By an opinion filed in the Supreme Court by Justice Dixon, it is decided that a practitioner of the school of osteopathy who treats a patient only by manipulation does not come within the law which requires practicing physicians in this State to secure licenses after examination before the State examining board.

The syllabus of the opinion says:

An osteopathic physician, whose treatment of his patient consists simply of the manipulation of the body, does not violate that provision of the act of May 23, 1894, which forbids the applying of any drug, medicine or other agency or application by an unlicensed person.

MAY HAVE SUNDAY BASEBALL

RUMORED THAT GAME WILL BE PLAYED NEAR THIS CITY ON SABBATH DAYS.

It is rumored that there may be an attempt next summer to have Sunday baseball near Plainfield. Some persons interested in the scheme have had designs on the Driving Club Park, which is located in Middlesex County, just over the line, and plans of laying out a diamond there and having Sunday games are being talked of strongly.

It is claimed that according to a decision of the courts some months ago, baseball can be played on Sunday so long as there is no disturbance and no one is annoyed by the sport. If the plans should materialize, no doubt an attempt will be made to secure a trolley from this city as well as Metuchen to the park, making it easy to get back and forth. The park is so located that games could be played there without being a source of annoyance to anyone and the promoters believe that the patronage would be large.

H. S. HUMES MARRIED.

Was Quietly Wedded to Miss May S. Teller on Christmas Day.

Hiram S. Humes, a clerk in the Gayle Hardware Company store, and Miss May S. Teller, of Watchung avenue, were married on Christmas Day, according to an announcement made by the couple yesterday. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rutan in Newark by Rev. Mr. Osborn, an Episcopal clergyman. The couple is now boarding in this city. Mr. Humes is a member of Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school.

Mrs. Crane's Funeral.

Simple funeral services were held yesterday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock for Mrs. Caroline Crane, wife of Albert Crane, at the late home, 138 Grove street. Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, was in charge. The bearers were Andrew Lotkins, William H. Combs, W. A. Woodruff, Frank Hand, D. Beard and R. B. VanArsdale. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Attended Y. M. C. A. Institute.

General Secretary J. H. Manning, George M. Rittenhouse Robert Love and F. H. Martin, of the Y. M. C. A., attended a religious work institute and conference held Monday afternoon and night in the Rahway Y. M. C. A. The institute was held for secretaries, physical directors and committeemen from Rahway, Plainfield, Elizabeth and New Brunswick.

LADIES AUXILIARY TO THE COMMANDERY

New Organization to Promote Interests of Trinity, No. 17, Knights Templar.

HAS ELECTED OFFICERS

THOSE ELIGABLE TO MEMBERSHIP IN THE AUXILIARY.

Mrs. D. C. Adams, President, and Mrs. J. A. Stafford, Secretary—Another Meeting to be Held Tuesday—"Ladies' Night" Planned.

A Ladies' Auxiliary to Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., was organized Tuesday afternoon in the Masonic rooms in the Babcock building. The purpose of the auxiliary as set forth in its constitution is the advancement of the interests of Trinity Commandery and the promotion of sociability among the members. The organization is not secret, and to its membership all wives, widows, mothers, daughters and sisters of members of Trinity Commandery are eligible. The widows of members who afterwards marry a non-member forfeit their membership by so doing.

The auxiliary will hold monthly meetings and monthly sociables. Decision as to the days of meeting was reserved until next Tuesday afternoon when the members will again assemble for the discussion of preliminary business. Committees will be appointed at that time. Arrangements for a ladies' night of Trinity Commandery were begun yesterday. The affair will be held about the middle of February and all the preparations for the entertainment and supper will be made by the members of the auxiliary.

The charter members of the auxiliary number twenty-nine. The officers chosen yesterday were: President, Mrs. D. C. Adams; secretary, Mrs. James Stafford; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Calvin Rugg; treasurer, Mrs. E. J. Cooley.

PAID $125,000 FAIR CLAIMS

OFFER OF SETTLEMENT NOT MADE TO TO HERMANN OELRICHS.

When the hearing in the Fair case was resumed yesterday before Commissioner Hosmer, in San Francisco, Cal., Herman Oelrichs, husband of Theresa Fair, testified that he had been in charge of the arrangements for the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Fair in that city. The offer of a settlement of the claims against the estates of the victims of the automobile accident in France, which had been presented by Mrs. Hannah Nelson, of New Market, mother of Mrs. Fair, and her family, was not made to him, but was suggested by J. W. Harvey in the interest of the Nelsons.

He had met Mrs. Nelson, Abram Nelson and C. J. Smith, all claimants for a portion of the property, but had no direct dealings with them. He went over in detail many of the circumstances of the case and its attempted settlement

Mr. Oelrichs stated that it was not until after three interviews with Mr. Harvey, who represented the Nelsons, that he consented to settle their claims by signing checks for $125,000. He handed the checks to his counsel, but did not see them delivered. He said that if Mrs Nelson had testified he went with her to the bank to see them cashed, her statement was untrue.

Fine Menu.

Arrangements are completed for the annual turkey supper to be held at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow and Friday nights under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. In addition to the attractive menu, there will be a fine programme of orchestral music each night. Supper will be served from 6 to 9

Injured Man in Bed.

A. B. Dunavan, driver for the U. S. Express Company, is still confined to his bed as a result of injuries received a few nights ago, when a trolley car collided with his wagon on West Front street. Mr. Frost, one of the claim agents for the Public Service Corporation, is endeavoring to settle with Mr. Dunavan.

Capt. Stuart in Brazil.

Kenneth Stuart, of this city, received a cablegram yesterday informing him that his parents, Captain and Mrs. P. M. Stuart, and sister, Miss Inez Stuart, have arrived safely at Bahia, Brazil. They will remain there for a month.

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER MAY ATTEND BANQUET

Senator Kean Not Likely to be Present at the Board of Trade's Festive Occasion.

SUBJECTS OF THE TOASTS

MAYOR N. B. SMALLEY TO SPEAK ON "MUNICIPAL DEVELOPMENT."

Announcement of the Enforced Absence of Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer—J. E. Martine to Talk on "Municipal Ownership."

The arrangements for the Board of Trade dinner to be held at the Hotel Kensington this evening are practically completed. It is not expected that Senator Kean will be able to accept the invitation to be present, but hopes are sustained that Congressman Fowler will find it possible to come. Covers will be laid for at least seventy-five.

The list of toasts as arranged by former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, the toastmaster, is not entirely complete. The former mayor will speak himself on the duties of a citizen to his municipality. Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, will describe what should go into "Municipal Development," taking his facts, it is to be presumed, from his own strenuous and checkered career as chief executive of the borough.

Among the other speakers will be Former State Senator Charles A. Reed, Samuel St. John McCutcheon and James E. Martine, who will talk on one of his pet subjects, "Municipal Ownership."

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer will be unable to attend owing to the fact that he is booked to speak at an entertainment given in Raritan by the Raritan firemen. He has written the Board a letter which will be read by the presiding officer.

S. S. SWACKHAMER AS PUBLIC SPEAKER

Assemblyman to Respond to Toast at Jersey City Board of Trade Banquet.

HIS MANY INVITATIONS

WILL ADDRESS UNION AND HUDSON BAR ASSOCIATION.

Will Not be Able to Speak Here This Evening—The Principal Speaker at Newark Democratic Club Dinner.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Somerset County, is deluged with invitations to speak in various places and on account of invitations to speak in Jersey City and Raritan this evening, will be unable to respond to his toast at the local Board of Trade dinner. He had been engaged several weeks ago to be the principal speaker at the Jersey City Board of Trade banquet and early in the evening he will respond to a toast at the firemen's fair in Raritan.

At the Jersey City Board dinner his toast will be "Our State." Mr. Swackhamer has received invitations to address the Union County Bar Association at its banquet on January 30 in Elizabeth and to address the Hudson County Bar Association on the evening of February 4. The Democratic Clubs of Newark are to hold a big banquet on February 3 and the oratorical Assemblyman will appear at that time as the principal speaker. He has been called upon for an address of a patriotic nature before the American Club in Camden on Washington's birthday when Senators from Mississippi, Massachusetts and Ohio will be present. He will also address the young men of Whitfield's church in Freehold sometime next month. At tomorrow night's firemen's dinner will be Senator Childs, Surrogate Demond, Sheriff McMurtry, County Clerk Alexander Anderson and Chairman Logan, of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders.

JERSEY CITY WOMAN, STOCKER'S WIFE?

Two Women Appear at Fanwood, One Claiming to Have Been Deserted by Him.

TELLS PATHETIC STORY

NO NEWS FROM MRS. MEDHURST OR FROM STOCKER.

Believed That the Two Eloped—Alleged Wife Has a Small Child—He is Said to Have Left Her a Year Ago.

Is Albert Stocker, who left the Central Hotel in Fanwood last Friday morning under circumstances strongly suggestive of an elopment with the wife of the proprietor, James B. Medhurst, married to another woman? That is the question that has stirred a sensation in Fanwood since yesterday when a young woman introduced herself at the Central Hotel as the wife of a man answering Stocker's description.

The woman, who is said to be of a prepossessing appearance, was accompanied by an elderly companion, the younger one claiming to be Mrs. Stocker and the other her mother. Mrs. Stocker's story is that her husband deserted her in Jersey City a year ago after beating and otherwise abusing her, leaving her with a young child. She heard nothing from him until Monday's story of the alleged elopment of Stocker and Mrs. Medhurst was published.

Mrs. Stocker strongly suspected that the erstwhile manager of the Central Hotel was her husband when she read the article and immediately took steps to satisfy herself as to his identity. She states that she has no desire to reclaim the man and that she would not, under any circumstances, live with him again as his wife. She wishes, she says, to get evidence upon which to base a suit for divorce.

As the result of her inquiries at the hotel, Mrs. Stocker was satisfied that the missing hotel manager and bartender and her husband were one and the same man. Stocker was always reticent when questioned about his past while he was manager at the hotel, though he frequently referred to the fact that he came from Jersey City.

No tidings have been received of Mrs. Medhurst or Stocker since their joint disappearance last Friday morning.

PLAINFIELD AND THE P. S. C.

CORPORATION COUNSEL HEARS GOOD NEWS FROM M'CARTER.

While other cities have been taking radical measures against the Public Service Corporation in an effort to secure better trolley service Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has been in correspondence with Thomas N. McCarter, president of the corporation, and as a result several changes for better service have been made and more are to follow.

When seen this morning by a representative of The Daily Press Mr. Marsh said: "I made known to the company the complaints of the people of this city with the result that they sent out their superintendent who relieved the situation as to West Front street by operating the through cars from Elizabeth to Dunellen. He also agreed to replace the worst of the cars on the other lines as soon as better cars can be spared from other lines and to have new and up to date cars as soon as they could be manufactured. The cars for the summer service, the superintendent said, would be first-class in every particular."

Mr. Marsh said that his correspondence with the president of the company showed a desire on the latter's part to meet the wishes of Plainfield.

A PLAINFIELDER A MEMBER

JOHN DOUGHTY IS IN THE NATIONAL AMATEUR SKATING ASSOCIATION.

John Doughty, of this city, has been made a member of the executive committee of the National Amateur Skating Association. At the annual meeting of the association in Clarmont rink, Brooklyn, it was decided to make war on the Amateur Hockey League in an effort to secure the control of hockey. Fifteen cities were represented. It was decided to make the hockey championships next year national instead of inter-city.

The National indoor skating championships will be contested at Pittsburg, Pa. The outdoor speed championships will be fought next Saturday at Caldwell, if the weather permits. The figure skating championships will be run off at the St. Nicholas rink in New York.

ALIS CLUB SEEKS LEASE

ARRANGING TO SECURE THE CRESCENT OVAL FOR ANOTHER SEASON.

The Alis Club is securing a renewal of the lease of Crescent Oval for another year, or until next fall. The club has also secured the right of way from Randolph road to the oval, something which has not been done before. That has always been a private entrance, but S. D. Drake, the owner, willingly granted the request. The baseball management has also planned to make some changes at the oval so that in every particular the field will comply with league requirements. The diamond, as well as the outfield will be generally improved.

A VETERAN RAILROADER DEAD

WM. H. GORDON, SR., PENSIONER OF PENNSY SYSTEM, HAS PASSED AWAY.

William H. Gordon, Sr., grandfather of Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, of West End avenue, who was one of the best-known railroad engineers in the country, died at his home in East Millstone on Monday night, after a lingering illness with Bright's disease. Mr. Gordon was born at South River, October 2, 1843, his father being an engineer for Commodore Vanderbilt on the latter's first line of steamboats running between New Brunswick and New York.

At the age of nineteen years Mr. Gordon secured a position of fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad and continuously for fifty-six years he remained in the service of that company, for the greatest part of the time as an engineer. He was the first engineer to retire under the Pennsylvania's pension system adopted in 1900. He was then 75 years old and up to that time was never obliged to wear glasses when running his engine. Soon after the John Bull engine was brought to this country, Mr. Gordon was among the first to run her. The Pennsylvania company wanted him to take the old style engine to the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, but on account of his advanced age he did not feel equal to the task.

BALL NEWS.

Patronesses Appointed and Instructions Issued.

Chief of Police Kiely has issued orders that all carriages for the charity ball at the Casino this evening shall approach the Casino from the Seventh street side. The building will be amply policed inside and out and as the exits have all been conspicuously marked by Manager Mase Edwards, those who attend will be assured of complete protection.

These are the patronesses announced: Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. E. M. Rodman, Miss Elizabeth B. Cook, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, Mrs. J. E. Tracy, Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. G. H. Goddard, Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. E. H. Ackerman, Mrs. D. C. Ivins, Mrs. R. A. Hegeman, Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. W. C. Kinney.

PROTEST AGAINST FILTHY PRACTICE

W. C. T. U. to Ask Borough to Take Action Against Expectorating on Pavements.

WANT HABIT STOPPED

METHOD USED IN NEW YORK TO ABATE NUISANCE RECOMMENDED.

Matter to be Brought Up Before North Plainfield Health Board Next Week—Communication From W. T. C. U.

When the Borough Board of Health meets in regular session next week a matter of much importance will be introduced for consideration. The Women's Christian Temperance Union has sent a communication to the Borough Board as well as the city board, asking that some definite steps be taken to prevent the now prevailing practice that many persons have of expectorating on the sidewalk. The practice has increased to such an extent that the women have felt it their duty to do something toward stopping it. There was a time when the long train skirts were considered in vogue but according to fashion's latest decree these trains are strictly improper except at full dress affairs. Now that the trains for street wear are to be a thing of the past, the women want the spitting habit stopped.

Just what action the local boards will take has not yet been determined. There is no law or ordinance covering the point specifically, although the officials would have the right to abate any nuisance, if this can be decided one. In New York the latest move has been to supply the policemen with small yellow cards containing an extract of the law in that city which provides for the expectoration habit. When a policeman sees a citizen violate the law he simipy hands him a card, which serves as a warning. If he is again seen to violate the law, he is arrested and taken before a magistrate.

The information thus far obtained does not make it clear to the local boards that they would be without the provisions of the law in adopting a similar policy, but at all events some action will be taken if possible and the Boards of Health will endeavor to stop the habit. It is held that if the habit can be stopped in trolley or steam cars, there should be some method be prevent it on the public streets. The street or gutter is considered the proper place for expectoration.

THREE MORE HORSES FOUND

STOLEN BY BROWN WHO IS HELD WITHOUT BAIL FOR GRAND JURY.

Three Long Island liverymen, owners of horses and carriages stolen from them during the past year, were at police headquarters this morning to identify Charles Brown as the thief. All three were positive that Brown had done the business and the recognition between them and Brown was in each case mutual.

Chief Kiely discovered the three men yesterday after a long search. Their names are Fred. M. Brooks, of Hempstead, L. I., Thomas A. Jerome, of Richmond, L. I., and Warren B. Tooker, of Richmond.

Chief Kiely and the liverymen went to Perth Amboy this noon to get the stolen goods which the Chief has already located. It is understood that the horses were disposed of through Jacob Rabinowitz to Perth Amboy men named Hansen, Christiansen and a third man, a butcher, whose name could not be ascertained this morning.

Brown's trial was postponed to Monday at 2:30 this afternoon by Justice Huff. He will be tried at the present term of court. The case against Jacob Rabinowitz, of Perth Amboy, charged with receiving stolen goods from Brown, was continued one week this afternoon by Justice Huff at the request of counsel for Rabinowitz, Geo. J. Piechner, of Perth Amboy. The adjournment was made on account of the fact that Rabinowitz is on trial on a different charge at New Brunswick.

Mayor Ryan Here.

Mayor Ryan, of Elizabeth, and his brother, Edward Ryan, were visitors in this city yesterday and were entertained by James E. Martine. A visit was made to the office of The Daily Press by these politicians.

BIG BUILDINGS MOVED

Some Peculiar Methods Adopted to Fit Different Conditions.

The Pittsburg Opera House the Largest Ever Moved Without Any Considerable Damage—How It and Similar Feats Were Accomplished.

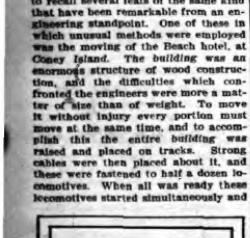
The moving of large buildings has become a science, and one to which many trained engineers are giving their attention.

One of the recent occurrences in this line was the removal of the Pittsburg opera house. This immense building was lifted from its foundations and moved intact and without any considerable damage a distance of 22 feet. The theater, which is the largest in Pittsburg and is the home of one of the best stock companies in America, covers a site measuring 128 feet by 89 feet, and weighs approximately 2,496 tons, yet the building was transferred to its new position without the slightest injury to its contents.

About four weeks were occupied in preparing the building for removal but the actual transference was only a matter of hours, and so smoothly was the feat performed that it was practically impossible to tell that the structure was on the move. Nine hundred jack screws were used to push the building up. Then supports and rollers were placed beneath in order to effect the movement. Jack screws acting horizontally, were now braced against the pavement, each one being arranged so to push the end of one of the great beams upon which the theater was resting. At each jack stood a man, and these operators, in obedience to a whistle, gave the screw a twist. The movement at each twist was imperceptible, but it was none the less sure, and gradually the huge building, weighing 2,496 tons, was pushed into its new position 22 feet from its original site. When the opera house had come into place over its new foundation, it was not lowered again, but the masonry was carried up to meet the brick work of the walls. The steel supporting beams were then carefully removed, and the openings were closed. The cost, of the undertaking was over a quarter of a million dollars. Forty-seven men were engaged on the job day and night.

JACKSCREWS UNDER THE PITTSBURG

The moving of this building serves to recall several feats of the same kind that have been remarkable from an engineering standpoint. One of these in which unusual methods were employed was the moving of the Beach hotel, at Coney Island. The building was an enormous structure of wood construction, and the difficulties which confronted the engineers were more a matter of size than of weight. To move it without injury every portion must move at the same time, and to accomplish this the entire building was raised and placed on tracks. Strong cables were then placed about it, and these were fastened to half a dozen locomotives. When all was ready these locomotives started simultaneously and the great building was transferred without mishap.



MOVING A NEBRASKA COURT HOUSE.

An even more remarkable case than this was the removal of the courthouse from Hemingford, Neb., to Alliance. The settlement of a county seat difficulty made the change in the location of the court house necessary. The distance was 19 miles, and some out-of-the-ordinary method had to be devised to accomplish it. After considering a number the engineers in charge concocted the idea of attaching a locomotive to it and hauling it to the new location along the line of railway. This feat was accomplished without mishap, and created a considerable sensation in engineering circles at that time.

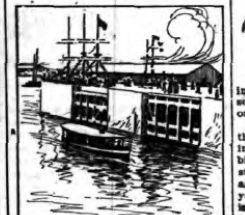
In Bangor, Me., it was found necessary to move a building to a new location several blocks distant. The road led up one hill and down another, but the trick was accomplished very easily, and without injury to the building.

Argentine Republic Is Coming to the Front as a Producer.

Magnificent Agricultural Area Along the River Platte—Wonderful Development of Thirty Years —What of the Future!

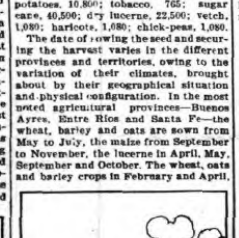
There is being opened up in the territory of the river Platte a magnificent agricultural area. The farmer and the boards of trade of the United States have their eyes upon the Argentine Republic, for that country is making rapid strides toward becoming one of the foremost food suppliers of the world. Agents of big grain handing companies of this country are being sent yearly to Argentina to study the agricultural conditions there, and they never return without bigger stories than ever of the agricultural possibilities of the country.

Thirty years ago the people of Argentina had to buy flour from the United States, and in the whole country there were only 500 miles of railway. But today the 500 miles of railroad have grown to over 10,000 and more are in rapid construction, and when it is remembered that the republic has an area of 1,200,000 square miles, the extent to which this development may go may be but faintly imagined. And all this railroad development is to accommodate the tremendous increase in the production of farm products. To-day the export of breadstuffs amounts to something like $100,000,000, and the meat alive and dead, with its hides, wool and other by-products, is worth over $100,000,000.



NEW DOCKS AT BUENOS AYRES.

Argentina began to awaken to her agricultural possibilities during the Paraguayan war, when she found a good market for her products. When the war was over it was discovered that the supply was sufficient to satisfy the demand of the whole region of the river Plate. This condition of affairs lasted for about ten years, at the end of which time the country began to export considerable quantities of cereals to Europe, till in 1891 the exports of wheat amounted to 448,000 tons, those of maize to 700,000 tons, those of linseed to 60,000 tons, and those of hay to 30,000 tons. In 1892 there were under cultivation 8,200,000 acres of land, which is only 3.7 per cent. of the total area of the republic. The soil which has not yet lost much of its natural fertility, readily yields abundant crops, especially if the rains have neither been scarce nor excessive. The following figures show the average yield of the soil per acre: Wheat, 990 pounds; maize, thrashed, 2,700; linseed, 720; rice, unthrashed, 2,300; rice, thrashed, 1,350; potatoes, 10,800; tobacco, 765; sugar cane, 40,500; dry lucerne, 22,500; vetch, 1,080; haricots, 1,080; chick-peas, 1,080.



AN ARGENTINE RANCH HOME.

The date of sowing the seed and securing the harvest varies in the different provinces and territories, owing to the variation of their climates, brought about by their geographical situation and physical configuration. In the most noted agricultural provinces—Buenos Ayres, Entre Rios and Santa Fe—the wheat, barley and oats are sown from May to July, the maize from September to November, the lucerne in April, May, September and October. The wheat, oats and barley crops in February and April, and the lucerne crop from November to April. The time of planting the sugar cane, which is grown in Santiago, Tucuman, Salta, Jujuy and the territorial governments of El Chaco, Formosa and Misiones, is from July to October, and of the harvesting from June to October of the following year. Rice is sown in September and October, and is gathered from March to May. The mandioca is planted in June and gathered in April and May.

The typical Argentine farmer is nomadic in his habits. He commonly contracts with the owner to undertake all the operations connected with sowing and harvesting the crop, and instead of rent gives a percentage on the results, while the owner only gives the bare land fenced, though in most instances he will advance working animals and provisions and generally guarantee the colonist's credit until harvest.

PICKEREL'S BIG JUMP.

From New York State He Leaped Over New Jersey, Landing Finally in Pennsylvania.

The rock that marks the boundary lines of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey lies in the Delaware river at Carpenter's Point, N. Y. On that rock the lines come together so that one may spread three fingers of his hand and have a finger in each of those states, and in the counties of Orange, New York; Pike, Pennsylvania, and Sussex, New Jersey.

Floyd Campbell went swimming in the river of tristates rock the other day. After wiping awhile he got upon the rock to sun himself. As he lay there, his head in Pennsylvania, his right foot in New York and his left in New Jersey, he saw a commotion in the water on the New York side of the rock.

The commotion came rapidly toward the rock and culminated in the breaking from the water of a sunfish, with a big pickerel in its wake. The terror-stricken sunfish's rush to escape its savage pursuer took it a foot or more beyond the edge of the water on the sloping side of the rock. The pickerel, in fierce pursuit, followed the sunfish, and the impetus of its charge carried it clear through New Jersey and halfway across Pennsylvania, where it stopped.

The sunfish instantly flopped back into the water. If the pickerel had been contents to go on either into the water on the Pennsylvania side of the rock or the New Jersey side, it would have saved itself, but it turned on the rock and began flopping back into the New York waters.

That move was fatal. Campbell recovered from his surprise, rose to a sitting posture and reached for the pickerel. His middle finger ran under the gills of the fish and stopped it where it was. As it lay captured its position was such that it covered part of three states and three counties. It weighed nearly three pounds.

WIFE'S VIEW OF IT.

Hubby Repeated Good Joke to His Better Half and Now He Wishes He Hadn't.

The New York Times tells a good story on a prominent citizen of Syracuse who tried to repeat a joke to his wife and found the joke was on himself. It seems that the citizen was in a downtown hat store one evening, after closing hours, and the proprietor from some incentive said: "I will give to any man here a new silk hat if he will swear on his word of honor that never since his marriage has he cast a languishing glance, or the eye of love, on any woman other than his wife."

"WHY DON'T YOU LAUGH?"

A young man stepped forward and said: "Give me the hat."

"Are you ready to so swear?" asked the shopkeeper.

"I am," replied the young man, firmly.

"Take the hat," said the hatter, who then added: "When were you married, by the way?"

"Last night," replied the young man.

This was the joke—the joke on the hatter—which the prominent citizen ran home and repeated to his wife with much gusto.

After he had finished the wife did not seem to appreciate the humor as keenly as had been anticipated by the husband.

"Why don't you laugh?" asked the latter. "Don't you see it is funny?"

"I was thinking," replied the wife. "Why didn't you bring home the hat, dear?"

"Well, darn it! A silk hat never did look well on me," remonstrated the prominent citizen.

FLOGGED BY FATHER

Tiny Katie Kanter Whipped by Order of Town Recorder.

A Sample of New Jersey Justice Which Seemed Cruel and Un-American to the Good People of Bayonne.

Residents of Bayonne, N. J., are commenting unfavorably on the punishment meted out to tiny Katie Kanter by order of Recorder Hyman Lazarus in his court, before 50 spectators. Katie, who is nine years old, had been accused of stealing eggs, and Recorder Lazarus commanded her father to whip her in the courtroom. Begging to take place in front of the bench on which the justice sits. On several occasions Recorder Lazarus has compelled fathers to spank their wayward boys in open court, but this is the first time in New Jersey, as far as can be learned, that a girl was soundly whipped in public.

The father placed his little child across his knee and applied the blows with a leather whip which had 14 thongs. The whip was 16 inches long. Big red welts were raised on the child's tender skin by the thongs, and many of the women present turned away their heads, not caring to witness such a beating.

The elder Kantor conducts a small tailor shop, and his family lives in two rooms in the rear. There are six children, Katie being next to the eldest.

"I didn't steal the eggs," said Katie, who is an attractive little girl. "I only took them home to mamma, and thought it would be all right if we gave the grocer the money for the eggs later. I didn't mean not to pay for them."

Katie said she was a pupil in the third grade of the Fourteenth street public school of that village. Her favorite studies are geography and history, she said, and she declared that she was fond of study and of her teacher, who was very good to all the children.

"I had no way out of it; when the judge said to me to whip Katie I had to obey him," declared the child's father.

HER FATHER FLOGGED HER.

He produced the leather whip with the 14 thongs, with which he had chastised the child. He said he had made the whip purposely to punish his children with, as he knew of no other method of correcting them.

"But your father did not whip you very hard, did he, Katie?" was suggested.

"Yes, indeed he did. He hurt me awful!" the little girl answered.

"I had to strike hard because the judge ordered me to do so," explained the father. "People must always do what the judge says, mustn't they? That's the law, isn't it, in this country?"

Then it developed that the complainant against little Katie had not been present in court to press the charge against her, and that therefore the case ought legally to have been dismissed. When Kantor's attention was called to this, he declared that the recorder had said nothing about that phase of the indictment, but had simply ordered the punishment to be inflicted, and had directed a court officer to place a chair in front of the bench for that purpose.

There is talk among residents of Centerville, the suburb of the village in which the Kantors live, of addressing a formal protest to Recorder Lazarus, asking him not to have girls whipped in his court, pointing out to him the iniquity of such punishment. Katie's mother said the child could never outlive the remembrance of the disgraceful whipping in a public court, and she believes that such treatment was likely to ruin a child's future. In this she voiced the sentiments of the neighbors.

Rudeness Proved Expensive.

Claus Spreckles, the sugar king, has just made a San Francisco capitalist pay $6,000,000 for being disagreeable. The capitalist is president of a gas and electric company. Smoke from the company's plant annoyed Mr. Spreckles and he went to the president and asked him to abate the nuisance. The president was extremely curt to Mr. Spreckles. To avenge himself for the affront put upon him Spreckles established a rival gas and electric plant at a cost of $4,000,000 and began cutting rates. Prices were brought down to one-fourth what they were when the old company had the monopoly. At length the man went to Mr. Spreckles and begged for quarter. Spreckles' terms were to be bought out at the price of $6,000,000, and to these terms the disobliging capitalist had to assent.

Hard on Female Prisoners.

In the prisons of Great Britain neither male nor female convicts are permitted to see a mirror during the period of their incarceration.

AMERICAN ADAPTABILITY.

Admirable Poise of a Chicago Girl in Her Position as First Lady of India.

Lady Curzon, the vicerine of India, stands as a shining example of the facility and the adaptability of the American woman, the Kansas City Star. Occupying a position which brings her in continual contact with royalty, she bears herself with as much dignity and distinction as if she had been born to the purple. No daughter of the reigning house of Great Britain could sustain herself in the place Lady Curzon with more admirable poise than she exhibits in all of the great functions in which she is called to figure. Lady Curzon belongs to what would be called a new family even in America. She has not behind her the traditions of centuries which many American women can point to. She was brought up in Chicago, a town that is conspicuously associated with the commercial idea. Her acquisitions were not aided by the influence of hereditary culture. Her achievements are a credit to a keen intellectual mind and an agreeable personality under the spur and encouragement of liberal advantages. Her accommodation to the requirements and the opportunities of large riches shows the difference between the British and the American systems. In England it requires centuries to manufacture the sort of ladies and gentlemen who are often developed in this country in a single generation.

SERVE MEALS PIPING HOT.

Three Pittsburg Women Fill a Long-Felt Want and Are Making It Pay.

One of the most unique business enterprises in this country was established not long ago by three Pittsburg women. Something like a year ago they rented a house in one of the best residence sections of Oakland and began to prepare and deliver what they called a "ready to serve" dinner. A patent "buffet" was constructed which would retain heat for hours. In that ingenious contrivance these dinners were served. They were guaranteed to remain fresh, appetizing and hot for three hours.

Success was theirs. Housewives soon took notice and in a short time there were hard pressed to take much trouble in getting a cook ordered the meals from these women. The "ready to serve" dinners proved a quick and easy way out of the dilemma and the ever troublesome cook was done away with.

The "ready to serve" dinner business is a new feature in nearly every city in the United States. San Francisco and fashionable Paris have soundly established cooling establishments on the same basis and it has become very popular. The three women realized a surprisingly large sum, it is said.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN THE DARK.

German Professor Says Light Is Not Needed in the Making of Pictures.

The light is not needed for the printing of photographs is a discovery which has been made by Dr. Wilhelm Oswald, professor of chemistry in the University of Leipsic. He produces the effect charged in the sensitized paper by the use of silver on negatives treated with a solution of peroxide of hydrogen. The presence of the silver causes the elements of the solution to react against each other. In a very short time in those places where there is silver in the negative the solution will disappear; in the other spots remain. This invisible picture is then transferred to gelatine and finally developed by iron sulphate in solution. Gallic acid is then applied and the result is a genuine ink picture. Dr. Oswald declares that in this method the sensitized paper will keep indefinitely and the silver can be used over any number of times. He says the process is far cheaper and quicker than any now in use, besides requiring no light. By it any design or drawing can be quickly copied.

A KENTUCKY BREAKFAST.

Col. Williams Explained the Presence of a Dog in the Bill of Fare.

"Col. Williams, of the Second Kentucky regiment, is universally beloved and respected in the middle southern states," said A. M. Taylor, amusement caterer to the Flagler hotels in Florida, reports the New York Sun. "I was on my way to New York recently, when I met the colonel at Cincinnati.

"'I tell you, sah,' said the colonel, 'Kentucky is the finest state in the union, sah. There you will find the best cattle, the noblest and most beautiful women, and the finest eating, sah, in all this broad land.'

"'Eating' Colonel,' said I to draw the colonel out. 'Now, what do you have for breakfast?'

"'Breakfast, sah,' exclaimed the colonel. 'Why, I last had a steak and a bottle of whisky for breakfast, sah.'

"'A dog?' said I. 'Seems to me that a dog is rather a queer dish for breakfast.'

"'You misunderstand me, sah,' replied the colonel, with hauteur. 'I procured the dog to eat the steak, sah.'"

SUNKEN SPANISH TREASURE.

Romantic Material in Search Prosecuted by Duke of Argyll Near Island of Mull.

There is material for a romance in the search for treasure trove being prosecuted by the duke of Argyll, off the shore of the island of Mull, says a London paper. The duke hopes to recover from the wreck of the Spanish galleon Florida a portion of the treasure sunk with her when she met her fate with the illstarred Armada fleet. The Florida was reported to have been the richest galleon in the Spanish fleet. The duke located the site of the wreck and employed a wrecking tug and divers to prosecute the search for the sunken treasure. Already the ancient ship's timbers, cannon balls, coins, skulls and swords have been reached. The sea divers hope soon to find the treasure chests. The duke of Argyll's ancestors began the search for the treasure in 1642, and now the present duke, aided by modern appliances, has renewed the search with better success. The Florida was sunk by a Scottish chieftain whom the Spanish commander abducted from the Isle of Mull. The chieftain, discovering himself to be a prisoner aboard the ship, thrust a torch into the magazine, blowing up and sinking the treasure-laden galleon. If the duke recovers the treasure he will have to give the lion's share to the treasury under the ancient law of treasure-trove.

AMONG THE ALPS.

One of the Finest Panoramic Views Is in the Very Heart of Switzerland.

*The city of Lucerne, on the north*west arm of the lake, is one of the largest and most important cities of Switzerland. Southwest of the city rises the gigantic peak of Pilatus, from whose summit is secured one of the finest panoramic views of the Alps, for the lake of Lucerne is in the very heart of Switzerland, writes Guy Morrison Walker, in Four-Track News. From most other points the views are in one or two directions, but from the peak around the Waldstatter sea the wild Alpine summits rise round you in every direction.

East of Lucerne, across the lake, stands the rival peak of Rigi, from whose summit can be obtained a view rivaling even that from Pilatus, since it commands a better view of Lake Lucerne itself, and also a magnificent view of the Lake of Zug, to the north and west. At the foot of Rigi, at the head of the north arm of the lake, nestles the valley of Kussnacht, where the tyrant Gesler built his famous castle called "Url's Menace," which was destroyed after the Swiss had overthrown the power of Austria in the fourteenth century.

IN SHAH'S PALACE.

Appalling Combination of Dinginess and Splendor, Squalor and Luxury.

The palace of the shah of Persia, according to Donald Stuart, in "The Struggle for Persia," is an appalling combination of dinginess and splendor, of squalor and luxury. One of the most interesting rooms is that filled with the portraits of all the monarchs of Europe, which changed in the majesty's writing apparatus. Here stands a globe such as may be seen in a schoolroom, except that the continents are made with gems of different color and all the names and rivers are marked in diamonds. On the walls a painting by an old master is framed next to a highly colored advertisment of a dealer in fishhooks. The throne itself is a sort of wooden bed, about nine feet by six, and the coverlet covered with diamonds, emeralds, rubies and sapphires, some an inch long. The value of the whole is estimated roughly at $5,000,000 or $6,000,000. On the throne is a carpet so thick with pearls that the texture of the cloth is hardly visible, while a huge vase, set with turquoises and pearls, stands side by side with a cheap painted urn, such as is sometimes seen at country fairs.

Soap Boiler and Mont Blanc.

The latest failure to ascend Mont Blanc is interesting, says the Pall Mall Gazette. The heroes of the story are German students with whom the primary difficulty of the enterprise was that of finding the money to pay for it. A happy thought struck them, and they called upon a Berlin soap boiler to make a proposal. If he, on his part, would finance the expedition, they on theirs would placard the mountain from base to summit with the posters with which he advertised his wares. The soap boiler liked the idea, and the bargain was duly struck. Happily, however, the communal authorities at Chamonix got wind of the proposal, and the German students are now on their way, leaving a trunk full of confiscated posters behind them.

Testing Radium.

A correspondent of the Scientific American recently passed through a peculiar experience. He tasted a small fraction of a grain of radium. It acted as a powerful stimulant, affecting both the heart and kidneys. It was several hours before the pulse became normal. It affected the mind also, producing hallucinations.

The Erie railroad will hire no more men who are over 35 years of age. It will not, for the present, however, remarks the Chicago Record-Herald, prohibit workers who are over 50 from receiving dividends.

The military posts at the German naval port of Wilhelmshaven are fitted out with watch dogs. Each sentry has one dog by the leash and lets it loose when suspicious people refuse to stop.

A PAIR OF FLICKERS

The Naturalist Watches Them Build a Home and Set Up Housekeeping.

How the Male Called His Lady Love and Began His Courtship—Interruption by a Jealous Rival —The Nest and Little Ones.

The flicker is known throughout almost the whole of North America, and wherever he is known he is loved by all right-minded members of the community. He is of good appearance, industrious in his habits, and minds his own business. He is a good citizen, and an example to the rest of us; many of us are proud of him and the others ought to be.

Last spring I saw a male flicker alight on the slanting trunk of a dead tree, and, after hitching sidewise two or three times, he stopped near a spot where the bark was loose, and began prying off bits of it with his strong curved bill, pausing now and then to devour the insects which he brought to light. Then, flying to a higher branch, he sent forth a long call, "Wicka-wicka-wicka-wicka," which penetrated to the very heart of the woods. Presently he flew to another tree, alighting close to a hard, dead branch. Then he threw his head back, and, after a momentary pause, brought the tip of his bill to bear upon the dead branch, with marvelous force and rapidity. The effect was a loud, vibratory sound not unlike the rapid rolling of a small drum, and after a moment's silence, during which the woodpecker turned his head on one side as though listening, it was repeated, seemingly louder than before.

Again and again the sound rolled forth from the resonant branch, and then, with a little "pat," a second flicker alighted upon the tree. Then the drummer ceased his drumming, for he had something better to do. The lady love he had been calling for had arrived, and the delightful task of winning her affections was before him. He drew near and bowed to her, uttering notes which sounded like as though they might be pretty speeches; then pranced in front of her, spreading his tail and his wings, displaying the golden feather shafts and the white patch on his rump. How much further he would have gone with his courtship will never be known, for at this interesting point another male flicker arrived from somewhere, and the two rivals, uttering harsh notes, dashed off together, and were followed soon after by the cause of their jealousy.

Which, if either, of the two males was eventually successful, I don't know, but, at all events, I saw a pair of mated flickers in that corner of the woods a very few days later. At last a decision was reached, and on a dead chestnut tree work was commenced. For eight days, during which hard by then, before no more chips were thrown out, I presumed that the home was finished.

Some ten days later, I enlarged the entrance a little, that I could put my hand into the nest. Inside the nest-hole was much wider than one might have supposed from glancing at the door way, and opened out into a roomy cavity which extended downwards perhaps 18 inches, affording ample room for the mother as she sat upon her eggs. Of this latter there were seven, transparent white, with pink veinings showing through the shell. The yolks, as in all fresh woodpeckers' eggs which I have seen, were plainly visible, and floated lightly to the top, no matter which way up the eggs were held.

Next time I visited the nest, the young birds were hatched, for as I tapped on the tree-trunk there came from the hole a sound like that made by escaping steam or a singing kettle; the sound of very young flickers crying in chorus. I did not see the parent birds feed the young, but we know from the observations of Mr. William Brewster that young flickers are fed by regurgitation in much the same manner as young pigeons are given their nourishment. The parent flicker thrusts his bill down the throat of a little flicker, and with his wings and tail, and in fact his whole body, quivering with the effort, he literally pumps the half-digested food from his own stomach into that of his offspring.

Some time before they were ready to leave the nest, the fledglings would scramble up to the mouth of the nest-hole, and sometimes four or five inquisitive little heads might be seen peering out at once.

On leaving the nest, they could fly well at once, making more than a hundred yards at the first attempt. Their plumage at this age was almost identical with that of the parents.

Japanese Smugglers.

A RENOVATING SHOP.

A Very Good Way For a Painstaking Woman to Earn Her Living.

Miss Bachelor Girl stopped in her busy career long enough to overhaul her wardrobe. It sadly needed it, for she had only one good dress left to wear. "What on earth can be the matter with all the others?" she exclaimed and forthwith proceeded to investigate.

The first suit was in a fair condition only. Oh, dear, I remember now. That horrid torn lining! It is fairly in ribbons and drives me wild. Oh, well, if I take it to the tailor he will charge me too much for relining it, if he will touch it at all, and, anyway, I haven't any time to bother—he is so far away and I will have to wait so long. Now, what is the matter with the other skirt? Oh, I see! A tear where it caught in the door. Well, that is at the bottom. It might be turned up into a short skirt. Very well, only it needs time, and I can't do it myself; neither can I afford fancy prices for it."

"TAKE IT TO THE REPAIRING SHOP."

At that very moment she noticed a card under her door, where letters were usually slipped. It read:

Don't throw away perfectly good clothes because you haven't time to fix them. Send them to the renovating shop, West Umpty-umpth street.

Miss Bachelor Girl telephoned and found the terms so reasonable that she immediately called a hellboy and, handing him the offending garments, bade him "take them to the renovating shop."

A few days afterward she called at the shop and found everything done to her satisfaction. She also looked about and saw that besides the cleansing and renovating branch of the business the shop held an assortment of notions and small wares such as are needed by tailors and dressmakers. Buttonholes were made to order at short notice and accordion plaiting, pinking and ruffings. Ostrich feathers were curled and cleaned and gloves made spotless again. Even lace was dipped upon occasion when it did not suit the coloring of the gown.

It was indeed a most up to date renovating shop, and one which, as the smiling proprietress informed her, made a very good living and increased its list of customers daily.

AN ARTISTIC STAIRWAY.

A Pretty Way of Decorating and Building It.

The straight stairway, while very useful, mars the looks of the hall, particularly when it has a dark turning, unlighted by any window.

The picture shows how this may be remedied. The stairway shown is of oak. It is broken by a broad landing and takes a turn to the right. On this landing there is a grandfather's clock, and a carved seat under the long, narrow window, which is given a quaint appearance by the casement effect and the small panes. This window has a full curtain of soft green silk. The green and red walls are covered with gay little water colors or prints, and the whole atmosphere is one of cheer fulness.

FOR FORMAL OCCASIONS.

Black Materials Which Are Smart, Dainty Blouse Gowns.

Black chiffon, black crepe de chine and black lace combine to form a very dressy gown which can be worn either summer or winter.

Black chiffon accordion plaited and having a bolero of black lace makes a charming evening blouse, particularly if the bolero be trimmed with chenille.

Gowns of pale gray or fawn cloth are trimmed with wide bands of crushed plush of a corresponding shade. The plush appears on the wide shoulder cape and the large drooping sleeves, with their inner ruffle of lace.

White cashmere makes admirable negligees, as it washes perfectly. It should be trimmed with a good quality of white lace and knots of white satin or black velvet ribbon.

Wash satin makes pretty house gowns also, and this is daintily trimmed with embroidery and a wide collar of lace which can be removed at will.

Negligees of all over lace are very smart, and they are made so that they can be worn over different shades of china silk.

Velvet tea gowns edged with fur and having fronts of soft ecru draped lace are quite the prettiest cold weather house gowns, and they are not really expensive if they are made at home by a reasonable seamstress.

The picture shows a picture hat of black beaver trimmed with black velvet ribbon and a white plume.

THE LATEST IN DRESS.

Brown Tulle Ball Gowns—Checked Tailor Mades.

The ball gown of brown tulle is the latest Parisian novelty, and so is the brown chiffon frock. Both require relieving with lace. This is a particularly becoming shade to those who have chestnut or auburn hair and a good complexion.

Wine color is very smart for a winter costume when seen in rich velvet or particularly fine cloth, for it does not come in the right shade in cheap materials.

Tailors are again using checks in browns and greens. These are softened with chenille trimmings. A gown seen recently was of green and white checked material, having a bolero bodice trimmed with dull green silk pouching over a very wide kid band. With this was worn a very large toreador toque of green velvet trimmed with parma violets.

All the soft fabrics are gauged and plaited at the waist, while even the heavy velvets and plushes are allowed to hang in full folds.

There is no such thing as a stiff fitted skirt any more. Everything hangs full and is trimmed so as to conceal rather than reveal the figure. Gray is the smartest color for a reception gown, and it is not trying if relieved by white lace or a tiny touch of color next to the face.

The picture shows a gown of brown cloth trimmed with rows of mink. The skirt is very full and is trimmed with six rows of lace dyed to match. There is a mink stole as well as a hat of mink trimmed with a white feather.

SLEEVES GROWING LARGER.

Cloth and Velvet Costumes Alike Boast Wide Puffs of Lace.

Sleeves are growing continually in size, and they are shirred and puffed in most wonderful fashion. Old fashioned sleeves can be cut off at the elbow, slashed and filled in with ruffles of very full lace. Cape effects, shirrings and much tucked and huge puffs are all features of the new sleeves. Cape effects bordered with narrow fur and decorated on their points with tassels add to the breadth of the shoulders.

The velvet craze still continues. The three-quarter Louis coats in this material are lined with white satin and trimmed with wonderful embroideries. Dark royal blue and a shade of violet are great favorites, and when these are worn with a stole of ermine the effect is truly regal.

Some of the long garments are faced back for a distance with wonderful brocades. A favorite design is baskets of roses on a white silk gown. Lace ruffles in the wide sleeves and lace fronts are necessary features of the dressy coats, and, in fact, the lace sleeve ruffles are seen even on humbler tailor mades of cloth.

Three-quarter garments of fine black or gray cloth are trimmed with collars of dyed lace and deep fringe. The buttons are as rich as the owner can afford, and when they are of enamel or cut steel they add much to the smartness of even a very plain coat.

The picture shows a sable and velvet coat and a sable three cornered hat trimmed with a white plume.

EVENING DRESSES.

Transparent Silks—Wider Belts Than Ever.

Soft crepe de chines and eastern silks which have a certain degree of transparency are charming worn over pale colored slips. Thus white can be made up over pale green trimmed with pale green embroidery and a cluster of parma violets and their leaves. These diaphanous materials are particularly good form for young girls and make admirable dressy costumes.

The expensive velvet gown should be made practical by having two bodices, one for day and the other for evening wear. This last if cut plainly may do service for many occasions simply by changing the trimmings in the shape of berthas of fancy lace or flowers.

Pink and pale blue is a combination just now much in favor, especially on ball gowns, where it takes the form of pale pink roses and forgetmenots.

Belts are wider than ever, and no gown can be quite smart with a narrow belt. Broad ribbon is crossed and fastens in the back with two oddly knotted ends. All the belts are brought down into a point in the front, where they are held by a jeweled pin or buckle.

Black costumes are now relieved by a bit of color, emerald green being one of the favorite shades for this purpose. Some of the handsomest black gowns are incrusted with ecru or even white lace, and this light colored lace is even seen on jet gowns.

The picture shows a black chantilly lace gown trimmed with white lace appique which has the wide cape effect and wide girdle.

STREET COSTUMES.

Ankle Length Skirts Very Generally Worn—Suitable Materials.

Accordion plaiting is immensely popular in Paris, where Mme. Rejane affects this graceful fashion.

The tailor made suit, just clearing the ground, has become one of the necessities of the smart woman's wardrobe, and every woman has at least one costume of this sort. The favorite material is sibeline or rough goods of some sort, although cloths are also seen. Royal blue heliotrope and all shades of gray are very smart in the rough materials. They are trimmed with beautiful braid and even velvet bands. The jackets are dainty and as elaborate as those worn with the longer skirts. They have fluffy fronts eked out with embroidery, and the little hat matches the costume. Many of these coats have wide fur collars, and the flat muff carried matches this collar and is decorated with a bow of velvet to the shade of the costume.

The ankle length skirt is trimmed horizontally with tucks and pipings and is almost as full as the skirt with the train.

Velveteen and corduroy in plum and deep red shades make very smart street costumes of this description.

The hat in the sketch is of white felt trimmed with velvet straps held down with gilt buttons and a white feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY GOWNS.

Ruching the Favorite Trimming. The New Chiffon Volles.

The most popular trimming at present is without doubt ruching. This is made of a great variety of materials, net and taffeta being the favorites. They head and border flounces and are also seen on either side of bands of wide lace. Ruchings of chiffon are used on gowns and millinery as well, while, as for the frayed out ruffle of taffeta, it is the very smartest thing for dresses of veiling or crepe de chine.

GOWN OF DOTTED NET.

Net and chiffon voile skirts are trimmed with broad bands of shirring divided off by rows of ruching.

The present soft, pretty styles are eminently becoming to the young girl who is apt to be a trifle angular and unformed.

The new chiffon voile, while not an inexpensive material, pays in the long run, and as it is very durable while at the same time soft and pretty it lends itself admirably to accordion plaiting. Nothing can be prettier for a young girl than a dress of cream chiffon voile worn over a petticoat of inexpensive satin, the waist being trimmed with white embroidery and chenille network or perhaps a tiny touch of gold thread.

The new veils are exquisite in color and texture. White illusion, having a tiny black ring, is worn with the large white hats. The veils for automobiling are of chiffon, with hemstitched ends, and so long that they are brought around twice and fastened in a knot under the chin, allowing the ends to fall below the waist line.

The newest thing in muffs is very flat and large and lined with its own fur instead of with satin.

In the picture we have an evening gown of white dotted net, with a shirred berlha having an embroidered edge. The skirt is very full, with three bands of shirring and seven tucks at the bottom.

TRIMMINGS AND MATERIALS

Horizontal Tuckings and Pipings, Crushed Plush in Moleskin Shades.

Trimmings and tuckings have grown horizontal instead of vertical on gowns. The most fashionable skirt of the moment is made full around the waist line, and it begins to be trimmed at the knees with wide entredeux of lace, sometimes edged with fur and wide tucks.

The full skirt and the round bertha, together with the decolletage drooping off the shoulders, are reminiscent of the early Victorian period. The shawl is to be revived, experts say, but just now it takes the form of graceful cape effects trimmed with fringe, and these are seen even in fur, notably ermine trimmed with black and white chenille fringe or, better still, a fringe made of the tails.

Velvet gowns are the thing for evening and afternoon wear. They are made quite plainly, with a touch of fine lace at the neck and at the big sleeve puffs.

Crushed plush in moleskin shades forms some of the smartest costumes. These are made quite simply, with a little, loose hanging coat having wide sleeve ruffles of yellow lace. Sometimes a coat of this description is worn with a skirt of gray cloth similar in shade. The picture shows a gray cloth gown trimmed with rosettes of gun metal velvet and rows of dyed lace. There is a cape effect bordered with fur. With this is worn a picture hat of black velvet.

FASHIONABLE COLORS.

Purple From Deep to Pale Tones All the Rage—Kid Trimmings.

There is a great vogue of purple now, from the pale shades to the deepest tones of violet, in cloth or velvet for street wear. Pale heliotrope crepe de chine is one of the dressiest costumes a woman can have, and this should be trimmed with chiffon and touches of embroidery.

There are some new materials in cream and white. They have a very rough surface and are embroidered in spots, either blue or black.

Red cloth and velvet of all shades are still much seen, and this is trimmed with bands of fur and oriental embroideries.

Muffs and stoles are if anything increasing in size. They are rapidly becoming more fantastic, for the muffs are shirred into jeweled buckles, and the stoles droop far over the shoulders and are trimmed with jeweled clasps, lace and even artificial flowers.

Ruchings are used on hats as well as gowns, and the favorites, made of satin, chiffon velvet and chiffon, ornament the brims of otherwise plain hat shapes.

Odd shapes in pale tinted felt are considered smarter than velvet in the millinery world. They are trimmed with shaded velvet bows or flowers.

Leather is used as a trimming on many of the smart walking suits. The kid and suede is of course very pliable and makes very smart belts of five folds held together by a jeweled buckle.

The illustration shows a deep purple cloth costume having a bolero trimmed with tails. The hat is of rough felt trimmed with a single large bird. The muff is of yellow lace and tails.

SELF IMPROVEMENT

Women Who Care About It and Women Who Do Not

"SOME people are satisfied to be just as they are," remarked the energetic woman.

"That's me," put in the bachelor unpretentiously from the comfortable depths of his armchair.

"I was referring to women," she returned with severity. "Most of them are content to jog along just as they are, without a thought of the future and barely a thought of the present."

"Happy are the people who never think!"

"Oh, you are so contrary! But they do think, only they think afterward, when it is too late."

"I see. Things happen to them."

"Of course. Things always happen to the woman who doesn't try to keep ahead of the times and improve herself, and they are not pleasant things either. Take, for instance, the most common case, the woman who doesn't care for her personal appearance. Once upon a time she was very alert on the subject, strange to say; but that was before she married. Now that she has a man tied to her by law and church contract she doesn't see why she should tire herself prinking and curling her hair and fussing with her dresses in order that they may be up to date. It is far more amusing to gossip with the neighbors or read novels after her daily tasks are over. But even self improvement as regards dress or the lack of self improvement brings its results, as she finds to her sorrow when she discovers her husband making comparisons between her and other women, praising this one's style and that one's personal appearance and taking her out less and less often because he is no longer proud of her. Perhaps, too, it comes to this—some other woman with not half her good looks steals her husband from her because she knows how to make the most of every good point that nature has granted her."

"I have my lesson down pat in case I am a woman in my next incarnation, but what about the charms of the mind and character? Are they not to be cultivated?"

"They are indeed. I could speak volumes on that same subject, on the woman who neglects her mind so that she has nothing in common with her own children after they have been to school a few years; of the wife who is no companion to her husband for this very reason, and who in consequence sees him find companionship elsewhere because he cannot get it at home."

"And what about girls? Are women the only sinners?"

"I am sorry to say women are apt to take it easy after marriage and think that, as in the story books, they have nothing to do but live happily forever after. But some girls are just as bad. They think, 'Oh, I shall marry, so what is the use of cultivating this talent or improving myself along that line?'"

"Marriage seems to be the great barrier to self improvement," commented the bachelor cynically. "I'm glad I'm not married."

"It isn't so for the man. His ambitions and interests keep getting broader and broader; his wife's, I am sorry to say, as a rule, narrower. It is her own fault. She doesn't seem to realize that there are other things in marriage besides love, companionship and ambition among them."

"But are there no women who try to improve themselves?"

"Oh, any number, and they only make the others stand out in bolder relief. I know of one girl who started with very little education and totally adverse circumstances and yet managed to fit herself for the bar. She is now one of the most prominent women lawyers. I know of another girl who, finding herself subject to fits of despondency and everything going wrong, used to write out every week a list of her failures and of her successes. Opposite each she would write the reason why, the truthful reason why, as far as she could see it, and in it a wonder she succeeded finally, when she had the grit to look things full in the face like that? It is the girl who keeps doggedly and persistently on, regardless of failures, trying each time to do better than the last—it is that girl or woman, I say, who obtains finally the best things in life, and keeps them—which is better still."

MILLINERY NOTES.

Camellias the Leading Flower—Beaver the Smartest Material.

Camellias are quite the smartest millinery flower. There is something about its stiff waxen petals and important exterior which adapts itself particularly well to millinery purposes, and the foliage, too, is particularly effective against fur or lace. To get the very fluffy effect in hats the skins of cats and rabbits are being dyed all the hues of the rainbow, and flowers in velvet are placed on them of a contrasting or harmonizing shade.

As for the vogue of beaver, it still is on the increase, and no smooth felt can hope to be fashionable by its side.

The fluffy white beaver is the most fashionable material for hats, and this is often sewed with little ermine tails and trimmed with white ostrich tips. Black silk beavers are also modish, and they are trimmed with gold or silver braid and white or shaded pink roses.

Toques of moleskin and ermine are trimmed with white or shaded ostrich plumes.

Hats both for grown people and children are extra large. The prettiest hat for a child is a French sailor shape in beaver to match the little coat and trimmed with two big rosettes of ribbon of a pale contrasting shade.

The illustration shows a French sailor of white beaver bound with a deep shade of heliotrope velvet and trimmed with a twisted bow of the same and clusters of violets.

WAISTS AND FANCY EFFECTS

Blouses of Chiffon and All Over Lace. The Fiat Stole.

The most fashionable and really the most practical waist, although it is rather expensive at first, is of ecru net trimmed with shirred insertions of yellow lace and embroidered figures. This is made up over a slip of white china silk, and the whole thing will clean or wash beautifully.

Crepe de chine waists in white and pale colorings are largely taking the place of the stiffer silks. They are trimmed with embroidery, white or dyed lace, and many of them are made very dressy by the addition of chiffon.

Whole waists of chiffon trimmed with lace are very dressy, but, alas, very perishable. The all over lace waist trimmed with taffeta bands seems to be the most practical to wear under a coat, and it can be softened around the neck by the addition of a tulle bow.

Owing to the low dressing of the hair tulle bows are now worn in front under the chin instead of at the back of the neck.

The wide flat stole is with us to stay, and every tailor made is improved by the addition of this charming piece of neckwear. When not of fur it is of heavy dyed lace and cloth, of chiffon and lace or of white or pale gray feathers. In any case it must harmonize with the gown.

The picture shows a bride's dress of crepe de chine and fine lace. There is a tucked yoke, a big bertha and wide flounced sleeves, which give a picturesque air to the whole. The shirred skirt has its fullness increased around the feet by a double chiffon frill.

Thursday, Jan. 28, 1904.

A ministers' association in Wilkesbarre, Pa., is up in arms because a Shakespearian play was produced at a seminary controlled by the denomination. And this is the twentieth century.

Your neighbors on either side of you are not advertising. They have gone to sleep, promising to wake each other up if anything should happen. It's up to you to happen. — Benjamin F. Briggs.

The fact that according to Commissioner Yerkes, 6,787,554,891 cigars were smoked in the United States in 1903 shows that money often disappears between a whiff and a puff.—Passaic Daily News.

And it also shows where all the cabbage has gone.

This is an extract from an editorial roast on Charles Arthur Reed served by the Newark Evening News:

"He is not likely to be given a chance to monkey with Union County politics so long as the memory of his repudiation in Somerset is fresh in the public mind. Neither Senator Kean nor Congressman Fowler has any use for 'dead men' at this stage of the political game."

We do not profess to know how Union County would receive the former Senator, but we do know that there is no question about his popularity in this city not only among Republican politicians but among the general public. As for his being a dead one in Somerset, the election returns of late years show that he and his friend Smalley, are very much alive.

Woe to the unhappy newspaper man or the unlucky citizen who invades the sanctity of the holy of holies where the noble body of statesmen composing the Senate of New Jersey meet to pass upon the affairs of State. Ill betide the public that would manifest a sacrilegious concern in its own business as brought before its wise men. Verily they shall be cast into outer darkness. For the decree has gone forth that the ignominious knights of the pen and the upstart public shall be excluded from the Senate chamber unless forsooth they are the specially favored holders of cards entitling them to entrance into the august presence. So saith the lord and master, Franklin Murphy.

To this most awful mandate has subscribed himself, the most righteous and sanctified Senator Joseph Cross, who leadeth the Republican host. For it has been spoken that the chamber wherein sits the most awful of bodies is too constricted and limited a place for the reception of its lawful inmates and the scribes and the Pharisees at the same time. Wonder is that walls of stone and mortar are constructed that will not tremble and fall apart before the dreadful majesty of this most illustrious "concourse omnium bonorum."

The word has gone forth! Let the people tremble!

AMUSEMENTS.

Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon in "Sherlock Holmes" are at the Grand Opera House, repeating the excellent impression made in the same play, at this theatre last season. This marks the farewell presentation of "Sherlock Holmes" in New York, as after this season, it will be confined to one-night stands. Mr. Kelcey is the very embodiment of Conan Doyle's great detective hero, and the recent revival of the Sherlock Holmes' stories brings added interest to this week's engagement.

A typical Keith programme is the offering for the coming week at the Union Square Theatre. That means that it has been selected with great care and judgment, by one who knows what is wanted, and theatrical results must be an entertainment that will be pleasing to all. One of the features will be that mysterious person, "The Girl with the Auburn Hair." This will be her first appearance in New York in three years, and she will doubtless add to her already great fame. Who and what she is still remains as great a mystery as when she first sang her "sermon in song" and the atmosphere of mystery adds to the charm of an act that is wholly out of the general run of vaudeville.

Trolley Signal.

For the purpose of still further increasing the efficiency of the trolley service in this city, the Public Service Corporation has caused to be installed on West Front street, nearly opposite Somerset, a signal box, making it possible for the officials on duty at the Watchung avenue station to know exactly where a car is and this device will do away with confusion heretofore existing between Front and Somerset streets and the trolley stand on Watchung avenue. The signal was put in position Monday.

Famous Wall Scene.

"Babes in Toyland" has had the longest run of any on Broadway.

Recent inquiries by the New York Fire Department and the newspapers concerning the conditions for safeguarding the public has revealed the fact that the Majestic Theatre has the lowest rate of insurance of any theatres in New York and that the authorities believe it to be the safest of any of the theatres standing in the metropolis today.

Two new stanzas have been added to the catchy "Put Down Six and Carry Two" song of "Babes in Toyland" at the Majestic Theatre. Frank Hayes a member of the cast, spurred by his muse gave up the lines here:

If on this eve a man should make resolutions nine,
And break them all by half-past six
'Cause friends called him a shine.
If he should drink of everything
But water by the pail,
How many high balls would it take,
To land this man in jail.

Marital Bliss of Ten Years Interrupted—Man in Husband's Employe—Last Seen When Boarding Train for New York.

After her husband had lavished gifts upon her and spent about $50,000 during the past few years to gratify her merest whims, Mrs. J. B. Medhurst, wife of a prominent New York electrical engineer, who is also proprietor of the Central Hotel at Fanwood, left him Friday morning. Alfred Stocker, employed by her husband as manager of the hotel and occasionally as bartender is also missing.

Stocker has been unremitting in his attentions to Mrs. Medhurst it is said, while he has managed the Central Hotel which Mr. Medhurst purchased about eighteen months ago.

Nothing like the alleged denouement was anticipated, however, as Mr. and Mrs. Medhurst had lived peacefully together during their ten years of married life. Mr. Medhurst went to Fanwood three years ago from New York, first buying The Maples, a hotel which he intended to run as a side issue to his New York business, which brings him in a handsome income. He purchased The Maples from George Thatcher, the well-known minstrel, selling it to James Loughlin to become proprietor of the Central Hotel, on Park avenue, which he bought of E. L. Hand.

Stocker and Mrs. Medhurst left the hotel Friday morning, taking with them two trunks and a sewing machine. They had their tickets taken by express to Westfield where they embarked on a train for New York, it is said. That is the last known of them. They left the hostler in charge of the hotel. Mr. Medhurst did not discover his loss until he returned at his usual time from his business in New York.

Mr. Medhurst was seen Saturday night and stated that he did not intend pursuing his wife. He said that if Mrs. Medhurst preferred another to a faithful husband and the comforts and luxuries of home life she was welcome. He has with him his little four-year-old daughter.

Nothing is known of Stocker beyond the fact that he came to Fanwood from Jersey City. He is an expert mixer of drinks.

They Cut Ice.

Smalley Brothers, the North avenue butchers, have begun cutting ice on the pond, near Brook avenue, for use in their refrigerators. They are storing it in one of Charles Hand's barns

J. ACKERMAN COLES' GIFT

TWO PIECES OF STATUARY PLACED IN POSITION IN NEWARK LIBRARY.

The copies of the two pieces of statuary, Caesar Augustus and the Apollo Belvedere, given to the people of Newark by J. Ackerman Coles, M. D., LL. D., in memory of his father, the late Abraham Coles, M. D., LL. D., and accepted by the art committee of the Newark Free Public Library, have been placed in position on pedestals just inside the main entrance of that institution. The "Caesar Augustus" occupies a position at the south end of the vestibule, while the "Apollo Belvedere" keeps watch and ward at the opposite end.

BUSINESS MEN WON GAME

PASSAIC TEAM DEFEATED AT BASKET BALL ON Y. M. C. A. FLOOR.

The Business Men's team of the Y. M. C. A. did good work Saturday by defeating the Passaic Y. M. C. A. at Passaic, by a score of 29 to 26. The game was close, hard-fought, and well played and at times the going was rough. Scull did most of the scoring for Plainfield, with six baskets to his credit. The summary:

Business Men—Hand and Whitford, forwards; Scull, centre; Ursinger and Neal, guards. Passaic—Dunn and Renig, forwards; Horton, centre; Brown and Freeman, guards.

Score—Business Men, 29; Passaic, 26. Goals from the floor—Scull, 6; Whitford, 3; Hand, 2; Neal, 3; Renig, 3; Horton, Brown, Freeman, 3. Referee—Spicer. Umpire—Thomas.

MAJ. TREADWELL DEAD.

Father of Frederick-Ayres Company's Manager Passes Away at Albany.

Major George H. Treadwell, father of Louis Treadwell, manager of the Frederick-Ayers Company of this city, died Thursday at his home in Albany, N. Y. Major Treadwell leaves five children, one of his sons being Col. George Curtis Treadwell, formerly military secretary to Gov. Black and Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, and a member of their military staffs. A daughter is the wife of John Boyd Thatcher, former mayor of Albany and a World's Fair commissioner.

Attachments Discontinued.

The attachment cases of McKenna and Gavin against William H. Townsend have been amicably settled. The plaintiffs were represented by Reed & Coddington and the defendant by William R. Wilcox, of Elizabeth. The case was to have been tried in Justice Hand's court.

Fiat Wheel in Service.

Car No. 41, on the route between the depot and Netherwood avenue, ran all day Saturday with a pronounced case of "flat wheel." All day and way into the night it continued to make its trips.

P. S. C. ANXIOUS FOR IMPROVEMENT

President McCarter Admits That There is Just Cause for Public's Protests.

SYSTEM IN BAD SHAPE

LACK OF CARS THE CAUSE OF MUCH OF THE TROUBLE.

Corporation Disposed to Comply With All Reasonable Demands—The Severity of Winter Has Hurt the Company.

Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, admits that there is just cause for the hostility recently displayed throughout Northern New Jersey toward the trolley company because of inadequate transportation facilities. He also admits that the deterioration of the car equipment and the lack of sufficient cars is common to the whole system. But he strenuously protests that since the formation of the corporation, nine months ago, he has not been able to obtain from the manufacturers the 150 new cars that were ordered for Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne, and he has not had sufficient time in which to build power houses in these cities.

"The Public Service Corporation has every disposition to comply with all reasonable demands of the public and regulations of municipal bodies," said Mr. McCarter yesterday. "It cannot, however, thoroughly reorganize and largely re-equip an extensive railway system in a few months. Unreasonable and vexatious ordinances and impositions can only result in additional delay in the efforts of the company to improve its system, and will, of course, be contested if enacted. The severity of the present winter has added considerably to the strain upon the facilities of the company. Besides, harsh and intemperate criticism tends to demoralize discipline and weaken the efficiency of the company.

"We are going to do everything that is possible, and hope there will be less cause for complaint in our trolley department. How much there has been to do and in what a prostrate condition we found the lines could hardly be told. It was far worse than anybody has known."

ENTERTAINED CLASS.

Miss Justina Smith Hostess of Eighteen Young Persons.

Miss Justina Smith, of Duer street, entertained the eighteen members of her Sunday-school class of young women at her home Monday, the event being an annual one. The evening was spent in playing games, interspersed with vocal and instrumental selections by Miss Smith. The class had a good time and not the least of the enjoyable features was the supper served by the hostess.

The Great Airship Race.

The St. Louis World's Fair is going to be the most wonderful thing of its kind the world has ever seen. Among the extraordinary features will be a wonderful airship race for a prize of $100,000 between the most famous aeronauts of the earth. Who will win? What will it be like? Next Sunday's World will tell you in picture and story all about the novel contest. But this is known of the Panama Canal, which the United States will probably build. Everyone oughs to be familiar with it. The Sunday World will present the first authentic map and diagram of the gigantic enterprise, with informative facts, that has ever appeared in an American paper. A suicide's record of his dying sensations, a Boston woman's sixteen-year fight for a name, story of winter-time theatrical shows, etc., will make next Sunday's World a very interesting number.

DIED IN THE WEST.

Charles Wesley Ulrick Passed Away at Los Angeles, Cal.

Word of the death of Charles Wesley Ulrick, formerly a resident of East Fifth street, has been received from Los Angeles, California, where Mr. Ulrick had been for some time past for the benefit of his health. Death was due to cancer of the stomach. Mr. Ulrick is survived by a widow, two daughters and one son. The children are all married. Mr. Ulrick was sixty years of age.

The employes of Levering & Garrigues' Iron Works have been notified that a ten per cent. cut in wages will go into effect on the 7th. This is caused by the great slack in the steel business which was caused by the labor strikes last summer and fall.

Mrs. Henry Pierce is on the sick list this week.

Two novel minstrel performances by society men will be given at the Casino, Wednesday and Thursday nights, April 6 and 7.

A. W. TEN EYCK WEDS MISS MARY A. WINTER

Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan Officiates at Ceremony, Which Took Place at His Home.

ENJOYING HONEYMOON

BRIDE WORE A TRAVELING GOWN OF BROWN BROADCLOTH.

Couple Will Reside in East Fifth Street—Groom Engaged in Pullman Car Service—Couple Well-Known Young People.

Miss Mary Adelaide Winter, daughter of Mrs. Mary L. Winter, of East Fifth street, and Alvah W. TenEyck, of Norwood avenue, were quietly married last night by Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, at his home in Albert street. No other persons were present, except the bride's mother who gave her in marriage. The affair was a quiet one owing to a recent death in the family.

The bride was gowned in a traveling suit of brown broadcloth and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's mother, where supper was served. The home was prettily decorated with smilax and white roses. After the supper Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck left town to enjoy a honeymoon of a week or ten days. Upon their return they will reside with the bride's mother on East Fifth street.

The bride received some handsome presents from relatives and friends. The groom holds a lucrative and responsible position in the Pullman Palace Car service.

SPEAK-EASY KEEPER FINED

FOR VIOLATING LAW GEORGE ALEXANDER IS MINUS FORTY DOLLARS.

Inside workings of a speak-easy were exposed in the borough court by Recorder Doud last Monday when arraigned before him were a half dozen fourteen-year-old boys and George Alexander, proprietor of several fruit store-rum shops on Somerset street. It was shown that small boys were sold beer in soda water bottles on Sunday and on week days. The fruit dealer, who is only twenty years old, was severely reprimanded by the Recorder and fined $40 with the alternative of seven days imprisonment for keeping a disorderly house and on a charge of selling liquor to minors he was fined another $20 or seven days.

Chief Marshal William B. Campbell, Christian Mobus, Frank DeCamp, Bert Taynor and Julius Marshal were witnesses against the "Joint." They testified that the place was disorderly and that beer was sold to small boys in beer bottles. Marshal Weiss testified that there were numerous fights in the place.

During the trial the Recorder asked the prisoner what church he was a member of and why he persisted in desecrating the Sabbath by keeping open on that day. Alexander answered that he kept open in order to make more money and that business was better on that day than on any other.

In taking the prisoner below some one jostled the officer and Alexander ran down stairs. The officer followed but could not find the fellow. He reported that the prisoner had escaped. The courtroom was filled with people and every one started in to hunt for the escaped prisoner. He was soon discovered hiding behind a small door. When he was brought out he paid his fine and was released.

During the trial Alexander's sister fainted in court and caused considerable excitement. Realizing that a warrant was hanging over his head on a county charge of selling liquor without a license, Alexander paid fourteen dollars extra so as to secure his release from custody and then slipped out of town. In this way he has avoided arrest for illegal selling. His shop was closed this morning.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER JAMES CLARK

New York and Plainfield Citizens Attend Obsequies at His Late Home.

BODY PLACED IN VAULT

REV. J. S. ZELIE, PASTOR OF CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH, OFFICIATED.

Lotus Glee Club Sang—Remains to Rest in Mausoleum in Hillside Cemetery—Beautiful Floral Tributes at House.

The funeral services of the late James Clark were held from the home on West Seventh street, Monday afternoon. There was a very large gathering of friends, including a number of business men from New York, who were more or less associated with Mr. Clark in his various enterprises. There was also a large and beautiful display of floral tributes, comprising several large set pieces and a number of cut flowers.

The services were conducted by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, who read appropriate Scripture selections, offered prayer and made a short address. During the services, the Lotus Glee Club sang "I Am But a Stranger Here," "Nearer, My God to Thee," and Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar."

The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery until the mausoleum, which is now being constructed there, is completed. This mausoleum was commenced some time ago by Mr. Clark and is considered to be one of the most magnificent and costliest in New Jersey.

NEW BRUNSWICK DEAD EASY

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. TEAM WON BASKET BALL GAME WITHOUT ANY TROUBLE.

The Business Men's basket ball team of the Y. M. C. A. continued in its winning streak last night, the first team of the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. being its vanquished opponents. New Brunswick never had a show to win, Plainfield tallying enough times in the first half to land the victory. The local five led at the end of the first period, 18 to 9, and at the end of the game, 30 to 17. The match was played in the local gymnasium.

Plainfield won last night chiefly through superiority in locating the basket. The team work of the Business Men was more practised, and it was hard work for New Brunswick to break through their guards. Plainfield seemed to improve as the game progressed.

Spicer held down his position in fine style, scoring six goals from the floor and two from fouls. Clark, at guard, made four long-distance shots for baskets. The performance of the team as a whole was well balanced. Ewing was the leading light for New Brunswick. The summary:

Plainfield Business Men—Whitford and Doane, forwards; Spicer, centre; Clark and Lot, guards. New Brunswick—Ewing and Quackenbas, forwards; Geraline, centre; Rice and Meyer, guards.

Score — Business Men, 30; New Brunswick, 71. Goals from the floor —Doane, 2; Spicer, 6; Clark, 4; Lot, Whitford, Ewing, 5; Quackenbas, 2; Meyer. Goals from fouls—Spicer, 2; Ewing. Referee—Dr. Browning. Umpire — Heinecke. Time-keeper — Utzinger. Scorer—Pittinger. Time—20-min. periods.

PATIENTS SLEEP OUTDOORS

MISS MAMIE LEAHY, OF THIS CITY, AMONG COLONY AT SARANAC LAKE.

Miss Mamie Leahy, of 830 Richmond street, is one of the most persistent of the village colony of tuberculosis patients who are sleeping outdoors at Saranac Lake, N. Y., this winter. Her bed is arranged on a veranda, one side of which is inclosed by a glass partition. She is well protected in that way from the severe snow storms, which are plentiful there. Miss Leahy has not slept indoors a night since last September.

This winter will go on record as one of the coldest ever experienced in the Adirondacks. The cold has been continuous since early in December, and the thermometer has for days at a time held close to the zero mark. Five mornings of the winter, official figures show, it dropped way below zero. It touched 46 degrees below on January 5.

Not one case is recorded at the sanitarium of the cold driving in a patient who has been sleeping out this winter, and this is also true in the village.

ALIS CLUB'S TEAM ALREADY SELECTED

Who the Men Are, and What They Have Done on the Baseball Diamond.

SEASON OPENS APRIL 23

GAMES SCHEDULED AND MANY OTHERS IN PROSPECT.

Twenty Games to be Played—Six Players Formerly on the Manhattan College Team—Alis Management Active.

When the Alis Club opens the baseball season on Saturday, April 23, the baseball loving public will see a team that will represent the city on the diamond. During the winter the baseball management has been busy getting together one of the finest aggregations that will be seen in New Jersey the coming season, outside of the league nines. As stated a few days ago the management proposes to play the best semi-professional teams from the beginning to the close of the season and it hopes to have its opening game with the Seventh Regiment nine from New York. Already applications have been received for dates from Madison, Pearsalls and many other teams in and around New York, and it is not too much to expect that before the season is over the well-known Orange A. C. may be seen on Crescent Oval.

With the exception of a second baseman, the Alis team is complete. The choice is between two men, either one being well fitted for the position and a decision will be reached soon. Of those absolutely secured for the season, six are Manhattan College men, and each one has a reputation in the metropolitan district as being a cracker jack. There will be two batteries, the main one being composed of O'Brien and Duff, the regular Manhattan College battery. Duff will captain the team. O'Brien pitched one game last season for Alis against Madison, the latter being defeated by a score of 6 to 1. While the management was trying to get a battery, and Edward Minihan, of Orange, was being considered, the latter being unable to accept the position of pitcher for Alis, he gave O'Brien and Duff the highest recommendation, saying that he believed them to be among the very best of the college players. Minihan now stands a good show of going with the New York Nationals. McGraw having promised him a trial.

First base will be covered by Cotter, while Zimmerman will be on third base and Busbe will play short-stop. These men together with Daly who will play right field, compose the rest of the Manhattang College players, while Gohrmley and Griffin, of the Pearsalls, will compose the extra battery and also play in the field, Gohrmley being in centre and Griffin in right field. The latter will be remembered pitched for Alis against Scotch Plains last season in a morning holiday game and defeated them. Gohrmley caught several games for Alis last season and in one game made one of the most phenomenal plays seen on a diamond, that of making a double play, unassisted.

Zimmerman played on St. Mary's team the last of the season, proving himself a crack fielder, heavy batter and good base-runner. As for the rest of the team all are known to be heavy batters and strong men in the several fielding positions to which they are assigned. As for Duff, he as well as his pitcher, O'Brien, are considered the equal of many league batteries. In fact either one could enter the league if they cared to leave college.

With such a team in the field there should be no question as to the support of the Plainfield public. The management has gotten together what is believed to be an exceptionally strong aggregation and the plan is to give the people the best article of semi-professional baseball. Season tickets for a schedule of twenty games will soon be issued.

There will be the usual games with Westfield and Scotch Plains and schedule which will be satisfactory to all three clubs will be arranged. So far as practical the Alis management will endeavor to have as many games as possible played on Crescent Oval and every arrangement will be made for the convenience of the patrons of the game.

The Public Service Corporation has promised to give the best service possible so that the crowds can be carried back and forth quickly and without any unnecessary delays.

John Slevin, B. A. Mumford and Arthur Boone compose the baseball management and now that the team has been decided upon they will soon begin the work of arranging the schedule of games for the season.

Mrs. Pratt, of New York, is spending several days with her mother, Mrs. Williams, of West End avenue.

MR. ANDREWS, CHAIRMAN OF Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION

Four Hundred Delegates to Attend Thirty-Third Annual Meeting at Trenton.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

THE SESSIONS ARRANGED TO LAST FOUR DAYS.

Trenton People to Entertain Delegates—The Lotus Glee Club to Furnish the Music—The Programme in Detail.

Four hundred New Jersey Y. M. C. A. workers, representing all the associations in the State, will assemble in Trenton next month on the occasion of the thirty-third State convention. The convention will be held in Association Hall, will open Thursday, Feb. 11 and will last until Sunday evening, February 14.

The session will open at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon in charge of Frederick H. Andrews, of this city, chairman of the State executive committee.

The official call has just been issued, which, among other things, says:

"Meeting as the guests of the progressive association of the capital city, and covering a legal holiday, February 12, Lincoln's birthday, the place and the time and the elaborate preparations should ensure a large attendance."

Department conferences will occupy an entire afternoon and will meet in the following sections: City association directors and committeemen, railroad and street railway delegates, student delegates, county and town delegates, leaders in boys' work, physical directors.

Several prominent leaders not mentioned in the list of speakers will appear in these conferences.

The convention music will be directed by Secretary Merton L. Beebe, of Rahway assisted by the Lotus Glee Club, of which Charles L. Lewis, of this city is a member, and the Trenton association orchestra.

Three hundred of the delegates will be entertained in the homes of the local citizens. Some of the best homes in the city have already been placed at the disposal of the convention for this purpose, and members of the local association are actively engaged in securing additional homes for the delegates. In order that the work of securing all the homes required may be completed as soon as possible, those willing to entertain one or more delegates are requested to communicate with Secretary Wry at once.

MRS. TRUELL BUYS HOTEL

PARK AVENUE HOSTELRY SOLD TO WOMAN WHO HAS MADE A SUCCESS.

The Park Avenue Hotel, one of the best known hostelries in this city, and one with a varied career, has been sold to Mrs. J. R. Truell, of Truell Court, by Augustus J. Brunson, the owner. Just what Mrs. Truell proposes to do with the place is not known at present, and as the change will not take place until about March 1, she has plenty of time to make any arrangements she may have in mind. For some time past Truell Court has been occupied to the limit and it is through a desire to secure additional room that Mrs. Truell has taken the hotel property. Whether the place will be continued as a hotel or turned into a place similar to Truell Court, has not yet been decided.

It is understood that since Mr. Brunson became president of the First National Bank, a position that takes a great deal of his time, he arranged to dispose of the hotel property.

James R. Blair, on Park avenue, carries a full and complete line of men's furnishing goods and also has a complete assortment of collars, ties, cravats and dress suit cases.

JAMES CLARK DEAD AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Plainfield's Wealthiest Citizen Succumbed to Pneumonia in His Home on W. Seventh St.

HE WAS 83 YEARS OLD

LIBERAL GIVER TO CHARITY, HIS BENEFACTIONS BEING MANY.

Made a Fortune in a Tannery at St. Louis—A Big Stockholder in a Leather Concern—Survived by a Wife and Two Sons.

James Clark, for many years one of the most prominent citizens of Plainfield, died Friday afternoon at his home, 404 West Seventh street, after a brief illness with pneumonia. Mr. Clark was eighty-three years of age and owing to his advanced age did not have the strength to rally from the disease.

Mr. Clark was born in Westfield and early in life he was an apprentice of a tanner. From that time he worked himself up until he eventually became the owner of one of the largest tanneries in the country, located in St. Louis. He remained in the latter city until 1855, when he moved to Plainfield. He continued to make his home here.

In addition to a thriving business in St. Louis Mr. Clark acquired large holdings in the United States Leather Company stock and from this he received a princely income. He was considered to be one of the wealthiest if not the wealthiest man in Plainfield. Some months ago he remembered the Children's Home through a gift of $10,000 and at the same time he gave $5,000 to Warren chapel. This last named sum will aid the members of the chapel in their plans to erect a new house of worship on Watchung avenue. Both gifts were timely and the donor was gratefully thanked for his beneficence. It has been said of Mr. Clark that his beneficences were quietly bestowed and that in a number of instances he has assisted worthy charities.

Mr. Clark was believed to be the oldest Odd Fellow in St. Louis, where he joined a lodge over fifty years ago. In regard to his wealth, it is estimated that he was worth about $10,000,000.

About twenty-five years ago Mr. Clark was active in politics in this city, being a strong Democrat. At one time he ran against Amos Clark, of Elizabeth, for State Senator, but was defeated. He was a descendant of Abram Clark, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Aside from his interests in the leather business he also had large railroad interests in St. Louis and Keokuk, being an important factor in the commercial business of those two cities.

Mr. Clark was married three times. A wife and two sons survive him. The sons are James E. Clark, of Boston, and Frank Clark, of this city.

EDWARD VARREY AT LYRIC

WASHINGTON VALLEY MAN WITH ADA REHAN AND OTIS SKINNER.

More than ordinary interest has been aroused among lovers of the stage in the return to New York of Miss Ada Rehan, who is now playing a short engagement at the Lyric Theatre. Last week, "The Taming Shrew" was given, and this week "The School for Scandal" is being presented. The third and last week will be devoted to "The Merchant of Venice." Aside from the fact that Miss Rehan has many admirers even among Plainfield people, there is another reason for a distinct local interest in the fact that Edward Phillips, whose home is near Plainfield, has one of the leading parts with Miss Rehan and Otis Skinner in their various productions. Edward Varrey, that being his stage name, is an actor of exceptional ability, and wherever he has appeared his work has attracted the most favorable comment.

"For a long time Mr. Varrey was with Joseph Jefferson in his well-known play of "Rip Van Winkle," and in that production he won distinction and fame for his great work. It is not often that Plainfielders have an opportunity of seeing Mr. Varrey or Miss Rehan and the present engagement at the Lyric Theatre will no doubt be an occasion for the visit of a host from this city to witness these performances.

E. B. Maynard's tonsorial parlors on North avenue, have been thoroughly cleansed and fumigated and the Board of Health has given the place a clean bill so that persons may have no fear of being shaved here or having their hair cut. Mr. Maynard asks for a continuance of the public's patronage, as everything possible has been done to make his shop comply with the strictest requirements of the Board of Health.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Reports of Officers Read and Six Directors Chosen at the Yearly Session.

SUMMARY OF THE WORK

PRESENT CONDITION IN THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS EXCELLENT.

Institution Has Prospered—Objects Accomplished—Systems in Vogue—Plans for the Future—Religious and Educational Features.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. for the election of directors and the receiving of reports took place Thursday. The meeting opened with the reading of Scripture by President Stephen Caboone and prayer by William D. Murray. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by A. B. Beers, the report of the nominating committee was read by R. H. Radford, and the president's report by Mr. Caboone. George M. Rittenhouse reported for the religious work committee, O. S. Rogers for the boys' work committee, and C. E. A. Heywood for the physical department. The report of the educational work committee, prepared by Ira W. Travell, was read by Noble C. King. Curtis M. Thorpe read his report as treasurer.

A vote of thanks, proposed by Asa F. Randolph, was extended the newspapers for assistance given during the year.

The directors elected to serve three years were J. H. Case, H. O. Newman, R. H. Radford, George M. Rittenhouse, John Valiant and Curtis M. Thorpe. Officers will be elected by the directors at the February meeting.

This is a summary of the reports as reviewed by the president, Mr. Caboone:

"In reviewing briefly the past year's work, it is encouraging to note the growth and activity, and to feel assured that this association is fulfilling the end for which it was organized, with a fair measure of success. Before entering on such a summary, a brief statement of the financial situation should be presented.

"The estimate for 1903, prepared by the finance committee, called for expenditures of about $8,000, but according to the treasurer's report, the total expenses for the current year were $8,795.38. This excess of $795 was due to unforeseen requirements, and for re-wiring the building and providing additional locker room in the gymnasium. The total receipts were $8,796.76, of which sum $5,575 were received from membership dues, rentals and other sources, while $3,218 was contributed by 188 different persons, in sums varying from $8 to $150.

"The membership stands at 350, a gain of 90 from the preceding year. The junior department numbers 123; total membership, including juniors, 473.

"In 1903 there were held on Sunday afternoons in our large hall fifty-two meetings for men, with an average attendance of eighty-nine, and there were also held sixteen boys' meetings, averaging sixteen. The week of prayer for young men was observed in November last, by services in the small hall, and in December Mr. Greenwood conducted a series of evangelistic services in our building and also noonday meetings at several of the machine shops of our city. Another feature of religious effort is Bible study and in the past year five classes had a average attendance in all of thirty.

"During the past year, what was formerly known as the 'Volunteer League,' the organization through which we have sought to develope missionary interest among the members, was changed to the 'Forward Movement Club,' and a missionary committee was appointed to have charge of this work. A room in the building has been assigned to this club identified with this world-wide work for young men.

"In connection with this Forward Movement Club there were held during the year three missionary rallies on Sunday afternoons, these services being substituted for the regular meetings, and there has been forwarded to the International Committee the sum of $120 for the work among young men in foreign lands.

"The boys' department is deservedly prominent in all our plans and the advantages of such a work are self-evident. The membership has risen from forty-seven in July, 1902, when Mr. Robbie first assumed charge, to 123. A large number of boys, about seventy, have expressed an interest in spiritual things, or a desire to lead Christian lives, while twelve have united with different churches in the city. Mr. Robbie's influence over the boys has been excellent.

"The educational advantages that are offered to men, through our evening classes, are not appreciated nor availed of by as large a number as might be expected, considering the population of this city, and the many machinists and clerks who might profit by attending these courses of study. The total enrollment in October, 1903, was fifty-eight against forty-one the previous year, and the total average attendance in all classes from October to January was twenty-seven.

"The gymnasium is one of the most interesting features of the building. The average attendance for the year in the men's gymnasium classes was sixteen, and in the boys, twenty-five, representing six classes per week. Total number of men using gymnasium privileges, 184; boys, 126. Eighty-one physical examinations were made by the physical director, including some members of the police force of our city and at different times men have been sent to Mr. Heywood for special treatment by physicians in Plainfield.

"The tennis courts were fully appreciated and largely used, and basketball, basket ball, bowling and other out-door recreations have been enjoyed by the men and boys of this department.

"One important event in 1903 has been the formation of a Ladies' Auxiliary. This society, started last fall, has now a membership of eighty-six. In the way of entertainments the 'Star Course' maintains its popularity and needs but a reference in passing.

"Among what might be called social events were the annual dinner of committeemen on which occasion plans of work for the coming year were discussed, the Thanksgiving dinner for young men away from their homes, and the Christmas dinner in our hall for poor boys, when about seventy-five were our guests. There have also been receptions given to men in shops; the shuffle-board, chess and other games have been popular. The reading-room has been patronized more than usual during the past year and we have endeavored in different ways to render the building attractive to those who frequent it. We were represented at Northfield and at the Lake George conference, at the Boys' Convention and Educational Convention in Newark, and at other conferences in the State and neighborhood."

The report concludes: "As an association our thanks are due to our employes for the conscientious and faithful discharge of their respective duties, to the teachers of our evening classes who render such valuable service, to the daily papers of our city for the space accorded our work in their columns, and to all our many friends, who by gift and effort have made possible this work for young men. Above all we would recognize our dependence on that Higher Power, whose presence has hitherto sustained and guided us and in whom is all our confidence and our assurance of future success."

Kenneth Robbie, who has been so successful in building up the local boys' department, did the honors at the luncheon served at the conclusion of the discussion. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Joseph W. Garrett, Mrs. T. F. Budiong, Mrs. Howard J. Runyon and Mrs. Roger F. Murray. Those present were Secretaries Nixon, of Morristown; Burger, of Paterson; Robinson, of Trenton; Kight, of Camden; Wones, of Newark, and State Secretary Charles H. Scott, of Newark.

ALLEGES IT TO BE A FRAUD

SEAMAN WILLIAMS REFUSES TO PAY NOTE, CLAIMING CONCERN A FAKE.

In Mercer court at Trenton Thursday, the suit of John V. Boyd, of this city, against Seaman Williams et als., of this city, was begun before Judge Pitney. The action is brought to collect a $2,500 promissory note made by Williams to the order of Charles V. Overbaugh, of this city, and by him endorsed to the plaintiff for full face value.

It seems that Boyd and Overbaugh got Williams interested in a company for the manufacture of non-refillable bottles. Williams gave the note for some stock in the concern. He charges that at the time he was given to understand that the company was solvent and that the stock was likely to bring him big returns. Subsequently, he says, he learned that the company had practically no assets and that it did not, in fact, manufacture any more bottles than were needed for samples. He made an effort then to return the stock and have the note canceled, but without avail.

The defendant claims that the note was obtained from him by fraud and he therefore refuses to honor it.

The suit will be continued today. I. P. Runyon represents the plaintiff.

Liquor License Applications.

S. C. PECK'S FATHER DEAD

DIED AT HIS HOME IN MILFORD, CONN., IN HIS NINETY-SIXTH YEAR.

S. C. Peck, father of S. C. Peck, Jr., of West Front street, died on Monday at his home in Milford, Conn., following an attack of pneurisy. He was born at Milford in June, 1808, and would have been ninety-six years old next. He had the distinction of passing through four wars, the one of 1812, Mexican, Civil and Spanish, Although he never enlisted he was very patriotic and contributed in other ways to the success of the Union forces. He had an unusually good memory and could often recall incidents of his boyhood days. Without a doubt he was the oldest resident of Milford and it was with veneration that his fellow-townsmen looked upon him. He was admired and eminently respected for his excellent qualities.

For a great many years he was engaged in the shoe business at Milford, and was very successful. His son, S. C. Peck, of this city, enlisted in the Civil War and served as a commissioned officer. Two other sons survive Mr. Peck. Ralph Peck resides in Milford and James Peck lives in Providence, R. I.

The funeral services were held in Milford on Wednesday, the Odd Fellows being in charge. Mr. Peck was made a Mason many years ago and he retained his interest to the last. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors at the funeral.

GOVERNOR INVITED BY CO. K

LOCAL MILITARY MAKING ELABORATE PREPARATIONS FOR FAIR.

Company K will entertain its brigade and regimental officers at its fair to be held February 22 to 29. Among those who are expected to be present in full uniform are Col. Collins, Brig. Gen. Gilmore, Capt. Hall, of Co. I, Capt. Park, of Co C, and Capt. Bell, inspector of rifle practice. An invitation has been extended to Governor Franklin Murphy and it is understood that he will attend if his executive and other duties will permit.

The sale of tickets, which include coupons entitling holds to chances on a sewing machine, has begun. The sewing machine will be exhibited next week in a show window of one of the Front street stores. Music for the week will be by Suhr's orchestra. Tickets are on sale at the pharmacies of E. S. F. Randolph, Frank Rowley, Schreiner's and Hodge's and at F. H. Clevely's.

ASKS $100,000 DAMAGES

SUIT BROUGHT TO RECOVER FOR DEATH OF C. T. THAYER, A WRECK VICTIM.

Papers were filed in the sheriff's office, Elizabeth, Friday, in a suit against the New Jersey Central and Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Companies, for $100,000. The suit is brought through Craig A. Marsh, Esq., attorney, by the relatives of Charles T. Thayer, who was killed in the Westfield wreck on the New Jersey Central January 27 last, and it is believed to be the largest damages asked for in any of the suits brought as a result of that wreck.

Mr. Thayer resided on East Ninth street, this city, for several years, and at the time of his death he was superintendent of the Eastern Division of the National Express Company, with offices in New York, and it is reported that his salary was about $5,000 a year. He began work as a solicitor for the United States Express Company and worked himself up to the position of general agent for the company in New York city, having charge of all the agents and depots in that city. That was the last position he held with the U. S. Express Company and he afterward went with the Eastern Express Company. Before moving to Plainfield he lived at Glen Ridge, N. J., for several years. He was survived by an aged mother, a son and three daughters.

Work for Nat. Guard.

Marksmen in the National Guard of New Jersey will have to get down to hard work at the State range at Sea Girt if they want to make a showing in the national match this year. The national board for the promotion of rifle practice adopted rapid fire and skirmish firing for the national match as well as the provision for slow fire at 200, 600, 800 and 1,000 yards. The skirmish and rapid fire is the weak point of many marksmen. The organization of all rifle associations in the United States was placed in the hands of the National Rifle Association, of which General Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, is the president.

If you contemplate building in the spring consult Titus H. Lamy, the contractor, and he will not only give you a reasonable estimate, but his work will please you in every particular.

PASTORS ENDORSE MAYOR'S ATTITUDE

Ministers' Association Commend Dr. Jenkins for His Opposition to Liquor Licenses.

LETTER TO THE MAYOR

BELIEVE THAT STAND IS TAKEN IN INTEREST OF CITIZENS.

Association Hopes That Common Council Will Follow Mayor's Recommendations—Does Not Approve of the Licenses Granted.

At the meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association on Monday by a unanimous vote, resolutions were adopted favoring the plan suggested in the Mayor's message that the number of saloons be not increased the coming year. Accordingly the following will be presented to the Common Council at its next regular meeting:

Plainfield, N. J.,
Jan. 21, 1904.

The Hon. O. L. Jenkins, M. D.
Mayor of Plainfield.

Dear Sir: In behalf of the Ministers' Association of Plainfield, and in accordance with the vote of that body assembled January 18, 1904, we write to express its sincere approval of your recommendation to the Common Council that no increase in the number of saloons in our city be permitted. The sentiment of the meeting was that you were earnestly taking this stand with a view to the best interests of the city and should have our expressed sympathy. At the same time it was made very clear that the members of the Association do not wish this action to be construed as in any way committing them to the license system as such. The action simply declares the sense of the meeting that with things as they are the least that can be done is to prevent an increase in the number of saloons, and that if the honorable Council see fit to follow your recommendation in this respect it will have the sympathy and support of this Association.

Respectfully yours,
A. H. Lewis, L. R. Howard,
Moderator. Secretary.

FEES INSTEAD OF SALARIES

BILL INTRODUCED IN SENATE FIXING SCALE OF COUNTY OFFICERS' PAY.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Jackson, of Middlesex, which is in accord with the recommendation of Governor Murphy in his annual message, to the effect that the county officers throughout the State be placed upon salaries instead of receiving compensation in the form of fees.

Mr. Jackson's bill provides that surrogates, registrars of wills, county clerks and sheriffs who are now remunerated by the fees attached to their offices be paid salaries, and that the fees at present received by these officers be paid over to the counties.

The bill fixes the following schedule of salaries in the various counties for these officers:

Counties of more than 300,000 population, $7,500 per year; 100,000 to 300,000, $6,000 per year; 80,000 to 100,000, $5,000; 70,000 to 80,000, $4,000; 50,000 to 70,000, $3,500; 335,000 to 50,000, $3,000; 20,000 to 35,000, $2,000; less than 20,000, $1,500.

ALL READY FOR THE BALL

AIDES APPOINTED TO FLOOR COMMITTEES AND A CATERER SELECTED.

George T. Rogers and Thomas R. VanBoskerck, of the ball committee of the charity ball to be given for the hospital on January 28 have selected as out of town caterer, Simon Davis, of Newark. The supper will be served in the basement of the Casino from 11 until 1.

Dr. Norman Probasco, Howard Huntington, George T. VanBoskerck and Morris J. Dumont have been appointed aids to the floor committee.

Because of the fact that in many instances the needed materials and services have been freely contributed, the expenses will be slight and it is expected that a handsome surplus will be the result of the affair

All who use Atomizers in treating nasal catarrh will get the best results from Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price, including spraying tube, 75 cts. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

New Orleans, Sept. 1, 1900.
Messrs. Ely Bros.:—I sold two bottles of your Liquid Cream Balm to a customer, Wm. Lamberton, 1415 Delachaise St., New Orleans; he had used the two bottles, giving him wonderful and most satisfactory results. Geo. W. McDuff, Pharmacist.

BRIDGES ABOUT THE CITY

IN THE SPRING NEW STRUCTURE MAY BE ERECTED AT WEST END AVENUE.

Partially through the efforts of Freeholder William A. Westphal the county-line bridges have been put in good condition and during his term of three years he has been successful in obtaining three bridges for this end of the county. No additional new work is likely to be taken up until spring, when among the first matters to be considered will be the West End avenue bridge. It is planned to either build a new bridge there or move one of the other bridges down the stream, or else build sidewalks on either side of the present structure. As the bridge now stands it is too narrow for the street. Early in the fall the sidewalk on the westerly side of West End avenue in the city was filled in and made more passable and suitable opening were made to carry off surface water. Other improvements will probably be made in this vicinity during the coming year. If Myrtle avenue is opened between the city and borough a new bridge will be necessary over Green brook and this may bring about improvements of a general character which will tend to enhancing the value of property in that part of the city.

HARVEST HOME AT HOSPITAL

ANNUAL AFFAIR, CONDUCTED BY WOMEN, AS SUCCESSFUL AS EVER.

The annual harvest home at Muhlenberg Hospital was held Thursday afternoon under favorable auspices. The affair usually takes place just prior to Thanksgiving time, but owing to the work attendant upon moving from the old to the new institution a postponement was necessary. Everything from glasses of jelly to flour, potatoes and the more substantial articles were contributed in large measure.

The fair was held in the men's ward, where plenty of room was allowed for the display of the fruits, vegetables and other things. In addition to these donations, there was also many substantial remembrances in money, all of which is greatly appreciated.

Those in charge and who helped to receive and serve tea included Miss Elizabeth R. Cook, president of the Woman's Auxiliary; Mrs. Samuel Huntington and Mrs. D. T. VanBuren vice presidents, and these women: Mrs. August Klatsecke, Miss Imogene Bass, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Miss Emily Tracy, Mrs. William Pelletier, Mrs. Drake and Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson. Miss Wildey, superintendent of the hospital, also assisted in receiving.

J. P. NORTHROP TO HIT BACK

TO CALL TO ACCOUNT EXAMINER WHO QUESTIONED HIS STEWARDSHIP.

James P. Northrop, Esq., of this city, and Frank Woolsey, of Jersey City, executors of the estate of the late Charles A. Woolsey, whose account of their stewardship has been criticised by Charles E. Hendrickson, Esq., appointed to restate the accounts of the estate, have decided to get back at the master by proceedings against the report, which they say is full of erroneous conclusions.

On Feb. 5 they will present to Judge John A. Blair their reasons why the report shouldn't be set aside. The judge's contention will be that the master's report is irregular and that he has exceeded his jurisdiction.

The report, which made such a sensation a few days ago, practically found that the executors had disregarded the provisions of the testator's will and that there was a discrepancy of $27,000 and odd dollars, which amount the executors ought to have on hand, instead of $5,000 in round numbers, which they said in their report they had on hand. As it has been previously pointed out, the matters at issue are purely legal.

DEATH FROM FALL.

Mrs. George E. Firstbrook Died at Harrisburg, and Was Buried There This Afternoon.

Mrs. George E. Firstbrook, for many years a resident of this city, died Thursday in Harrisburg, Pa., at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Page, as a result of a slippery pavement sustained a week ago was the direct cause of death. Mrs. Firstbrook was an active worker in Hope chapel during her residence here. The funeral took place in Harrisburg Saturday.

A President on Brandy for Sickness.

The President of the Baltimore Medical Coll ge, who has thoroughly tested Speer's wines and brandy says:

"Speer's Climax Brandy is a pure and valuable article in all cases of disease in which a reliable stimulant is required. I regard it superior to most French brandies."

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to the scope. Readers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

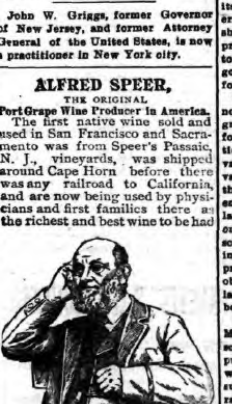
ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

KNOWLEDGE ALONE, OF LITTLE VALUE

Pupils Should be Made to Acquire Common Sense Says Henry M. Maxson.

ADDRESS TO EDUCATORS

AIM OF SCHOOLS IS TO ENABLE PUPILS TO WIN SUCCESS IN LIFE.

Plainfield Superintendent Speaks Before the Newark Principals' Association—Topic, "What We Expect of the School."

In an address before the Newark School Principals' Association in that city Wednesday afternoon, on "What We Expect of the School" Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of this city, advanced the opinion that knowledge alone was no longer the chief end of the school. The pupil was sent to develop such qualities as would enable him to win success in life, he said.

"The first element which the school should produce," said Mr. Maxson, "is physical strength. By this I mean good carriage of the body, good habits of walking, sitting and breathing; sharpness, alertness, elasticity and vigor in bodily movements. The best brain is of little value if there be no bodily vigor to support it. A trained physical director and a good gymnasium are essential parts of the equipment of every school.

"A second result which we should expect is power of attention; that is, power to devote one's self to any subject for a period of time without wandering to a thousand and one other things.

"Next is the power of observation, the ability to see and remember things that we pass, the power to look at a thing and take in all its details.

"Then comes good judgment, and that is one of the greatest needs in public life today, for we see the absence of it everywhere. People make decisions without any foundation of fact. They run away after religious delusions, medical absurdities and social extravagances by the hundred, simply because they have not the power to discern fundamental principles and reason logically to right conclusions.

"Next to intelligence is the quality of alertness, the ability to start new ideas, to make new inventions, to find new ways of doing things, the power to recognize opportunities and seize them. Next is the power of self-control. If the man is to be a success, the child should learn to control his thoughts, his actions and his desires, and obtain power to bend his will to whatever he undertakes. Self-government in school is a very strong medium for developing this quality.

"Then comes the quality of patriotism. Horace Mann once said: 'Whatever you wish to appear in the life of a nation, you must first introduce into its schools.' So, if our method of government is to exist, then our children should learn to understand it, to appreciate it, and to develop loyalty toward it. But a man cannot be a good citizen without having regard for law.

"One of the greatest dangers that now threaten our national life is the growing tendency toward disregard for law on the part of great corporations, on the part of organization of various kinds, and on the part of private citizens. Officers do not enforce the law which they are appointed to enforce, and the citizens overlook violations of every kind. That is where our work must be done, for a good school should develop in its pupils an intelligent regard for law as an expression of right, and a feeling of obligation, not only to observe the law themselves but to insist upon its being observed by others.

"To sum up the matter" said Mr. Maxson, "it is not so much what the school stores up in the mind of the pupil that is valuable as it is what it works into his character. The pupil's success depends on what he can do rather than on what he knows."

MISSION HOME.

Shelter and Christian Help to be Given to Fallen Women—Other Comforts.

A "Plainfield Union Mission Home" is to be established, Mrs. Lue O'Brien and Mrs. Edward J. Perrin being the organizers. The home will be located on Front street, west of the Baptist church, where it is planned to hold services every night at 8 o'clock. The object of the home will be to "preach the Gospel to the needy and administer aid to fallen women."

State Normal Graduation.

Graduation exercises of the February class of the State Normal school will be held Friday evening, January 30, in the auditorium of the school. There will be no sales day exercises. Miss Ida F. Davis, of New Market, is a member of the class.

SHAKESPEARIAN PLAY BY SOCIETY TALENT

"The Taming of the Shrew" to be Produced After the Lenten Season.

PARK CLUB THE PLACE

MRS. WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS IN THE LEADING ROLE.

Mr. Young Engaged as Coach—The Caste Not Entirely Selected—To be the First Time a Shakespearian Play Has Been Rendered Here.

Society folks in Plainfield and North Plainfield will produce a Shakespearian play after Lent. The exact date for the performance has not been decided upon, neither has the entire cast been selected. "The Taming of the Shrew," will be given and Mrs. William L. Saunders, who has previously won distinction for her clever work in amateur theatricals, will take the leading part, that of "Katharine."

The play will be given at the Park Club, where thorough extensive improvements and alterations, it will be possible to present it in a satisfactory manner. William L. Saunders, who has heretofore taken the lead in these amateur performances, will again have charge. Mr. Young, who has devoted much time to the study of Shakespeare, and is the author of several works relating to the Bard of Avon, will coach those who are to take part. This will be the first time that a Shakespearian play has been attempted here.

THE ROBIN NOT HARMFUL

PROFESSOR W. E. D. SCOTT, OF PRINCETON, DEFENDS THE RED BREAST.

The robin prefers wild fruit to the common or garden variety and will not trouble fruit growers if it can have access to its favorite diet, is the contention of certain naturalists who oppose recent measures taken against robins in the interest of fruit growers. Professor W. E. D. Scott, of the laboratory for the study of live birds, of Princeton, has made public a letter of this purport from Professor E. L. Beal, in charge of economic ornithology in the United States Department of Agriculture.

The measure specifically attacked is a bill recently introduced in the New Jersey Senate, proposing to give fruit growers discretionary power in killing robins and cat birds in the fruit season. Professor Scott says of the measure:

"Such mischievous legislation can result only in disaster which must be obvious."

Professor Beal, in his letter, says that, as a result of years of experience and the examination of the stomachs of 800 robins, he can assert positively that cultivated fruit forms a very small percentage of the robin's food. He recommends that fruit growers plant wild fruit-bearing shrubs near their orchards. He says that the robin is of great use as an insect destroyer and that to kill the bird is to do far more harm than good.

"OF ALL THE SAD WORDS ——"

GOVERNOR ANNULS 1,250 CHARTERS, AND "THEREBY HANGS A TALE."

Twelve hundred and fifty New Jersey corporations have just been blotted out of existence for non-payment of State taxes. Governor Murphy has issued a proclamation declaring their charters annulled, thus greatly weakening the assertion made in his annual message to the Legislature that corporations are usually prosperous under Jersey laws.

Stock the par value of which is many millions of dollars is of no value except the weight of the certificates as waste-paper.

Thus the hopes and ambitions of thousands of men have perished, except where the promoters succeeded in inducing the public to buy stock.

Those first in the market were fairly successful in this, but the printing presses were worked overtime to issue stock certificates, and the public appetite for stocks was soon more than satisfied.

The companies that failed to pay their taxes include those that were expected to pay dividends by securing a corner on certain materials used in tombstones, burying the dead in Hawaii, preserving human life and meats and vegetables by liquefied air; making artificial granite; causing hair to grow on bald heads.

Not a few were companies organized to develope mining properties that were supposed to hold millions in gold or silver and would make the stockholders rich in short order.

JURY AWARDS ISING $10,000 VERDICT

Plainfielder Hurt in Westfield Wreck Recovers Big Damages of R. R. Companies.

A HARD FOUGHT BATTLE

A GREAT VICTORY FOR CORPORATION COUNSEL CRAIG A. MARSH.

Testimony Greatly Conflicting—R. V. Lindabury Represented the Central and Reading Roads—Jury Out Four Hours.

After a hard fought legal battle, Percy M. Ising was awarded a verdict of $10,000 Thursday in the Supreme Court at Elizabeth as damages for injuries received in the Westfield wreck on the Jersey Central a year ago. The action was brought against the Central and the Reading roads and the jury was out for over four hours before returning its verdict.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city, represented the plaintiff and R. V Lindabury, Esq., of Newark, was counsel for the defendants. There was the greatest possible conflict in the testimony presented, and the case was the most bitterly contested that has taken place before a jury in this county in years.

Dr. James S. Green, of Elizabeth, and Dr. G. W. Endicott, of this city, called by the defendants, testified that a stiffness in the plaintiff's knee was but a temporary injury, while Dr. Graeme Hammond, of New York, and Dr. William H. Murray, of this city, called by Mr. Marsh, swore that the defect was permanent in nature and that the plaintiff is suffering from a shattered nervous system.

In summing up each lawyer occupied a full hour's time and every scintilla of evidence was rehearsed for the benefit of the jurors. The jury did not return to the court room until after 8 o'clock last night and when it did it brought a verdict of $10,000 for Mr. Marsh's client. Mr. Ising is much elated over the result. His counsel had been offered by the defendants to settle.

LITERARY.

New York, most important of "doubtful States," will be a party and factional storm centre in the coming Presidential campaign. Democracy has a new stimulus in the rise of Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, by fee of his national ability to handle the most complex political machinery. David B. Hill is overshadowed. The party will fight a Republican organization torn by a struggle between an old man with an old machine behind him, and a young man with the vigor and skill to construct a machine of his own. The factional fight for leadership has a national interest at this time. Senator Thomas C. Platt is past seventy. When he sits through a long dinner his body droops with physical weariness, and he becomes childishly petulant. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., Governor since 1900, is fifty. He was chairman of the Republican State Committee before Platt put him forward as a candidate for Governor to succeed Theodore Roosevelt, who, it was believed, had been sidetracked politically by Platt when he was made his party's candidate for Vice President.—Collier's Weekly.

As our social organization is almost purely commercial, as every great question in our politics is a commercial question, our actual capital is necessarily Wall Street. It sets the fashion in manners and in morals for all the rulers, great and small, from the least town in Maine that can boast, and does boast, a millionaire, to the least town in California where the richest man is the weightiest citizen.—Everybody's Magazine for February.

Helping the Press.

The newspapers seem to have ungratefully overlooked the fact that the Governor, in his denunciation of advertising signs along the railroads, was doing the newspapers a friendly service by fighting a rival of the newspapers as advertising mediums.—From the Paterson Guardian.

Jan. 21: "Christian Stewardship." Mal. iii, 10; I Cor. xvi, 2.

The depth of a person's piety is quite accurately measured by the use he makes of his money. Religion which costs nothing has no relationship with that of Jesus Christ and is not based on the Christian Scriptures.

The reason for this is not found in the need of money to carry forward the work, though such need always is pressing. It does not arise from the idea of showing gratitude to God for benefits received. It is in no sense a tax or tribute which when paid secures the use of the remainder of one's goods for one's own benefit, free from all obligation or danger of further levy upon them. Some seem to regard all gifts made for religious purposes as a direct payment of premium for some sort of insurance of life and property, and the business of the Almighty is to act as executive officer in organization for protection. Disease and disaster are to be averted because of the fidelity with which the payments are met. Not a little of this superstition lingers in the minds of many who give largely to the church of Christ.

The necessity for liberality arises from the nature of true religion itself. Whatever one feels intensely and sees clearly he must express forcibly. If one loves God and sees himself, a child of God, put in charge for a little while of some of His work and intrusted with some of God's treasure he soon begins to search for the best ways to invest the Lord's capital that it may do the best work. He feels obligation and eagerness to accomplish all possible with it to the extension of God's kingdom. He does not feel that he is giving his own so much as that he is investing God's own and administering for Him.

So if there is need for a church building he helps build it. If there is need of a parsonage he and a house for him he aids in that support. If men in far lands can be reached by the gospel, he puts some cash into missions. Doing this because of his position as a steward of God, he is careful to investigate needs and to search for the most worthy causes. He carefully examines all claims and the results of his benefactions. Because a solicitor is urgent he is not more liberal, but likely to be more careful to examine the case. He has no right to waste his Lord's goods.

What proportion should he give? That depends entirely upon circumstances. A Jewish custom of old time required the tenth of all that grew from the ground and all the increase of flocks and herds. All families were supposed to be landholders this was a kind of land tax for support of temple worship—a convenient form for those times, but not in any sense of the nature of a moral obligation for all men, at all times and under different conditions of society.

The movement among our young people to secure from all the pledge of a tenth of their income for the service of the church may have excellent results if faithfully carried out and carried out. If it arises from heart devotion it will blessedly enlarge all spirituality as well as bless all whom it reaches. Him that gives and him that receives it will bless. Some can give more than the tenth. But such is satisfied with that, giving they will not reach the measure of obligation. Some cannot justly give so much to this cause. No pressure, no odium, no sense of shame or guilt, should attach to such. Pharisaic bondage is to be shunned strenuously. Right use of every dollar should be our intention. But careful calculation will help one to regularity and liberality in giving God's goods.

Leave the Future to God.

Why is it that we are so busy with the future? It is not our province. And is there not a criminal interference with Him to whom it belongs in our feverish, anxious attempts to dispose of it and in filling it up with shadows of good and evil shaped by our own wild imaginations? To do God's will as fast as it is made known to us, to inquire daily—I had almost said each moment—what He requires of us and to leave ourselves, our friends and every interest in His control, with a cheerful trust that the path which He marks out leads to our perfection and to Himself—this is at once our duty and happiness. And why will we not walk in the plain, simple way?—William E. Channing.

A Wise Providence.

It is a wise providence that we cannot see the future. We can see through one pane of glass easily, but through ten placed together we cannot see, yet each is transparent. By living a day at a time we get along well, and all is clear, although we cannot see through all the purposes of God concerning us.—Lutheran.

The Peace of God.

We need the peace of God in our heart just as really for the doing well of the little things of our secular life as for the doing of the greatest duties of Christ's kingdom.—Miller.

Unkindness.

How many of us have even a desire to forget an unkindness? For this desire we should pray.—Spurgeon.

Unrest.

Oh, what a demon of unrest
Doth stir the human heart to strife
When by a narrow sphere oppressed
It hungers for completer life!

Why is dull drudgery the lot
Of some who would but cannot rise?
By what mistake or counterplot
Are some compelled to toil?

Though lowly be thy ministry,
Thy thought may know no prison bars;
The universe is all for thee,
And thou mayest walk among the stars.

He is not in a prison kept
To whom the Father's house is free.
O hungering soul, why not accept
God's boundless hospitality?
—George Lawrence Spining, D. D.

MET AN EMERGENCY.

Young Couple Unite Parents to Keep from Solitude.

Double Wedding Results Which Brought Happiness to Four Hearts—Bride Had Wed Another When Suitor Arrived.

When Orville Cowden and Miss Mary Baker, of Zanesville, O., decided that they cared enough for each other to marry, they found an obstacle standing in the way.

Miss Baker sorrowfully told Cowden of this when he began to urge her to name a day.

"I can't," she exclaimed. "I can't leave father."

"You don't expect us to sit around and wait for the old folks to die, do you?" asked the young man.

"I don't know," said the maiden, hesitatingly, "but I can't leave father all alone."

Father would have been a lonely man if the daughter had married. Mrs. Baker had died and the daughter was the only member of his family. When Miss Mary thought of him sitting in a lonely room, spending lonesome evenings by himself, and eating at a dismal table set for one, she decided that she could not plunge him into the condition for all the lovers in the world.

So the affair ran along for a half year, and then Cowden began to do some thinking. His mother was a widow, and the young man saw that if he left her she would be alone in the world.

The logical course to pursue came so suddenly to the understanding of the two young people that it quite took their breath away.

"It's the thing to do," said Cowden.

"Do you think we can?" asked Miss Mary.

"Well, we can try," replied the young man. And try they did.

John V. Baker, the father, was introduced to Mrs. Lucy Cowden, the mother. The young people sat down to watch what followed. Gradually it came about that about the time the young Cowden was preparing to go to the Baker homestead the elder Baker was preparing to go to the Cowden home. Many pleasant words each other on the way home again.

It all came out just as the young people had intended it should. Mr. Baker finally asked his daughter if she had any objections to a stepmother, and she replied that she didn't if he had some to a son-in-law. Then a double wedding was planned, and it has taken place.

A brave young woman set forth from her home in Ireland not long ago. Fourteen years before she had been engaged to marry John Lewis, who decided that he would make his fortune in America first. After 14 years trying he succeeded, and Miss Phoebe Jane Benn, the girl who had waited all these years for him, was told to join him.

With a willing heart she packed her trunks and came to New York. Thence she went to Northport, L. I., and the grooms met her. The wedding took place immediately.

Thomas Norman, a bachelor living near South Wayne, Wis., was about to be married. He understood that he had been accepted by Mrs. Susie Saucerman, living in another town. He had written four letters full of plans for the wedding, which was to take place on a certain day.

On the day appointed he arrived at Mrs. Saucerman's residence, attired as befits a bridegroom. He noticed that the place was enlivened, but considered this just and proper, the wedding to take place immediately.

"Where's the bride?" he asked, presenting himself at the door.

"Here, Mr. Evans," he said the person who opened it to him. "Mrs. Evans, here's somebody wants to see you."

When Mrs. Evans reached the door she gasped, and when Mr. Norman got his scattered wits together he gasped. There had been a wedding, but he had not figured in it. Mrs. Saucerman had not received his letters, had concluded that he had changed his mind, had accepted the proposal of E. H. Evans—and—well that was all there was to it.

Mr. Norman was in time to extend his congratulations to the groom and wish joy to the bride.

Oarsman's Wonderful Feat.

Jules Piot, an oarsman, of Lyons, who held the sculling championship of France in 1895, matched himself for a wager to scull from Lyons to Chalon, a distance of 80 miles, up the Saone, in less than 24 hours. He entered his boat at five o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, and reached Chalon at three p. m. on Sunday. He is described as having arrived in the very pink of condition.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 21—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Every Christian called to be a missionary.—Luke xxiv, 44-49.

There are few things more plainly set forth in the New Testament than that every Christian should be a missionary. Christ plainly teaches that the disciples should win his disciples of others and they of still others, and thus the world was to be won for Him.

The commission of Christ to His disciples concerning the evangelization of the world was among the last commands of Christ and should therefore have the more weight with His disciples. Just before His ascension He said to them, "Ye are witnesses of these things," referring to the things concerning His life and death. It was at this time that He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Nor did these commands simply apply to His immediate hearers, but to all who in future time should become His disciples. The command "This do in remembrance of Me" was given to the disciples, yet no one would claim that it was for them alone. No more were the missionary commands of Christ. The disciples stood for all coming disciples, and through them Christ gave us our commands for today.

According to the commission of Christ every Christian should be both a home missionary and a foreign missionary—that is, an interested supporter of both home and foreign missions. He declared that "repentance and remission of sins shall be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." The fact is, Christ made no distinction between home and foreign missions, and it is unfortunate that the church has done so. All work of the church for others is missionary, whether it is done at home or abroad. Missions is the one word that should be used. The making of this distinction gives many a person a loophole of escape from contributing. When the foreign missionary offering is being taken up they think of home missions, and vice versa. Missions is the one great work—the sending of the good news of salvation through the only begotten Son of God.

Instead of trying to escape our missionary duties every Christian should look upon it as a great privilege to have some part in winning the world for Christ. Nor should we forget that if there had been no missionaries we would never have known Christ. Through missionaries He came to us, and through them we should do all we can to send Him to others. Gratitude demands it as well as duty. Then, too, we should remember that Christ Himself has taught us by example to be missionaries. He left His home in heaven and came to earth "to seek and to save the lost." The disciple cannot be above his Lord. Where Jesus leads we must follow. Are we following His missionary example? If not, let us take up the work which comes to us along these lines. "The world for Christ" should be the watchword of every Christian until the kingdoms of this world shall have become a part of the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

His Reasons For Enthusiasm.

I am frank to confess I have become an enthusiast in the Christian Endeavor movement, and the more I know of its principles and workings the more fervent is my enthusiasm, and for reasons like these:

First.—Because of the emphasis the movement puts upon the local church.

Second.—That it is so thoroughly a religious movement is another reason for my enthusiasm.

Third.—A third reason for my glad indorsement of this movement is the specific pledge of service it exacts.

Fourth.—Another reason for my deep interest in this movement is that it has equal grasp on the young women as well as on the young men.

Fifth.—Still another reason why I so rejoice in this movement is its tender management of young Christians.

Sixth.—Still an added reason for my gladness in this movement is the delightful interrelations it brings about between the various evangelical denominations.—Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt in Ways and Means.

Evangelistic Endeavor.

I think we might well have in every society an evangelistic conference—I mean by this dignified name a meeting of those who have the welfare of the society at heart, the executive committee and perhaps a few others—for the purpose of considering the situation and making plans for some aggressive work; this, of course, with the consent and co-operation of the pastor.—Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck.

Two State Conventions.

The Pennsylvania state convention will be held in Allentown July 13-15, and the New York state convention in Buffalo July 6-8. Both give promise of being very large meetings.

Pen Points.

You can be sure you are not the material they make presidents of if you lightly regard your committeeship.

No Endeavor society can long survive that is not regarded as a "team."

Christ is the center of our Christian Endeavor or we have missed its real motive.

Christian Endeavor is an "I'll try society," but it is more since the striving is in the strength of One who knows no failure.

"Church extension" is not the least significant definition of Christian Endeavor.

THE STATE'S SILK INDUSTRY

PRODUCTION OF SILK GOODS IN NEW JERSEY DURING 1903.

Part 1 of the report of the Bureau of Statistics of New Jersey for 1903, now in the hands of the printer, contains the statistics of manufactures of the State for the year 1902. Among the industries for which figures are given, the most important in the number of persons employed, capital invested and value of products, is the silk industry. Including the dye houses and throwing mills, there are 185 establishments engaged in the production of silk goods. Of these, 84 are owned and managed by private firms, and 81 are under the corporate form of management. The number of partners included in the private firms is 147; of these 143 are males, and four females.

The corporations have 451 stockholders, of which number 393 are males, and 52 are females, and six are banks acting as trustees for the estates of minors. The aggregate number of partners and stockholders or the total number of persons whose money is invested in the industry and who control its operations is 596.

The aggregate amount of capital invested in all the establishments is $24,873,634. The aggregate value of stock or material used is $27,819,836. The principal item of stock is, of course, raw silk, of which 5,067,192 pounds, valued at $21,380,045 was used. The product consisted of broad and ribbon silk, the quantities of which cannot be given in a uniform standard of measure because of the varieties of forms used by the firms in reporting; some being by yards, and others by pieces and cartons without naming the number of yards which these contain. The total selling value of the goods produced reached the enormous sum of $47,849,603. The number of persons employed during the year is as follows:

	Males.	Females.	Total.
Average	14,968	12,022	26,990
Smallest	12,541	10,936	23,4 7
Greatest	16,064	12,615	28,679

The total amount paid in wages during the year to this army of working men and women was $11,089,184, and the average yearly earnings per employe are shown to be $410.86. A classification of employes shows the percentage of weekly earnings:

	Males.	Females.
Under $5	10.3	26.3
$5 but under $6	4.3	15.9
$6 but under $7	4.4	14.0
$7 but under $8	9.6	10.6
$8 but under $9	8.0	7.6
$9 but under $10	10.8	6 0
$10 but under $12	22.0	8.9
$12 but under $15	16.1	7.3
$15 but under $20	10.7	3.7
$20 and over	3.8	.3

A majority of the establishments were operated during every working day in the year, that is to say, for 306 days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays. There were, however, a sufficient number whose working time was broken by one or another cause, not a few being from strikes, to reduce the average number of working days for the entire industry to 285, or 21 days less than full time.

The production of silk and silk goods is the principal manufacturing industry of New Jersey. It gives employment to a large number of persons and pays out more money in wages than any other single line of manufacture carried on in the State. The following figures show the number of persons employed, the cost value of stock or material used, and the selling value of the silk goods produced in the United States and in New Jersey for the year 1900:

	U. S.	N. J.	P. C.
Average persons employed	65,416	24,157	37.0
Value of material	$60,406,665	$21,681,118	35.8
Selling value produced	107,356,388	39,966,662	37.2

Not only was New Jersey the first State in the Union in the production of silk goods in 1900, but from its mills came, as shown above, much more than one-third of the country's entire output. In the two years that elapsed since 1900, the average number of persons employed in the industry in New Jersey has increased 2,833, or 11.8 per cent; the value of stock or materia used in the manufacture of goods has increased $6,186,708, or 26.6 per cent.; and the selling value of the goods produced has increased $7,882,941, or 19.7 per cent.

Invitations to Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester F. Randolph, of West Eighth street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sadie Louise Randolph, and William H. Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, of West Front street. The marriage will be celebrated Wednesday night, Feb. 3, at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother, Edward S. F. Randolph, 927 Park avenue. Rev. C. H. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, will perform the ceremony.

REV. W. R. HARRIS MARRIED QUIETLY

The Minister in Charge of St. Stephen's Parish Becomes the Husband of Miss Brown.

WEDDED JANUARY 12

THE CEREMONY TOOK PLACE IN ST. JAMES' CHURCH, NEWARK.

Groom Was Formerly Rector of St. John's Church, Somerville—Succeeded Rev. W. Vincent Dawson at St. Stephen's.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ella A. Brown, daughter of the late George P. Brown, of Newark, and Rev. William R. Harris, rector in charge of St. Stephen's church, on Ravine road, and former rector of St. John's church, Somerville. The couple was married in St. James' Episcopal church, Newark, on Tuesday, January 12, by Rev. William H. Vibert, of New York, assisted by Rev. Cyrus B. Durand, rector of the church.

The bride was dressed in white mulle over white taffeta, with a veil, and both bride and groom were unattended. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride in Newark.

Mr. Harris resides on Martine avenue, and soon after the acceptance of the resignation of Rev. W. Vincent Dawson, as rector of St. Stephen's church, Mr. Harris was secured as a successor and upon his return from a wedding trip he will reside on Ravine road and at once take up his new duties at the church.

GOVERNOR WANTS A MANSION

BELIEVES THAT STATE NEEDS AN OFFICIAL HOME FOR ITS EXECUTIVE.

Agitation for an executive mansion has been renewed by Governor Murphy. Though the effort to secure the property of Mrs. Caleb S. Green to the east of the Capitol at Trenton, has been temporarily deferred the Governor is of the opinion that in the very near future the erection of a home for the State's executive will come about.

"The Governor of the State should be located at the capital" he has said, "and this cannot be accomplished, to any degree of satisfaction, until the Legislature provides him with a suitable and accessible residence. It is only by the best of fortune that I have managed to temporarily locate in Trenton during the last three sessions of the lawmakers, and it is doubtful if any of my immediate successors will be so fortunate. I almost failed in the attempt this year.

"I believe the Governor should entertain the legislators in an executive capacity in a suitable mansion and be in a position to look after those who are forced to come to the capital to see him on official business of the State. For these reasons, and for the official dignity of the State, there should be an executive mansion," he declared.

The Governor repeated his declaration of a year ago to the effect that the salary of the executive is for him to spend in the interest of the State and in the proper furtherance of the social duties that devolve upon such an official position.

"It was the cry of expense and extravagance that deterred my efforts of some time ago to establish a gubernatorial residence," he added, "but I am fully convinced that the Legislature will soon discover the wisdom of following the example of other States in the provision of an official home for their executive."

A SYNDICATE INCORPORATED

PLAINFIELD MEN ORGANIZE A COMPANY TO DEAL IN LAND.

In the office of the county clerk at Elizabeth a certificate of incorporation has been filed by the Assured Investors' Syndicate, the principal office of which is located in this city. The incorporators are Lemuel B. Woolston, H. W. Marshall, Elias H. Bird, Morris C. VanArsdale and William N. Runyon, all of Plainfield.

The incorporation is formed for the purpose of taking or acquiring by purchase, lease, exchange, hire or otherwise, any lands or real estate. The authorized capital stock is $35,000, divided into 12,500 shares at a par value of $10 each. The company begins business with $5,000.

CHARLES JAEGER SURPRISED

FRIENDS GATHERED IN HIS HONOR AND A MERRY TIME WAS SPENT.

A double surprise was the result of a party arranged by about twenty friends for Charles Jaeger, of West Third street, Saturday night. From the home of W. G. Gray, of West Third street, the conspirators went to Mr. Jaeger's home but were themselves surprised to find him out. Inquiry discovered him at Potter's Press Works where he was employed on a rush order. The members of the party immediately besieged Potter's and forced an adjournment to Mr. Jaegers' home, where dancing, music and recitations passed the time. A piano and violin duet by the Misses Mamie and Agnes McInnis was well rendered. Mr. Jaeger received a handsome gift which was presented by James McInnis. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jaeger, Mr. and Mrs. William Gray, Mr. and Mrs. John Eberley, Mr. and Mrs. James McInnis, Alfred Montjoy, John Gray, the Misses Agnes and Mamie McInnis, of this city, and David Gray, of Easton; James Gray, of Phillipsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Gray, of Phillipsburg.

BODY FOUND BY BLOODHOUNDS

JOHN KISSTER, OF STIRLING, WAS KILLED BY RAILROAD TRAIN.

Bloodhounds were used near Stirling Friday night to find the remains of John Kisster, who was struck by the Bankers' express of the Lackawana Railroad and decapitated at a lonely spot about 100 yards west of the Stirling station. A man's hat caught on the pilot of the engine as it rolled into Bernardsville, attracted the attention of a passenger and a search resulted all the way along the track from Bernardsville to Stirling without any success.

A butcher who had a pair of hounds, was appealed to and they were put upon the trail. The ghastly find was made in a lonely pool which was frozen over. The body was headless and the search was resumed along the track. Two hundred yards further on the head, crushed to an unrecognizable mass, was discovered.

Kisster was well known in this city where he had been employed on several occasions. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock from his residence at Stirling. The interment was in the same place.

Captain and Mrs. Trout, of Trout Court, will soon go South for the benefit of their health.

STILL AFTER HOSE CARRIAGE

CHIEF HALE, OF KANSAS CITY, PAYS ANOTHER VISIT TO GET AMITY RELIC.

Former Chief George Hale, of the Kansas City Fire Department, has been in this city for several days endeavoring to borrow the old volunteer department relic known as the Amity silver hose carriage. Chief Hale represents the St. Louis Exposition managers in the East and is seeking curiosities in the shape of old fire fighting apparatus to exhibit at the big fair. He was accompanied by Captain Osgood, of the New York de*partment.*

Chief Doane favors consenting to the loan because he says it will serve as an advertisement to the city. It is probable that a number of other relics from this city will be sent to the Exposition if the consent of the Exempt Firemen's Association can be secured.

Before he left this city former Chief Hale, who was in charge of the Amer*ican Siemen's exhibit at the Interna*tional Show in London some time ago warmly congratulated Chief Doane on the appearance of the local fire headquarters. He said he has been in many fire departments and for the neatness and fine condition of horses and apparatus and fine department of men, Plainfield need be well proud of her department.

CONSECRATION ANNIVERSARY

CONVOCATION OF N. B. TO CELEBRATE BP. SCARBOROUGH'S ELEVATION.

The convocation of New Brunswick will meet in Grace church, Elizabeth, Tuesday, February 2, the festival of the purification of the Virgin Mary. The date is the twenty-ninth anniversary of the consecration of the Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, D. D., Bishop of New Jersey. The new chantry, Edward Clark Memorial, will be consecrated by the Bishop at 10 o'clock in the morning. Holy Communion at 11. The preacher will be Rev. William Montgomery Downey, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross. The clergy and delegates will be entertained at 1 o'clock in the afternoon by members of the parish.

At the business meeting called for 2:30 in the afternoon, there will be an essay by Rev. Hamilton Schuyler, rector of Trinity church, Trenton, on "What good a church club can be expected to accomplish in the diocese." Missionary meeting at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

February Teas.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley and her daughter, Mrs. Mason M. Patrick, wife of Major Patrick, of West Point, N. Y., for teas to be given at Mrs. Cooley's residence, 2 Rockview terrace, on Tuesdays, February 2 and 9 from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Death of J. T. Green's Sister.

Miss Barbara Green, sister of John T. Green, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, died January 9 at her home in King's Lynn, Norfolk county, England. Miss Green lived in this city and New York for many years.

One corner of the fancy table will be devoted to articles especially for men. It is requested that all donations be sent to the Y. M. C. A. building by noon on the day of the fair.

¶ The fair promises to have many attractive features and it is hoped that all who are interested in the boys will make an effort to attend and help in promoting the good work.

WESTFIELD'S NEW FIRE DEP'T

PAID SYSTEM TAKES PLACE OF VOLUNTEER ORGANIZATION.

The little town of Westfield now has a paid fire department with a perfect *system of call men, regulars, up-to-*date apparatus and horses to pull the engines and hose carts to the scene of any fire. This is now said to be the smallest town in New Jersey where a paid fire department is maintained. The new system went into effect on Saturday night although the Common Council passed the ordinance on January 14. The paid department is the result of the progressiveness of the town.

Two permanent men will be employed by the borough, besides the chief who will act as building inspector and fire marshal. One will be in the house at all hours of the day which will be divided into two shifts. The other members of the department will be call men.

NEW MAIL MESSENGER.

Uncle Sam Strikes a Bargain With a New Market Man.

The contract for carrying the U. S. mail between the postoffice and the North Avenue Station, has been awarded to Israel Stites, of New Market, his bid being $445 a year. This bid is about $135 less than any mail was ever carried for for one year between the points named. Mr. Stites has entered upon his duties.

"Big Tim" Invited.

Timothy Sullivan, of New York, has been invited by the local Democrats to attend the ball and entertainment to be given in the Casino here on February 15.

RESCUERS AT WORK

Bodies of Harwick Victims Still Lie Deep In the Mine.

FIGHTING ICE, WATER AND CHOKE DAMP

Brave Men Come From Pit Covered With Ice and Report No Tidings of Living Men—Many Lie Dead. A Gruesome Sight.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 27.—Even the elements seem conspiring to prevent the work of rescue at the Harwick mine. Almost zero weather and a bitter, biting, cruel wind swept down over the little valley where the mine is located and nearly added another list of dead to the long black table already measured off. Not only was the work of search for the dead and living, if any are still alive, rudely interrupted, but cold and ice and wind combined nearly cost the lives of sixteen more good men.

Sixteen men went down into the shaft to do the work of bratticing, bolstering, tunneling and removing the debris that has so far barred their progress into the workings where the men were at work when the explosion came. Their shift was supposed to be of three hours only. Even at that it was a hard task. Even before the bucket reached the bottom they were drenched with water, which the cold draft through the shaft soon turned to ice.

Shortly after they were let down, two at a time, in the bucket a temporary hoist that had been rigged up to bring up the debris and the dead was started down the shaft. Then came the snow and the cold and the water which makes it almost impossible for the brave workers to go forward in the work of rescue. It is not possible to say when the bodies will be raised.

Driving snow and sleet aided by a biting wind did all in their power to hamper the movements of those who came to this little village to aid in the work of saving the living, if any there were, and recovering the bodies of the dead at the Harwick mine.

Driven from the mining districts all about the neighborhood and did valiant work toward searching for the dead. Early in the morning the mine inspectors began to gather to direct the work of rescue, and at 5 o'clock there were present at the pit mouth Mine Inspector *F. W. Cunningham of the Four*teenth district, in which the mine is located; W. R. Adams of the Third district, Henry Lauditt of the First district, Isaac G. Roby of the Fifth district and James Blick of the Seventh district. Governor Pennypacker's lieutenant Sadlick had also wired from Harrisburg that he would be on hand if needed.

Cunningham was the first inspector over the ground and spent the greater part of the night in the mine. After snatching a few hours' sleep he went below again and after directing the movements of the volunteer force in bratticing so as to keep back the dangerous gas in front finally announced that he was ready to lead a searching party back into the mine.

The rescuers went back for many feet, but when they came to the surface they had no tidings of living men still entombed. Up and down went the bucket in the bitter cold. Men clambered through the interior, dashed in the nearby engine room and when warmed went back to the bucket and down the shaft.

Then began the rigging of the platform cage. Six hours' work on a wooden platform to keep the dead and the debris and the dead from the abyss. Some of the dead will now be brought out of the mine, there is little doubt. That the mine officials and inspectors anticipate this was evident in the presence at the mine of Coroner McGarey of Allegheny county.

While the chattering, shivering group of workers and newspaper men were gathered about the ropes and the red faces of the four Pittsburg policemen on duty at the ropes spoke eloquently of the cold, one bright incident occurred that took away for a moment the gruesome aspect of the task.

"Tom Adams has come."

Adams is the oldest mine inspector in the state, and for years until one year *ago the stricken mine was in his dis*trict.

The old men all knew him. Tall and straight, he stood in the office of the mine, and man after man came up to him, grasped his hand and said:

"Mr. Adams, are you going down?"

It was the same question always, and the same grave answer came back to each:

"Just as soon as I can change my clothes."

"It was only a little group, and the handshakes were hardly over before the veteran had stepped behind a desk and donned a suit of blue overalls and blouse. Then there was a run for it in the wind to the engine house across the tracks for a suit of oilskins. Out even in the cold there was a stop here and there as one whom the inspector knew, black and grimy, stopped and clasped his hand, and then the same old question came:

"Mr. Adams, are you going down?" And here and there was another almost whispered statement:

"Too bad, and Taylor gone too!"

Mine Boss Taylor, one of the leaders of the rescuers, came up from the shaft and said it would be very late before they would be able to get out any of the bodies.

"We have at the bottom of the shaft," said Taylor, "a pile of legs and arms and trunks that are terrible anything but the remains of human bodies. It is the most gruesome sight I ever witnessed."

"When do you expect to reach the place where the most of the men are?" he was asked.

"We're in such place," he replied, "they are scattered all over the mine, some of them, poor fellows, in fragments. We find them along the entries or find pieces of them. My God, man, you have but a faint conception of the awful force of this explosion. It tore men to pieces. It did not leave enough of some of them to tell who they were."

Many theories as to the cause of the explosion are being advanced. One is that the recent high water had something to do with it. Mining experts do not regard this as probable. Men who know the Harwick mine say that gas in dangerous quantity has been in it ever since it was opened, and this fact was recognized by the men in charge of it. Hence they say that the cause of the explosion is that probably a careless miner exposed a naked flame to the gas.

Again and again efforts were made to reach the living men of the rescue party at the bottom of the shaft, but the wooden sides of the hoist, swollen by the water, stuck to the iron guide slide, and then came hours of maneuvering to reach the bottom. The men below had no means of warmth, and many of them were standing in deep water. Every effort was made to lower the cage, and finally it was loosened and got within twelve feet of the bottom. A timber blown across the way by the explosion was in the path. The men were within easy reach of a rope, but their fingers, numbed and almost frozen by the cold, were unable to grasp the offered help.

It was 9 o'clock when the first three men of the party who went down at 3 o'clock were brought to the surface. Not one of them was able to walk, so numb were they from cold, and then they told of the experience in the mine below.

Henry Beckert was one of the first men out of the cage. He was carried to the boiler house and after twenty minutes of warmth managed to straighten himself and say:

"It was a frightful experience. We were too cold to work. There is ap*parently none to rescue. We had a* hard time to find many of the dead—a shred of clothing here and another there, a jacket, a pair of overalls, but few bodies.

"When we left the bottom of the shaft there were twelve bodies lying there ready to be brought up. There are many others there, and the bodies of many will never be found."

Mayor Harrison Arrested.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Coroner Traeger and a number of detectives arrested Mayor Carter H. Harrison, Manager Will J. Davis of the Iroquois theater, Fire Marshal William H. Musham, Commissioner of Buildings George Williams, William Salles, the theater fireman; Edward Laughlin, building inspector, and William McMullen and James E. Cummings, stage employees, named by the coroner's jury as responsible for the Iroquois disaster and ordered held for the grand jury. The mayor, who presented himself for arrest, was accompanied by his brother and cousin and by former Mayor Hempstead Washburne. The coroner greeted them, and the party then went to Judge Walker's court, where bonds of $5,000 were furnished. All the prisoners were later released on bail bonds.

Six "L" Trains Ran Over Girl.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—In the midst of the homeward rush of the crowd elevated railroad station a young woman who had tried to board a train was carried half a block clinging to the closed gate, then fell to the rails and was run over by six trains before the police managed to get a motorman to stop and take the body to a station far*ther up* town. The elevated railroad employees at the station and on the trains maintained that they knew nothing of the matter, and the police were unable to identify either the number of the train, the men in charge of it or those on the platform at the time and consequently were not able to make any arrests. The body of the girl was not identified.

Music Lovers Were Shy.

BUTTE, Mont., Jan. 27.—The concert scheduled by Mme. Patti and her company did not come off as expected. Mme. Patti's manager refused to let her appear, saying that the high altitude and smelter smoke had already affected the diva's voice, and he feared to take risks on the remainder of the trip. It is supposed by many, however, that the sale of seats was not up to expectations.

Turin Library Destroyed.

TURIN, Italy, Jan. 27.—The Univer*sity library has been destroyed by fire.* It is roughly estimated that over 100,000 volumes were burned, as well as many rare manuscripts. The University library was considered the most famous in Italy, the others being the Vatican library, the Marcian library at Venice and the one at Monte Cassino.

Forger Took a Sleigh Ride.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The horse and cutter abandoned by William J. Reid, alias Hoffman, the notorious forger who escaped from the Hampden (Mass.) county jail and was recaptured last week at Utica, has been found at the farm of J. K. Vosburg at Tribes Hill. The rig was evidently stolen by the fugitive somewhere in Vermont.

Father and Daughter Burned.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 27.—Stansbury Jacobs and his twelve-year-old daughter Lena were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Jacobs home and three other houses at Stanton, Del. Jacobs lost his life in an effort to rescue his daughter.

White Pigeon Dead.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 27.—Arthur Hunter, manager of the Hunter Pigeon company, is dead from some yellow atrophy of the liver. The only rare disease. He was widely known as an authority on white

KIELY RECOVERS MORE STOLEN HORSES

Charles Brown's Booty Discovered in and About Bristol, Pa.

RESULT OF CONFESSION

HORSES AND RIGS BROUGHT TO THIS CITY YESTERDAY.

The Most Accomplished Horse Thief Captured in Jersey in Many Years

Locked Up in Police Headquarters*—What Brown Has to Say.

Every day that passes seems to bring new proof of the talents of Charles Brown, probably the most accomplished horse thief that ever operated in New Jersey. There is hardly a county in Northern Jersey that has not one or more crimes charged up against him. Four more horses and rigs were discovered by Chief Kiely Saturday in Bristol, Pa., as the result of confessions made by Brown. This brings the total to six horses recovered and the Chief said that he has a line on several more.

Chief Kiely was greatly assisted in the discovery of the four horses in Pennsylvania by Chief *of Police Charles Saxton, of Bristol, and How*ard N. Douglass, a Bristol liveryman. Mr. Douglass aided Chief Kiely in shipping the stolen property back to this city and returned here with him.

Of the four horses, one which belonged to D. P. Carpenter, of Woodbridge, was located in Newportville, four miles from Bristol; another the property of Henry Keasey, of Elizabeth, was found in Thomas Moffett's livery stable seven miles out in the county from Bristol; another was *brought to light in the stables of Ed*ward Minster, a wholesale butcher, doing business also several miles in the country from Bristol; and the fourth was recovered in Irwin's livery stable in Bristol itself. The last two horses were owned by one David Cody and the other by the Lawrence livery stables, both of Newark. In each case the harness, blankets, and other equipment were recovered as well as the horse and carriage. All were stolen from liverymen.

*In addition to the recovery as al*ready described of Dr. Pocock's horse and carriage in Perth Amboy, the local police have information which they expect will lead to the finding of the rig belonging to Nief Apgar, the Somerville liveryman.

Jacob Rabinowitz, the Perth Amboy saloon keeper, who received the horses and rigs of Dr. Pocock and others from Brown and disposed of them, was tried Saturday in New Brunswick for keeping a disorderly house. His defense as presented by his lawyers, O. T. Covenhoven and George Pischer, attempted to show that political influence was the cause of complaint against him. The case was continued to this morning.

Brown received a visit Saturday from his wife who lives in Bucks Co., Pa. He has four sons and does not know where any one of them is. He has not the appearance of a desperate horse-thief. His air is one of mildness. He has a pale complexion, with sunken cheeks, reddish brown hair and moustache. He is dressed something after the manner of a laborer. He is forty-two years old.

Brown says that he is going to do not more horse stealing. He would have given it up long ago, he claims, but for the fascination of it. It was such an easy way of making money, to ride off with a livery man's property and forget to return it. All of the horses which were found Saturday in and near Bristol were driven to their destination by Brown from the places where they were stolen.

The accused man operated at headquarters in Newportville under the name of T. Young, and it is said he had a dozen different aliases in other parts of the country.

He appeared with his wife in Newportville last October and rented the house adjoining that of James Everett, clerk of the Orphans' Court of Bucks County. He was suave, well-dressed and made friends easily. He said he was a horse dealer, and would show the people of old Bucks some bargains that would open their eyes.

Watt Correspondent Cleared.

Justice Lovecraft, in the Supreme Court, New York, Saturday, made a formal order dismissing the charges made by Archibald Watt against Captain Wm. H. Truman, who recently lived here, of misconduct with Mrs. Adele Watt, formerly of North Plainfield, which Mr. Watt alleged in an answer to his wife's suit for a separation on the ground of his alleged cruelty and abandonment.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Carolyn Wurster Wagner, of Stanley, N. J., to T. B. Collins, of the borough.

STATE PRESS' VIEW OF THE BILL BOARDS

Editorial Opinions Endorsing Gov. Murphy's Condemnation of Landscape Disfigurement.

REMEDIES SUGGESTED

BOYCOTT OF ADVERTISERS AND A HEAVY TAX RECOMMENDED.

Favorable Comment Generally on Efforts Attempting to Take Balance Due—The Governor Has Struck a Popular Chord.

Heavy Tax Recommended.

Governor Murphy touched a popular chord in calling for the abolition of ugly signboards along railroad lines. It is an outrage to have the State thus disfigured where it should look its best to outsiders passing through. The proposed tax on this kind of advertising cannot be made too heavy, for the only object of it would be to drive the nefarious things away altogether, and force the owners to confine themselves to legitimate advertising that does not nauseate the public.—From the New Brunswick Home News.

Boycott Suggested.

Governor Murphy's recommendation that some action be taken to relieve travelers of the offensive bill board signs which mar the scenery along the principal routes of travel is urgently seconded by the public. There should be some way found to abate the nuisance, for nuisance it is, and legislative ingenuity must get to work on the problem. There is a great deal of this defacement of scenery elsewhere and if New Jersey takes action, a reform of great value may be obtained. Meanwhile, it would be a good rule to carefully avoid purchasing articles thus advertised, and if customers of the firms using the bill-boards would notify them of such a purpose, much might be accomplished without legislation.—From the Newark Sunday Call.

Attracting National Attention.

The message of Governor Murphy, protesting against the bill board nuisance and recommending restrictive legislation to the New Jersey Legislature, is attracting wide attention, and grows in interest with each reading.

With 1,650 signboards on one line of railway traversing the short distance between Jersey City and Trenton, the day of the walling in of the hills and vales cannot be so very far distant. The billboard increases in numbers and hideousness with each vacant lot or dead wall coming in view of the billboarder, and it is not a matter of wonder that Governor Murphy said to the Legislature: "In the interest of an indignant and suffering public, I present the subject in the hope that you may be able to find a remedy."

The message is being discussed, not alone in Ohio, but in Massachusetts. The Boston Herald commends the billboard feature of the document, saying that if the Governor can free his State from the billboards he would, undoubtedly, receive the thanks of the thousands of persons traveling through New Jersey, which, in proportion to its area, has the largest railway mileage of any State in the Union. He would also be entitled to receive, and would receive, the thanks of persons the manner of a laborer. He is forty- the manner of a laborer. He is forty- two years old. the thanks of the thousands traveling on its railways.—Passaic Daily News.

People Will Thank Him.

Gov. Murphy's protest against the bill boards which line the railroads and disfigure barns, farmhouses and scenery generally has elicited very general and favorable comment. The Boston "Herald" says if the Governor can free his State from the billboards he would undoubtedly receive the thanks of thousands of persons traveling through New Jersey. The Cincinnati "Commercial Tribune" commends the Governor's suggestion and says he will receive the thanks of all who live in New Jersey, as well as *the thousands traveling on its rail*ways, if he succeeds in stamping out the evil.—Jersey City Evening Journal.

BACHELOR DANCE.

Second in a Series Given at the Park Club.

The second of series of bachelor dances was given Saturday night at the Park Club by H. Reeve Stockton and Harry McGee. Like the first affair, there was a large attendance of society folk from both the city and the borough, and the programme of dances was considered one of the best of the season. An out-of-town orchestra furnished music. Shortly before midnight light refreshments were served. The last dance will be given early in the spring.

Trolley Service Stopped.

A Bound Brook car bound for Dunellen jumped the track at Lincoln Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock and blocked the track three hours before it could be replaced.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS FROM TRINITY REFORMED

The Gains in All Departments Shown at Quarterly Meeting of the Sunday-School.

F. E. SMITH PRESIDED

THE TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF THE ENTIRE SCHOOL IS 715.

Average Attendance for Year 309, a Gain of Twenty Over Last Year —The Collections in Various Departments.

The quarterly meeting of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed churchSunday-schoolwas held Tuesday night in the church parlors. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in the chair. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, Secretary E. H. Bird's report was read. It showed a total membership of 715, making a gain over last year of fifty-seven, due largely to the increase in the Junior and Primary departments. The total average attendance on any one Sunday was 419 and the smallest 91.

The report of the superintendent of the Home department showed 151 members enrolled, a gain of forty over last year and of fourteen for the quarter. The amount collected was $39.79 for the quarter.

The report from Miss Minnie Wyman, assistant superintendent of the Junior department, showed a total attendance for the year of 1,196 and an average attendance of twenty-five. There were forty-four pupils at the close of the year on enrollment, a gain of fourteen over last year. The regular collections amounted to $34.99. Mite boxes were given out and $8.50 realized from them. The money received from this source was sent to the Amoy Mission, China. The sum of $5 was also raised and given to the King's Daughters baby camp on the mountains.

The report of the treasurer, H. E. Gayle, was next read. This showed that $611.35 had been received up to December 31, 1903, and $461.76 expended, leaving a balance of $149.59 on hand. The largest collection being $13.43 and the smallest $3.66.

The missionary society report showed collections amounting to $188.57, an increase of $52.84 over last year.

HOSPITAL'S CARD OF THANKS

THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS GRATIFIED FOR AID OBTAINED FOR INSTITUTION.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at its regular meeting on February 1 instructed the secretary to express and convey its sincere thanks for and heary appreciation of their efforts to the members of the committee who planned and had charge of the Charity Ball at the Casino on the evening of January 28, and also to all who in any way assisted in making the Charity Ball a great success.

At the same meeting the Board of Governors voted to apply the proceeds of the Charity Ball, about $1,500, towards the cost of furnishing the new hospital.

Coldest in Thirty-Four Years.

With a mean temperature of 24 degrees the past two or three days are recorded, with one exception, the coldest during a period covering thirty-four years. January, 1893, was colder, having a mean temperature of 23 degrees. The temperature that month, however, did not touch zero, while in the month just past it went below zero three times. It was below freezing every day but two. The snowfall was 15.2 inches, the greatest January snowfall since 1893.

Test of Public Pride.

There are many ways in which a man's good citizenship may be shown. One pretty good indication is the condition of the side walk in front of his house in winter, and that of the street at his premises in the heat and dust of summer. A due regard for the rights of the public should be shown by property owners in all seasons.—New Brunswick Daily Press.

Attended Funeral in Montclair.

John Venable and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Venable, of West Third street, who attended the funeral of their brother's wife, Mrs. Charles Venable, at Montclair, Monday, have returned home. Mrs. Venable died Saturday morning and left a husband and a ten days' old child.

DOANE ORDERS FIRE ESCAPES

SAFETY CONTRIVANCES WILL BE PUT ON THE VANDERBEEK BUILDING.

Fire escapes will be placed on the Vanderbeek building, in which The Daily Press plant is located, and the Taylor building on the opposite corner. This matter has been under consideration recently by Building Inspector T. O. Doane and he has been in consultation with Mrs. Andrew Vanderbeek and Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor, the owners of the two buildings. The exits from these buildings are not considered sufficient in case of disaster and the owners willingly comply with the request to establish the additional means of escape. The work will be started in the near future.

CRUSADE AGAINST BAD HABIT

BOROUGH BOARD OF HEALTH WISHES TO STOP EXPECTORATING ON SIDEWALKS.

"What can be done in the crusade about to be started by the Board of Health in the borough, against the habit of some men of expectorating on the sidewalk?" This was the question discussed at the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health at its meeting Monday night. The matter has been laid over until the next meeting, when some more data will have been secured which will be used to guide the Board in its fight against this unsanitary practice.

It is known that tuberculosis has been spread into healthy families through the expectorations of men on the sidewalks, which circulate in the atmosphere and spread the germs. The North Plainfield Board of Health intends to follow the example set by New York and other large cities in drafting ordinances designed to make it a misdemeanor to expectorate upon the sidewalk. Secretary Dr. William E. Honeyman said yesterday that such an ordinance was strongly urged. The Board of Health in this city will be asked to concur with the borough Board in an effort to stamp out this evil.

TALKED ON MISSIONARY WORK

MISS PETRIE ADDRESSED CONGREGATION AT WARREN CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

Miss Petrie, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, addressed a large audience at the Warren chapel last night, describing the work of the missionaries in this country and in foreign lands. Her principal line of talk was on the Christian Endeavor missionary work, which she said was growing rapidly and in a most encouraging manner. She also told of the California convention of mission workers in an interesting way.

Miss Cornelia Miller sang several solos during the evening and a missionary offering was taken. Mrs. Ely, chairman of the missionary committee, is one of the Christian Endeavor Society, was in charge of the arrangements, assisted by the other members of the committee.

DELIGHTFULLUNCHEON.

Mrs. F. G. Mead and Mrs. Lawrence Myers Entertained Society Folk Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead and Mrs. Lawrence Myers entertained a few friends at luncheon at Mrs. Mead's home on East Front street yesterday afternoon. The affair was in every way delightful. Among the guests were Miss Deitrich, of Baltimore; Mrs. John Harman, Mrs. Frank DeL. Hyde, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Edward Ladd, Jr., Miss Jessie Munger, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. John Ginna.

FINE NOT REMITTED.

Borough Board of Health Refuses Garbage Collector's Request.

Before the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health, Monday night, Antonio Guivani, a garbage collector, appeared and asked the board to remit the fine imposed upon him by Justice Mattison for collecting garbage without a license. His request was not granted. Guivani lives just outside the borough limits near the "Notch." For almost six months the Board of Health has been trying to locate and arrest the man who has been doing this work, but had been unsuccessful until last week when the inspector saw him come into the borough with a covered wagon and collect garbage. He placed him under arrest and Justice Mattison fined him $10. The man was also charged with keeping pigs in an open sty within the borough limits.

HILLSIDE GOLF CLUB REVIEWS ITS SEASON

Income for the Year Ample to Discharge Several Debts of the Organization.

WINNERS OF TROPHIES

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.

Trustees Chosen—Members Numbers Two Hundred and Ninety-Nine Active Players—Indebtedness Now $18,900.

The annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club was held last Tuesday at the Casino, and the reports presented showed the club to be in excellent financial condition. According to the interesting report of the president, George P. Mellick, it was shown that the prediction has come true that at the close of the year the income for that period would amply pay the floating debt of $800, to defray all expenses of the club and to redeem bonds to the amount of $900.

The membership at the close of the year is as follows: Active, 299; associate, 88; junior associate, 156, nonresident, 20; honorary, 3, making a total of 566. The outstanding indebtedness of the club has been reduced to $18,900.

Mr. Mellick also says in his report that the interest in golf during the past year was greater than since the club was organized. There were a large number of entries in the various events. The record on the course in competition for the cup, is 65, made by F. O. Reinhart, August 8. There were more cups played for this past year than ever before, the club presenting ten, besides the one in the regular schedule. The golf team won four matches out of five played with other clubs.

The regular schedule events were won by these members:

Championship of the club, F. O. Reinhart; golf committee cup, H. R. Stockton; green's committee cup, H. R. Stockton; holiday cup, E. B. Shoemaker; championship consolation cup, Walter Peterson; woman's handicap cup, Miss Margaret Goddard; Gilbert cup, foursomes, Miss Maude VanBoskerck and T. R. VanBoskerck.

The finals for the Gilbert and Fourth of July handicap cups will be played in the spring. The cup for the best record made by a member of the golf team will also be decided in the spring, as there are four ties.

Lawn tennis has been an important feature during the past year and the growth of this, especially among junior members, necessitates an increase in the number of courts and it is hoped to have two in commission on the south of the old seventeenth green at the opening of the season.

Tennis tournaments held during the season and prizes were awarded as follows:

Men's singles, won by T. M. Day, Jr. Runnerup, G. H. Taylor. Mixed doubles, won by Miss Schuyler and G. H. Taylor. Men's singles handicap, won by O. H. Fleming, half 15. Consolation prize (Open to players beaten in their first match) won by G. H. Taylor, scratch. Men's singles, won by H. D. Bulkley. Runnerup, O. H. Fleming. Men's championship singles, won by N. D. Bulkley. Runnerup, A. D. Beers. Boy's singles, won by J. Rex Shoemaker. Mellick cup for ladies' singles (Presented by George P. Mellick.) The winners of the four preliminary tournaments held at intervals during the summer were Miss Whitson, Miss Schuyler, Miss Burks and Miss Bushnell. The cup was won by Miss Whitson.

The large increase in attendance at the clubhouse renders it necessary that during the coming year some changes be made. It is also proposed to build a shelter for automobiles. The club begins a new year with every evidence of continued prosperity if there be hearty co-operation on the part of the members.

The balance sheet of the club treasurer, Walter Peterson, shows these assets: Land, buildings and equipments, $33,162.78; cash, $366.33; due from members, $30.95, total, $33,559.06. Liabilities: First mortgage bonds, $18,900; locker key deposits, $56.25; adjustment of fire loss, $110; reserve for depreciation of buildings and equipment, $4,483.51, total, $23,550.06. In the cash statement the receipts are shown to be $10,207.98, leaving a balance of $366.33. The total debts for the year were $9,900.10 and the total credits the same.

Ernest R. Ackerman, George P. Mellick and Lewis E. Waring were elected as trustees to serve for three years.

After the annual meeting adjourned, a meeting of the trustees was held to elect officers and appoint committees for the ensuing year: These were chosen:

President, George P. Mellick; vice president, Ernest R. Ackerman; treasurer, Stuart H. Patterson; secretary, Albert H. Atterbury; chairman house committee, Lewis G. Timpson; chairman Greens' committee, Elliot T. Barrows; chairman tennis committee, Thomas M. Day, Jr.; chairman golf committee, Thomas R VanBoskerck.

The resignation of the former treasurer, Walter Peterson, was accepted as a trustee, as well as treasurer, and Stuart H. Patterson was elected in his place.

This nominating committee for 1905 was selected: Francis A. Clark, Howard Huntington and Walter M. McGee.

THE SANITARY IMPROVEMENTS

MRS. JOHN A. WARING, OF PERTH AMBOY, INVESTIGATING METHODS.

Mrs. John A. Waring, of Perth Amboy, a relative of Colonel Waring, the originator of the white wing street cleaners in New York, was in North Plainfield this morning securing data concerning the way in which the borough Board of Health is conducted. She represents an improvement league of Perth Amboy, which has taken up the matter of bettering the conditions of the Board of Health work in that place. She reports that the conditions in caring for the contagious diseases in the schools of that city are sadly in need of a change. Mrs. Waring visited the secretary of the Board, Dr. W. E. Honeyman, this morning to secure some facts.

WOULD REVOKE FRANCHISES

CITY FATHERS OF ELIZABETH AND UNION HILL AFTER THE P. S. C.

The Common Council of Elizabeth on Monday night upon the recommendation of its law committee, adopted a resolution setting forth the deplorable condition of its cars, the faulty timetable and the general mismanagement, and citing the company to appear, before the Council on the evening of February 10 and show cause why the franchises for the use of electricity should not be revoked.

A resolution from the same committee was adopted authorizing the employment of special counsel to aid City Attorney Fiske in bringing about the revocation of the franchises. Samuel Kalisch, of Newark, has been retained.

The Common Council of Union Hill last night adopted a resolution instructing its committee on laws and ordinances to draft an ordinance recalling the franchise granted to the Public Service Corporation to use electricity as a method of propulsion. The resolution, however, provides the ordinance shall not be presented if, in the mean time, the corporation materially improves the service.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETS

NUMBER OF BOROUGHITES MEMBERS OF SOMERSET COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

The early history of New Jersey, in which the grants made by the Duke of York, and the consequent trouble in securing the merging of two tracts which now form the State of New Jersey, was the subject of an interesting paper read before the Somerset County Historical Society at its meeting in Somerville yesterday afternoon. This address was made by Rev. W. Voorhees, of Bound Brook. The paper was exceedingly interesting and was ably read.

Among those present at the meeting were Rev. Dr. W. E. Honeyman and A. V. D. Honeyman, both of North Plainefld. Forty new members were received at the meeting. Among the borough people who are now members are Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, Charles Place, W. H. Shotwell, Dr. J. H. Cooley and Judge Schenck, of the Somerset courts.

Entertained Class.

Adam Neuman entertained his Sunday-school class of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church in the Epworth room of the church last night. Games were played and refreshments served. The purpose of the gathering was to bring the members of the class socially more closely together.

Mr. and Mrs. James McCullough, of Jersey City, are visiting at the home of friends in North Plainfield for the past few days.

BOARD OF HEALTH RE-ELECTS OFFICERS

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk Again Chosen President of the Health Bureau.

MONTH'S STATISTICTS

NINETEEN CASES OF CONTAGION DURING JANUARY.

Joint-Committee on Proposed System of Garbage Collection Meets Tomorrow—106 Inspections During the Month.

The February meeting of the Board of Health was held Tuesday afternoon, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. T. S. Davis, F. W. Dunn and Charles Dunham being present. The monthly reports shows the city's sanitary condition to be good. All points in connection with the present case of smallpox were thoroughly gone over and free vaccination was discussed. The number of cases of contagious diseases reported during the month was small, nineteen being reported, with one death resulting.

There were reported during the month two marriages, twenty-four deaths, making a total of fifty-five. The two marriages were both white; of the twenty-four births, eighteen were white and six colored; thirteen were male and eleven female. Of the twenty-nine deaths, twenty-four were white and five colored; thirteen were male and sixteen female.

There were 106 inspections made during the month. The work on the garbage disposal problem is progressing. There will be a meeting of the joint committee tomorrow. As this was the annual meeting these officers for the ensuing year were chosen: President, Charles J. Fisk; secretary, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges; treasurer, F. W. Dunn. All succeed themselves in office.

TEA IN HONOR OF DAUGHTER

MRS. MARTIN I. COOLEY ENTERTAINS SOCIETY AT HER HOME.

The first of two afternoon teas and receptions was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview avenue, in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Mason Matthew Patrick, who together with her husband, Captain Patrick, of West Point, is visiting in Plainfield for a month. There were about one hundred and fifty guests present at the social function.

The decorations were attractive, pink being the prevailing color in the dining room.

Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. Patrick were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Cortelyou, of South Orange; Mrs. Honeycutt, Mrs. M. O'M. Knott, Mrs. Hiram Belding, Mrs. Frank Martin, Mrs. S. S. John McCutcheon, Mrs. George P. Dupee, Mrs. Edward Waring and Mrs. Andrew Seiter. Those assisting in the dining room were Miss Wadsworth, Miss Helen Martin, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Helen Phillips.

ATHLETIC MEET PLANS.

Secretary of Y. M. C. A. Athletic League of N. A. Invited by Local League.

Formal notices of the schedule of time of events and detailed arrangements for the Y. M. C. A. athletic meet in this city next Monday night have been sent to the secretaries of the four out-of-town associations participating. The secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League of North America has been invited to act as referee of the meet. It is not known, however, whether he will be able to accept. The other officials will be the physical directors of the teams participating.

Coasting Accident.

William Doyle, aged ten years, of West Third street, while coasting on the Grove street hill, yesterday afternoon, was run into by Edward Abbott, of West Front street, who was also coasting. Young Doyle was knocked into insensibility, remaining so for a half hour. He was later removed to his home by companions and no serious consequences are anticipated.

FAIR FOR BOYS DEPARTMENT

ATTRACTION AT Y.M.C. A. COMMENCES TOMORROW AFTERNOON.

The fair to aid the boys department of the Y. M. C. A. will take place tomorrow from 3 in the afternoon to 10 at night. The preparations for the fair, the proceeds of which will be devoted to buying games and adding attractions to the boys rooms, have been made by the boys' work committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., assisted by the boys themselves. There will be candy, cake and fancy tables, a lemonade booth, fish pond and special table with articles to please masculine tastes. Ice cream, hot chocolate and cake will be served.

SWACKHAMER TO FIGHT BILL

SOMERSET'S ASSEMBLYMAN BELIEVES ROBINS SHOULD NOT BE KILLED.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer says he has been requested by a number of Somerset County farmers and by some people in this city and in the borough to fight the proposed bill aiming at the destruction of the robin, which will be given a hearing in Trenton next Monday night. He declares that the robin is a positive assistance to the farmer.

Mr. Swackhamer said last night: "I have been interviewed by a number of people in this city and in the borough and have received letters from many farmers throughout Somerset county asking me to fight the measure. I have given the matter a great deal of consideration and I am convinced that the robin should not be exterminated.

"Today," said he, "the cotton market is agitated in a manner never before seen or heard of. Why? Partly because the robin was driven out of Texas. It was placed on the game list and as a consequence the cotton boll weevil multiplied until it destroyed whole crops and the farmers prayed the Legislature to remove the birds from the list to save them from going into bankruptcy."

SCHOOL EXHIBIT NOW READY

WORK OF PLAINFIELD PUPILS TO BE SENT TO ST. LOUIS FEB. 15.

Plainfield's school exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis will be sent to that city on Monday, February 15. It will be in the hands of Superintendent H. M. Maxson next week the pupils in the schools having completed their work.

The exhibit will consist of two cabinets of cards with a display of the work of the pupils of all grades. Photographs will be included. In addition about thirty books of the size of ordinary composition paper will be sent and will contain specimens of the work of the children in science, language and other studies.

The exhibit will be complete and needless to say will creditably represent the city. It is hoped that the success achieved in the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo will be repeated and that Plainfield field school children will again receive special mention for excellence in the character of their work.

OFF FOR SUNNY SOUTH.

More Plainfielders Leaving for Sojourns in Florida.

Among those who have recently sailed for Florida and the South on the popular Clyde Line having arranged for the trip at the office of the company at 197 North avenue, here, are J. Storrie, Mrs. William B. Maxson, George S. Robson and bride, Frank Burke and E. E. Nelson. A party from this city now in Florida, report delightful weather and an enjoyable trip. Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sandford and daughter, Miss May Sandford, of East Front street, leave on Friday on the Arapahoe for Florida as does also Mrs. Letitia Penfield, of Park avenue.

For Plainfield Boys.

There will be an unusually important and interesting meeting for boys at the Y. M. C. A. building next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Three of the boys from the department, Henry Pound, George Rittenhouse, Jr., and Walter Caldwell, will give Bible talks and Stanley Kirman will sing a solo. The boys' orchestra will play.

Musicale at All Souls'.

A musicale will be given by the Unity League of All Souls' church, in Park avenue, tomorrow night at 8:15. A vocal and instrumental programme will be presented.

PLAINFIELD CLERGY JOIN IN CELEBRATION

Observance of Dr. Scarborough's Elevation to the Bishopric of New Jersey.

SOME HANDSOME GIFTS

REV. WILLIAM MONTGOMERY DOWNEY PREACHES AT SPECIAL SERVICE.

Bishop Consecrated Twenty-Nine Years Ago—Beautiful Pectoral Cross and Bag of Gold Among the Numerous Presents.

Prominent Episcopalains from various parts of this State gathered yesterday at Grace Episcopal church, Elizabeth, where Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Episcopal bishop of New Jersey, celebrated the twenty-ninth anniversary of his consecration.

Among the Plainfielders present were: Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector-emeritus, of Grace church; Rev. William Montgomery Downey, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross; Rev. Harris C. Rush, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest; Rev. E. Vicars Seevenson, rector of Grace church; Rev. William Harris, rector of St. Stephen's church; and Rev. J. P. Taylor, retired.

During the course of the anniversary observances the bishop consecrated the new Edward Clark memorial chantry in Grace church.

Coincident with the occasion and the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, was held the quarterly session of the Episcopal convocation of New Brunswick. There were about fifty clergymen present.

The sermon was preached by Rev. William M. Downey, of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, at the 10 o'clock service. The chantry is a gift from the wife of Bishop Henry C. Potter, of New York, who was the widow of Alfred Corning Clark, a son of the late Edward Clark, who when he died was president of the Singer Sewing Machine Company. His daughter-in-law presented to Grace parish the splendid clubhouse known as the "Edward Clark Club," which cost more than $80,000.

On Monday the Episcopalians of Burlington presented to him a magnificent pectoral cross of gold, studded with five large splendid amethysts. Last evening the men's guild of Grace church presented to the bishop a gold fountain pen that cost $30.

BOYS' GYMNASTIC EXHIBITION

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. LADS TO VISIT RAHWAY ASSOCIATION.

A delegation of twelve of the members of the intermediate and boys' departments of the Y. M. C. A. will give a gymnastic exhibition at Rahway, on Friday night. It will be a picked representation, including only the older members of the boys' department besides those in the intermediate under sixteen years of age. A game of basket ball between the Rahway and the Plainfield boys' team will be a feature of the exhibition. Those who will represent Plainfield's departments are Walter Caldwell, Kenneth Storr, William Lambert, Chester Dontoe, Edward Alpaugh, Howard Freeman, Roy Woodhull, Norman Loughlin, Fred Martin, William Briggs, Horace Vail, Henry Pound. The boys will leave the local Y. M. C. A. at 6:20 o'clock Friday evening.

RED MEN GATHERED.

Past Sachem's Degree Conferred on Four Plainfielders.

With Anwaga Tribe, No. 88, of New Brunswick Red Men, last night, a district session was held at which the past sachem's degree was conferred upon four Plainfielders. They were Morris Kadensky, Dr. A. H. Dundon, Edward Crosby and Fred Firstbrook. Eighteen members of Miantonomo and Wetumpkah Tribes attended the session. The degrees were conferred by the Board of Great Chiefs. William Newcorn, of this city, was one of the speakers.

Action Discontinued.

Public Library Meeting.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library, held last night, routine business only was transacted.

LOST IN CATACOMBS.

Party of Tourists Lose Their Way in Dismal Old Hole.

For Over Two Hours They Tramped at Random Over the Stony Paths of the Oldest Burial Place of Paris.

A party of tourists had an experience of the most startling character in the Catacombs of Paris recently.

The party, which consisted of 25 persons, 19 of whom were English and Americans, were lost for over two hours in the underground passages in the midst of piles of grinning skulls and stacks of human bones. When ultimately they found their way out, the women were on the verge of collapse, and all were suffering from nervous shock.

For some years past the Catacombs have been recognized as dangerous. Formerly visitors were allowed to enter unattended, and were merely told to follow a broad black band which is painted along the roof. By following this instruction they were able to find an exit a couple of miles away.

Owing, however, to several mysterious disappearances of tourists and to the ground having given way under several of the labyrinthine galleries, it was decided that visitors should be admitted only when accompanied by a guide.

Recently a large party entered the Catacombs at the Rue Denfert-Rochereau entrance. They were accompanied by a guide, and carried lighted candles. After wandering along the dark narrow passages for some time, the Englishman stopped to examine some curious inscriptions, and a crowd gathered round. When they started again the guide and rest of the party had disappeared.

An American woman, Mrs. Frederic Brady, who was one of the party, states that after having gone on for 20 minutes without finding their friends, the Englishman who had been the cause of the trouble admitted that he had lost his way. Then several of the women began to cry. Some of the party were afraid to go forward, but others urged that they must pass on to find an outlet before the candles burnt out. The scene was one of indescribable confusion.

The men shouted in the hope of making those who had gone on ahead hear, but there was no answer, and the party, in a state of greatest excitement, wandered on through passage after passage, turning in and out amid the piles of human bones. This went on for an hour and a half, and some of the candles were burning very low.

Mme. Chambronty, a French woman who had been in the Catacombs several times before, at last noticed a spring of water, and exclaimed in broken English that she knew the way. For another 20 minutes the visitors followed her, and when nearly all the candles had gone out they came to an exit. But it was locked, and there was another cry of despair. Happily, some keepers, who evidently thought that all visitors had left, appeared and unlocked the iron gates.

According to rule, the men in charge are ordered to count the number of visitors who enter and leave the Catacombs, but this precaution is evidently neglected. For the future it has been decided that visitors shall be accompanied by two guides, one of whom will go in front of and the other will follow a party.

The Catacombs of Paris are abandoned quarries extending under a large portion of the city. They were made into a receptacle for human bones in 1786, when the cemeteries of the city were condemned and the bones removed thither.

Broke His Vow.

Miss Helen Lackeye, sister of the popular actor, Wilton Lackeye, has the family gift of repartee fully developed. Recently a young society man who prides himself on his popularity with female acquaintances begged from her a few of the violets she wore at her reception and placed the flowers inside the case of his watch, vowing that as long as he lived they should repose there. A few days later the two met again and Miss Lackeye asked about the flowers. The young man was visibly embarrassed, but explained that he had opened the watch while in the street and that a gust of wind had blown away the violets. "And you kept the watch after that?" said Miss Lackeye with sweet incredulity.

Chinese as Militiamen.

A militia company, formed entirely of Chinamen, has been formed in Portland, Ore. The members are merchants, bankers and clerks. At first their military maneuvers appeared quite comical to the observers, but they are improving.

U. S. MARINE CORPS.

Command of This Body Transferred to Gen. Elliott.

How Chief Is One of the Most Popular Officers in the Service and Has Done Excellent Work in Many Places.

The formal transfer of the command of the United States marine corps from Maj. Gen. Charles Heywood to Brig. Gen. George F. Elliott took place recently at the headquarters of the corps in Washington, and was attended by all the officers of the corps stationed in that city. There were no special formalities beyond the reading of the official orders for the retirement of Gen. Heywood and the assignment of Gen. Elliott to the command. Each of the officers made a short address suitable to the occasion, and at their conclusion the two held a reception to allow the members of the corps to take official leave of their retiring commander, and to pay their respects to the new commandant. The clerical force of the office also called in a body and paid its respects.

Gen. Elliott is one of the most popular and efficient officers in the service. His promotion was based entirely on merit, and mainly in recognition of his meritorious services during the Spanish war and the insurrection in the Philippines.

A native of Alabama, he was appointed a second lieutenant in the marine corps from New York October 12, 1870.

When Gen. Elliott was attached to the Monongahela, of the South Atlantic station, in 1878, yellow fever broke out on that vessel while she was lying in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro. Despite the fact that he could have had leave and gone to the mountains, he of his own volition remained with the ship and his men, and when the assistant surgeon of the vessel was taken down with fever, volunteered to assist the surgeon in so far as his ability would permit, and he performed valuable service.

He served with the marine battalion in the railroad strikes of 1877, and in 1875 served under Gen. Heywood with the marine battalion on the Isthmus of Panama.

While in command of the marine guard of the flagship Baltimore, of the Asiatic station, in 1894, he marched his guard from Chemulpo to Seoul to protect the American legation at the latter place, the Chinese-Japanese war being in progress and Corea, the scene of hostilities. This was a night march of 31 miles, accomplished in 11 hours. Gen. Elliott commanded the legation guard for three months subsequent to this time.

The scene of hostilities having been transferred, he was ordered with the marine guard to Tientsin, which he helped to protect during the winter. Later on, at the request of Mr. Denby, then American minister at Peking, he acted as aid to that official on the occasion to the first audience ever granted by the Chinese emperor to foreigners. In order to perform this duty Gen. Elliott was compelled to make the trip on horseback, passing through about 25,000 undisciplined Chinese troops, suffering constant insult and running no little personal risk.

During the Spanish-American war, in 1898, Gen. Elliott commanded company C of the marine battalion during the four days' battle at Guantanamo, Cuba, and later, while in command of a battalion of 250 men, defeated the Spanish in a spirited battle at Cusco Valley, after killing and taking a number of prisoners in addition to destroying the wells which were the source of the enemy's water supply. This fight resulted in giving security to the marine camp on Guantanamo Hill, and for his conduct in this battle the president advanced Elliott three numbers for "eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle."

Gen. Elliott having been ordered to the Philippines, in command of a battalion of marines on October 8, 1899, defeated the enemy over very bad ground, and captured, by direct assault, a position at Novaleta which had been deemed impregnable by the Spanish and before which they once lost an entire regiment. For this service he received a commendatory letter from the secretary of the navy. He has had almost 14 years at sea and foreign service, and has always rendered a good account of himself.

Buried Treasure of Jesuits.

About 100 years ago, when the Jesuits were banished from Mexico, it was known that they possessed vast wealth, but they took very little of it with them. What they did with it was a mystery. A very old man, Pierre Guire, says that about $20,000,000 of it was buried beneath the old cathedral in the little town of Typosottan, and it is believed to rest there yet.

LOFTY TOSSED BULL.

Circus Giant Made Short Work of Infuriated Beast.

Threw Him Over a Fence Into a Pool of Water and Coolly Walked Home—An Old Story in Reversed Form.

"Every now and then, you know," said the old circus man to a New York Sun reporter, "you see in the papers a paragraph headed 'Chased by an Infuriated Bull.' It is a simple little story, and it always runs about the same:

"'As Farmer Jones, of West Cheshire, was crossing his pasture lot on Thursday last he was chased by an infuriated bull,' and it goes on to tell how Farmer Jones barely escaped, and all that, the bull hooking off the top rail of the fence just as Farmer Jones went over it, and so on.

"A simple little story, sure enough; and one that we've read a hundred times; but do you know if the newspapers should stop printing it, I should miss it greatly? For somehow that little story has always interested me very much, and ever since a little experience that the greatest of all giants had once with an infuriated bull it has interested me more still.

"We had a pasture lot right next to the home lot at the show's winter quarters, and in that pasture lot we had at one time a bull. The home lot and the pasture lot stretched along from the house alongside a road.

"The giant stepped over the fence between the home lot and the pasture lot one day to make a short cut across the pasture to the point down the road, and just as he'd got pretty near across somebody back in the home lot hollers out to him:

"'Hey, Lofty! The bull!'

"The bull, down in one corner, had spied the giant making across the pasture, and it started for him at once. It didn't make any difference to the bull how big the giant was; you can't scare a mad bull.

"Did the giant start and run away from it? He could have done it easy; but he didn't stir a peg. He just stood still till the bull was about ten feet of him, and then he side-stepped just one step, which was equal to three steps of an ordinary man, and stood stock still again; and when the bull turned around to follow him, and just as he was ready to spring, the great giant took him by the horns.

"He gave the bull a swing and swung him clean off the ground and up and around his head, and swung him so

"IT'S A SIMPLE LITTLE STORY."

(twice, like a hammer-thrower swinging a hammer before he throws it, and then he launched the bull into the air. And the bull went sailing over the pasture fence, and over the road, and over the fence beyond, and—disappeared!

"But it didn't take long to find him. On that property across the road there was an old disused quarry, that had been quarried out to the depth of about 60 feet, and had about ten feet of water in the hole at the bottom, and the bull had dropped into that quarry; and here he was when we got over and looked down the sides, swimming around in the water down below.

"Well, we got out some of our tent tackle that had been stored for the winter and got the bull out and put him back in the pasture lot, where he frisked around as gayly as ever, what you call defeated, but not dismayed; and he'd have charged on the giant again in a minute if the giant had set out to cross the lot again."

"But that was something the giant never tried to do. He was a man of sense, the giant, and he knew that it was doubtful the next time he threw him, whether the bull would come down in as soft a spot as the pool of water, and he didn't want to hurt the bull, and so the giant and the bull never met again.

"But that one meeting between them, as you can easily imagine, gave me a new interest in the time-honored little story that we see in the papers every now and then under the heading of 'Chased by an Infuriated Bull,' and every time I read it I think of what happened when the bull chased not Farmer Jones, but the greatest of all giants."

Lightning Burned Big Hole.

Lightning burned a chimney hole in a haystack on Mrs. Allison's farm, on West Grand river, near Grant City, Mo. The rick was in the center of the house, and a couple of boys, seeing it smoking, went to it at once. They found in the top of the rick a small hole, from which the smoke was issuing, and, throwing a wisp of hay into the hole, smothered the fire. When the end of the rick was cut off it was found that the lightning had burned a hole from the top to the bottom of the stack about two inches in diameter.

RELIC OF THE PAST.

The Talamancans a Forgotten People of the Isthmus.

Their Ancient Usages and Customs Have Not Been Affected by Four Centuries of Spanish Civilization.

Within less than 100 miles of where the United States intends to complete the greatest interoceanic ditch the world has seen, in territory where the newly created republic of Panama is situated, there dwells an Indian nation that is to all intents and purposes identically the same to-day as it was when Columbus first discovered the western hemisphere. These are the Talamancans, who inhabit a few square miles in the mountains almost midway between the two oceans and but a comparatively short distance from the Panama railroad, though it is much to be doubted if they have ever seen it or are aware of its existence. The Scientific American says that although for upward of four centuries the medieval civilization of Spain has surrounded them on all sides, they have neither been contaminated by its influence nor exterminated by its kindness, as was the case in Cuba and other Spanish colonies. Their language is still their own, and seems to have lost little of its original character through contact with the execrable mixture of English, Spanish and French spoken by the lower classes throughout the West Indies and along the Spanish Main. Living in virtually an unknown region, at least three days' journey from the nearest settlement their solitude is seldom broken. The visitor is received with the greatest hospitality, and is welcome as long as he desires to remain. Their visits to the outer world are infrequent, rarely extending beyond the nearest port, and are undertaken only in quest of luxuries. Extra fowls and porkers are bartered on these occasions for tobacco, gewgaws and ammunition. The spear and blowgun are used more than firearms for various reasons. The former are not only infinitely cheaper, but usually more effective in the hands of the Indian than the cheap muzzle-loading fowling piece of French or German origin with its paper-like barrel—the only arm he can afford to purchase besides the machete.

Their language and customs in some respects resemble those of the score or more of widely differing peoples that are scattered over the territory lying between the Mexican border and the Isthmus. Their ancestors doubtless served Aztec masters for centuries before Cortes appeared on the scene to impose a worse slavery upon them, for they are not of the superior race of which so many reminders in the shape of gold and silver ornaments, stone idols and curious specimens of pottery have been unearthed in quantities in several of the Central American states, and being the opposite of warlike, they could easily be held in bondage.

They are not idolaters in any sense of the word, nor do they profess religion or hold public worship of any nature, though their belief tends more to fear of an evil spirit than faith in a good one; in fact, the Talamancans present an instance of a nation without doctor, lawyer or priest, the "joker," corresponding to the medicine man of the North American tribes, usually combining the functions of all three. Polygamy is the most important feature of their domestic relations, few if any of the members of the different tribes being content with less than three to half a dozen wives, while his Talamancan majesty might well exclaim with Launcelot: "Alas! Fifteen wives is nothings." His seraglio is usually better provided in point of numbers.

The government of this Indian nation is entirely hereditary, and it is astonishing to learn of the many points of the doctrine of primogeniture as practiced by the reigning families of Europe, with which they are familiar. Their laws are naturally few in number, both the legislative and judicial power, as is usually the case where no fixed principles of either have been acquired, being vested exclusively in the king. In common with others in his position the world over, he is a law unto himself, according to royal whim where this does not conflict with long-established custom. The marital relation is held sacred. The engagement of a girl begins within a few hours of her birth, the betrothed couple being affianced by the parents at that time. It is usually consummated when she reaches the age of ten or twelve, a custom that is responsible for great disparity in the age and longevity of the sexes.

MOOSE TOWS CANOE.

Big Bull Acts as Motor Power for the Small Craft.

Unique Journey of a Hunting Party Around a Lake in the Maine Woods—Adventure Never to Be Forgotten.

The Bangor (Me.) Commercial says there are two people of that town, a camp proprietor and a guide, who had an adventure recently, which they will tell about for the rest of their lives. The people are Miss Carmy Coombs, of Bangor, who is staying at the well-known camp at Lily bay, Moosehead lake, kept by Alphonse Berdeen; Joseph Patten, of Bangor, a well-known guide of that region, and Mr. Berdeen himself.

It does not come to the lot of many people to be towed a mile and a half through a lake by a big bull moose, while two cows swim alongside, the people being in a canoe and resting on the moose to keep him from swamping, fairly riding him, but that is what happened to these people.

It was Tuesday afternoon that Mr. Berdeen, who is always looking out for the pleasures of his guests, spied a big bull moose on the shore of the lake near the camp and at once thought what fun it would be to chase the big animal in a canoe.

Calling to Miss Coombs, Mr. Patten and Jack Dyer, the guide, Mr. Berdeen started toward the big animal, who at once began to swim out into the lake. Quickly jumping into a canoe the quartette started. Driven by the lusty strokes of the guide and the camp proprietor, the canoe was not long in overtaking the animal, who was making frantic efforts to escape across the lake.

Upon reaching him Dyer, who was in the bow, seized the moose by the horns and the fun began. It was at this point that the most remarkable occurrence happened. The party was about 100 yards from the shore when, on turning around, one of them saw two cow moose making out from the shore.

The smaller animals soon overtook the big bull, who was sadly handicapped by having to drag the canoe full of people, and they began to swim alongside.

It was at this juncture, however, that the fun nearly became serious. As the four people, each one wanting to get a better look at the big moose, crowded forward into the bow of the frail craft, it nearly swamped, the bow coming perilously near going under.

How Mr. Berdeen got over the three people and, resting himself on the moose, held up the canoe, no one can tell, but he did, and for a mile and a half the big animal towed the four people in the canoe, while the two cow moose swam alongside. All this time, too, the bow of the craft was being kept up by Mr. Berdeen, who was supporting it on the moose's back.

When the party had traveled as far as they cared to the moose was puffing and blowing at a great rate, he was released, and the four occupants of the canoe said that it was a sight worth going miles to see the way that moose, even in his winded condition, humped himself and made the water fly getting across the remainder of the lake to the opposite shore.

INSECT HORSE GUARDS.

They Look Very Much Like Hornets and Keep Away Flies from the Laboring Beasts.

In the northern states horses that travel in the country during hot weather are protected from the bite of the horsefly by some sort of cover, which is made of leather straps or coarse cord, which keep up a dangling with every motion of the horse. This, with the incessant switching of his tail, serves to intimidate the pests in some degree. Still the big, daring flies will sting the poor brute every now and then most cruelly. In Florida the horse guards are unique, and so effectual that a horse can travel all day, or stand under trees, or browse in the pastures well, and not be bitten by a single fly.

These horse guards are very much of the appearance of hornets. Perhaps they are somewhat longer in body and the stripes not so wide as those of a hornet. Each horse is guarded by five of these vigilant insects, and woe to the fly that is bold enough to alight on a horse, for in a flash the faithful guard comes to the rescue and flies to the side of the road, and there digs its grave. All this is done so quickly that the guard has soon caught up with the horse, and is on the watch for another victim. The horse seems to understand, for although the guards keep up a continual buzzing the sound does not annoy him in the least.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DEAD SEA NAVIGATION.

10 Is Carried On by a Single Sailing Boat Which Is Just About Twenty Feet Long.

Since the earthquake in Palestine last April some one circulated the story that the mouth of the River Jordan had been so affected by the shock that the level of the river had been altered to such an extent that at the place where the historic river goes into the Dead sea there was now a waterfall of considerable depth and strength. This is altogether false, and no change whatever has taken place at or near the mouth of the Jordan. A writer for the London Graphic has just spent some days there, and made it his special business to investigate this matter. Much has also appeared from time to time in papers and periodicals about steamboats navigating the Dead sea.

DEAD SEA'S ONLY BOAT.
(It Is a Sailing Vessel, Just About 20 Feet in Length.)

This, too, is a fabrication. The only boat on the Dead sea is a small sailing boat about 20 feet long. The accompanying photograph gives an idea of its appearance when lying at anchor, and the terminus on the shore at the southern end of the lake. This vessel makes trips, as the wind allows, from the north end of the sea to the bay on the eastern side of the tongue that divides the water near the middle. Here at this terminus some Jews are located. The whole concern is, in fact, in the hands of Jews, who, at a low rate, buy wheat and barley from the Arabs, to be delivered on the seashore. From there it is shipped to the Jericho side and carried on donkeys to Jerusalem, where it finds a ready sale at a good price. When adverse winds blow the little craft is in danger of being swamped, for the so-called Dead sea becomes a living mass of waves. The writer recently spent four nights such as never will be forgotten on these waters, and the smartness of the old man at the helm and his boy with the sails saved us from being wrecked again and again. A charge of one mejedie (three shillings and four pence) a trip is made for each passenger and for such a unique voyage it is not exorbitant. There is some talk about a small steam tug being put on the sea, but the authorities are loth to grant permission. It will be a great boon when, if ever, it does arrive, as it will bring the east and west sides of Jordan nearer to one another for communication and trading purposes.

GREAT LARYNXOLOGIST.

Prof. Schmidt Who Operated on German Emperor and Also Treated Emperor Frederick.

Prof. Schmidt, of Frankfort, who performed the successful operation on the Kaiser, is one of the most noted laryngologists in Germany. He first attracted public attention at the time when he went to San Remo, Italy, with Crown Prince Wilhelm, now the kaiser, to attend the operation on his father, the late Emperor Frederick. Prof. Schmidt has retired from active practice. The story of his present operation reads like an interesting tale. With the exception of the royal patient, the empress and Chancellor Count von Buelow, no one knew of the operation. Two days before a closed carriage was seen before the depot in Potsdam. When the express train from Berlin arrived an old man with a turned up collar entered the carriage and was taken to the palace. When he was ready to perform the operation, by a winding stairs he directly entered the imperial chamber, and was assisted by an old servant, who had rendered the same service for Emperor Frederick.

Church Smoking Parlors.

Rev. Howard B. Bard, of Lansing, Mich., in a recent address, said: "I do not encourage smoking, but if your son, brother or husband does smoke, don't let him go to places where the whole atmosphere is full of vice. Let him smoke in the place where there is no danger of being ruined. Therefore, provide a smoking-room in your church."

WHO WILL WIN OUT?

Question That Is Now on the Lips of Every Washingtonian.

Triangular Fight for Senatorial Toga Is Causing Intense Rivalry Between the People of Tacoma and Seattle.

The "stevedore candidate," Edward S. Hamilton, of Tacoma, Wash., is the most interesting figure in the approaching campaign for the honor of representing the state of Washington in the United States senate. Hamilton, a natural political leader, a man of long experience in the art of whipping his followers into line, has long been considered a probable successor of Senator Addison G. Foster. The expiration of Foster's term is drawing near, and in the face of considerable opposition, the genial senator is asking his constituents for reelection. And now Hamilton, the stevedore "boss," although long a stanch supporter of the incumbent, has come forward with a public announcement of his candidacy.

The Chicago Record-Herald says that the campaign is more than a personal contest between Foster and Hamilton. It is a strife between cities, for Seattle and Tacoma are and always have been keen rivals for this honor. Foster is Tacoma's man, and "Stevedore" Hamilton mapped out the campaign which won him the office. Seattle already has a candidate in the field—Samuel Piles, a clever corporation lawyer. The natural result of Hamilton's intrusion of his personality into the fight will be to split the strength of the Tacoma clans and to transform what had been an "old guard" of political power into two bickering groups of partisans.

The rivalry, industrial and political, between two young, virile, growing cities of the west far surpasses the trivial exchanges of pleasantries in which eastern municipalities indulge. Tacoma's dilemma, with two strong candidates in the field, to oppose to the wicked attack of the Seattle echoris, is therefore causing dismay in the hearts of the politicians of the former city.

The opposition to Senator Foster, which has arisen this summer, is due to a feeling that he lacks "backbone." Foster's smiling face and cheery laugh have won him a host of friends, even his political enemies, but there is a sentiment, which is daily gathering strength that Washington needs a fighter in the chamber. The state wants money for harbor improvements, federal buildings, lighthouses, land surveys and a hundred other claims, and it also wants a man in the senate who will work until he gets the appropriations. For this reason the aggressive "stevedore" is more popular in the Tacoma ranks than the sociable Foster.

Hamilton has been a member of the state senate for three sessions. He knows men, has a genius for planning campaigns, is a man who does things, and does them thoroughly. Never before has Tacoma and Pierce county had a political leader like him. He contributed more than any other one man to the election of Foster in the last senatorial campaign. He outlined the fight which won friends for Foster, while the John L. Wilson and Levi Ankeny factions were in deadlock, and carried his man through to victory.

Hamilton's fighting qualities made him the leader of the railroads in their struggle during the last two sessions to prevent the passage of a bill creating a state railroad commission. As chairman of the appropriations committee he introduced New York methods into the legislature, with the result that no appropriation bill can be attached to another measure, however meritorious, thereby placing each measure upon its merits.

He was born in Brooklyn in July, 1865, and was graduated from the Westchester County institute, of Peekskill, in 1882. Six years later he moved to this state and opened a real estate office at Port Townsend. In October, 1888, he entered the employ of the Puget Sound Stevedore company as bookkeeper, afterward becoming manager. Soon afterward he became a member of the firm of McCabe & Hamilton, which now does 90 per cent. of the stevedoring work on Puget sound. The firm uses electric conveyors of its own invention, which have contributed largely toward making Tacoma the port where heavy cargo, inward and outward, is handled, at less cost per ton than in any other port in the world. Hamilton's political experience began in New York, where for four years he was assistant to Gen. J. W. Husted, known as the "Bald Eagle of Westchester."

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Striking Features of the New Coats and Gowns—The Bolero.

One of the daintiest ball gowns of the season is the creation of black tulle arranged with any number of tuckings and gaugings. This treatment of tulle renders it firmer.

The widest possible fichus and berthas are seen on all decollete costumes, so that the bodice seems to consist wholly of the decolletage trimming held on by a strap or two. The sleeves, however, are quite fussy, and the flowing, graceful lines of the wing sleeve make it especially popular.

Accordion-plaited chiffon is used a great deal for evening sleeves; also innumerable small ruffles sewed on a chiffon foundation.

The foundation slips of thin evening dresses are often made entirely separate, and this is a very good idea, for, if carefully fitted, they may do duty with several gowns.

The skirts of all thin and, indeed, of some of the heavier materials are made extremely full all around. The trimming also tends to make them appear fuller. It is in the shape of bands of coarse lace headed and edged by ruchings or heavy ruchings alone, either of taffeta or chiffon.

The bolero promises to be more to the fore than ever—that is, the short bolero, allowing a wide belt of crushed velvet or silk to be seen.

Dyed lace collars of all shapes and dimensions will appear on spring garments.

Collarless dresses are seen only for home and restaurant wear. They come close around the base of the throat and are finished off with lace applique or jeweled effects.

An accordion plaited dress needs very little trimming save a pretty bolero and a handsome wide girdle.

The cut shows a toque of red and white fancy weave. It has the modish pointed effect in front and is trimmed with fancy quills.

DRESS HINTS.

Smart Colorings—Utility Gowns—The Revival of Jet.

A general utility gown is one of the necessary items of a spring wardrobe, and this is both economical and pretty made of veiling in black, gray or lavender and trimmed simply with shirrings and embroideries of the same color.

For the woman who can wear it there is a peculiar shade of blue half between light and dark. This is very effective when made up with dyed lace or embroidery to match and a black and white hat having ostrich tips for trimming.

Not much red is being shown unless in the old crushed strawberry or wine shades, and, after all, red is not a spring shade, but some very dainty gowns are shown in champagne colored veiling embroidered with deep red motifs, silk and chiffon velvet.

The revival of jet is marked. It appears both on day and evening gowns. In Paris they are even using it as a trimming for white frocks. Jet boleros are mounted on a foundation of chantilly lace and sometimes on cream guipure.

The cut shows a collarless blouse of pale blue accordion plaiting. The material is crepe de chine trimmed with bandings of ecru lace.

DAME FASHION'S HUES.

Colors Which Will Be Most Popular in the Spring.

The new color cards are out for the coming spring, and we see that grays and combinations of black and white are to be among the most fashionable of all things for dress materials. I find, too, in looking about that silks are shown in many combinations of black and white. This does not mean checkerboard squares by any means, but fine stripes and in some few cases pin head checks. These latter are always neat and desirable, especially for such garments as are to be worn often. Trimmed simply with black braid or a little velvet ribbon, they are very pleasing, and there is something very Frenchy about the pin head and shepherd check.

Hair lines are seen in many kinds of materials adapted for spring wear, and now is the time to make such garments. There are several kinds of homespun stuffs with the body of the material in solid color or pepper and salt clusters of white stripes. These may all be of the same width, or some may be an eighth of an inch wide, while others are but one thread. But, however they are, they are always neat and pretty. They really require but little trimming, and here stitching comes in as a natural selection.

So long a time has passed since silk was worn to any extent in the street as a full costume we have almost come to regard silk as intended only for the house, but the coming season will, if all signs do not fail, see many suits of silk, and not all black either. There is a design in which the rich and heavy body of the silk is black, but there are clusters of white stripes, arranged so that two narrow stripes are set each side of a wider one. Sometimes there will be six or seven fine white lines all together and of the same width. Again they will begin on one side with fine lines, which widen until the last one is a quarter of an inch wide. These are all straight, but once in awhile we see one where the lines are all wavy. Sometimes the lines are made up of tiny checks of black and white.

Cinnamon brown and several of the pleasing wood shades will be seen and some dull and navy blues for ordinary spring outdoor wear, but grays, gun metal mixtures and black and white effects would now seem to be the outlook. For the present, while still the winter festivities are in order, there are many different weights and qualities of white silks, and these are all fine and look well when properly made. Black lace medallions, spangles and chenille embroidery are all suitable, and flounces are frequently seen where the lace has narrow black velvet ribbon run through the holes made for the purpose. Crepe de chine in white and cream makes pretty gowns for dinner and all evening dresses except dancing frocks for the young. For this purpose there are many different kinds of light silks, such as louisine, liberty and delicate satin liberty. For evening waists where high necked gowns are suitable there are some really handsome corded silks, which look superbly rich and sumptuous and yet cost very little.

Among the silks intended for late spring and summer are many fancy foulards, polka dotted twills and satin liberties. Taffeta is now one of the standard silks and has displaced almost entirely all the heavy corded ones, such as rhadames, armure, faille and peau de soie. We do see some of these heavier silks occasionally, but they are more for cloaks than for gowns. It is a pity, for there is nothing to equal black silk.

Woolen goods for the spring are now shown, and among them we find all sorts of colors in all wool vicuna cheviots, tweeds, plain cheviots, canvas suitings, covert cloths, satin faced covers, fancy suitings, twilled and plain homespuns, many kinds of voiles in canvas weave and plain, waistings in Scotch cheviots and wools, granite cloths craped and plain, and most of these also with mercerized and cravenetted so as to be lustrous and waterproof.

From present appearances there will be much of the semimilitary ornamentation on suits for young women. It is very striking, and therefore should not be worn by those who have passed their first youth. The plan consists in having braid or cord or velvet put on the coat, with lots of shining brass buttons. The illustration shows deep cuffs with the gold braid and buttons, and also the arrangement of the same trimming on the shoulders and in front. The skirt of such a suit should be plain but neatly made, and the hat to be in keeping should be of the tricorne variety.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

WALKING SUITS.

They Are Now an Elaborately Made as the Longer Costumes.

Walking suits are undergoing a decided transformation, and the newest models show little difference in elaborateness from the full length costumes.

The skirts are very full, some of them shirred on yoke foundations, others box plaited and held down only for a short distance, while others still are accordion plaited. The newest jackets are bolero in cut with floppy cape effects and wide cuffs of folded leather or silk.

Cape effects are still very much the mode, and when the cape effect is not seen a hood arrangement frequently takes its place. This is brought low down around the shoulders, lined with some pretty lace and knotted with cord and lace at the front. Of course the lace must be of the heavy variety, either cluny or Irish lace.

There is another form of the walking costume which is strictly tailor made to please the devotees of that style of dressing. It consists of a three-quarter length coat with tailor sleeves and a stitched and kilted skirt. It is particularly effective in fine black or brown cloth.

The French sailor, or else the new turban, seems to be the most popular style of hat to go with the walking suit, although now almost any hat can be worn with it.

The cut shows a walking suit of blue sibeline, trimmed with a scarf of silk and gold buttons.

NEW COLOR COMBINATIONS

Cold Tints Fashionable—Less Black Is Used Than Formerly.

It promises to be a color season. Fewer blacks and whites will be seen. On the other hand, browns will be worn; also royal blues, coffee shades, grays and principally lavenders and blacks.

There is a marked attempt to introduce green. This was noticeable in the mixtures and coat trimmings, but it does not seem to be a popular shade. Experts predict, however, that it will be prominent in foulard silk this summer combined with a rich blue or a peculiar shade of purple. In general, it may be said that the colder shades—grays, blues and purples—will predominate. Red will be comparatively little seen.

One of the favorite combinations is pale blue and a deep violet. This is particularly effective in millinery, although it was recently seen to good advantage on a gray dress.

This gray dress was of veiling trimmed with a gray taffeta applique and ruchings of gray pinked silk. The bolero opened over a blouse of gray chiffon. At one side there were three little rosettes, one deep purple, the other a lighter shade and the third a pale blue. A touch of these three shades also appeared at the girdle in front.

Gray blends beautifully with the tones of old lace, and a fashionable combination is this same old lace over gray satin, with touches of gray chiffon velvet and a touch or two of silver braid.

The picture shows a toque of lavender chiffon trimmed with a velvet bow.

The Right Way to Stand and Walk

DID you ever sit in an audience hall in one of the back seats and watch the women come in and walk down the aisles? If not, then do so next time you go to such a place. You will be unpleasantly surprised at the awkward, ungainly gait of many of the women. In fact, the way a considerable proportion of our women carry themselves is a disgrace to a free country, Mrs. M. Landon Reed, the beautiful Delsartean, herself a teacher of physical culture, declares that when the average woman walks her weight is thrown upon her heels, her stomach is usually protruded, her shoulders are either held too far backward or bent too far forward, while she holds her arms stiffly, one shoulder often being shoved higher than the other by the way in which she clutches up her skirt or carries a parcel.

This is sad, solid truth!

What is worse, and more of it, Mrs. Reed tells us that thoughts, disposition and feelings are plainly shown in the motions of the body. Think, then, what a sloppy, uncultivated, wabbling mentality many girls and women must have if they think the way they walk! If, as the Delsartean lady insists, we tell on ourselves with every movement of the body, isn't it high time we were training our walk and carriage?

There is really much more in this than most of us know or consider. You see the picture. It is one whereby Mrs. Reed illustrates to us the "correct poise" of a woman's body. It is the position all persons should assume and keep in walking and standing. If we do, we may be assured we shall always stand and walk gracefully.

To get this attitude stand erect and hold your chest up. Always hold the chest up and breathe as deeply as possible, away around to the very tips of your lungs under the shoulder blades. The deep breathing habit of itself tends to lift the chest and enlarge it, securing a noble poise. To do real good the air you breathe must be the purest you can find. When you stand erect don't try to "throw your shoulders back" too far. That is the direction usually given, but it is a mistake. If you hold your chest persistently up, your shoulders will naturally assume the right position without much trouble on your part in the matter of turning them back.

The next point is to bear your weight upon the front part of your feet. It is a horrible walk, that of the girl or woman who goes slump, slump along with her weight on her heels. It gives the impression of age and oxlike heaviness even to a girl of sixteen. Besides, at every step there are the terrible jar and shock upon the spine and nerves of the back and head. Really, such a walk is enough to shake all the sense out of a woman's brains. The heel walking habit undoubtedly aggravates the tendency to weakening and paralysis of the spinal nerves and disease of the back. Are you a heel walker?

To illustrate perfectly what I mean, stand before a mirror in which you can see yourself full length. Now, take the position many middle aged women, and girls as well, let themselves fall into in standing and walking—chest down, stomach consequently protruding and shoulders rounded, with the weight of the body upon the heels and out of all graceful balance. So! Your reflection is not a pretty sight, is it?

Now stand the correct and beautiful way. Lift your chest as far up as you can easily and naturally, take a deep breath or two to fix the pose, then, advancing one foot slightly, throw all your weight upon the front third of your foot. See! You will feel buoyant as a ballet dancer. A heavy, slumpy old woman can take a dozen years off her figure by assuming the correct poise and keeping it.

As old woman can correct bad habits quite as readily as a young woman.

The essence of Delsartism is, perhaps, that bodily poses affect the mind.

THE WORLD OF DRESS.

Up to Date Hints For the Smartly Gowned Woman.

Some very smart coat and skirt costumes intended for dressy wear have the skirt of kilted cloth, while the bolero is of cloth embroidery edged with fur.

The most fashionable fur scarf and one which will be worn with dresses late in the spring is of ermine folded over like a shawl, with long, pointed ends trimmed with lace. This will be copied later on in cloth to match the gown with which it is worn.

The hair is either worn very high or very low. The latest mode is to take it straight up at the sides, gathering it high on the top with a large velvet bow, chou or flower placed at the side.

Fancy trimmings of every kind add to the cost of gowns and tailor mades, but also add immensely to their artistic worth. Jeweled buttons and buckles are a feature of every smart costume, while handsome fringe jeweled tassels and huge lace puffs are seen on nearly all the up to date outer garments.

Flowered mousseline de soie and muslin in rather large patterns will make delightfully quaint gowns well adapted to the early Victorian modes which are being revived.

The cut shows a waist of white crepe de chine having a wide capilke yoke composed of shirrings, cordings and lace work.

NEW COSTUMES.

Boleros Worn More Than Ever—Figured Silks and Muslins.

The sleeveless bolero appears on many elaborate evening gowns, and this has simply a little extension cap on the shoulder.

An up to date reception dress seen recently had the skirt trimmed with three flounces, each bordered with black velvet. It had also an accordion plaited bodice strapped with velvet. Over this was worn a bolero of velvet embroidered with black chantilly and appliqued velvet flowers, with a little inner cravat of white muslin and lace.

Flowered silks are to be extremely fashionable this spring, and so are the sprigged muslins of our grandmother's day. These flowered materials are very pretty trimmed with ruchings of taffeta to match the color of the figurings.

Fichus will be seen largely on summer gowns, and indeed they are even now being revived in a particularly full and ornate style on evening frocks.

Skirts require more material and are becoming more fussy all the time, so that only the lightest materials make up prettily in the new styles.

From Paris comes word that accordion plaiting in all its glory is being revived by the best dressed women.

Some of the buckles worn at the back of the wide boned girdles are very stunning and cost quite a good deal. The girl who has to economize, however, can obtain a very pretty effect at the back of her wide girdle by sewing three steel buttons on either side of the center of the back, so that they almost join at the bottom in a V shaped effect, leaving a distance of about two or three inches between the top buttons.

The illustration shows a deep red gown. The skirt is very full and is trimmed with wide tucks. A hoodlike effect is the principal feature of the bodice. This is trimmed with net and ribbon.

COMING STYLES.

What Will Be Worn This Spring. Revival of Sequins.

Cape and collar effects continue to be the proper thing, and hardly a coat is complete without them.

Wreaths are being used once more for the hair. They are made of gilt or silver, with acorns, or else they are of green and silver ivy leaves or other oddly shaped foliage. Large Alsatian bows of black velvet are seen in the way of headdress.

Large Spanish combs are being revived in real and imitation tortoise shell ornamented with gold or silver.

There is a revival of sequins and of jetted gowns, but they must be fine sequins and jet of good quality.

All black gowns made of beautiful lace or jetted effects are always smart and useful, and they can be relieved by touches of chiffon velours in lustrous black or tiny bits of gold or silver embroidery.

Ecru pongee gowns embroidered in deep red or deep blue will be very popular next summer, and they will be worn with hats of ecru straw trimmed to match.

Stoles and muffs of leopards' skins are worn in Paris with dull brown or green costumes, and they are certainly very becoming to the statuesque woman.

The picture shows an evening dress of pale blue chiffon voile trimmed with ecru guipure lace and narrow black velvet ribbon.

CHANGES OF MODES.

Skirts Growing Fuller All the Time. Princess Effects.

Long coats are giving way to shorter ones for spring wear, and these short shapes are to be very fancy, with wide girdles, floppy sleeves and little vest effects.

Skirts are growing fuller and fuller, and the wise girl in buying a suit ready made will take this fact into consideration. The very dressy tailor mades, indeed, have almost an equal amount of fullness in the front and in the back of the skirts, and this is disposed in tucks, shirrings and even box plaits.

Princess effects are seen in cloth for street gowns, but these are laid in plaitings from neck to heel, so that there may be a requisite amount of fullness at the feet.

The thin chiffon velours will be worn much later in the season than the plain velvet and will be seen during the summer even for evening and house wear.

Lace is used in great profusion more than ever on sleeves, and in many cases it forms the extra wide cape collar and a hip yoke and front panel as well, but when it becomes as prominent a factor in the gown as this it is dyed to match, as a rule.

Stitched points are taking the place of the scallops which have been with us so long, and vandyked effects appear on many of the best gowns.

Accordion plaited skirts will be seen again this spring, and many leading dressmakers are making gowns entirely of accordion plaiting. Black voile and black crepe de chine adapt themselves excellently to this mode, and chiffon silk is also used.

The picture shows an evening gown of white mousseline. It has a shirred waist and is trimmed with applications of yellowish guipure lace.

FOR UTILITY WEAR.

The Golf Cape No Longer Modish. New Rain Coats.

The golf cape seems to be a thing of the past, and instead we have the loose cape coat especially invented for sporting occasions with wide capelike sleeves cut on one with the rest of the coat. This is made of the same heavy reversible material as the golf cape and has in addition pretty buttons of enamel to harmonize with the color scheme.

Although collars are out of date on coats, yet there is an exception, a straight stand up collar with pointed ends, which may be buttoned over, and this looks equally well open or closed.

The new rain coats have wide sleeves, some of them tucked, and in general they are almost as modish as the fair weather garments.

Millinery seems to be growing smaller as spring draws nearer. There is a marked tendency toward small, oddly shaped toques made of materials which harmonize with the gown, sometimes, indeed, made of the material of the gown itself.

Velvet is no more the only material for a winter hat. Some of the very smartest are made of fairy cloth or zibeline, while others designed for later wear are of shirred taffeta or bands of silk and shirred chiffon.

Nothing can be more dressy than a combination of white cloth, white lace and ermine. Corduroy velvets are much improved by an edging of mink or sable, though marten is a good substitute.

The picture shows a cloth costume. The three-quarter length coat has a vest of spotted red velvet. The skirts of the coat have an original double effect.

FADS OF FASHION.

The Vogue of Coarse Lace—The Small Fur Sets.

Coarse lace is well to the fore, and, indeed, the fine weaves seem to be relegated to summer garments. This lace is dyed, embroidered and enriched in countless ways. In the spring it will be used to make entire three-quarter length wraps.

The popularity of ermine is on the increase, but a good many of the cheaper sets are merely rabbit sewed with ermine tails. Furs are not so heavy in design as formerly, and tiny little collarettes are used which formerly would have been considered very mean looking. The style of the fur, however, is everything, and very attractive little cravat effects in fox, ermine and Persian lamb are the smartest and latest things out.

Scotch goods having a hair line plaid composed of black and gray are very smart for walking costumes. The coats of these are made with wide cuffs and collars of deep gray chiffon velvet.

The cut shows a visiting gown of gray cloth having a very full skirt and a waist with a V shaped yoke of guipure and two V shaped bands of moleskin. The hat is of deep velvet with a lighter plume.

The office boy says that the difference between Whittaker Wright and Charles M. Schwab is that one is dead and the other is not.

Chicago University, the incubator of "ratty" ideas, is no longer a Baptist institution according to a statement made by Presidents Harper. The Baptist church is to be congratulated.

The Plainfield Press, in trying to show how popular Former Senator Reed is in Somerset County political circles, declares that "the election returns of late years show that he and his friend Smalley are very much alive." Yes; Somerset County has gone Democratic two years a-running, and Reed is nominally a Republican! —Newark Evening News.

What does the advertiser seek to accomplish by his advertisements? The answers to this question differ, merely as to form of expression or point of view. One says: "The aim of advertising is to attract attention and to sell goods." Another statement would be, that the purpose of advertising is to attract attention to the goods and to create such a favorable impression for them that the reader will desire to possess them. Whatever the statement may be, this seems certain—one aim of every advertisement is to attract attention. Therefore, the entire problem of attention is one of importance to the advertiser, and an understanding of it is necessary for its wisest application as well as for a correct understanding of advertising.—Walter Dill Scott.

E. Benjamin Andrews, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, whose ideas on the money question secured for him a permanent leave of absence from the presidency of Brown University some years ago, furnishes himself as exhibit No. 2, for the negative side of the question: "Does a college education pay?" Dr. Harper, of Chicago, being generally conceded the position of exhibit No. 1. This is a sample of the many shocking utterances which Dr. Andrews has contributed to progress him the degree A. B. S.:

"Society, as it becomes more enlightened, will snuff out the lives of sickly and deformed infants, to prevent their becoming at maturity a burden to it and to themselves. As with the cradle, so it will be with other cases. A committee of skilled physicians, I firmly believe, eventually will determine the fate of those who are sickly, or whose recovery from disease is impossible. Such persons, if the physicians agree, will mercifully be put to death."

The Spartan like scholar evidently believes that the world is going backward. Fortunately he has few supporters of his heathenish idea. We are living in a Christian age.

LITERARY.

To writ of abuses without being abusive is part of Miss Tarbell's strength as a historian. Her ability is equalled by her dignity. And nowhere is this better illustrated than in Chapter III of the second part of her "History of the Standard Oil Company," appearing in McClure's for February. She takes up her narration at the point where Mr. Rockefeller, controlling the oil refining and transportation of the country, turned to the markets as his next field of conquest. Just as, when struggling for railroad rebates and pipe-lines, no obstacle had been too great for his towering genius to overcome, so, in the fight for the retail oil trade, no detail was too petty to escape his comprehensive eye. It was "cutting to kill" even at the country peddler, driving from door to door, who had stocked his wagon with oil from an independent refiner.

—Mr. and Mrs. Robert VanNest and family, formerly of Dser street, have removed to New York.

—Frank Hand, of Fairview avenue, is the possessor of a gray polo pony which he bought recently of a New York man.

—Amos Stiles, of Watchung avenue, has returned to his position as a conductor on the main line trolley, after a vacation of one week.

Mrs. Albert Hedden, of West Fifth street, is seriously ill. She is suffering from an attack of pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sauer, of Somerset street, who have been the guests of relatives in Jersey City for the past few days, have returned home.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Laughing hit of the season," is a comprehensive expression which neatly fits "An English Daisy," the new musical comedy which Messrs. Weber & Fields have launched under most successful auspices at the Casino. There are many spans of laughter in the three hours of "An English Daisy" than in any production which has been seen on Broadway in a score of years. This is the natural result of engaging such a competent company to interpret the various roles. Headed by Charles A. Bigelow and Miss Christie MacDonald, it would be extremely difficult to see where the cast could be improved.

There will be extra matinees of "Babes in Toyland" at the Majestic Theatre, on Friday, February 12, Abraham Lincoln's birthday, and on Washington's birthday, February 22, and on the occasion of the 130th performance of the "Babes," the night of February 15, handsome souvenirs will be given away to all women in the audience. Interest in the personnel of the "Babes" has revealed the fact that many women of the higher walks of life are in the chorus, particularly among the widows who form the lively background for the new song, "He Won't be Happy 'Til he Gets It." Through an attache of the embassy at Washington it has been learned recently that Miss Helen Hilton, one of the beautiful women in the widow's set, the literal descendant of one of the highest families in Russia and at various times has received communications, inviting her to return to her ancestral halls and become a Russian. Miss Hilton has accepted the kind invitation and during the hot summer months will embark for St. Petersburg.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of the great Drury Lane spectacle, "Mother Goose," is in its ninth week at the New Amsterdam Theatre, where it is attracting large audiences at every performances. This is the most expensive production ever made at the Drury Lane Theatre in London. It has been the custom of the Drury Lane directorate, during the past few years, to spend $1,000 or $5,000 more each season on the Christmas spectacle. This piece represented an outlay of over $175,000 before it was brought to this country by Klaw & Erlanger, who spent a fortune in new scenery and costumes made necessary by John J. McNally's adaptation of it to the requirements of the American stage. As presented at the New Amsterdam Theatre, it represents a most lavish expense by two great theatrical managements, who have given it the best that intelligence, wide experience and most generous outlay of money could bring to it From every standpoint "Mother Goose" is the greatest musical spectacle ever staged in America.

Delighted audiences that fill the Manhattan Theatre, New York, mark the great success of "The Virginian," from Owen Wister's popular novel, and the run of this play at the Manhattan promises to be long and prosperous. Even more distinctly successful than is Mr. Wister's romance among books treating of life in the West, is the play made from it among so-called Western dramas, for in pictures with unusual and remarkable fidelity the types and scenes that have made its original so popular, thanks to the skill of the dramatisers and the ability and fitness of the actors selected to give the characters life. Mr. Dustin Farnum as The Virginian has made one of the most pronounced hits recorded in New York by a young leading man in several seasons, and he is supported by one of the strongest and best balanced companies seen on Broadway.

"Checkers," better than ever, is the attraction at the Academy of Music and as a consequence the immense house is filled at every performance. Thomas W. Ross appears in the cast. If you haven't seen the production you have missed one of the best attractions New York's playhouses have offered this season. The matinees are on Wednesday and Saturday at 2, and the evening performances are at 8:15. The best seat in the house is but one dollar.

The Proctor theatres in the shopping district, the 23d Street and Fifth Avenue, have long been popular as meeting places for out-of-town shoppers who, after an arduous morning spent in the stores refresh themselves with an afternoon's entertainment before returning home. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre patrons may arrange to meet in the lobby, where a handsome reception room, opening directly into the lobby, is provided for their especial accommodation. This is particularly appreciated by those who desire to meet at the theatre and enter together, since it obviates the necessity of waiting a second to hold hands for some late comer. This is but one instance of the care which Mr. Proctor and all his managers exercise in providing for the comfort of patrons.

PLAINFIELD BOY CRUISING HIGH SEAS

William R. Sweeney Arrives at Delaware Breakwater After a Two Years' Trip.

PURSER OF THE VESSEL

HE TWICE CIRCLES THE DANGEROUS CAPE HORN.

Visits Japan, New Zealand, the Philippines, Hawaii and Other Places—The Juteopils, the Good Ship—Story of His Travels.

After sailing the seas for two years and seeing half the globe in his travels, William R. Sweeney of this city, has arrived at the Delaware Breakwater and will be home in three weeks. The ship, "Juteopils," on which he sailed as assistant purser, is awaiting orders from the Standard Oil Company, by which it is owned, as to whether it shall proceed to Philadelphia, Boston or New York.

Mr. Sweeney has twice circled Cape Horn since the Juteopils set sail from Philadelphia in February, 1902. On the voyage out, lasting six months, the ship touched first at New Zealand, going from there to Kobe, Japan. From Japan it was set for Illio in the Philippine Islands. It was expected that this cruise would last only eight days but the ship was blown out of its course by a furious storm and did not reach its destination until it was forty-two days over-due.

About a year ago word was received from Mr. Sweeney in Hong Kong, whence he went to Honolulu in the Hawaii Islands. The last heard from him by his relatives in this city until this morning was on September 9 of last year, just before he was about to start from San Francisco on the long journey around South America for home.

BOARD OF EDUCATION IN MONTHLY SESSION

C. B. Scott, of Mass., Was Appointed a Special Instructor in Science and Nature Study.

THE PHYSICIANS' REPORT

MR. MAXSON INSTRUCTED TO ATTEND EDUCATION ASSN. CONFERENCE.

Delay in New High School Due to Common Council's Failure to Go Ahead—Every Pupil Required to Undergo Medical Examination.

All the members of the Board of Education were present at Monday's regular monthly meeting Merely routine business was transacted. It was announced that nothing could be done in the matter of proceeding with the new High School building until the Common Council acted.

L. N. Lovell, for the Board of School Estimate, reported that the plans for a $125,000 structure were heartily approved and that notice of such approval had been conveyed to the Common Council.

The appointment of C. B. Scott, of Hyannis, Mass., to be special instructor to teachers in science and nature study was recommended by the committee on teachers, J. B. Protsco, chairman, and the recommendation adopted. Mr. Scott's appointment will go into effect March 1, and continue through the school year.

The medical inspectors, Drs. Tomlinson and VanHorn, announced that they had examined 320 pupils during January. The unusually large number of examinations was due to the postponement of examination of new pupils last fall, every pupil upon entering the schools being required to undergo a medical inspection as to eye-sight, condition of throat, etc.

Superintendent H. M. Maxson announced that the annual meeting of the department of superintendents of the National Educational Association would take place at Atlanta, Ga., February 22 to 25. He was authorized by the Board to attend

The report of the custodian of school moneys showed a balance on hand of 19,885 41.

GOOD OLD AGE.

Mrs. Mary L. Force Nearing Four Score and Ten Years of Life.

Mrs. Mary L. Force, of 305 Watchung avenue, completed the eighty ninth year of her age, Monday. Mrs. Force is in possession of all her faculties and is in good physical health. The day was quietly observed, a number of calls and gifts being received from her children, grandchildren and other relatives and friends. Mrs. Force is a native of this city, where she has resided all her life.

BASEBALL PLANS FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

Arrangements Being Made to Place Team on the Diamond for the Coming Season.

F. ARMSTRONG MANAGER

THE AGGREGATION TO BE STRICTLY AMATEUR IN ITS STATUS.

Morris Sutphen as Assistant Manager—Good Material From Which to Select Players—Games With Nearby Teams.

The baseball fever has already reached the Y. M. C. A. and there is now good prospects for an association team for the coming season. Fred Armstrong, of the Juniors, who is a student at Rutgers College, has been invited to take charge of the aggregation and he has accepted. He will no doubt be assisted by Morris Sutphen, who two years ago was one of the strongest local players.

Armstrong would probably pitch for the team. That is his strong position and after getting into condition he should make one of the best amateur twirlers in this vicinity. He will have the selection of a team to make and it is understood that this year there is plenty of material in the association to make up a strong aggregation.

The team would arrange to play Dunellen, Bound Brook and teams of that class. It would be useless to make dates with Scotch Plains, Westfield or other semi-professional teams, for the inequality in playing strength would make such games uninteresting. It is believed, however, that a series of games with strictly amateur teams would prove interesting to many people who would gladly witness such contests.

Within the near future a meeting will be called and a list made of the available material for a team. After this is done practice will commence so that the players will be in good condition when the baseball season opens.

SIDEWALKS CARE DISCUSSED

NEW ORDINANCE MORE STRINGENT AND OBJECTION IS MADE.

A somewhat lengthy discussion was provoked by an ordinance introduced at the meeting of the Common Council Monday by Mr. Gloak relative to the removal of snow and ice, as well as weeds and other obstructions from side walks and the streets. While the only change suggested was that making it compulsory for property-owners or tenants to remove snow and ice twelve hours after a storm, instead of twenty-four, as heretofore, the reading of the entire ordinance acquired several members with facts they did not know.

Mr. Daniel thought the ordinance too stringent for a suburban city like Plainfield, believing that the property-owners or tenants should not be compelled to clean their gutters of snow. Mr. Garrigues thought likewise, while Mr. Gloak and Mr. Tyler argued in favor of the ordinance.

Mr. Daniel said that it would soon be a question of deciding the limit to the heighth of grass. He said that he did not believe that the purpose of the ordinance should be to destroy grass and so from each side of side-walks, as these are considered attractive.

Mr. Lee cited instances where grass was allowed to almost cover side-walks, making walking very disagreeable. One place cited was on West Front street near Grant avenue.

After an apparent useless discussion of the question, Mr. Gloak stated that the ordinance was drafted in accordance with the State law by Corporation Counsel Marsh, yet to satisfy the protesting members he would withdraw it and consult further with Mr. Marsh.

MARRIED 25 YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Barber Given a Surprise by Members of Fraternal Orders.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Barber, of North avenue, were tendered a surprise party by about forty-eight members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., Monday on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. They were presented with a handsome silver service, Dr. Harvey Buchanan making the speech and Mr. and Mrs. Barber responding. Vocal selections were given by Mrs. Harvey L. Schmeyer and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Stiliitz, instrumental selections by Dr. Buchanan and recitations by John Becker, Jr., and Peter Latourette. Representative were present from Rebecca Lodge, R. B., and Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F. Mr. Barber is employed at Walter Scott's Press Works.

MUNICIPAL GARBAGE COLLECTION AGITATION

Majority of Physicians Recommend That Proposed System be Established.

MR. BUCKLE'S OPINION

METAL RECEPTACLES SUGGESTED IN PLACE OF BARRELS.

Only Slight Increase in Tax and a Real Saving to the Citizens—Its Need From a Sanitary Standpoint—Various Opinions.

The subject of a system of municipal collection of garbage is interesting the citizens of Plainfield since Mayor O. L. Jenkins' annual message was read to the governing body of the city at the first meeting of the year. Is municipal garbage collection needed here? Will it cost more to the taxpayers than the present system? Are the people in favor of it? Can it be carried on in this city as in others? These are the questions which are being discussed by those who have the interests of the city at heart.

Said one prominent citizen who does not care to have his name used: "Municipal collection of garbage is bound to come. It is one of the greatest improvements which can be made in a city as progressive as Plainfield. It is needed from a sanitary point of view and it is needed from the standpoint of the taxpayers' interest. The method of removing garbage in use today is impractical and expensive and the only remedy I can see is to have the city do the work. The slight addition to the annual tax bills will be much less than the amount now paid to private concerns to remove the refuse from the kitchen and furnace. In my opinion we need it badly and it cannot come too soon."

Former president of the Common Council James F. Buckle is in favor of the city collecting the garbage. He says that the majority of the physicians of the city, many of whom he has talked with personally, favor the improvement.

When Mr. Buckle was asked whether the same system would be adopted here as in use in New Brunswick and Trenton, he said that he believed some other plan would have to be adopted. In those cities the municipality is divided into districts and one division is covered each day by the garbage collectors. The residents living in this section must have the garbage cans standing along the curb ready for the garbage collector.

In referring to the subject Mr. Buckle said: "This plan will have to be changed in this city. In New Brunswick, where there are so many persons who strive for a living in factories, there is little pride in municipal affairs and the unsightly barrels lining the sidewalks for blocks does not, as a rule, appeal to them as a blemish to the beauty and sanitary condition of the city. In the city of Trenton, where the population in some districts is very much congested, that system must of necessity be used.

"Here," he said, "the conditions are different. The people of Plainfield have a pride in the appearance of the town and unsightly barrels would disfigure the city streets and sidewalks. While it would no doubt take longer to make the collections, the collectors would have to take the cans from the rear of the houses and replace them when they are emptied."

A physician said that municipal collection of garbage is needed here. It will be found to be cheaper in the long run than the system now used. "The majority of the people are in favor of it and it is bound to come sooner or later."

HALF-TIME SYSTEM.

Pupils in North Plainfield School Suffer From Lack of Accommodations.

More than one thousand children in the North Plainfield High School have been promoted and with these promotions comes the half-time system for the children in the lower grades. In order to properly take care of the children in the lower grades, which have come in in such numbers as to fill every seat in the lower class rooms two teachers are employed in the primary class room.

The Board of Education has made a change in the location of the third B class. It has been removed from the store at the corner of Manning avenue and Somerset street to the Watchung School and the first grade pupils have been placed in the store building used as a school.

CITY WANTS CHANGE IN PRESENT TAX LAW

Common Council Instructs Corporation Counsel to Draft Measure for the Legislature.

SESSION A BUSY ONE

CITY FATHERS MAKE BUT ONE CHANGE IN OFFICIALS' SALARIES.

Cost of Extension of Sanitary Sewers $24,210—To Be Assessed Against Abutting Property Owners—Appointments Confirmed.

Councilman L. M. Daniels at Monday's meeting of the Common Council introduced the question relative to the new law which causes all taxes to become due on December 20 instead of November 20 as formerly, stating that he believed it would be better for Plainfield taxpayers if the former date could be returned to. In this connection he offered a resolution that the corporation counsel be authorized to prepare a bill for Legislative enactment, changing the date to November 20, provided it is feasible. This resolution was adopted, although Councilman W. A. Garrigues took exception on the grounds that he believed it wise to have a uniform date.

According to the custom of former years, Mr. Daniel offered a resolution at the meeting, providing that Assemblyman C. L. Moffett, Plainfield's representative in the Assembly, secure for Plainfield copies of all bills introduced, as soon as printed, so that any unwise or hasty legislation which might be introduced affecting Plainfield could be looked after before it is too late. The expense for this work is not to exceed $25, and the copies of the laws are for the inspection of city officials only.

Other resolutions by Mr. Daniel provided that the salaries of all city officials for the coming year remain the same as last year with the exception of that of Collector F. H. Smith, which has already been fixed, also that H. C. VanEmburgh be made custodian of the block assessment maps drawn by F. J. Hubbard, civil engineer, that the same be kept in the collector's office and that the collector notify the county collector of such action. Another resolution by Mr. Daniel provided for the transfer of $1,000 from the general to the fire fund. All of these resolutions were adopted.

Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street committee, reported on a new suit instituted against the city by the Cameron Septic Tank Co., on a claim of infringement of a patent used at the sewage disposal plant. He offered a resolution that the matter be referred to the committee with power to take such action as the corporation counsel my deem necessary to protect the city's interest. In connection with this the committee was authorized to continue the services of Livingston Gifford, Esq., a specialist in patent litigation. He has been assisting the corporation counsel in the city's fight against the American Sewage Disposal Company, of Boston, the company having instituted a suit against the city for the alleged infringement of a patent in the method used for sewage disposal.

In a communication to the Council, F. D. Woodbull, secretary of the Board of School Estimate, certified to the fact that the board has determined that the sum of $125,000 is necessary for the purchase of lands and erection of a new High School building as previously proposed. The matter was referred to the finance committee to be reported on later.

In accordance with a request of Mrs. Harriett M. Myers, Miss Mary E. Martine and Miss Ella L. Martine, the Council through a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel voted to sell to the petitioners the property formerly owned by them and located at 126 East Ninth street, for $1,650, the amount set forth in the petition. The property was bought by the city at a Martin Act sale at a price much lower than is now offered. The petitioners were represented by F. W. Yates as agent.

J. C. Pope, secretary of the Public Service Corporation, informed the Council that in the future all bills to the city would be payable to this corporation as successors to the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company.

In accordance with the annual custom, the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital asked the Council to make the usual appropriation of $1,500 to the hospital. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Board of Education advised the Council that L. N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott have been chosen as members of the Board of School Estimate. They will serve with two members from the Council and the Mayor.

A communication was received from F. H. Smith, secretary of the Board of Trade, entering a protest against the wretched trolley cars and service and asking for immediate action on the part of the Council. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Titus H. Lasty, who was assessed for a dog which he claims he never owned, presented an affidavit to that effect and asked for a return of his money. The finance committee will consider the request.

H. C. Tracy and other residents petitioned for electric lights in the vicinity of Prospect, Hillside and Woodland avenues. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

Mayor Jenkins appointed Frank Day, Anthony Parsons and Leonard D. Amelio as special policemen and they were confirmed.

Building Inspector Doane reported that during the month of January ten building permits were issued.

Mr. Daniel reported favorably upon the bonds of Collector F. H. Smith and Constables Amos Moffett and P. Y. Weaver and they were filed. Constable John Manley's bond was returned for correction as to form.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution setting forth that the cost of the extension to the sanitary sewers was $245, 210. R. A. Meeker, Townsend Heath more and J. F. Bockle, appointed as commissioners to assess benefits and damages, will now assess the property-owners with a view to securing that sum total.

In response to a request from Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, Mr. Lee offered a resolution authorizing the purchase of 2,000 feet of hose at a cost not to exceed $1,800.

AMITY HOSE CARRIAGE TO GO

EXEMPT FIREMEN'S TRUSTEES TO ARRANGE FOR SENDING IT TO ST. LOUIS.

The matter of sending the famous Amity hose carriage to the St. Louis Exposition was discussed Monday by the Exempt Firemen at their regular monthly meeting. The main question was as to the safety of the carriage. The members were assured by Chief Doane that ample protection would be afforded it. He had the word of former Chief Hale, of Kansas City, who is in charge of the exhibition of fire apparatus at the fair, that the carriage would be shown in a large enclosure and that it would be constantly guarded. Bonds will be required and furnished for the safe return.

All arrangements for sending the carriage were left in the hands of the Board of Trustees, of which D. W Littell is chairman.

A. O. U. W. PROPOSED CHANGES

SOME AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON BY GRAND LODGE.

Under date of January 15, a document has been prepared by the grand lodge officers of the Ancient Order United Workmen, giving in detail the amendments to be voted on at the coming session of the grand lodge. This plan of publishing the amendments in advance of the meeting is followed so that the representatives may be familiar with the business that they will be called upon to consider.

One of the principal changes proposed is as follows: When a suspended member applies for reinstatement he shall be governed by the conditions surrounding the admission of new candidates; he shall be reobligated in the Workman degree, but instead of receiving a new beneficiary certificate his old certificate shall be revived. It is also proposed that in future the grand lodge shall meet in Trenton on the third Thursday in March of each year. This is a change from February. The most important amendments are those referring to the proposed change in the method of levying assessments and the new rates, which have already been outlined in The Daily Press.

A. E. BEALS A STOCKHOLDER

NEWSPAPER MAN AN INCORPORATOR OF FRANCKE ENGINEERING COMPANY.

The Francke Engineering Company, with offices in New Brunswick, has become incorporated with a capital of $15,000. Allen E. Beals, of The Daily Press reportorial staff, being one of the three stockholders.

The company will conduct a mechanical engineering business and handle all kinds of machinery. A plant is in the course of construction at Newark.

Suit Against Rosell.

The contract case of Cotton against A. B. Rosell will be tried in the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, March 16. The plaintiff is represented by F. J. Biats, Esq., and the defendant by Reed & Coddington. The date for the trial was set yesterday.

Dinner Party Arranged.

Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson has issued invitations for a dinner party to be given by her at her home Tuesday evening, Feb. 2. The guests will attend the dance of the Cotillion Club afterwards.

ENTRIES COMPLETE FOR Y. M. C. A. MEET

Arrangements Perfected for Indoor Athletics, in Which 5 Associations Will Contest.

A FULL LIST OF EVENTS

THE AFFAIR TAKES PLACE NEXT MONDAY NIGHT.

Newark, Summit, Orange, Jersey City and Plainfield to Take Part—Summit Won at Last Year's Meet—List of Entries.

Arrangements for the Y. M. C. A. athletic meet in the gymnasium of the local association next Monday, February 8, have taken definite shape. All that remains is the final preparations that will bring the athletes into their best form for what is one of the big Y. M. C. A. athletic events of the year.

There are five teams entered—Plainfield, Newark, Jersey City, Summit and Orange. Montclair, Paterson, Passaic and Morristown were invited to participate but for one reason or another have seen fit to withdraw. Among the teams that remain, however, the rivalry is keen and the meet promises to be a rousing good one. There will be cause for surprise if one or more records are not shattered in the course of the evening's entertainment.

The events to be contested are the potato race, running high jump and running high dive, three standing broad jumps and shot put. The championship of Northern New Jersey will go to the winning team.

The entries have closed. Plainfield's are Walter McNaughton, O. H. Munger, A. L. Denton and Walter Cahoone. Of these some will necessarily contest in more than one event. Summit's entries, four in number, include Charles Dean, who won the shot put at last year's indoor meet, Albion Buckley, Willard Halsey and Clifford Bernard. Newark will be represented by a man for each event, Harry Shonber, Otto Kellman, Harry Todd, John Allen, George Curtis and Central Branch of Jersey City will send F. N. Esher, F. S. McDougall, H. Abrams, W. DeMotte, W. Simmons; and Orange will have A. Poelker, Jr., a high diver of exceptional ability. W. S. Lindsay, W. S. Courser, I. P. Nielson and J. F. Munson. The directors of the teams are not required to state into which events the men will go.

The last indoor meet which combined athletics, gymnastics and calesthenics, was won last year in Jersey City by Summit, which led Plainfield by only two or three points. Summit is expected, will be strong again this year and Orange is another team that will be in at the finish. Orange is strong in the high dive.

One of the special attractions at the meet which, in itself, will be "well worth the price of admission," will be the exhibition of swinging illuminated clubs by Fred Metz, the national amateur champion club swinger.

CITY COUNCIL AFTER JEHUS

"CABBIES" VIOLATING ORDINANCE MAY LOSE THEIR LICENSES.

Councilman W. S. Tyler introduced the subject of violations of the hack ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council Monday. He declared that these practices are deserving of condemnation and that it is the duty of the police to enforce the ordinance. "If the ordinances are good," he said, "they should be enforced, and if bad they should be repealed." He referred to the requirements, such as the placing of a placard in each cab giving the fare full information as to the ordinance, the charges and provisions, all of which be understood were being violated.

Mr. Tyler offered a resolution providing that the chief of police report to the license committee violations of the ordinance before the next meeting and if the offense continues he urged the license of the offenders be revoked.

Attachment Proceedings.

Attachments in the cases of Van-Arsdale against Hois and Daly against Hois were dismissed yesterday in Justice Nash's court. Judgments for the plaintiff was rendered by Justice Nash in the contract case of Littell against Gelick.

TIE VOTE DEFEATED HIGHER LICENSE FEE

Proposition to Raise Fees, as Approved by Ministers' Association, Was Killed.

IT STOOD FIVE TO FIVE

LIQUOR DEALERS' AGENT WATCHED THE PROCEEDINGS.

Seventeen Applications for Licenses—An Increase of Three—Petitions Referred to the Committee—Names of Applicants.

The Common Council, by a tie vote of five to five defeated the proposed high license scheme, at the regular February meeting held Monday. The result was not a surprise. Early in the evening it was hinted that the ordinance raising the license fee, which had previously been adopted on its second reading would not reach final passage. Before a vote was taken, the members took a long recess and when they returned they killed the ordinance by the tie vote. Theodore D. Wilson was the only member absent, and it is believed that had he been present the ordinance would have passed. There was a well-filled lobby, including J. H. Buckridge, State organizer of the Liquor Dealers' Protective League, of New Jersey, and he especially watched the proceedings with evident interest. Here is how the vote stood:

Aye—W. S. Bullock, Leslie M. Daniel, W. A. Garrigues, W. S. Tyler and R. I. Tolles.

Nay—W. L. Gloak, Robert L. Lee, Frank Randolph, Clarence L. Murphy and J. S. Higham.

By the above vote the license fee for the coming year will remain as last year, it now being too late to make a change before time for granting licenses. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. John McMurray, of Monroe Avenue church, were also present, but they had nothing to say on the subject under consideration.

The applications for liquor licenses were presented at this meeting, there being seventeen in all, an increase of three, J. J. Goff, for a place on West Front street, near Clinton avenue; Adolph Wolfgang, for a place on Park venue, where John H. Tier formerly had an ice cream place, and W. J. Dyer for Dan. Galbraith's old place on West Fourth street. The other applications, renewals, are these: Eastern Bottling Company, Alexander D. Findlay, John Rafferty, Henry Haurand, Frank Linke, J. A. Staats, R. P. Turner, Charles Schantz, Christopher Steckner, Bernard Clark, Henry Windham, Michael Watson, Jacob Bimm, A. B. Rosell. They were all referred to the license committee.

LITERARY.

It is almost four years now since Mr. McKinley brought one William H. Taft to our notice by making him Chairman of the second Philippines Commission. Nothing is a better illustration of the bigness of the United States. A man may stand almost at the top of his profession, and be a leading figure in a State as important as Ohio, and the country asks, Who is he? So when the President chose Judge Taft to do the most responsible work that has fallen to an American since the days of the war, the men who are alleged to make a living by their pens pulled down the "Who's Who" and the other weapons of the brotherhood.—Collier's Weekly.

Two capital stories about Senator Hoar are retold in Dr. Lyman Abbott's article about the Massachusetts Senator in the February magazine number of The Outlook. The first is Mr. Hoar's characterization of General Butler's fiat money scheme: He (General Butler) had said, in explaining and defending his fiat money scheme, that the word "fiat" means "let there be." God said "Fiat lux," "let there be light," and there was light. He argued that fiat money was excellent, from the very fact that it cost nothing and had no intrinsic value. So, if a bill were lost or destroyed, a new one could be supplied without cost. He also said that it would stay in the country, and would not be sunk in the morasses of Asia, especially in China and India, where silver and gold were absorbed and never heard of in civilized nations afterward. I quoted these sentences with the following: "Then, fellow-citizens, is precisely the difference between Omnipotence and Humbug, between the Almighty and General Butler. God said, Let there be light, and there was light. General Butler says, Let there be money, and there is rags. This is the first time in our history that the American workingmen has been gravely asked to take for his wages money it costs nothing to make, that it is no loss to lose, that it is no gain to get, and that even a Chinaman won't touch."

HIGH PRICES ASKED NOW FOR FOODSTUFFS

IN THE RETAIL MARKET

DIFFICULTIES OF SHIPMENT TEND TO ENHANCE PRICES.

Celery at 25 Cents a Bunch and Lettuce at 25 Cents a Head—Eggs Selling at 55 Cents a Dozen—Cauliflower as High as 35 Cts.

Those who live to eat are finding that their chief pleasure is becoming an expensive luxury, with the gradual increase in the price of vegetables, and other household commodities; while those who eat to live are becoming aware that "old fashioned" winters do not fit the inside of the household purse as the more up-to-date ones have done. Food prices have been gradually climbing higher and higher ever since the cold weather began to interfere with the cost of supplying the table with fresh vegetables, chickens, turkeys and other eatables has been increasing apace as the cold season continues.

In not a few things the cold weather has forced prices higher than has been known in ten years. Vegetables which sold last winter for $5 a barrel, wholesale, are being retailed at that. Spinach costs $6.50 a barrel, wholesale; a price never heard of before. White turnips, which are sold usually at prices lower than potatoes, are purchased at wholesale at $2 a barrel more.

The cause of this advance is due directly to the extreme weather, and the consequent difficulty of shipping garden truck from the South without having it freeze. This has made many people class fresh vegetables as luxuries and there is a consequent increase in the sale of canned goods.

Here are a few prices of vegetables quoted from Neuman Brothers, which correspond to those at other leading grocery stores in this city: Celery from 15 to 25 cents a bunch; string beans, 16 to 20 cents; lettuce, 12 to 25 cents a head for the best; tomatoes, 40 to 60 cents a quart; and oyster plants, 25 cents each. Cauliflower comes from California and Florida and sells at 25 to 35 cents a head; hot house cucumbers, which are brought from Boston, bring from 15 to 18 cents each. Turnips and parsnips and such home grown products, as are usually to be had in winter, have not been coming in very freely. Those which have been kept in the pits are frozen.

Eggs have been the real luxury during the winter. At one time they sold for 60 cents a dozen and the very best of fresh eggs are now selling for five cents a piece. The prices have dropped a little, however, and today the average storage eggs are selling for from 40 to 55 cents. The wet weather of last spring killed off the pullets with the result that there was a scarcity of hens during the fall and winter. There is no apparent relief in sight. If anything the prices of food stuffs will continue to rise rather than diminish until the early crops can be harvested and milder weather comes to allow the unhampered shipment of fresh foods.

Chickens, consequently are higher. They bring from 18 to 20 cents and turkeys from 24 to 28 cents a pound

EMPLOYES' BALL.

Scheuer & Sons' Men to Have Gala Time in Newark February 16.

Preparations are being made for the fifth annual reception and dance of S. Scheuer & Sons' employes, which is scheduled to take place at the Krueger Auditorium, Newark, February 16 The committee in charge has spared neither time nor efforts to make the function a success, and present indications point to a large attendance. The interior of the hall will be decorated with a profusion of choice plants and flowers. Fowler's Military Band will play promenade music between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Sleighing Accident.

Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, of Central avenue, together with her coachman, was upset from a sleigh in front of L. W. Randolph's drug store on West Front street, this morning. Neither occupant of the sleigh was injured. The runners of the sleigh caught in the trolley car tracks, causing the accident.

PROGRESSIVE MEN BANQUET

Feast of Good Speeches at Board of Trade's Annual Dinner at The Kensington.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS TALK

Speeches by the Mayors of City and Borough Among Others—Smalley on "Municipal Development," and Martine on "Municipal Ownership"—The Menu.

"If I haven't accomplished anything else for the development of the borough, I have done at least three things to be satisfied about. I have put Adam (Fritz) on a diet; I have put the fire department on a paid basis; and I have put John Goodwin on the bum."—Mayor Newton B. Smalley, at Thursday's Board of Trade dinner.

Perhaps the most significant fact about the Board of Trade dinner at the Hotel Kensington Thursday was the spirit of civic pride and patriotism that animated it. It was all for the glory of Plainfield, the greater Plainfield; for there was scarcely a speaker that did not express the sentiment that North Plainfield is an essential economic part of its sister municipality as well as such in spirit and in the ties of a common interest and purpose. The old battle cry, "annexation" was sounded in the speeches of the mayors of the city and borough and the toastmaster, former Mayor Gilbert; and every mention of its desirability brought forth demonstrations of approval.

Seated at the table of honor were the guests of the evening who were also the speakers: Mayor Olin L. Jenkins, whose subject was "Free Lance" and who delved deep and interestingly into Plainfield's history; Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who defended "The Native Jerseyman" and exalted the good works of Plainfield and her representative citizens; Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, the toastmaster, who was particularly happy and witty in his introductions of the speakers; L. W. Woolston, president of the Board of Trade, who introduced the toastmaster; Mayor Newton B. Smalley, who advocated annexation and a borough park and whose speech on "Municipal Development" was one of the evening's brightest; Hon. James E. Martine, who rode a favorite hobby, "Municipal Ownership," with the force and fervor that went far towards carrying conviction; County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean, who complimented Plainfield on the strength of its business interests; and Samuel St. John McCutchen, who mentioned some of the good things that "The Commuter" has brought to Plainfield.

Senator Kean and Congressman Fowler who, it had been hoped, would be able to attend, were unavoidably detained by other engagements, but the Senator had his brother, the county chairman, to represent him. Besides those mentioned, the list of eighty-two members and guests of the Board of Trade present included Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett, Sheriff E. A. Coriell, City Judge William N. Runyon, Former President of the Council James F. Buckle, City Collector Frank H. Smith, J. S. Higham, Postmaster E. H. Bird, J. C. Pope, W. A. Garrigues, C. C. Burke, T. S. Davis, W. S. Bullock, U. N. Codding, President of the Common Council R. I. Tolles, George J. Tobin, H. W. Marshall, Councilman R. L. Lee, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, E. C. Mason, Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, H. Bothwell, Samuel Meisler, Evarts Tracy, W. G. Gloak, H. C. Newman, E. M. Laing, W. W. Coriell, Edward Kapp, Former Judge W. R. Codding-ton, Amos Andwers, Harry C. Runyon, Charles J. Ward, H. C. VanEmburgh, George B. Wess, Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane, James Stewart, H. D. Hibbard, T. S. Armstrong, J. F. MacDonald, A. L. Force, R. F. Murray, J. H. Cass, Former Judge W. A. Coddington, J. C. Manning, M. C. VanArsdale, Councilman W. S. Tyler, President of the Police Board F. D. Randolph, Councilman G. L. Murphy, A. B. Laing, Charles Shupp, K. Shupp, J. T. Vail, Moses Schloss, E. S. F. Randloph, Alex. Ayers, M. Leichtentritt, C. W. Krause, F. A. Nelson, H. A. Todd, S. E. Ditts, D. J. Carney, Frank Linke, W. R. Stanbery, W. G. De Mess, W. A. Woodruff, E. M. French, M. Armstrong, Charles H. Hand, Hippolyte Texier, Edmond Texier, Charles Jensen, H. S. Potter.

The dinner itself was excellent. The menu could not fail to please the most Epicurean of the diners. Here it is:

Oysters on the Half Shell
Green Turtle Soup Clear
Olives, Radishes, Celery,
Salted Almonds
Boiled Salmon
Pomme Duchesse
Tenderloin of Beef, larded
Spaghetti a la Neapolitan
Sherbet and Cigarettes
Roast Squab, Canape
Chicory Salad
Ice Cream Assorted Cakes Fruit
Coffee and Cigars

The tables were prettily decorated and a white rose adorned each plate. "Our Country, 'Tis of Thee" was sung between the courses. In an intermission during the speaking, Judge W. N. Runyon raised his stentorian voice in song, and T. M. Muir also carolled a couple of pathetic ballads to the Judge's accompaniment.

Toastmaster Gilbert, in opening the speaking, made his address without notes referring to the fact that "it requires a good memory to make an effective impromptu speech." He said that his table was the dullest in the room because those seated at it were all busy rehearsing their impromptu speeches. He referred in glowing terms to "the absent ladies," and waxed serious about the difficulty in getting men to do their full duties as citizens. He said that there is no such thing as government of and by the people when men neglect to go to the primaries. He thanked God that issues make themselves and force themselves upon the people. He explained the necessity for such an organization as the Board of Trade in stimulating interest in matters of public moment.

In introducing Mayor Jenkins, the toastmaster said there should be need for but one mayor in Plainfield and North Plainfield and both mayors, Jenkins and Smalley, agreed with him.

Mayor Jenkins, beginning with the expression of a hope that the day for union of Plainfield and North Plainfield was not far distant, gave an account of the city's early history from its founding. He said that the main credit for Plainfield's present excellent system of education is due Dr. Stillman.

Toastmaster Gilbert, after referring to Plainfield's numerous advantages as a home city, spoke of its just pride in its lawyers and introduced Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, rallying him good naturedly on the fact that he "sometimes does things he ought not to."

"Slander always loves a shining mark," said Mr. Marsh referring to the fact that the "Native Jerseyman" about whom he discoursed was so often made the butt of the humor of the country's funny men. He made mention of what he evidently considered the Jerseyman's chief and most valued characteristic, his thrift. He expatiated on Plainfield's high financial standing, calling the city the financial capital of Union county. The proverbiality of Jersey justice, the incorruptibility of Plainfield's officials and the willingness of her best men to serve in public office was emphasized.

When Hamilton Kean was introduced, James E. Martine called for three cheers which were given with will. Mr. Martine said that though he differed in political opinion from the county chairman yet he had the highest regard for his social and manly qualities.

Mr. Kean referred to the excellence of the conditions in Plainfield's factories more especially in the press manufacturing concerns. He touched upon national politics stating that the ports of Manchuria should be kept open for the trade of the U. S. and that in fact no nation should be allowed to say "no" when the trades vessels of the U. S. demand admittance. He thought that this is the golden age of U. S. history.

Mayor Smalley talked about "Municipal Development" and said that if he hadn't done anything else for the advancement of the borough as a municipality, he had at least three things to be satisfied about: He had put Adam (Fritz) on a diet, put the fire department on a paid basis, and put John Goodwin on the bum.

The Mayor made a strong plea for a borough park and hoped to live to see the line between Plainfield and North Plainfield eliminated. He believed in Somerset but was a "greater believer in Union." He said facetiously that he was talking without notes because he didn't have his notes; "everybody else had 'em." He declared that the greatest help towards municipal development is for men to lay aside their seeking for the almighty dollar and give themselves over in part at least to the public service.

Mr. Martine's speech was characteristic. It was serious and earnest and expressed with natural eloquence and force. "God never meant John Kean and Hamilton Kean to deal out water to the citizens of Plainfield," he said, in advocating municipal ownership of public utilities. "Municipal ownership means fraternalism rather than paternalism."

Mr. McCutchen's talk on "The Commuter" ended the speaking.

CHARITY BALL, BIG SUCCESS

Affair at Casino for Benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital a Gala Occasion.

GOODLY SUM REALIZED

Vaudeville Performance Served as An Attraction — Ballroom Artistically Arranged—Dinner at Midnight — Handsome Decorations in the Interior.

For sweet charity, society danced the hours away Thursday night at the Casino. That it was the greatest social function of the season is shown by the fact that the committee this morning had over fifteen hundred dollars to hand over to the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital. Socially the ball was a big success. Hundreds of people were present, not only from this city but from out of town. The Casino was decorated in a manner entirely appropriate to the object of the dance and the arrangements were carried in a faultless manner. Huge red crosses, symbolic of the hospital, were hung on the sides of the stage. There were novel features galore and the vaudeville performance provided for those patrons who did not care for dancing, was high class in every particular and proved to be quite as successful as the dance.

Among the spectators who occupied the gallery over the large fireplace in the main ball room, were some of the representative business men in this city and many other well known citizens and their families. The success of the affair was apparent from the first. The programme committee, of which J. Evarts Tracy was chairman, arranged the programme in such a way that the advertisements more than paid for the expenses of the affair, so that the proceeds from the sale of the tickets was clear profit, so has all expenses been met before the dance took place.

The big ball was artistically decorated. Greens tied in clusters with wide silken ribbons practically covered the center chandeliers and about the sides of the room were festoons of greens tied with the same colored ribbons. The electric light globes were covered with red tissue paper which served to take away the glare of the lamps. An innovation was introduced by Mase Edwards in turning the balcony running along the west side of the hall into a conservatory promenade. Tete-a-tetes were arranged along this passage way and on the side walls were hung large theatrical posters, and flaming circus announcements. Scenes from the play, "The Charity Ball," were portrayed in large posters as well as from the "Babes in Toyland," "Mother Goose," "The Circus Girl" and other well known plays. The effect was pleasing.

These pictorial posters were also the feature decorations of the men's smoking room to the west of the main parlors where the vaudeville entertainment was held. The smoking apartment was arranged with a Bohemian effect and here the evening was spent by some of the most enjoyable manner listening to the vaudeville lecions. The music was especially fine. This part of the arrangements was left with Lewis G. Timpson, chairman of the ball committee. The orchestra was composed of fifteen pieces and was of an exceptionally high character. The police and fire arrangements were in charge of Elliot T. Barrows and to his careful planning is due the fact that there was no confusion as to the entrance and exists among the spectators.

Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Mase Edwards their private apartments were thrown open for use as dressing rooms for the patrons. As each couple entered the reception hall they were greeted by the wives of the members of the Board of Governors of the Hospital who were the patronesses. They were Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. E. M. Rodman, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, Mrs. J. E. Tracy, Mrs. W. B. Lowe, Mrs. G. H. Goddard, Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, Mrs. H. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. D. C. Irvine, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. W. C. Kinney and Miss Elizabeth R. Cock.

Dinner was served in the lower part of the Casino on the bowling alleys. This was a part of the arrangements which was especially well carried out. It was in charge of Thomas R. VanHoskerck and George T. Rogers. In order to avoid undue confusion temporary telephones were used. These were placed in the dining hall gratuitously by Charles W. Runyon. One was placed at the exit and the other at the entrance to the dining hall. Supper being served between the hours of 11 and 1 o'clock it was necessary to allow only a limited number in the dining room at once. As soon as one couple left the table and passed through the exit, which was arranged under the stage and up through the promenade, the committeeman at the entrance was notified from the exit that one more couple could be accommodated. The decorations were most complete in this apartment. Greens tied with red ribbons formed the background for numerous bunches of cut flowers. The ball returns of the alleys were boarded over and the tables were arranged over the frameworks.

The vaudeville performance was provided by Edward J. Brown, harp and guitar; Jesse Wilson, banjoist and comedian and J. P. Staples, mandolin, and baritone. Popular selections of the day were rendered in a pleasing manner by these artists from 10 until 1 o'clock.

Executive committee—Dr. Frank C. Ard, president; Harry V. Borden, secretary; William S. Kinney, treasurer; George P. Mellick, Edward H. Ladd, Edwin H. Booth, Charles C. Fisk, Frank de L. Hyde, Harry C. Munger, Walter Peterson, George T. Rogers, W. S. Tyler, Lewis G. Timpson, Lewis E. Waring, Elliott T. Barrows, Ernest R. Ackerman, James W. De-Graff, Benjamin VanD. Hedges, William H. Murray, Samuel St. J. McCutchon, Townsend Rushmore, H. Reeve Stockton, Evarts Tracy, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, Theodore D. Wilson.

Programme committee — Evarts Tracy, chairman; James W. DeGraff, Samuel St. J. McCutchen, William S. Tyler.

Ball committee—Lewis G. Timpson, chairman; Elliott T. Barrows, George T. Rogers, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, Theodore D. Wilson.

Aides — Dr. Norman Probasco, George T. VanBoskerck, Howard Huntington, Morris J. Dumont.

To the ball committee, of which Lewis G. Timpson was chairman, is due the credit of the success of the affair. Associated with him were Elliot T. Barrows, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, Theodore B. Wilson and George T. Rogers. These men worked enthusiastically and they were ably assisted by the other committees.

These were present: Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. De Witt C. Ivins, Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Gough, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. SUIT AGAINST NEW PROVIDENCE

J. P. RUNYON RETAINED TO RECOVER ON BONDS ISSUED BY TOWNSHIP.

An action is about to be instituted against the township of New Providence by Isaac P. Runyon, Esq., counsel for New York parties who are the owners of certain bonds of the township on which face value and interest amounts to about ($27,000) twenty-seven thousand dollars. These bonds were issued by the township on January 1, 1900 by virtue of "An act to authorize certain towns in the counties of Somerset, Morris, Essex and Union, to issue bonds and take stock in the Passaic Valley and Passpack Railroad Company," and sold throughout this State and adjoining States and the proceeds invested for the purpose.

The township has not paid these bonds, but other bonds have been purchased by representatives of the township at different periods since the issue. Mr. Runyon had a number of these bonds last year and was successful in effecting a settlement of the same, by sale to an individual who it is alleged was acting for the township of New Providence. There has been much litigation over this issue of bonds at different times and it is said there are very few bonds now outstanding against the township.

The city of Summit having been a part of the township at the time of the original issue of the bonds, it is claimed is liable for a proportionate share of the obligation.

HIAWATHA PLAY.

Indians to Give Performance at the Casino on February 19.

Tetebahbundung, one of the Ojibway actors in the Hiawatha play to be produced at the Casino, might well have been in Longfellow's mind when he pictured Chibiabos, "He the sweetest of all singers." He sings with a depth of feeling that amazes all who have erroneously supposed that the Indian is a creature devoid of emotion.

This Indian is one of the number whom Mr. Frederick Burton will have with him at the Casino, on Friday, Feb. 19, afternoon and evening, when he gives an entertainment consisting of various ceremonies and scenes from "Hiawatha," and an exposition of Ind'an music. Tetebahbundung's son, Adamosa, will also be present, a bright little fellow who plays the boy Hiawatha. In this quaint play three persons are required to represent the Indian prophet—an papoose, strapped to its board cradle, a seven-year-old boy, and a grown man. All these will be with Mr. Burton, and Nokomis, a venerable squaw who is a born comedienne, will sing the lullaby from which Longfellow took the line, "Hush, the Naked Bear Will Get Thee."

Among others in the company with Mr. Burton are decendants of famous tribal chieftains, the Wabunoosa, Bubwejjinins, and Shingwauks.

At Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The thirty-third State convention of the Y. M. C. A. and the second biennial, at Trenton, February 11, 12, 13 and 14, will be attended by Fred H. Andrews and William D. Murray among others from the local association. Both Mr. Murray and Mr. Andrews are members of the State committee of the Y. M. C. A. and will take a prominent part in the discussions of the convention.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York, will mail it.

So far there is nothing but improvement in the condition of Alexander Stills, the small-pox patient. He is now believed to have passed the danger point.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

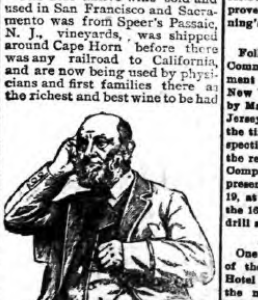
ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

This fine Port wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

W. R. HEARST CLUB ORGANIZED HERE

Frank Shattle Chosen Temporary President at Meeting in Jiovino's Shop.

WANT HEARST NAMED

CLUB'S HEADQUARTERS TO BE IN WATCHUNG AVENUE.

Officers to be Elected Thursday Night, Feb. 11—Hearst "Fearlessly Advocates in His Newspapers the Rights of Common People."

A William Randolph Hearst Democratic Club was organized in the barber shop of James Jiovino, at 430 Watchung avenue Thursday and a resolution, in which the principals of the organization are embodied was adopted unanimously. Frank Shattle was chosen temporary president and the officers will be elected at the next meeting which will be held at the barber shop Thursday night, February 11. The resolution:

"We, the undersigned, believing that in William Randolph Hearst the great body of workingmen have a true friend and one who believes that the distribution of wealth is just as important as its creation and who does not believe in excessive wealth for the few and poverty for the many, and who at all times fearlessly advocates in his great newspapers the rights of the common people against organized greed and criminal trusts combinations; hereby agree to become members of the William Randolph Hearst Club of Plainfield and pledge ourselves to use every honorable means to secure his nomination as candidate of the Democratic party for President of the United States and following such nomination we pledge ourselves to further his election by our votes and influence."

The members of the club will number about thirty-two, most of whom work in the different machine shops in the city. The headquarters are in the rear of the shop has been decorated with greens and American flags and reading matter will be provided by the club for the benefit of the members.

CHURCH SOCIAL MUCH ENJOYED

PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY WOMEN OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

An entertainment and social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society attracted a large number of people to the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Thursday. The fprogramme included piano duets by Miss Alberta Watchman and Miss Clara VanFleet, soprano solos by Miss Ada Dunham, recitations by Miss Rita Pond and readings by Mrs. Charles Hasleltine. Each one was well received and given several encores.

The rest of the entertainment consisted of cutting out various objects and placing them on a large sheet. The one attaining the greatest proficiency in this effort was presented with a prize. This was presented to Edward Burroughs. The object chosen by him was that of a soldier. Then followed the social features which proved a pleasing climax to the evening's affair.

Inspection of Guard.

Following instructions from the Commanding General of the Department of the East, Governor's Island, New York, orders have been issued by Major General Wanser of the New Jersey National Guard, designating the time and place for an official inspection of the militia by an officer of the regular army. The inspection for Company K will take place in the present drill hall Friday night, Feb. 19, at 8 o'clock. Co. M will drill on the 16th at Somerville, and Co.H will drill at New Brunswick Feb. 23.

Afforded Entertainment.

One of the most attractive features of the Board of Trade dinner at the Hotel Kensington Thursday night was the musical selections rendered during the repast by Fred and William VanEps and Walter McClymont. Fred VanEps played the banjo, William VanEps the mandolin and Mr. Mac Clymont accompanied on the piano.

Wedding Postponed.

The marriage of Miss Georgie Anna Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, and Ernest William Stones, announced to take place Wednesday night, Feb. 10, at 8:30, has been postponed. Miss Phillips has been called south and will not return in time to make preparations for the marriage as scheduled. The wedding will be celebrated at a later date.

BOROUGH FIREMEN EXPLAIN THEIR SIDE

North Plainfield Volunteer Department Gives Its Version of the Trouble.

ADDRESS TO CITIZENS

AFTER APPROPRIATION SECURED FOR DEFINITE PURPOSE CHANGE IS MADE.

Before Disbanding, the Fire Ladies Tell the Whole Story, Claiming That the Blame Should be Placed Where It is Due.

To the Citizens of the Borough of North Plainfield:

Now that the "paid fire department" is an assured fact the firemen have thought that it would not be amiss if they were to state their position of the matter in controversy before disbanding their organization as a volunteer fire department.

The history of the matter in controversy is as follows:

"About two years ago the Council was convinced from a statement made to them by the fire, water and lamp committee that the old fire house was unsanitary: and also inadequate to meet the needs of the Borough and a resolution was passed that a new fire house be built and the firemen were instructed to secure the necessary signers to the petition, asking that an election be held for this purpose. In order that there might be no objection on the part of the taxpayers whose signatures were desired, the firemen were instructed to tell the taxpayers that the new 'fire house' would effect a saving in taxes—that the Council intended to occupy the upper part of the old fire house for a Council chamber and the rest of the building would be used for a collector's office, recorder's court and lock up.

"When the election was held it was with this end in view that the new fire house was for fire purposes only and no other view was ever expressed or implied either by the Mayor or Council.

"It must be remembered also that on account of the original estimate being too high the plans were altered two or three times and new estimates obtained in order not to exceed the amount voted for a 'new fire house.'

"And during the time the plans were being altered and new estimates obtained if it was the intention of the Mayor and Council to occupy part of the new house why did not they at this time declare their intention of so doing; but instead they declared in all their discussion relative to the 'new fire house' that they wanted the firemen to have a nice and sightly fire house as a monument to their past services.

"It seems strange there should be absolute silence on the part of the Mayor and Council as to their intention until the new fire house was nearly completed and the studding partly up dividing the upper story into rooms for the use of the different officers of the fire department when the Mayor and Council suddenly conceive the idea that part of the fire house must be used for a Council chamber and the firemen were then notified of the intention of the Council and asked to give their consent.

"After receiving this notification the firemen held a meeting and at this meeting adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That all power is vested in the Council and they can take any part of the new fire house they desire for Councilmanic purposes, but as a 'fire department' we dissent against the Council occupying any part of the new fire house as a Council chamber.

"And there is nothing in the above resolution but what is pacific and courteous in tone and surely nothing in it that reveals the slightest indication of a spirit of insubordination such as would warrant the Mayor and Council in creating a paid fire department.

"The firemen did not say they would not occupy any part of the new fire house if the Council took possession of a part of it, they simply said they dissented and in so doing they were standing on principle that as the fire house was built for, and voted for, for fire purposes only the Council had no more right to occupy any part of the new house than they would have a right to occupy any part of a new school house voted for and built for school purposes.

"The firemen would not think for a moment of publishing anything in connection with this controversy were it not for the fact that they have been maligned from the very beginning of this controversy, that a stigma has been cast upon their organization and they only desire is to state their position honestly and clearly to the citizens of the borough whose servants they have ever been as a volunteer organization, leaving them to determine as to whether they have been guilty of such a heinous crime that the punishment meted out to them by the Mayor and Council is—that they shall be wiped out of existence.

IN GOOD FINANCIAL CONDITION

STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY PROSPERING ACCORDING TO REPORTS.

Rev. T. M. Davis, of this city, presented his report as treasurer of the State Christian Endeavor Society at a meeting of the executive committee of the New Jersey Union in Newark Monday night. The report showed the finances of the Union to be in good condition. The president, John T. Sproull, of Arlington, presided, and there was a large attendance from the various counties. R. A. Alberts, of Jersey City, reported an increased interest in missions by the societies of the State, and Rev. B. B. Ware, of Merchantville, recommended, on behalf of the evangelistic department, that all the societies devote their meetings, from February 14 to 28, to prayer for conversion of the associate members and quickening of the active members. The committee adopted the suggestion.

Dr. Clarke, of Spring Lake, stated that the Christian citizenship committee had prepared 1,000 petitions to be circulated and signed, protesting against the seating of Smoot in the Senate. The Bible study department has prepared outlines for the year, and Superintendent Lambar, of Newark, has supplied a number of societies with the series. Bishop Alexander Walters, of Jersey City, who was present, accepted the position of superintendent of the colored department, and will visit the societies in his churches. Miss Stephens, of Hackettstown, the State secretary, in her report, told of the conference of secretaries held in Camden.

President Sproull announced that a banner will be presented by the executive committee at the annual convention to the society making the highest proportionate gain in membership during the year. The committee arranging for the State convention to be held in Elizabeth reported through the chairman, Rev. W. D. Sinks, that the programme was well under way. Among the speakers at the two days' meeting will be Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tompkins, of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, of Brooklyn; General Secretary VanOgden Vogt, of Boston; Bishop Alexander Walters, of Jersey City; President Sproull, Vice Presidents Rev. Dr. John T. Kerr, of Elizabeth, and Rev. W. T. S. Lambar, of Newark; Rev. Dr. J. H. Clarke, of Spring Lake, and Rev. George O. Horton, of Camden. The controlling topic of the convention will be "The Spiritual Life."

DRAKE'S CLAIM DISPUTED.

Trenton Veterans Say They Have First Flag Unfurled in Virginia.

Aaron Wilkes Post, No. 23, Grand Army of the Republic, of Trenton, has decided to make an emphatic protest to Governor Murphy against the action of General J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, who claims to have the first American flag unfurled on Virginia soil in the Civil War, and who has made an official arrangement with the Chief Executive for the presentation of the flag to the State for perpetual keeping in the State's care.

The Trenton members of the Third New Jersey Regiment have drawn up a formal protest against the proposed action on the ground that Company A, of Trenton, unfurled the first flag on Virginia soil.

This flag was carried by Joseph Lawton, now a member of Aaron Wilkes Post, and the flag is still in the possession of the post. The protest plainly states that General Drake is mistaken in the contention to the Governor that his flag is deserving of the honor claimed.

RELIC TO BE EXHIBITED.

First American Flag Raised in Hawaii to be Displayed at Fair.

Captain Park, of the New Jersey Militia, has agreed to loan Co. K a valuable flag for its fair to be held next month. This American flag was the first one raised in Hawaii and is prized highly by the owner. It will be used in decorating the armory for the week of the fair.

Miss Carrie Egel, of Somerset street, will entertain a number of friends at a dance Monday night.

Nasal CATARRH

In all its stages cures should be cleanliness.

Ely's Cream Balm cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membranes. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

Cream Balm is placed into the nostrils, spreads over the membrane and is absorbed. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. It is not drying—does not produce sneezing. Large Size, 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size, 10 cents by mail.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 7: "The Universal and Personal Christ." I Tim. iii, 14-21.

This passage is the very heart of the gospel and the foundation fact of human redemption.

Salvation is in Jesus Christ.

Many precious truths of spiritual life have been revealed to different ones in various ways in the ages past. Slowly men have come up through ignorance and error into increasing light of the real nature of God and the relations of men to Him and to one another. An Abraham, a Moses, Elijah, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Jeremiah and many another in Israel have felt a divine uplift and illumination of soul and have spoken out as best they could the thought and impulse within them. Nor should we fail to recognize the searchings of devout minds outside Israel and the truth revealed to them.

But when all has been gathered how far short it falls of our cravings and needs! How uncertain the best appears and how inadequate all are to the task of bringing us to God in fullness of peace and blessedness. At some point each fails. No one proves himself the adequate leader of men. The more we search and know the story of mankind the more do we become impressed with the fact of universal ignorance of the Divine nature and will and the true path to reach Him and satisfy the deepest needs of our own nature.

Herein appears the real greatness of Jesus Christ. Put the simple story of His life into any language and give it to any people in any state of civilization, and in its very first utterance it produces conviction and effects a transformation in views and actions. This is equally true of the savage and the most cultured of men. The lifting up of Christ, as this may well be called, brings such clear conceptions of life and the awakening of hopes before unthought that the very motives and intentions change.

The notion of a Creator who caused all things to be as they are is in some sort or other common to all who rise above the bestial nature into the exercise of rational thought. That there is One who rules all and has control of destiny seems to be the common idea of men everywhere. But that this Over-power is kind is not the common view of men at large in all ages. More frequently He has seemed the cruel, vengeful, lustful one who was an exaggeration of the worst qualities of human nature. Such a One was to be feared. He could not be loved.

Jesus changed all this. He declared plainly, beyond all possibility of mistaking His meaning, that God was mercifully disposed toward men. Pure and good and blessed Himself, He had special care and regard for men, as a true father seeks the benefit of his children.

No other one who has ever walked this earth and lived this earth life ever conceived of God in such manner. True, some have had glimpses and dim intimations of such truth, but Jesus declared it with orbed certainty and declared with full authority of knowledge. God appears different since the Christ has spoken. The truth has a self evidencing power and carries conviction to the earnest, seeking soul. It satisfies.

Still more, Jesus has tested this view in His own life and has shown it to be workable, and, above all others, the surest and most admirable. Some theories appear consistent and look well as speculations, but fail in practice. This plan of Jesus Christ's tests out the best of any the world has ever seen. It produced in Him the first and only satisfactory man the race has ever produced.

Best of all, He calls to every one of the race to be like Him. He promises the light to direct, the power to accomplish God's purpose in every individual. He becomes personal helper, friend, Saviour, to every one who believes and trusts and follows Him.

A More Calculation.

With too many religion is simply a wise, prudential feeling, grounded on considerations of self, a matter of expediency and utility, whereby some smaller quantum of earthly enjoyment may be exchanged for a far larger quantum of celestial enjoyment, or a something that sanctifies the otherwise unsatisfiable in life and renders evil good. It is not the work that makes the workman holy, but the workman's heart that execrates the useless, the frivolous, the sinful vocations and consecrates the useful toil and makes all he does to be serving the Lord Christ.—Pennsylvania Methodist.

Shining For God.

Communion with God has the effect of making us joyous. The Lord does not like to see any of His disciples looking sad. When men seek to entice you to forego communion with God and to follow the world with them let your face shine with the brightness that comes from your communion with the Master, and they will cease to trouble you. Christians can sometimes do more by shining for God than by speaking for Him.—Andrew A. Bonar.

Grace and Glory.

There is not such a great difference between grace and glory after all. Grace is glory begun, and glory is grace perfected. It will not come hard to people that are serving God down here to do it when they go up yonder. They will change places, but they won't change employments.—D. L. Moody.

Not the Courage of Faith.

Following God blindfolded is not the courage of faith, but the recklessness of credulity. A man of faith finds strength to go through hard places not by shutting his eyes, but by keeping them open; not by remaining ignorant of God's ways, but by watching Him in all His ways.—Sunday School Times.

ARE SOCIAL DICTATORS.

Three Army Officers Who Manage All the Society Events at the National Capitol.

The social season for the coming winter at the white house will shortly be inaugurated, and much interest already centers about the men upon whom falls the task of serving as social aids. Upon the shoulders of Col. Thomas W. Symonds rests the chief burden, as master of ceremonies, but scarcely less important will be the duties of Maj. Charles McCawley and Capt. Henry M. Leonard.

Both officers are Washington men. The former has been conspicuous in the society of the capital for more than a dozen years and during the Santiago campaign in Cuba proved himself a brave and capable soldier. He is handsome and accomplished, popular and an athlete. If it be added that he is one of the best dressed men in Washington, his description will be fairly complete.

COL. THOMAS W. SYMONDS.
(Master of Ceremonies at the Executive Mansion at Washington.)

Capt. Leonard has likewise beheld the front of war, and in its sternest aspect. He took active part before he saw 25 years of age in three wars—in Cuba, in the Philippines and in China. During the Tientsin campaign he saved his life by going to the rescue of a wounded comrade, carrying him to safety on his back across a fire-swept fiend and lost his left arm as a penalty for his achievement. If he had been an Englishman the Victoria cross, prized beyond all other decorations of the soldier, would have been bestowed upon him.

OUT FOR GOVERNORSHIP.

Congressman Warner the Latest Aspirant for Gubernatorial Honors in the State of Illinois.

The roll of republican aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination in Illinois has been increased by the addition of the name of Congressman Vespasian Warner, of Clinton. The list of pronounced candidates now includes the names of Gov. Yates, State's Attorney Deneen, of Chicago, Col. Lowden, also of Chicago; Attorney General Hamlin, ex-Speaker Sherman and several others. Congressman Warner, whose ambition has now made him a formidable opponent of the gentlemen named, was born on a DeWitt county farm April 21, 1842. He enlisted in the army June 13, 1861, and served continuously until July, 1866. In 1868 he entered Harvard university law school, from which he later was graduated.

HON. VESPARIAN WARNER.
(Illinois Congressman Who Wants to Be Governor of His State.)

He began practice at Clinton, his present home. He was judge advocate of the state militia during the administrations of Govs. Oglesby, Hamilton and Pifer. In 1888 he was the presidential elector. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress and reelected to the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh. He has a wife and five children.

Most Famous Lighthouse.

No lighthouse the world over has as wide fame among mariners as that which stands 14 miles off the coast of Land's End. It is perhaps the most celebrated in the world. It has often been used as an illustration by poets and preachers, for no other lighthouse is in such a lonesome or dangerous place and none costs so much money and trouble to keep. There are three keepers who live there with their families, and two of them are always on duty, while the third is on the main coast enjoying a vacation. They relieve each other each month, so that none of the keepers remains on duty more than two months at a time. This change and rest is said to be absolutely necessary to preserve the nerves of the keepers. The lighthouse is 135 feet high, was erected in 1882 at a cost of $400,000, and rises from a submerged rock.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 14—Commend by Rev. S. M. Doyle.

Topic.—What will real friendship do?—I Sam. xx. 1-3.

The Bible has been criticised by a certain class of writers on the ground that it has practically nothing to say upon the subject of friendship, a most important human relationship. Plato, Bacon, Emerson and other great writers have eulogized friendship, say the critics, but not the Bible. It has emphasized the duties of men to God, of husbands to wives and vice versa, of parents to children and children to parents, it is said, but is silent upon the subject of friendship. But this charge, like all the others against the Bible, is untrue. The Bible has much to say upon this important subject and has given us illustrations of it that surpass those found in what we call secular history. If one should collect the Scriptural references to friendship, especially in the writings of Solomon and of Christ, he would find that the Bible is not wanting in something to say upon this subject. And what in history surpasses the friendship of Christ and His disciples and of David and Jonathan?

The friendship of David and Jonathan was one of the most beautiful illustrations of friendship that the world has ever seen. Saul, the father of Jonathan, was king of Israel, and Jonathan should have succeeded his father upon the throne of Israel. But this he knew was not to be, and, although he knew that David was to have what he should have had, yet his friendship for David never faltered, but in covenant and in deed was ever manifested. What eulogy more beautiful than that of David when he said after the death of Jonathan: "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan. Very pleasant hast thou been unto me. Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

From the friendship of David and Jonathan we may learn:

1. Friendship is confiding. David, fearing that Saul was seeking his life, came to Jonathan and freely told him of all his fears. Real friends confide in each other. "No receipt," says Bacon, "opens the heart but a true friend, to whom you may impart griefs, joys, fears, hopes, suspicions, counsel and whatsoever lieth upon the heart to oppress it in a kind of civil shrift or confession. It redoubles joys and cutteth griefs in halves."

2. Friendship is reproving. When David declared that Saul sought his life, Jonathan rebuked him, even saying directly, "It is not so." But this did not break their friendship. Real friends may reprove each other. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend," saith the wise man. And who can doubt it? He who doubts the reproof of a friend doubts his friendship, for a prerogative of friendship—and friendship has the privilege of reproving for the good of his friend.

3. Friendship is helpful. Though Jonathan doubted David's fears, yet he said, "Whatsoever thy soul desireth I will even do it for thee." And he did what David desired him to do. Friends help each other in the hour of need. "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

4. Friendship is lasting. Jonathan was true to his friendship for David unto the end of his days, and when Jonathan had passed away David cried in sorrow, "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan!"

The friend of friends, the one above all others, the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother," is the Lord Jesus Christ. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." This Christ has done for us. Human friendships are precious and desirable, but nothing else can equal the friendship of Christ.

One there is above all others
Well deserves the name of friend;
His is love beyond all others,
Costly, free and knows no end.

"Baltimore, 1905."

Baltimore has been decided upon as the meeting place for the next international Christian Endeavor convention, to be held July 5 to 10, 1905. The new Fifth regiment armory, fronting on Hoffman street, between Linden and Park avenues, will serve as the convention hall. It was begun in 1901 and has just been completed at a cost of $425,000. It is of stone and one of the largest armories in the United States. Its external dimensions are 366 by 330 feet, and within it has a clear floor space of 60,000 square feet. It will easily seat 20,000 people, and the Endeavorers anticipate filling it to its utmost capacity.

The Way to God.

Do you know the way to God so well that you can show it to some one else and encourage him by rejoicing? Philip did. What else in life is so well worth while as showing a wanderer God's road?—M. D. Babcock.

Pen Points.

Don't do for the glory of doing, but for the glory of Christ.

Our Christian Endeavor work should not be performed in the spirit of the hireling. We must have the sense of responsibility that comes with shepherdship.

For you there can be no more important committee in the society than the one you are on.

Better not hold a committee meeting than to fail to open it with prayer.

The church world is too full of "followers." Its crying need is for leaders, and Christian Endeavor seeks to prove itself a school for their development.—John R. Clements in Christian Endeavor World.

LITERARY.

There are about 200,000 doctors in the United States, or about one for every 350 people. It has been approximately estimated that the average yearly income of these men is $780, or that the public in the country pays $150,000,000 annually for medical attendance, omitting entirely the money spent for patent medicines which brings millions of dollars to manufacturers, or the amounts spent for doctor's prescriptions, or paid to quacks and commercial doctors. The preparation for the practice of medicine that gives good standing in the profession means an expense of liberally speaking, $4,000 for four years in a reputable medical school, $1,000 for general expenses during two years' hospital service, and perhaps another $1,000 for setting up in practice. A year or two in Europe is also a help.—Leslie's Monthly for February.

The Evils of Divorce in our day are as nothing compared to what they were in Rome. Then the institution existed for the convenience of the men. Now it is defended mainly for the protection it gives to women, who form a large majority of the petitioners. Today the story of Julius Caesar and his wife raises sympathy with the lady and ridicule for the husband. Caesar is not supposed by his fervidest admirers to have been an anchorite, and he divorced his wife not because she was proved guilty of any wrong, but because he wished her to be above suspicion.—Collier's Weekly.

Scribner's Magazine for February begins one of those series which from the days of the Thackeray Letters to the Waddington Letters have been characteristic of this Magazine. Mrs. George Bancroft's Letters from England are a worthy successor to these notable literary achievements. Mrs. Bancroft was a brilliant woman, born in Plymouth, Mass., and all her life associated with people of distinction. As a young girl she was a great friend of Emerson and his wife, and of many of the Brook Farm people. She married George Bancroft, the historian, in 1838 and when he was sent to England as Minister in 1846 she wrote these letters, principally in diary form, to her children. The Bancrofts knew all the eminent people in politics, society and literature. It was the age of Samuel Rogers, Macaulay, Lord and Lady Holland, and Palmerston.

The Popular Science Monthly for February contains the following articles: "Scientific Investigations and Progress," by President Ira Remsen; "Comrades in Zeal," by President David Starr Jordan; "The Predecessors of Copernicus," by Dr. Edward S. Holden; "The Conservation of Energy in those of Advancing Years," by Dr. J. Madison Taylor; "The Discovery and Distribution of Meteorites," by Oliver O. Farrington; "Washington University," by Charles P. Pettus; "What is Group Theory?" by Professor G. A. Miller.

"We were having a splendid season," said the Retired Press Agent, "until the manager got one of those realistic bees in his bonnet, and then we went to pieces financially. And we were the only 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' Company on the road carrying three Uncle Toms and three Little Evas too!"

"What caused the break up" asked the Steady Listener.

"The manager of the show insisted on out using real ice for Eliza to escape over. When we struck the Southern States the ice broke us!"—February Lippincott's.

The February Atlantic offers a group of leading articles which can be neglected by no person earnestly concerned about the urgent issues in America today. These papers, in which subjects of the first importance are treated by the men best qualified to discuss them with authority and vigor, are:

Wall Street and the Country, by Charles A. Conant, a treatise on the uses and abuses of the money power, with which the number opens; followed by a sensible and dispassionate paper on Lynching: a Southern View, by Clarence H. Pope, and a thoughtful discussion of the question, Is Commercialism in Disgrace? by John Graham Brooks.

CONCERN MAY BE SOLVENT.

Receiver for L. Sternberg & Co., Thinks Firm Can Pay Its Debts.

Vice Chancellor Stevens has continued for sixty days the appointment of Edward S. Campbell as temporary receiver of L. Sternberg & Co., with power to continue the business during that period. In the preliminary report submitted by the receiver the liabilities are fixed at $135,029.83, and the nominal assets at $342,580.

The report shows that the concern has a very large amount of outstanding accounts, and that if even a small percentage of these can be closed the assets will more than meet the liabilities. In recommending the continuance of the business Receiver Campbell declares that he has little doubt that the concern can pay all its debts in full.

ALLEGED ELOPEMENT NEATLY FRUSTRATED

Lawyer Said to Have Planned to Carry off His Sweetheart at a Dinner Party.

SHE IS A FANWOOD GIRL

MR. UNGER, THE FATHER, GETS AHEAD OF DAN CUPID.

Declared That Parent Declared the Dinner Date Cancelled and That He is Opposed to Match—No Reasons Given.

Like a knight of old, Jerome Langer planned to carry his love off from the midst of her friends during a dinner at Sherry's, in New York, but a stern parent got wind of his intentions and called the dinner off. Dan Cupid was asleep at the switch.

Langer is an electrical engineer in the equipment department of the New York Navy Yard. He met Miss Madeline Uhler for the first time on March 21, 1903. She is the daughter of J. M. Uhler, a wealthy resident of Fanwood. He wooed with ardor and proposed on Oct. 18. He asked the consent of her father the following day, and was accepted conditionally upon his ability to satisfy the prospective father-in-law regarding his social standing.

Langer comes from Nebraska. He is a graduate of the Nebraska University, a veteran of the Spanish War, and a sergeant in Company I, Twenty-third Regiment. He submitted a list of references, mostly Nebraska notables, including a brother, who was a bank president.

Mr. Uhler was satisfied, and the engagement was to have been formally announced on Thanksgiving Day. On Thanksgiving Eve Langer received a curt note from Mr. Uhler cancelling the engagement. No explanation was given, and Langer was unable to see Miss Uhler. He could not even get a message to her.

He learned that the Uhlers were to give a dinner party, at which Miss Uhler would be present. Counting upon the girl's loyalty he planned to enter the room and carry her off under her father's nose. Uhler got wind of his plans and recalled the invitations for the dinner.

"I am confident that Miss Uhler is loyal in her heart to me, but her father dominates her," said Langer.

"I am completing arrangements to do some professional work in India, and expect to sail soon for the Orient. I would like to see her before I go."

"Langer? Oh, yes. He had a mild flirtation with my daughter, I believe," said Mr. Uhler. "They were never formally engaged. I simply exercised my right as a father and cut him out. Why I did so is my own business. I will not tell him or anybody else."

Cupid, with a quiver full of bent arrows and a broken wing, is limping back home. — New York Evening World.

Mrs. J. M. Uhler said to a reporter for The Daily Press this afternoon, in answer to a question for a verification of the story: "There isn't any truth in it; that's all I have to say."

SWACKHAMER'S TALK BEFORE HUDSON'S MEN

Address Made by North Plainfielder at Annual Banquet of Jersey City Board of Trade.

EVEN-HANDED JUSTICE

RAILROAD COMPANIES NOT PAYING THEIR PROPORTION OF TAXES.

Only An Anarchist Would Destroy Vested Rights of a Railroad Company—Tribute Paid to Hudson County's Legislators.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer's address on "Our State" before the Jersey City Board of Trade Thursday night has attracted more than passing notice. His utterances were greeted with spontaneous applause. He said incidently:

"In Jersey City the railroad companies own one quarter of the property and pay but one and one-half per cent. on their second class railroad property and nothing at all on the main stems while the private citizen is taxed on all property at the rate of 2.8 per cent."

While Mr. Swackhamer said that he was not an enemy of corporations and he realized that New Jersey was indebted to them for a large part of her wealth and prestage and that marching steadily behind advancing civilization, they have developed the natural resources and augmented the material prosperity of the country at large.

"Any man who would infringe upon or attempt to destroy any of the legitimate or vested rights of a corporation would be an anarchist," said Mr. Swackhamer, "and should be discountenanced, but the great principle for which the sturdy sons of New Jersey have always stood is equal taxation, evenhanded justice and equality before the law.

"If it is true that the railroad companies are not paying their fair share of the taxation then the private citizen is subjected to grievous burdens which it is not just that they should bear and it should be the aim of all upright and fair minded men to secure such legislation as will equalize the burden of taxation and place the corporations on an equality with the citizens of flesh and blood.

"Hudson County is the terminus of great trunk lines which gridiron the country and is situated in the fairest harbor of the world. With one hand she reaches out and gathers in the golden harvest of 17,000 farms and the varied products of countless factories while with the other she sweeps in the rich argosies of the seas from every part of the world. New Jersey has possession of such vast importance and is possessed of so much wealth, intelligence and political wisdom that she should assert the rights of her citizens and secure such reform as may be needed for the general good."

Mr. Swackhamer paid a tribute to the Legislators representing Hudson County at Trenton by saying that they were men who could not be led astray by the spoils of office and were above being used as tools of great corporations.

TALK ON FLAG.

Rev. Dr. Glazebrook to Make Presentation Speech When Third's Colors Go to State.

Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Elizabeth, chaplain of the veteran Zouaves of that city and former chaplain of Confederate Camp No. 1, of New York, has been selected by General Drake, commander of the Zouaves, to make the presentation speech when the old regimental flag of the Third New Jersey militia is turned over to Governor Murphy on February 8, to be placed in the custody of the State.

Rev. Dr. Glazebrook is one of Elizabeth's most eloquent speakers and a former Confederate verteran, he being an officer in "Stonewall" Jackson's brigade. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia. Coming from his hands the ceremony of giving to the State the old historic colors will have more than ordinary significance.

LINCOLN EVENT.

Celebration on Martyred President's Birthday at Place Named in His Honor.

Rev. J. R. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, will deliver the principal address at the Lincoln celebration at Lincoln on February 12, which is the martyred President's birthday. The services will be in charge of the Lincoln Sunday-school. Rev. T. E. Davis, of North Plainfield, will also speak. An elaborate dinner will be served and it is expected that many people in this locality will be present.

—Atwood L. DeCoster, referee in bankruptcy, has been made a member of the Excise Board of Summit through appointment of Judge Vail.

THIEF HAD NARROW ESCAPE

SERVANT ENTERED HOUSE WHILE THE CROOK WAS AT WORK.

The burglar who broke into Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck's house on West Front street Thursday evening had the narrowest escape from detection in his career of thieving from Plainfield houses. He was at his work when the servant girl employed by Dr. Schenck returned to the house. The girl noticed that the light was burning low in the library and thought it strange, as she knew the family were all at the Trinity Reformed church supper. She did not suspect that anything was wrong, however, and passed directly by the library door to her room without making any investigation. The library is in the second story of the house.

Frightened probably by hearing the girl moving about the house when he had thought it vacant, the burglar left in a hurry, leaving behind him on the library table the jimmy which he had used to pry open the front bay window in forcing his entrance. He left by the front door. The jimmy, which is being held by the police, had evidently seen much service. It is worn and rusted.

Besides the $20 in the small bank, it was found that about a dollar in small change had been taken from a small purse. In the purse was a foreign coin which Dr. Schenck valued highly and which was carefully replaced along with a Wanamaker coin and a mutilated penny.

The thief evidently wanted nothing but cash for he took nothing else. His method of effecting his entrance was probably his usual one. Waiting until the family left, he rang the door bell and receiving no response started to his work of forcing the window. The wonder is that he was not seen from the street. The return of the servant girl he had not expected.

Chief Kiely does not think that the fellow is an experienced burglar though he admits that he is clever. The evidence all goes to show that he is a Plainfielder and well acquainted with the habits of Plainfield people.

Orders from Chief Kiely directing the arrest of all strangers in the city acting suspiciously have been in force for several weeks and the fact the man is a Plainfielder is all the more evident in this reason. No one has ever seen the man to obtain the slightest description of him. The "jimmy" that he left behind him is in reality nothing more than a piece of old iron and has nothing about it that would lead to the tracing of its owner.

Purchased Valuable Horse.

Frank Hand, of the borough, has purchased at the Madison Square horse exchange, a horse with a record of 2:16. The horse is listed as "Franklin" and was owned by a New York man before Mr. Hand made the purchase.

I. C. T. Club Election.

The nomination and election of officers of the I. C. T. Club will take place next Saturday night. Reports of officers will be received and plans for the coming year outlined. The nomination of officers was postponed from last Saturday night owing to the lack of a quorum.

TO SELL BOWEN HOMESTEAD

THE HOUSE WHERE FATHER OF PLAINFIELDER ENTERTAINED LINCOLN.

One of the most interesting of the old residences in the Heights section of Brooklyn is to be sold and will in all probability be razed by the purchaser. The property is the Henry O. Bowen homestead, at 90 Willow street. It is to be sold at auction on Feb. 15. The sale is directed by Edward A. Bowen, Charles W. Bowen and Franklin D. Bowen, executors of the estate.

The house, which was built in 1840, is a large frame structure, 60 by 100 feet, standing in the middle of a plot 100 by 200 feet. The property had been the site of a fort during the Revolution, and afterward was used as a public park. Kossuth was received there when he visited America. David Leavitt, President of the American Exchange Bank of New York, was the original occupant of the house, and it was bought from him by Mr. Bowen in 1853. Mr. Bowen, who was the editor of The Independent, entertained President Lincoln at one time in his home.

Among those interested in the property are Herbert W. Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela, Mrs. George C. Holt, wife of United States Judge Holt, and H. E. Bowen, of this city.

'PLAINS MAN WON.

B. F. Elliott Had Heaviest Potato in Hill & Shupp's Contest.

The potato contest closed at Hill & Shupp's store on Saturday night, after which the names of the winners were announced. There were three prizes, $5, $3 and $2, for the largest and second and third largest potato contributed. B. G. Elliott, of Scotch Plains, won first prize, his potato weighing 31 ounces. F. Strangenbach, of Oak Tree, received second prize for a potato weighing 27½ ounces, while Dennis Gavin, of North Plainfield, won third money. His potato weighed 27½ ounces. The three potatoes are now on exhibition at the store. They firm has decided to send all of the potatoes to the hospital.

Suit for Big Damages.

Suit for $50,000 damages has been started in the Supreme Court against the Central Railroad and the Philadelphia and Reading by Mrs. Emilia Merle, widow of Theodore Merle, who was killed at a railroad crossing in Dunellen. The plaintiff is represented by W. L. Hetfield, Jr., and R. P. F. VonMinden, Esqs.

Lad Badly Injured.

Raymond Todd, son of Stuart Todd, of New street, was severely injured Saturday afternoon by being run over by a kindling-wood wagon at the corner of Front and New streets. The wheel passed over the child's chest.

More Teachers.

There will be a meeting of the County Board of Examiners of Somerset County for the examination of candidates for teachers' certificates at the public school building, Somerville, on Friday and Saturday, February 5 and 6, beginning at 9 in the morning. County Superintendent H. C. Krebs is in charge of the examinations.

FAMOUS FIGHTING DOG.

His Name Is Si and He Would Rather Lick Another Canine Than Chew a Bone.

Miss Anna Dunn, of Plymouth, Ind., owns the grittiest fighting dog in the Hoosier state. She has spent no time in teaching the animal to pitch on to other dogs. In fact, she has been trying for seven years to have her pet give up his quarrelsome tricks, but without avail.

The dog is a Scotch terrier and is known all over town as Si. The dog began fighting when he was a pup and has kept it up ever since. He refused to go with his mistress when she changed her boarding place, because the new place was not so well adapted to canine mixups. She sent the animal out on a farm, hoping to cure Si of his troublesome disposition, but in a single week he had thrashed all the farm dogs within two miles of the house, and one morning, bright and early, he was back at his city home, where he was found occupying his customary position on the street corner. The attitude that he takes is shown in the picture. In this pose he has been known to sit on the pavement for hours looking for trouble, which comes along in anything that looks like a dog, no matter how large or ferocious.

Si despises a circus, and when one of these aggregations strikes town he runs along ahead of the elephant, barking and snarling as if he would like to drive the big fellow off the earth.

The dog still refuses to live in the new home of his mistress, puts up at her old boarding house, contenting himself with a daily visit. More than this Miss Dunn is unable to coax from her fighting pet.

HONEY HAD VAMOOSED.

Hotel Waiter Replied to Guest's Question in a Way That Surprised Young Bride.

A young man, whom we may call Johnson, because that was not his real name, was married several days ago, and it occurred to him that he would take his bride to a town which he knew well on their honeymoon.

He was particularly desirous of visiting this town, as he told his bride, because at the hotel where he intended staying "they served such delicious honey at every meal."

"YOUR HONEY HAS LEFT"

"That will be delightful," said Mrs. Johnson.

The couple arrived at the hotel in due course, and they were just in time for tea. Johnson escorted his bride to a table in the dining-room, and then, after an admiring glance at her, looked quizzically round the board.

There was no honey on the table, and none in the room. Johnson was surprised, and called a waiter.

"See here," said he, "where's my honey?"

The waiter seemed at a loss what to say, but finally leaned forward, and, in a stage whisper, said: "She don't work here no more!"

Governor Shoveled Dirt.

"I shoveled dirt for the first railroad built within the limits of the Louisiana purchase," said Former Gov. A. J. Seay, of Oklahoma. "The line I helped build was from St. Louis to Jefferson City, and the people I lived among were of that sturdy pioneer stock that transformed the wilderness into smiling farms and planted the seeds of civilization in the west. Many a time as a boy I got up at midnight to take a bag of corn to the mill in order to be on hand when the miller roused at dawn of day to begin his daily task. Every fellow wanted his meal ground first, and re there was tremendous rivalry among the eggery lads to see who would be first on the ground."

MET IN A CEMETERY.

And Fell in Love While Weeping O'er Partners Gone Before.

Courtship Began in Strange Place Ends in a Happy Union—Love in a Lunatic Asylum—Cupid in Jail.

A cemetery seems hardly the kind of spot one would choose to go a-courting in, yet it proved an attractive trysting-place to a couple who were married in Baltimore the other day. Both had been married previously, and the acquaintance of the bereaved widow and widower began through visits made to the cemetery containing the remains of their departed partners.

Mr. Charles H. Ogle, who is an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad and 20 years of age, lost his wife a year ago, and, having been very happy with her in former days, frequently visited the spot where she lay buried in order to meditate and put a few flowers on her grave. Mrs. Katherine Elder, who lost her husband three years previously, and who is now only 26, spent much of her time in the cemetery with the same praiseworthy object as Mr. Ogle.

The two mourners soon began to notice one another, and one day Mr. Ogle, stepping over to the tombstone of the deceased Mr. Elder, offered the weeping widow his sympathy, which was gratefully, if tearfully, accepted. A few days later the two mourners met once more, and, having laid their floral offerings on the graves, strolled out of the cemetery together. Almost unconsciously their steps led them in the direction of the parsonage of the Church of St. John, where Rev. Thomas Lowe, who seemed to expect them, speedily made them one.

A lunatic asylum, one would think, is a queer place in which to find a bride. A gentleman, whose home is in the west of England, found it necessary in 1900 to put his wife in an asylum, as she had developed suicidal mania. Here she remained under close observation for nearly a year, during which time she was placed in the special charge of a pretty, fair-haired nurse of 24, who seemed to have made a pleasant impression on the husband of her patient.

In the summer of 1901 the lady died, and of course the widower had no further need to call at the asylum. But after a few weeks he began to miss seeing the pretty nurse, and when six months had passed he felt so strong a desire to know if she were still in the same situation that one day he called and inquired for her. Six months later, when he considered his term of mourning had expired, he proposed, was accepted, and the two are now the happiest married couple you could wish to see.

Jail is not altogether a pleasant place in which to meet one's future life-partner, but several instances go to prove that there are unlikelier spots. Early in the nineteenth century a young man of the name of Benjamin Flower was imprisoned in Newgate for writing a spirited defense of the French revolution. While there he was visited by a Miss Eliza Gould, a lady of a philanthropical turn of mind, who spent much of her time visiting the prisoners in their affliction," and, when permitted to do so, reading to them and writing their letters.

Mr. Flower was strongly attracted by Miss Gould's goodness no less than by her remarkable beauty, and when his term of imprisonment expired and he gained his freedom, the friendship began under such romantic circumstances continued, and the two frequently met. Ultimately, finding that they could not live apart, they were married. Two daughters were born to them, one of whom, Sarah, gained immortality as the authoress of that beautiful hymn: "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Bright Scheme That Failed.

Bristling with ambition, a young physician who has a limited practice recently thought of a scheme which he felt would be a money maker for him. His idea was to fool his neighbors into the belief that he was overrun with business. This he attempted to do by inducing all the charity patients he treated at the dispensary with which he is connected to come to his office, telling them it would be a convenience for him, and that it would cost them nothing. But the result was not all he anticipated. While his office was always crowded, the number of his paying patients did not increase, and at the end of the month he had made a visible [illegible] his medical brethren. MINISTER AT CHURCH; BURGLAR AT HIS HOME

While Rev. Dr. Schenck Was at Trinity's Turkey Supper Burglar Got in His House.

ENTRANCE BY WINDOW

A SMALL BANK CONTAINING ABOUT TWENTY DOLLARS WAS STOLEN.

Chief Kiely Had Extra Force of Policemen Patroling Residential Districts Because of the Numerous Public Events Last Night.

The house at 904 West Front street, of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was entered by a burglar last Thursday and a small bank containing $20 in money was stolen.

An entrance was forced through a window of the house between 6 and 6:30 o'clock. Dr. Schenck left at 6 to attend a turkey supper at Trinity church and the house was left vacant until the servant girl employed at the house returned at 6:30. The thief must have worked speedily. He left no clue to his identity. He is in all likelihood the man who has operated so frequently and so successfully in the city and borough during the past few weeks.

Whoever he was, he evidently knew that Dr. Schenck would be at Trinity church and watched the house until his departure. He shows himself well acquainted with Plainfield and its people.

Chief Kiely said this morning that he had feared that something of the sort might happen last night owing to the fact that the Trinity supper, Board of Trade dinner and Charity Ball called so many people away from home. As a consequence he had an extra force of men patrolling the streets and took every possible precaution to protect vacant houses.

M'ENTREE'S HEAVY PENALTY

TO SOJOURN AS WARDEN DODD'S GUEST UNTIL JULY 4.

The severest punishment that has been visited upon an offender at the city court for months was put upon George McEntee last Thursday by Judge Runyon. McEntee, otherwise known as "his nibs," was sentenced to fifty-nine days in the county jail and fined $100, the whole practically amounting to a 159 day sentence. George will breathe the free air of Heaven again in just about time enough to celebrate the Fourth of July.

The charge against McEntee was disorderly conduct by attacking Michael Quinn, bartender at Watson's saloon in the West End, the result of the attack being a broken collar bone for Quinn. "His nibs" told His Honor that he had no place to sleep, so the Judge provided for him for some time to come, with the remark that the prisoner was a general nuisance and a menace to society.

UNIQUE SCHOOL.

The Mountain Park Inn Has Been Leased for a Pedagogical Enterprise.

Mountain Park Inn is to become the new home of a unique educational work founded some years ago by Dr. Maximilian P. Grossman, who for a long period of time has been connected with the pedagogical enterprises of Dr. Felix Adler, of New York. The Grossmann School for Nervous and Atypical Children, at present conducted on Washington Heights, New York, has been established for the benefit of a small number of children whose individual needs require physical, mental and moral treatment by experts. This work is essentially new, and has been made possible only by the recent researches into the conditions of growth and development of children.

In connection with his school, Dr. Grossmann will establish a laboratory for the exact scientific study of atypical children. Recently, he gave several lectures on his subject before New York scientific bodies. He is booked for a course of lectures before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences next fall.

The school will probably move to its new home some time in April.

Mr. Billett Abandons Scheme.

J. F. Billett, who had planned an "Art and Culture" course of entertainments for the winter, has given up the idea, owing to the early commencement of the Lenten season.

Criterion's Treasurer Resigns.

George Pope has resigned as treasurer of the Criterion Club. His successor will be appointed at the next regular business meeting of the organization.

MAYOR N. B. SMALLEY HAS A PARK SCHEME

Tract of Land in Borough Suggested As a Site for Proposed Pleasure Ground.

HIS PLANS OUTLINED

IDEA IS TO HAVE PARK FOR USE OF BOTH CITY AND NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Island to be Arranged in Centre of Land and to be Used and a Band-Stand to be Placed on It—Benches, Fountains and Other Plans.

Plans have been drawn up for the proposed park to be laid out jointly by the municipalities of Plainfield and North Plainfield. They were made by Borough Engineer H. C. VanEmburgh and the scheme is cleverly portrayed. The public improvement was mentioned incidently by Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, in his speech before the Board of Trade at the banquet Thursday night.

The site embraces the property surrounded by Elm place, East Front street, Chatham street and Watchung avenue. One hundred feet west of the Elm place bridge it is planned to construct a rustic causeway or bridge connecting each bank of Tier's lake. In the center of this body of water it is proposed to lay out an artificial island which will be used as a foundation for a band stand where summer band concerts can be given. This will be called "Band Island."

There will be numerous driveways in the recreation ground surrounding artistically arranged grass plots and flower beds. Fountains will be placed in the reserve. Benches will be provided no doubt.

Pearl street will terminate in a well kept macadam driveway as will Bank place and Elm place. There will be twelve entrances to the place and it is possible this boating will be a feature of the park during the summer. In the winter the lake will make a delightful skating rendesvous for the younger people. The buildings facing on Front street and Bank place will in no way interfere with the improvement. Those who have seen the plan declare that the park will be one of the greatest improvements of the past decade.

CARD OF THANKS.

The Ball Committee Appreciates the Contributions to the Charity Affair.

The ball committee of the charity ball wishes to return thanks for the contribution of material and labor which enabled the committee to keep the expenses within the amount gained from advertisements in programme. These were the contributors: Brooks Carson, florist, of Belmont avenue, general decorations; C. L. Stanley, florist, North avenue, in decorating front of stage; A. E. Lincoln, florist, Park avenue, in decorating mantel in west room; L. J. Denton, florist, Front street, in decorating in east room; Chas. M. Wilson, builder, for carpenter work; Shirley & Johnson, for awnings and floor coverings; Chas. W. Runyon, for telephones; Allen B. Laing, for electric work; A. M. Runyon & Son, for chairs; J. W. Gavett, ofr electric globes; police and fire department, for personal attendance; Mase Edwards, and employes, for courtesies and services; Daily Press ofr information published and placards printed; Courier-News, for information published; Mrs. Jane Hellstrom and her assistants for services; Chas. Mumford, for services; Frank Hedden, for services; Chas. Mann, for services; Blair stables for use of carriage.

Second Cotillion.

The Cotillion Club will hold the second dance of the season at the Casino on Tuesday night, February 9. It is expected that there will be a large number of out-of-town guests present.

Masquerade Dance.

A number of Plainfielders have received invitations to attend the annual masquerade dance to be given at the Westfield Club on Lincoln's Birthday eve.

Holiday Dinner.

Mrs. Evarts Tracy will give a dinner to a number of friends at her home on Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12. The guests invited are the members of the Bridge Whist Club.

Building Permit.

Elston M. French, of North Plainfield, has received from Building Inspector T. O. Doane a permit to erect a frame dwelling on Evergreen avenue.

Society Event.

The third and final cotillion of the season will be held at the Casino Monday night, April 4. Chas. Duncan, successor will be appointed at the next regular business meeting of the organization.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1904. NO. 6.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

TRINITY CHURCH MEN FORM AN ASSOCIATION

Meetings to be Held Monthly for Purpose of Promoting Good Fellowship.

THE OFFICERS SELECTED

STARTS WITH AN ENROLLMENT OF FORTY-THREE.

Any Man Sixteen Years of Age Is Eligible to Membership—Next Meeting February 26—The Constitution Voted Upon.

The men of the congregation of Trinity Reformed church organized Tuesday an association planned for their own pleasure and profit, the aiding of the pastor in his work of the church, and the benefiting of church organizations and church work generally. The "Men's Association of Trinity Reformed Church" was chosen as the name of the organization. The idea is to hold monthly meetings on the last Thursday of each month, the aim of the meetings to be the promotion of social good fellowship, and the providing of lectures and similar events for the entertainment and instruction of members.

Last night's meeting was presided over by E. P. Sheppard, who was chosen temporary chairman and F. H. Smith, temporary secretary. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the church, outlined briefly the purpose and methods of work of a men's organization. The constitution was then read by Secretary Smith, and discussed and voted upon by sections. The committee that drew up the constitution consisted of F. E. Smith, E. F. Sheppard and A. K. Willett.

The names of forty-three men were then enrolled as charter members of the club. All joining the association within the next three months will also be enrolled as charter members. Any man above sixteen years of age in any way affiliated with Trinity Reformed church is eligible to membership, provided he is approved by a two-thirds vote of members.

The club will endeavor to extend the influence of its meetings so far as possible and members will be allowed to invite friends to attend the lectures and social entertainments.

As officers, H. W. Marshall was elected president; O. E. Ball, vice president; Frank Storr, secretary; and M. F. Gano, treasurer.

A meeting will be held February 26 and committees will probably be appointed at that time and other preliminary business transacted.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS MEET

YOUNG FOGARTY ASKS FOR THE REWARD OFFERED FOR HORSE THIEF.

All the members were present at the regular meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders yesterday in Somerville, excepting E. B. Hoagland. The clerk announced the death of Jacob M. Vreeland and the selection of his son, Walter M. Vreeland, to fill the vacancy.

Messrs. T. E. Gibson, R. W. Hoagland, Andrew Lutkins and A. P. Suydam were appointed to submit a set of resolutions on the death of Mr. Vreeland.

A petition for the improvement of the Millstone road, under the State aid act, was filed; also the petition for the road from Peapack to Pattersville.

Application was made for the reward of $300 for the detection of Charles Brown for stealing a horse of C. N. Apgar last fall, by Edward Fagerty, of Westfield. Nothing will be done in this matter until Brown is convicted.

The finance committee recommended the following apportionment of the appropriations, which was adopted: Courts, $18,000; county jail, $2,900; buildings and grounds, $4,500; lunacy, $10,300; coroners, $600; stationery, $600; printing, $1,000; miscellaneous and incidentals, $2,900; soldiers' burial, $300; county superintendent and school examiners, $280; per diem and salary, $7,000; interest, $8,000; elections, $8,000; armory, $230; bridges, $30,100; roads, $30,000. Total, $130,000.

Mr. Demler reported that the Dover Boiler Works is progressing with the Girard avenue bridge as well as can be expected, owing to the severe weather.

Willard Martin, of Somerville, was a recent guest of relatives in this city.

MRS. HEDDEN BURIED.

Funeral Services Conducted by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich at Her Late Home.

The funeral services of Mrs. Frank Hedden were held Tuesday afternoon at the home, 403 Central avenue, where a large number of relatives and friends had gathered. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, conducted the services, and made a few remarks.

During the services two favorite hymns, "The Homeland," and "Lead, Kindly Light," were sung. There were a number of floral tributes from relatives and friends.

The interment was in Evergreen cemetery, Plainfield avenue, and these persons were bearers: Louis McIntosh, Jacob Blimm, Robert Crosson and Edward Pope.

LIQUOR LICENSE FEE FIXED

NO CHANGE CAN BE MADE FOR THIS YEAR SAYS A COUNCILMAN.

There have been some rumors to the effect that the Common Council intends to again consider the ordinance relative to increasing the liquor license fee in this city. However true this may be, it is a fact that no action that the Council may take at this time can affect the license fee for the coming year. It will remain the same as last year. This is settled by the ordinances and laws governing such matters.

If there are a sufficient number of Councilmen who desire to make a change for 1905, action making such a change can be taken this year to become operative then. The members who voted in favor of increasing the license fee still hold that their position was perfectly justifiable in voting to adopt the ordinance on its final passage after voting in the affirmative on the first two readings. A negative vote in the last instance, they claim, shows poor principle and would indicate that there was "something doing" between the time the ordinance was introduced and when it came up for final action.

One member of the Council in speaking of the address made by Rev. John McMurray at the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday, said, "the reverend gentleman was not well posted or he would never have made such bold statement." As to J. J. Goff being promised six months ago a license to be erected a building on West Front street, the Councilman said it was foolish to make such a statement. He added that it would be absurd for any member of the Council or any political leader to make such a promise and personally, he did not believe that any such promise had been made.

When the Councilman was asked his opinion as to whether Mr. Goff would get a license, the official said that he could not make any predictions, as he could not tell what might happen between now and the March meeting. The member speaking on the subject is one of those who favors a high license with the present number of licensed drinking places, believing that it is the best way to regulate the liquor traffic.

TEA IN MRS. PATRICK'S HONOR

AFFAIR GIVEN BY MRS. MARTIN I. COOLEY, OF ROCKVIEW AVENUE.

The second and last of a series of teas given by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley for her daughter, Mrs. Patrick, wife of Captain Mason Matthew Patrick, of West Point, at her home in Rockview avenue, yesterday, attracted a large number of society folks and like the first affair a week ago, was a charming one. The same color scheme, pink, prevailed and in the reception and dining rooms pink flowers were used in profusion.

Assisting Mrs. Cooley and her daughter in receiving were Mrs. Morris K. Belknap, of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Andrew Belter, Mrs. John Harmon, Mrs. M. O'N. Knott, Mrs. Edward J. Waring, Mrs. Maybury B. Mellor and Mrs. James R. Joy. In the dining room were these young women: Mrs. William McOpichen, Miss Elsie Martin, Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Miss Margaret Yates.

—Mrs. Westcott's dancing class, which recently completed a successful quarter, will recommence next Tuesday night. The dances will be held at the Casino.

—White Label goods are superior because they are better than other brands. The white label on the outside is symbolic of the purity of the goods inside. These cans are sealed scientifically. There is no danger in the use of these goods.

A TRANS-CONTINENTAL RAILROAD'S HISTORY

Alexander Millar, of the Union Pacific, Delivered an Instructive Address.

BEFORE A MEN'S CLUB

TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS IN CARRYING OUT A GREAT UNDERTAKING.

Union Pacific First to Cross the Continent—Celebration When the Road Was Completed—How Jay Gould Came to Its Aid.

"The Romance of Railroading," or the first trans-continental railroad, was the subject of an exceptionally interesting talk given by Alexander Millar, of Madison avenue, at the regular meeting of the Men's Club, of the Congregational church, Tuesday. Mr. Millar is secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad, it being the first road to make its way across the continent. The speaker began his talk with the first attempts to build such a line and followed closely the successes and reverses met in the gigantic enterprise. He referred to the early days of railroading, remarking that in 1835 there were but eight hundred miles of tracks in this country. He mentioned the persistent effort of Asa Whitney, who for ten years endeavored to get a railroad across the continent. He sought Congress in an attempts to secure land grants for the purpose, and it was in this way that the first idea of obtaining the necessary lands was conceived and afterward worked successfully, although the United States profited generously by the deal as was shown by results.

Although, as Mr. Millar stated, the Union Pacific liquidated its entire indebtedness and was the first road to reach the Pacific Coast, there are now about six railroads traversing the territory between the coast and west. He referred to the great celebration when the road was completed by the joining of the rails at Ogden. Three spikes, one gold, one silver and the third copper, were driven in the rails and by an electrical device the simple act was telegraphed to all the important cities in the country.

In his talk Mr. Millar related many amusing incidents in connection with the work of construction and mentioned the names of a number of prominent men who were more or less identified with the enterprise, including that of Jay Gould, who proved a great benefactor in that he secured money for the road at 6 per cent. when the company had been paying 14%.

Mr. Millar ventured the assertion that it was James G. Blaine's transaction with Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad bonds that defeated him for the Presidency, and that it was James A. Garfield's connection with Union Pacific that almost resulted in his political downfall.

In connection with the talk Mr. Millar exhibited a number of largesized photographs showing various scenes along the Union Pacific road, all of which were interesting.

At the close of the talk a vote of thanks was given to the speaker. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner, during which refreshments were served.

AGAINST EXEMPTION.

Opinion on Tax Act Received and Signboard Bill Considered by Legislature.

The measure to render the panorama of New Jersey along the railroads more sightly was introduced by Assemblyman Colby in the House yesterday.

This administration measure provides that municipalities in which billboards are erected must license the owners for a fee of $5 a square foot per annum. Failure to do this subjects owners or municipalities to a fine of $350, to be collected by a lawsuit, half of the amount to be given to the informer.

Attorney General McCarter handed an opinion to the House on a resolution of Assemblyman Miller, of Cumberland, asking a decision as to the constitutionality of the fireman's tax exemption, in the general act, which went into effect December 25 last. The Attorney General declared the section giving volunteer firemen $500 exemption was unconstitutional, and was so declared by the Court of Errors and Appeals last fall.

Miss Fanny Mills, of West Front street, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Fulton, of Brooklyn.

BOROUGH FIREMEN TO FORM ASSOCIATION

Members of Present Volunteer Department Plan to Organize an Exempts' Club.

AFTER HEADQUARTERS

COMMITTEES REPRESENTING THE TWO COMPANIES APPOINTED.

Scheme for Organization to be Arranged by J. J. Stahl, David Bodine, George H. Fairchild and William G. Debele.

The first step towards the formation of an Exempt Firemen's Association in North Plainfield was taken last night at a joint meeting of the Warren Engine Company and the West End Hose Company, held in the former's headquarters on Somerset street. There was an unusually large attendance, every fireman in the borough with the exception of four being present. The volunteer department will be disbanded March 15.

David Bodine, George H. Fairchild, William G. Debele and Chief Julius J. Stahl is the committee appointed by the two companies to select suitable rooms and make arrangements for a permanent organization. During the meeting Lewis Clark was elected an honorary member. He is the last man who will be enrolled on the books of the volunteer fire department of North Plainfield. Other matters were discussed, what disposition will be made of the uniforms and other individual property of the members being considered.

HACKMEN IN CITY COURT

ALL BECAUSE THE JEHUES DID NOT PIN BADGES TO THEIR COATS.

Because they had their badges strapped instead of pinned to their coats, four hackmen were arrested yesterday afternoon and haled before City Judge Runyon this morning. The arrests were made under instructions from Chief Kiely who had received strict orders from the City Council in regard to the enforcement of the hack ordinances. Judge Runyon explained that a liberal interpretation of the ordinance was necessary to carry out the Council's wishes as expressed in resolutions adopted at its last meeting. The men were told that they must obey the ordinance and that, if its working seemed unjust they would be obliged to seek regular methods for redress. William L. Callahan, Edward Karmen and Robert Evans were the hackmen who appeared in court this morning. William H. Callahan was also arrested but was excused from appearing. William G. DeMeza, Esq., represented the hackmen.

GERMAN SOCIETY MOVES.

Gesang and Turn Verein to Occupy quarters in Marsh Building Temporarily.

The German and Turn Verein has decided to move from the borough to this city. Temporary headquarters have been secured in the Marsh building on Park avenue, corner of Second street. This was decided upon at a special meeting held in the Police building on Somerset street last night.

The meeting was called for the purpose of talking over matters pertaining to the erection of a new hall as soon as the insurance on the damaged Saengerbund Hall has been settled. It is planned to put up another structure, but whether it will be on the old site or not has not been decided. The majority of members are in favor of rebuilding on the same site. This is probably what will be done.

Since the fire the Gesang and Turn Verein has made its headquarters in the old Democratic headquarters on Somerset street. These quarters have been found to be too small.

Up to the present time 190 bills has been introduced into the State Legislature.

MARTINE ELOQUENT AT ELIZABETH'S AFFAIR

The Farmer Orator Answered to Toast "Our Country" at Board of Trade's Banquet.

BERGEN DEFENDS P. S. C.

A PROPOSITION TO SUBSCRIBE FOR STRICKEN CITY CAUSED TROUBLE.

Episcopal Clergyman's Defense of Capital—W. G. Besler and C. M. Burt Among Those Present—General Good Time.

A question of whether to subscribe money, to relieve Baltimore's sufferings from fire, destroyed for a time the harmony of the banquet of the Elizabeth Board of Trade Tuesday and created an excited discussion that made the banquet hall a scene almost of pandemonium. The discussion followed a motion for the adoption of resolutions of sympathy to the people of Baltimore in their great losses from fire. General approval was expressed of the resolutions which were drawn up by Former Corporation Attorney James Connolly, but when one of the members proposed that an immediate subscription should be taken up among those present, a bitter controversy arose as to the timeliness of the action. The banquet hall was not considered the opportune time and proper occasion for such action. The matter was finally dropped and quiet restored.

Among the speakers, James E. Martine, of this city, had "Our Country" for his subject. He received an ovation when he arose but modestly attributed the warmth of his reception to his patriotic theme. He described the glories of the U. S. "in extenso" stating incidentally that the duty of America to its territory acquired by conquest or purchase was to protect it and in every way advance its interests. He spoke of the benefits that would follow the building of the Panama canal.

Frank Bergen, Esq., of Newark, defended the trolley system of the P. S. C. He said that the problem of transportation is still in its infancy and perfection of system is not to be expected. He explained many of the troubles of the P. S. C. by the fact that the rolling stock that accompanied the sale of the property of local companies where they were combined into one concern was in wretched condition and a tremendous handicap to good service. Time would enable the corporation to remedy most of the trouble.

An instructive defense of capital was made by Rev. Otis A. Glazebrook. Guests present included a representative of the government of Mexico who is in Elizabeth in connection with the construction in the Crescent shipyards of a warship for Mexico; and W. G. Besler and C. M. Burt, of this city, officials of the Central Railroad.

SECOND COTILLION AT CASINO SOCIETY TURNS OUT IN FORCE TO ATTEND ENJOYABLE FUNCTION.

The second of society's most prominent events of the season, a subscription cotillion, was held last night and in the early hours of this morning at the Casino. The cotillion was equally as brilliant as the masque ball, the first of the series, last December. There were fifty couples of Plainfield's society folk on the floor.

The hall was handsomely decorated, red and green being the prevailing colors. Dancing began at about 10 o'clock with music by Austen's orchestra, of ten pieces, of Brooklyn. The cotillion was formed a couple of hours later and led by Thomas Van Boskerck and Lewis G. Timpson. An elaborate collation was served by Mrs. Hallstead. The favors were beautiful affairs, different ones being provided for the men and women participating.

The committee that arranged the cotillion and made possible its shining success consisted of L. G. Timpson, Elliot T. Barrows, Thomas VanBoskerck and Lewis Waring.

The third and final event in the series will take place Easter Monday.

Mocks Fined $5.

Robert Mocks, colored, and William Robinson answered to a charge of fighting this morning in the city court. Mocks was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or spend twenty days in jail. The arrest was made by Patrolman Kelly.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

Joint-Committee Investigating Subject to Make a Report at the March Meeting of the Council.

The joint committee from the Board of Health and the Common Council, which has been investigating various systems of municipal garbage disposal, has collected much valuable material on the subject and it is understood that a report will be presented at the March meeting of the Council. While it is not definitely known, it is generally believed that a system of municipal collection of garbage will be recommended with a view to its ultimate adoption. It is said that many Councilmen favor the scheme, despite the Mayor's disapproval of it and it would not be surprising if Plainfield should be given some desirable system.

VISITED THE STRICKEN CITY

PLAINFIELDERS SAW THE RUINS IN THE MONUMENT CITY.

F. O. Smith, J. C. Storm and Sidney Frasee, the last named being the driver of the chemical engine at fire headquarters went to Baltimore on Monday to see the great fire which laid the greater part of the Monument City in a dreary waste of ruins. They told the story of their experiences to a reporter for The Daily Press on their return. They say the desolation in the handsomest southern city is terrible to contemplate. Whole business blocks have been reduced to ashes and the fury of the great wave of fire was something terrible to behold. A cordon of police and soldiers kept every body away from the immediate neighborhood of the conflagration and everywhere people were hurrying hither and thither with books, and other business records. Even wheelbarrows were called into use.

They arrived in Baltimore shortly after noon. Long before they got their the great clouds of smoke could been seen hanging like a pall over the city. Cinders filled the air and breathing was difficult. Great excitement prevailed throughout the place and with the deep roar of the dynamite explosions and the bellowing sound of the flames, the people were terror striken. An awful sight was the destruction of buildings supposed to be fire proof. They toppled and seemed to melt into piles of charred wreckage before the fiery blast. The firemen were helpless to combat the flames. They were driven back from their positions—the water poured into the fire turning to steam before it hardly left the nozzle.

Mr. Frasee pays a high tribute to the New York firemen. He arrived in Baltimore as about the same time they did and he says that their work was superior in every way to all other companies. They worked intelligently and he says it was largely due to their work that the east side of the town was saved from destruction. At their own request they were placed in the heat of the battle and did valiant work.

A MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY GLEE, BANJO AND MANDOLIN CLUBS AT GRACE M.E.

One of the best entertainments ever given at the Grace M. E. church was that produced by the New York University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs last night. "The Violet," a musical selection arranged by Willis F. Johnson and Frank Smith, was the opening number on the programme. "Lucky Duck," a semi-humorous rendition was played by the banjo club followed by a side splitting song, by the quartette, composed of Messrs. Rainy, Condit, Werneroth and Surplice. All the eight numbers on the first part of the programme were well rendered and gave the audience a fair sample of what was to follow in the second part.

The song, "Anona," written and composed by Miss Mabel McKinley, a niece of the dead President, opened part second.

"Hungaria's Hussars," was the seventh and last number of this part of the programme. All the selections were exceptionally well rendered.

The church was well filled and there will be a comfortable profit from the sale of tickets. The committee which has had charge of the entertainments given in this series was composed of the pastor, Rev. Edwin L. Earp, chairman; Richard Winckler, Dr. H. K. Carroll, W. M. Warrin and John Valiant.

Miss Estella Boss, of West Front street, entertained a number of friends Saturday night in honor of visiting relatives from Washington, D. C.

FIFTEEN YEARS WORK OF ENDEAVOR SOCIETY

Park Avenue Baptist Organization Has Accomplished Much During Its Existence.

GOOD AID TO MISSIONS

CONTRIBUTIONS TO FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FIELDS.

Society Organized Nov. 23, 1888—Total Membership Forty-Five—$1,876.87 Raised—Work of the Junior Department.

A report of the work of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Park Avenue Baptist church during its fifteen years of existence was read by the corresponding secretary of the society, E. C. Runyon, at the anniversary celebration last Friday night. It indicated a steady progress of the society and rapid growth in its capacity for effective mission work.

The society begins this year with an active membership of twenty-six, nine on its absent list, and ten honorary members, a total of forty-five. The largest number on the roll at any time has been fifty-four.

The society was organized November 23, 1888, by about twelve of the young people of the church. Its work has been divided among committees, of which there are six, prayer meeting, look-out, missionary, social, flower and music.

In the missionary field, the Endeavorers have been aided in their work by talks of missionaries among the American Indians, Chinese, Armenians, Hindoos and other people. Efforts have been made to circulate missionary literature by means of a missionary library.

The foreign missionary collections together with money raised by the Fulton two-cents-a-week mission plan have enabled the members to support a native boy in a mission school in India. After the boy left the school, the money was devoted to the support of a native teacher. For this purpose $370 was sent to India in the past nine years. In addition, aid has been given Armenians, and in time of famine to the people of India and Cuba. The helping hand has also been extended to denominational mission board.

The home missionary money has been devoted to different charities in New York city, Plainfield and the chapel cars of the West. Among the local charities assisted has been Miss Curry's day nursery. During the last seven years, $158 has been used for providing summer outings for New York's poor children. Clothing has been sent to the needy, deliacies to the sick, comfort bags to sailors, etc.

Under the direction of the flower committee in the past decade, bouquets of flowers have been sent to the Judson Memorial church and Mariners' Temple, of New York.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the church was organized ten years ago with Mrs. W. S. Lowry as superintendent, in which position she has continued, with the exception of one or two years, up to the present time. The average number of junior members during the ten years has been twenty-five.

The penny collections contributed by the juniors have amounted to $300 in the decade, all of the amount going to aid in missionary and church work.

Financially the funds of the senior Endeavorers have been turned into three channels, general, home and foreign mission. The total amount raised for all purposes by the society since its inception is $1,876.87. From the general fund, $375 has been given to the church. There is now a balance of $34.54 in the treasury.

DINNER PARTY.

Councilman and Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson Entertain Party of Nine Before the Cotillion.

Councilman and Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson, of Evergreen avenue, gave a delightful dinner party at their home last night. Covers were laid for ten. The decorations consisted of pink roses and white lilacs. Those persons were present: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Streuli, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. VanBuren, Mrs. James H. Hallock and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson. After the dinner the guests attended the cotillion at the Casino.

Miss Kitty Deifendellar, of Watchung avenue, has returned from a visit with New York friends.

CUPID ALWAYS BUSY.

Does Not Respect Old Age and Conquers Woman Haters.

How a New Jersey Widow Won an Aged and Silent Husband—Ohio Millionaire Marries Adopted Daughter.

The fact that a man does not get married before he is 21 years old does not argue that he is immune. Sedate men who figure out at the age of 40 that Cupid can do no harm to them might well take care. There is no age of immunity and no disposition which is entirely proof.

To substantiate this, it is only necessary to tell the story of William Vannote, of New Brunswick, N. J.

For 35 years Vannote had not spoken to a woman. The other day he was married. For nine years he had boarded with Mrs. Mary Hedrick, a widow, and Jacob Agan, her son-in-law, and her daughter. He did not speak to the two women. He had nothing to say, and he has since explained.

Suddenly, however, Vannote awoke to the fact that he ought to have a wife, and so at the breakfast table he remarked, breaking his long silence:

"Mrs. Hendrock, ma'am, will you marry me?" Adding thereto by way of an afterthought: "And will you have corned beef and cabbage for dinner?"

Evidently he thought that while he was speaking he might as well make two requests as one, and get a dinner to his liking as well as a wife.

The buxom German widow was startled, as she well might be, at hearing the words of a man celebrated for miles around as a woman hater, but she recovered her composure quickly and stammered:

"Yes, sir."

It was left to Vannote to decide whether she meant that she would be

"WILL YOU MARRY ME?"

his wife or whether she would provide him with the cabbage dinner. It might have meant both or either one. Vannote thought over it a moment, and then asked which she meant.

"Both," she said.

"Then put on your hat," said the sudden bridegroom. In a quarter of an hour they stood before a justice of the peace. After they had been married they moved into a tiny house which Vannote had built. Evidently he had been thinking of matrimony.

Since they have been married the husband has not spoken ten words to his wife, but with the experience of knowing him ten years without hearing him speak at all, Mrs. Vannote is quite reconciled to her silent husband.

From Ohio there comes another story which illustrates the statement that age does not bring immunity. This story concerns Henry Godman, a Columbus millionaire, and his adopted daughter, Mrs. Cora G. Flora. Godman is 71 years old, and the bride 32.

Only recently Godman retired from business with a fortune to his credit. Some years ago he became interested in Mrs. Flora, a young widow, who had been supporting herself by work as a trained nurse. He decided to adopt her, and did so, making provision for her in his will. She made her home with him, and the man soon fell in love with her. The marriage is the result.

Thirty years ago Charles McKee, of Kentucky, was undecided whether he wanted to marry Miss Elizabeth Plummer or Miss Matilda Wheat, who were chums and lived in the same neighborhood of Fleming county. Finally he decided on Miss Plummer, who died three years after the wedding.

His second wife was Miss Elizabeth Humphries, who died several years afterwards. Then he married Mrs. Margaret Haggarty, who died at the age of 50. After a proper season of mourning the still undiscouraged man took a fourth wife, another widow, Mrs. Olive Davis, who died in the second year after her marriage to him.

After his second marriage, McKee had moved to Indiana. He decided that for the fifth wife he would go back to Kentucky. Back to Fleming county he called at the Wheat homestead, and was introduced to a Mrs. Doyle. He was asked to recognize her, and after some time succeeded in doing so. She was Wheat's daughter, one of the two women he had been undecided about 30 years before.

She had married soon after he chose Miss Plummer, and her husband had died about the time he married his fourth wife. In about four weeks from the time he met her again he asked her to marry him, and she consented. They went back to Indiana.

The Origin of Chivalry.

The chivalry of Europe is, in great measure, a product of the Saracen chivalry, which entered Europe in two streams flowing through Constantinople and through Spain.

DOG WITH A SCENT.

He Trail Too Cold for His Truly Marvelous Powers.

Displayed His Good Breeding and Delighted His Master—Scented a Thirty-Year-Old Coon Track Under Ground.

This is a story of a dog with a remarkable scent. It was discovered in a recent number of the National Bloodhound Magazine, which is published in Fort Wayne, Ind., and the town is celebrated for the veracity of its citizens.

The magazine contains photographs of noted hound breeders out in that part of the country and all of them are looking pleasant. Two or three dogs look as if they were laughing and some of the type is askew. No wonder, for the story is there. It has even upset the equanimity of the dog jury in the trial of a pup for chicken stealing, depicted in the frontispiece.

The story has to do with a 'coon dog that picked up a 30-year-old 'coon track covered by a foot of earth.

That was a nose to make 'coons climb a tree.

Gee! No wonder the pictures are on the grin.

This is the how of it: Away back in 1735 a ministerial gentleman named Webster squatted on land near the place where Anthony Wayne fought the battle of the Fallen Timbers. He was making drain pipe one day from an adobe-like clay, and while absent from his task for a moment to tong a hot coal from the fireplace to the bowl of his pipe, a big, fat raccoon, in running across his dooryard, stepped on a piece of unfinished pipe.

At the moment when the 'coon put his feet down the clay was in a receptive mood, and the animal made a lasting impression. Mr. Webster saw 'coon signs in his handiwork, but not possessing a destructive temperament he allowed the clay to retain the footprint. In the course of time the pipe with the impression was shunted into another pipe without an impression, other pieces were added, and finally the whole string of clay cylinders were buried under ground to run the moisture out of the reverend gentleman's front yard. Then the pipe and the footprint were forgotten.

Thirty years later a hard-shell Baptist minister by the name of Flannigan—Rev. Pat they used to call him—came from Pennsylvania to visit Rev. Mr. Webster and he brought along with him his celebrated 'coon dog Digemout. The dog was known all through the mountains of Pennsylvania for his marvelous scenting qualities, and his owner was consequently very proud of him. Rev. Mr. Flannigan arrived one Saturday night, and the next morning after breakfast the two men came to a mutual agreement that it would not cause the recording angel to dip for ink should they go out to see if any 'coons were abroad, the two toilers in the Lord's vineyard stripped off their coats and sicking on the surrounding timber for a likely place when Rev. Pat wondered aloud what the dickens the pup was scratching for in the yard.

Sure enough, Digemout was busy. His eyes sparkled with warm prospects just beyond his paws, and Rev. Mr. Webster, remembering the old drain, suggested that mink might have crawled into it. Mink? Rev. Pat rather guessed not. Digemout was a 'coon dog, and to 'coons alone he gave his attention. Mink be fiddled, the dog had not forgotten his education.

"Sic 'im, boy," shouted the reverend visitor, and Digemout worked faster, breathed harder and looked fiercer. In order to hurry matters Mr. Webster fetched an old shovel from the smoke house and began to dig. In a moment man and dog had reached the drain pipe, and the dog with a wild howling on yell of delight placed his nose into the all-enduring 'coon track made in the molded clay 30 years before.

"There," exclaimed Rev. Pat, with overflow enthusiasm, "I knew there was 'coon somewhere beneath the sod; that dog never fooled his master."

Model School Regulations.

In the interest of preventing consumption in the boarding schools of France, only metal bedsteads are permitted; every child older than 12 years must sleep in a room by itself; and in the kitchen and in the dining-room scientific precaution must be taken against the disease. And no pupil or teacher who is known to have consumption is permitted in any school. Circulars, prepared by physicians, are sent to every school principal, which explain in detail preventive measures of all kinds.

MAN OF MANY PARTS.

Gen. Rafael Reyes, Soldier, Explorer and Statesman.

First Man to Penetrate into Heart of South American Continent—President Designado Republic of Colombia.

One man who has stepped into at least temporary world prominence in the imbroglio over the isthmus of Panama is Gen. Rafael Reyes, now in Washington on a mission. His task is to secure, if possible, the undoing of the recognition of the republic of Panama by the United States government, and the bringing about of a renewal of negotiations between this country and the men who at present rule his land.

A man well worth studying is Rafael Reyes. In addition to being diplomat and politician, and presidente designado, or the one designated for the presidency in succession to Jose Marroquin within a few weeks, he is a military chieftain, a soldier of fortune, an explorer and scientist, and a leading figure among the literati of Bogota, that strange city built on a high plain of the Cordillera mountains and known as "the Athens of South America." In either of these roles he is interesting, but the combination of qualities in his make-up is one that appeals with peculiar force to the people of Latin blood whose opinions he is in such a powerful position to influence for good or ill.

While he is regarded by some American officials who have come into contact with him as a wily, elusive and dangerous politician, he is looked upon with veneration by millions on the southern side of the equator. He is, in fact, a sort of South American Ulysses. His explorations on that continent from Panama to Patagonia, in which all of his companions lost their lives, are full of romantic interest. Although the travelers did not go through a literal Hades, they braved the dangers of fever, of cannibal tribes and the savage cruelty of the aborigines of the far interior, where man had never before set his foot, and Reyes, returning alone from his fearful journeyings, was hailed as the hero of a modern Odyssey.

The story is told in South America that Reyes began his explorations by the merest chance. One of those periodical revolutions was on, and he found it necessary to seek exit from Colombia by the back door, or down the Orinoco, because the ports and main traveled roads were in control of his enemies. Thus it chanced that the revolt which sent him upon his wanderings was the most profitable to the world that the land of revolutions has ever produced. He traveled 35,000 miles, and almost every step was through regions hitherto unknown to the pioneer of any race or civilization.

Having begun a journey to save his life, Reyes, the lust of the explorer and adventurer aroused in him, continued on and on, and science and trade have him to thank for the result. A canoe trip down the Orinoco was followed by a journey on foot along the banks of the Yapura. He and his companions proceeded through entirely unknown regions, for the greater part uninhabited even by Indians, and at last reached the great Amazon, where, building a canoe, he floated down to Para and the Atlantic. Only a few months elapsed after the completion of this trip before a fleet of English ship owners availed themselves of Reyes' discoveries by placing a line of steamers along the route. A trade sprung up that has developed into one of the best-paying industries on the continent.

The chief explorer's brother, Enrique Reyes, died of fever, and the remaining brother, Nestor, was killed and eaten by cannibals near the headwaters of the Parana. The last of the party, his nephew, Felipe Calderon, fell by a poisoned arrow from an unseen hand just as they were upon the point of reaching the frontiers of civilization again.

Such sacrifices, however, were not made in vain, for Reyes proved what had never been suspected before, that South America from 35 degrees south to ten degrees north of the equator is supplied by nature with the finest water system imaginable.

His work accomplished and the veil of mystery which had hung so long over the interior of the continent raised, Colombia welcomed back the hero as enthusiastically as Ulysses was received upon his return from his wanderings following the siege of Troy. Party and sectional lines were forgotten and the people unanimously demanded of the government that he who had so honored his native land be given recognition. So the refugee was made minister plenipotentiary to France, and the Paris Geographical society published in its bulletins the record of his explorations.

LORD ALBERT DALMENY.

He Is the Oldest Son and Heir of the Earl of Rosebery and a Man of Wealth.

When the duke of Roxburghe disappointed "eligible" young women in London by choosing an American bride many a matchmaker on both sides of the Atlantic predicted that society's son would not yield another such a catch in a hurry. There is a young English nobleman, however, who, if not of quite as high rank as Roxburghe's duke, is heir to a title that of late years has come to signify a good deal more. He attained his majority a few weeks ago, and nothing is more likely than that his glance should take the alluring direction of the United States.

This is Lord Rosebery's oldest son, Albert Edward Henry Meyer Archibald Primrose, Lord Dalmeny.

When Lord Dalmeny comes into his full inheritance as sixth earl of Rosebery he will have a title dating back to 1703, a social position of enviable prominence, and an estate comprising in all 22,500 acres. Nor will Lord Rosebery's heir run any risk of being described as a fortune hunter, should he woo an American girl, for his mother, as a daughter of the Rothschilds, brought to her husband a dowry of $12,500,000.

Unlike his father, all Lord Dalmeny's early ambitions tended toward the army. While at Eton he passed his examinations for the service with excellent marks and as soon as the years of Oxford were over he took a lieutenant's commission in the Grenadier guards.

No one knows from whence this young man's marked athletic tastes come, for his father as a young man did not fancy sports which required personal exertion. Lord Dalmeny is a fine cricketer, an excellent football player, and possesses a record that goes back to his early days at Eaton. He also loves horses. He has lately decided to enter politics.

NEW EUROPEAN CANAL.

Its Construction Will Restore Ancient City of Corinth to Its Old-Time Importance.

Few enterprises which have been started in Europe within the last quarter of a century are of greater commercial importance than the new Corinthian canal, a picture of which accompanies this story.

When the project was first proposed many skeptics jeered at it, asserting that it would cost an enormous sum of money and that some of the difficulties in the way would prove practically insurmountable. A syndicate was nevertheless formed and the work was begun. The task of cutting a waterway proved much harder than was expected, but in time all obstacles were removed and the canal was constructed. To the merchants and traders of southern Europe the canal is bound to prove of immense service, since by passing through it their vessels can reach in a few hours points which it formerly took them several days to reach. All the maritime countries of Europe have cordially welcomed the canal and therefore there is every reason to believe that the money and labor spent on it will bear good fruit.

(Engineering Enterprise of Far-Reaching Commercial Importance.)

India's Immense Tea Crop.

The half million acres cultivated in tea in Indian produces 190,000,000 pounds, the investment being about $100 an acre. The labor required is 13 persons to the acre. One pound of Indian tea will produce seven and one-half gallons of tea of a given strength, while the tea of Ceylon will produce but five gallons.

Music Preserves the Hair.

Musicians, as a rule, have excellent heads of hair. In the prime of life the musician's hair flourishes most, and in every 100 music devotees only one hairless head is met with; while in other professions about 11 in every 100 are bald.

BURIAL CUSTOMS CHANGE.

The Gloom of Funerals Has Been Relieved to a Degree in Later Years.

"It used to be thought almost sacrilegious to attempt in any way to dispel the suggestion of death and gloom at a funeral, and every cortege, no matter what the social or financial condition of the people, had to have its plumbre hearses, coal black horses and general atmosphere of crape and black bordered handkerchiefs," said an undertaker the other day, to a New York Tribune man.

"Fifteen years ago such a sight as a funeral party dressed in bright colors accompanying a body being borne to its last resting place in a blue and silver hearse, as was the case in London recently, would have horrified staid Americans," he continued. "To-day, although they frown upon such an open lack of respect to the dead, the people here are gradually working up to a condition where such sights will be viewed with perfect equanimity, and it can be said with truth that the old fashioned funeral is a thing of the past.

"The absence of that depressing atmosphere and general suggestion of the tomb is nowhere more noticeable than in the house of death itself. Formerly it was the undertaker's duty to repair to the house a few hours before the time set for the funeral and drape everything in the room where the body lay—mirrors, pictures, mantel, windows and the like—with black crape. Daylight was almost wholly excluded, and the entire place wore such a doleful appearance that a person of any imagination and susceptibility could not remain in the house long without having a touch of the blues.

"To-day almost no crape is displayed at the better class of funerals. Even the old-time insignia of death at the front door is replaced in most cases with a wreath of flowers or ivy, while the interior of the house or church is made bright and attractive by the use of flowers, greens, etc. The immediate family of the dead may wear mourning at the funeral, but black or sombre colors are no more in evidence than on other occasions.

"The color of coffins, too, has undergone a change. Plumes are relegated to the country districts. Hearses now have several sets of hangings—black to go with black coffins, gray for corpses of that color, and white for small children. Very often black horses are used when the coffin is black, but gray horses are seen as often as black ones.

"To my mind the most important innovation is noticeable at the cemeteries. Formerly a funeral party had to stand about the grave, no matter how inclement the weather, unprotected from the elements, and often bareheaded. Now things are different. Recently tents have been introduced, and these are spread over the grave and a good size plot of ground surrounding it. Being enclosed on all four sides, those within are protected from the weather as well as from the eyes of the curious.

"Matting is spread on the ground and delicate women can alight from the carriages at the entrance to the tent and enter the vehicles again after the service is over without having touched their feet to the ground. Again, flowers and greens are not thrown in a pile around the grave itself, the earth that is thrown out and the masonry are covered with evergreens or flowers."

MISTAKE OF MANKIND.

It Lies in Doing Only as Well as We Know How, When We Should Do Better.

Doing as well as we know how is ordinarily considered a very creditable performance. One who can honestly say that he has done as well as he knows how is likely to take credit to himself for his doing; and, in passing judgment upon another for his conduct, we are inclined to commend him if he, or if we can say that he has done as well as he knows how. Yet just here is a common mistake of mankind. All of us ought to do as well as we know how. Doing only as well as we know how may be a lack and a failure on our part, says the Detroit Free Press.

Doing better than one knows how, doing better than one's best, is the duty and the practical attainment, of every person who wants to fill his place in the world and help his fellows as he should. One who expects to be limited, in his work and in his endeavors, by the best that he has done, or by the best that others have done, or by what he can do, is practically without the noblest ambition, and certainly without the highest aspirations. To be stopped by the thought of the impossible is to be held within the bounds of the ordinary and the commonplace.

All substantial progress in this world is by doing better than one knows how. Every great explorer and discoverer and inventor and pioneer and master missionary, in all lands and on all seas, in all ages, has secured to the world and to his fellows results and advantages of priceless value, and has proved himself a benefactor of his race, because he was not limited by precedents and possibilities, but determined to do better than his best, better than he knew how.

TEN YEARS IN CONGRESS.

Twenty-Five Veterans in House of Representatives Who Feel Like Having a Good Time.

There are 25 men who began their service in the house in the Fifty-third congress and who have served continuously since and are now entering upon their sixth term. For ten years they have been associated with each other, and the fact that so many beginning at that time should be reelected for five successive times has started some talk about the formation of a club, something like the Tantalus club, which should give a dinner once or twice during the winter. The difficulty with the Tantalus club is that it continues to grow on account of new members.

The Fifty-third Congress club cannot grow and is bound to decrease in numbers. Those who are eligible to the Fifty-third Congress club are Adams, of Pennsylvania; Babcock, of Wisconsin; Bartholdt, of Missouri; Cooper, of Wisconsin; Cooper, of Texas; Cousins, of Iowa; Curtis, of Kansas; Dinsmore, of Arkansas; Dovener, of West Virginia; Gardner, of New Jersey; Gillet, of New York; Gillett, of Massachusetts; Little, of Arkansas; Loudenslager, of New Jersey; McCall, of Massachusetts; McCleary, of Minnesota; Maddox, of Georgia; Mahon, of Pennsylvania; Parker, of New Jersey; Swanson, of Virginia; Tate, of Georgia; Tawney, of Minnesota; Van Voorhis, of Ohio; Wanger, of Pennsylvania, and Williams, of Mississippi.

These men, who were all cubs back in that congress which met first in the summer of 1893 to repeal the silver purchase act, have quite a fondness for one another. Naturally, as new members, they were thrown in each other's society. In that congress they had little to do save to sit back and watch the wheels go round. So engrossed with themselves and the business of the house were the older members that they paid little attention to these new men, who sort of flocked by themselves.

But they are no longer the men who were merely onlookers. One of them, Williams is the minority leader; the other, Tawney, is the republican "whip" and the speaker's right hand man. One, Babcock, has been chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee in five successive and successful campaigns; one, Cooper, of Wisconsin, is chairman of the insular committee. Dinsmore is the ranking minority member of foreign affairs. Nearly every one of them has taken a prominent place in the house.

BRITISH ROYAL MATCH.

Prince Alexander of Teck Soon to Be the Husband of Pretty Princess Alice of Albany.

London society is just now greatly interested in the forthcoming royal wedding. Princess Alice of Albany, the bride-to-be, is the daughter of the late duke of Albany, the sister of the reigning duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the niece of King Edward VII., the cousin of the queen of Holland and the niece of the reigning prince of Waldeck-Pyrmont, and as the wife of Prince Alexander of Teck she will be the sister-in-law of the princess of Wales. She is already a cousin of the prince of Wales and was named after the late Queen Victoria's favorite daughter, who married the grand duke of Hesse. Princess Alice was born at Windsor castle February 25, 1883, and is lady of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert and, like her mother, has been engaged in many good offices since her childhood. It is interesting to recall the fact that her fiancee, Prince Alexander of Teck, has Hungarian blood in his veins through his grandmother. The late duke of Teck's father was a prince of the house of Wurtemberg and married Countess Derhedy

SOME MIGHTY APES.

Valuable Collection Recently Presented to Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences.

The Darwinian theory of the descent of man may soon be studied at close range, owing to generosity of a prominent Philadelphian, Dr. Thomas Biddle, who has just returned from Europe with what is believed to be the most complete collection of anthropoid apes ever owned by one person. The specimens were obtained from various sources and collected by the German taxidermist, Mr. [illegible]. Among them is a fine specimen that rarely secured animal, the [illegible]. On account of its immense strength and ferocity when cornered it has been most difficult even to obtain a dead specimen of the gorilla family, it being necessary to risk life in order to track it to its lair in the interior of Africa. The specimen secured by Dr. Biddle was shot by a venturesome German, George Zenker, near the Yaunde station, Western Africa, a little to the north of the equator.

The New York Tribune says that the height of this gorilla is a little over five feet, and the strongest man would probably be a plaything in its hands. To some monkeys, despite their lack of good looks, the expression "cute" may apply, but it is not possible to so describe the gorilla. With his flat nose, enormous jaws and protruding teeth, the thick neck and bulging chest, this ape is far from the human ideal of a handsome animal.

When he can, the gorilla will run from a man, and as no one has been particularly anxious to come to close quarters with him, it is not possible to speak with assurance of his mode of life. It is said that he travels for the most part on all fours, and only rises on his hind legs to resist attack. It is also said that he builds himself a home in the trees.

The collection contains three specimens of the chimpanzee. One is the ordinary chimpanzee, another the bald chimpanzee and the third a variety called the Koola Kamba.

The chimpanzees are more intelligent than the gorilla, and have been trained in captivity to do tricks. Naturalists have been long at odds as to the number of their species, as well as those of the orang-outang, of which a fine specimen is included in the collection presented to the academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia by Dr. Biddle. The specimen presented by Dr. Biddle has a great lateral expansion of the cheeks.

Saved by Toss of Nickel.

The jury in a case of assault with intent to kill, which was tried in Lawrenceville, Ind., reached an agreement in a novel way. They had been out a long time and failed to agree. It was then decided that each juror should put a nickel in a hat, and after the coins were well shaken up, they were to be thrown out upon a table. If there were more heads up than tails, the verdict should be an acquittal. Heads won, and the prisoner, George L. Ryan, was declared innocent.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Stands Up For Her Own Sex

THE twentieth century is considerably more the woman's century than the nineteenth was.

A sure proof of it is the ever increasing spirit of affection and helpfulness from woman to woman. I notice it in things small and great. Lately I entered an express train on the New York elevated road at the going home hour. There was one vacant seat. As I went toward it a six foot man, strong and rosy, shoved in and was about to take it, under my very nose. A woman sat next, with a little space each side of her on the long, benchlike row of seats. Instantly, before the man could deposit his large corpora nity beside her, she shoved over and filled the space so he could not occupy it without sitting upon her lap, and he hardly ventured to do that. This left a place for me on the other side of the lady, and I was not long in filling that place. A broad smile flitted across the faces of the other passengers as the six foot man passed on and stood in the aisle of the car. It certainly served him right, as he attempted to possess himself of the seat although I had entered the car ahead of him. I fear that is a specimen of the average New York city man's treatment of women in public conveyances. But it pleased me more than I can tell you to see how woman thus stood up for her sister woman, even though she had never seen this sister before, probably never would see her again. I observe the like thing almost every day in the street cars, women crowding up, even inconveniencing themselves, so that another woman may not have to hang to a strap with her parcels under her arm. I notice, too, that when a woman with a child in her arms enters a car it is in nearly every case a woman who rises to offer her a seat before any man does so. There is ever growing the great secret sisterhood of woman, bound by no written laws, known only between woman heart and woman heart, the sisterhood whose motto is helpfulness to all the feminine half of the race.

Recently in the rush hours on the platform of an elevated railway station a crowd of New York city men knocked a woman down and trampled upon her.

I have had the pleasure of seeing a new church window just finished by Miss Mary Tillinghast, whom women may proud as America's leading stained glass artist. The figures in this window are exquisite illustrations of form and color. There are three, representing respectively the recording angel, charity and the angel of the resurrection. Consciously or unconsciously Miss Tillinghast embodies in her angels the Swedenborgian teaching that the higher orders of spirits are neither male nor female, but beings blending the characteristics of both sexes.

The profound dicta of writing and preaching men moralists on the subject of women and matrimony remind one of the famous alleged saying of Socrates, "Whether you marry or don't marry, you will regret it."

Miss Carmelita Beckwith manages the "department of publicity" of one of the largest electric lighting and heating companies in America. Her headquarters are in New York. She also edits the company's monthly bulletin and is making it a very handsome and interesting magazine.

A noble and touching example of womanly resourcefulness has been afforded by some of the French nuns thrown out of employment through the disbanding of the schools they taught. There were hundreds of these sisters, and their means of earning a living were gone. They asked for no charity or even sympathy. These heroic women simply announced that they would do domestic work in French families provided they were allowed to wear still the habit of their order and were addressed as "sister" instead of by their first names.

Don't shoot off your mouth prematurely. It is more dangerous than the premature discharge of a cannon.

An association of ladies in London are establishing a new order in the world of domestic service. They have a central home or lodging house for women thoroughly trained in housework. Thence the women go out by the day, working a stated number of hours for a stated price, at the end of the time going back to their home lodging house. The plan is admirable and is slowly becoming popular. Under it a family gets rid of lodging the girls who do the housework, and the girls themselves have a home and can call their souls their own when they are off duty. This system will certainly be adopted in cities in the future.

It is a glorious augury for the twentieth century that in the first years of it the greatest scientific discovery in fifty years was made by a woman, Mme. Curie, who first separated radium from pitchblende. It is true her husband is entitled to part of the credit, for the two worked together, but the wife first made the actual discovery.

There is a disadvantage in being a queen. Everybody knows her age, and her birthday has to be celebrated every year.

FUR NOVELTIES.

Some Striking Ones Despite Lateness of the Season.

"Is the season for novelties in furs over?" I recently asked a salesman in one of the largest fur houses in the country.

"Not by any means, ma'am," was the reply. "The artists are getting out new designs every hour, and the season will last, especially for neck pieces, way into April, possibly to May, if the weather stays cold, as it sometimes does, you know."

I did know, and so took particular notes on the fur question.

A stole cape collar is of pure ermine, cut so that it reaches up high in the back of the neck and rounds off in front. The stole ends have rich chenille tassels of pale green with black dots. The ends are pointed, with a tassel. The particular effect of this is found in the arrangement of the tails of the ermine. Ermine tails are slim and white next the body with jet black tips. These tails are so placed that they form regular set figures on the pure white, and the effect is very pleasing. Two tassels are put on the front near the neck, fastening invisibly.

A wide stole shape has the upper portion of ermine and the rest of fine sable, the ends being pointed, but not otherwise ornamented. Another one has the cape high in the back of the neck, but open in front, and the tabs are rounded. There is an inset of ermine across the shoulders, and the rounded effect of the tabs is of ermine. The muff to carry with this is a rich affair, with the sable cut in notches on the upper part and the ermine below. There are fancy breloques at the top of the muff.

Chinchilla is used for many muffs and stole and other shaped collars. Cunning little four-in-hand collars made of this fur and also of seal and of lamb are worn by the smart set and are undeniably fetching. Deep stole collars of chinchilla sometimes have big balls covered with fur at the ends, while others are quite untrimmed. It is like painting the lily and burnishing the sunbeams to add anything to this exceedingly pretty fur. Most coats and jackets have storm collars and wide revers of some deeper fur, for it is only the close furs that are used to make the coats. But few of the neck pieces have storm collars at all. I did see one jet black fur cape which came to a point in front, and this had a flat ermine collar scalloped and with short tabs over it, and this was so arranged that the ermine portion could be raised to form such protection as desired. Many of these capes narrow in at the waist and spread widely above and below.

There are many less exclusive and less expensive small furs. They are almost a necessity to everyday requirements. The neat and pretty walking suits for this season of the year are made of cloth, cheviot, silbeline and no end of other woolens, besides the firm favorite, velutina. They need but the presence of a small fur neck piece to look quite warm and wintry enough even to go skating in.

A rich and heavy granite suiting costume in the very dark brown so liked just now has the skirt trimmed richly with black hercules braid and the short box coat done in the same way. Braid is now considered the best of all dress trimmings. It is made in so many styles and materials that it is adapted to everything from batiste to velvet. Even some fur garments are trimmed with it.

So this suit is trimmed with the braid in the manner shown in the illustration, and a handsome suit it makes. With it a small flat fur piece is worn. It may be of any of the furs with a tinge of brown, but the handsomest for this purpose is the Alaska sable, which seems to lend itself to every color and fights with none. A small round muff is made to match this, but if you want to be right "in the swim" you should get your stoutest relative to sit on your muff all day. The flat ones are the latest, not so large as those of the days of 1830, after which we seem now to be casting wistful eyes so far as fashion is concerned.

When one purchases a fur cape or stole or full set at any reputable fur house a piece of fur to match is given with the garments so that it may be added to the hat and thus carry out the general color scheme.

Fur is a really refined and an elegant addition to any winter hat. It is applied now simply in the shape of a band. I heard that mice skins are now used in place of moles, which are becoming very scarce.

THE GOOD WOMAN.

The Rare Thing Seen in This World Through Her Nearsightedness.

"I think Mrs. H. is my ideal of a good woman. She is as ignorant as a baby of the real wickedness of the world."

The man looked at the speaker with a curious expression in his eyes. "And do you know, my dear lady, that she is just the type of good, narrow minded woman who does lots of harm in this world?"

She could not repress an amazed expression, and he hastened to explain: "Don't misunderstand me. I like Mrs. H. immensely. I respect her for her good works, but she is not my ideal of a good woman. My ideal must be broad minded, with the knowledge which comes from experience and discrimination. Hers must not be the goodness of ignorance or of sheltered life. Why, I could tell you of cases where Mrs. H.'s point of view, narrow in its very righteousness, has caused serious family trouble, where she has passed criticisms on people who were not doing as she thought they ought to do, and these criticisms have really affected their social standing."

HER VIEWS ON LIFE.

"I am sure she never says anything about anybody unless the person deserves it!"

"Well, I have known her to pass judgment in several cases where the victims did not deserve judgment, but she thought they did. I will do her this credit—she doesn't realize she is saying these things. They come out quite naturally in the course of conversation as a part of her views on life and things in general. The trouble is that her views and ideas of life are not infallible and are even less so than those of the average person, because she really does know so little about the heart throb and pulse of life. She regards weakness as crime and temptation as sin. Well and good, but she has no right to give her opinions on the subject. She ought to remember the 'judge not that ye be not judged' of the Scriptures and be glad for her part that she has none of the turmoils and hardships and temptations of life for which she blames others. It is such a hard world, after all, that the best of us ought not to be too good to extend universal charity."

QUAINT ROOMS.

A Billiard Room Which Is Artistic and Unique.

Woodwork is now being stained every conceivable shade, particularly in browns and greens, and every effort is being made to give the most prosaic rooms an artistic and even unusual appearance.

The illustration shows this idea carried out in an up to date billiard room.

DULL GREEN WOODWORK.

The woodwork is dull green. The wide frieze combines several shades of green and red with a deep cream. The ceiling is of this deep cream. The fireplace is green tiled, with a copper grate. The quaint recess holds a leather upholstered seat. The rug is Persian, and the floor is of course of hard wood highly polished.

R. DE LA BAUME.

A WOMAN FARMER.

She Has Cultivated Her Acres at Vineland Forty Years.

He would be called a crank in our time, the large brained, great hearted man, Charles K. Landis, founder of Vineland, N. J. Probably he and his pioneers in forming a model town were called cranks in 1861, but at any rate their queer notions resulted in the upbuilding of the most beautiful and industrially productive town in this country. Mr. Landis bought a tract forty-eight miles square and divided it into farm plots of from five to twenty-five acres. He let it be known that he would sell these plots to intelligent, moral people who wanted homes combining rural and urban advantages. He desired to draw to his model home town persons of clean lives who had ideals they desired to work out in peace and freedom, rendering account through honest labor for all they received.

Mr. Landis was fortunate in bringing to Vineland individuals of ideals like himself. Men and women, strong, noble souled, who saw through the humbug of common life and desired to escape it, came to him. Many, pitiful, conforming common life held no resting place for them. It ridiculed them, persecuted them even. They gathered themselves together and fled to Vineland, the place of refuge for persons who thought for themselves.

In nearly every case those who loved freedom found there was something, there was much, in their ideals. The ideal of combined city-country existence wrought itself into manifestation in Vineland. Today it is a forty-eight mile square tract of blooming, fruitful orchard and garden, and in the whole farm city no intoxicating liquors are or ever have been sold.

Among the pioneer women of beautiful Vineland was Miss Susan Fowler. She was not strong in health, and the world of petty conventionality forced upon her much that she would fain be rid of. One of the things was long, heavy skirts. She yearned for the free use of her lower limbs, the lightness and freedom that release from petticoats gives. Miss Fowler sped to Vineland and clad herself in bloomers. None said her nay, none even ridiculed her. Were they not all in one way or another prisoned souls, searching for freedom? A crank may not ridicule another crank, may he?

Miss Fowler took a fruit and vegetable farm and began the productive tilling of it. She wore her knickers in peace and comfort, and does so still, and raised great quantities of Vineland's famous product—sweet potatoes. She planted a peach and apple orchard and in due time ate the fruit thereof and was married much of it. She did and does to this day with her own hands all the work, light and heavy, upon that patch of ground, and in the doing of it health, nature's royalest gift to living creatures, came back to her. In the eyes of the woman whose skirt is a sweeper Miss Fowler's bloomers are not pretty. But beauty of attire is a matter of taste, and that dress is handsomest which is best adapted to the wearer's use. In her convenient bloomers Miss Fowler, forty years ago, became very handy at trimming fruit trees, digging potatoes, loading her fruits and vegetables in a wagon, mounting its seat and driving to market, independent as a boy.

Yet has this Vineland woman farmer not spent all her time in the grinding toil supposed to be the working agriculturist's lot. Vineland soil is fertile, and Miss Fowler has farmed it intelligently. She has had especial objection to having "a man around" even to work for her. It is said the one anxiety of her life, now at the age of eighty, is that she will decline physically so as to be unable to do all the farm work herself, and at the close of her long and independent career at last be obliged to "have a man around." If this would distress her let us hope she will be spared it.

Generous crops have rewarded Miss Fowler's up to date farming, and she has found time to read and think, also to write. She is a published several books. Through the more than forty years of her lone farm life Miss Fowler has been very good company for herself. Removed from the pointry-like cackling and chatter of a world she left nearly half a century ago, Susan Fowler has experienced, like Swedenborg and the prophets, the noble joy of thinking out her world problems undisturbed. She is naturally deeply interested in woman questions. She says of it in her quiescent, "now thought seeds." Naturally, too, she finds that the world thinks much of dress and too little of the real life."

Smart Automobile Coats—Fancy Coats Have Loose Back and Front.

The new automobile garments are very smart and no longer suggest the clumsiness of times gone by. Fine leather and fancy wool materials are beautifully fitted and lined with squirrel or mink to keep their wearer warm on long runs.

The cloth coats for street wear are very smartly made with white satin linings to the wide cape collars and dainty little application of lace and empresent, and these are short enough in the back to reveal a wide girdle of contrasting material.

The most elaborate and beautiful braidings appear on many of the new broidery. The wide cavalier cuffs are being revived, and in general any cuff is fashionable which allows a frill of lace to fall over the hand.

Very fancy coats hanging loose both back and front are the smart things at models. The buttons also form a large item when one is considering the cost of a suit.

Feather boas and muffs and also muffs of crushed chiffon are among the half season fads. Stoles made of every possible material will also be prominent features of smart spring dressmaking. They are planned to match the gowns with which they are worn.

In the cut is shown a very smart auto coat of gray and white checked goods. It is lined with gray and white squirrel. The auto cap matches and has a gray chiffon veil attached.

ORNATE UNDERWEAR.

Chemises and Nightgowns Which Are Creations—Dainty Stockings.

The more ornate styles are not simply confined to outer garments. Underwear is also being rendered fancy in a multitude of ways. The nightgowns, many of them, have beautiful deep berthas of lace knotted most elaborately at the left side with bows and rosettes of pale blue or pink ribbon. The bottom of these nightgowns often boasts a full ruffle, and the sleeves are miracles of daintiness, with their insertions and puffed fullness.

Chemises are masses of crisscross lace and medallion effects across the bust, and the petticoat part is most fancifully frilled.

The most beautiful stockings are of sheer silk embroidered with roses or other flowers to correspond with the tint of the stocking. Often pale blue stockings will have a design of pink rosebuds and their delicate green leaves.

The kimono shape is still the favorite for negligees, and beautiful robes are made out of oriental embroideries.

The new petticoats are one mass of ruffles from the knees down, and many petticoats have a full ruffle sewed on to an accordion plaited flounce.

Green is being revived, and this very trying color should be worn with care. Green to look well must be in a good fabric, either chiffon voile, crepe de chine, fine cloth or velvet, and it needs very careful trimming.

The illustration shows a debutante's gown of white mousseline de soie trimmed with ruchings of the same and of white lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A LETTER TO GIRLS.

Concerning Self Respecting Old Maids and Very Young Ladies.

My Dear Girls—Not long ago a woman crowded up and made room for me in a street car already so packed that it seemed impossible to seat another person. I thanked her with sincere appreciation, for the ride was long. Then began an acquaintance. I found the lady was employed in a business house, that she was superintendent of a department and received $20 a week. It was her business to direct the labors of about fifty girls and to see that none of them slighted it. She was Miss Norcross, aged thirty-five.

The girls in the establishment were fifteen to nineteen years old. They received from $4 to $6 a week for their work. Girl-like, those who lived at home spent every cent of this money on clothes, enormous flapping hats, huge muffs, shiny dingle dangles and cheap brooches and pins of various kinds. They liked to go to dances, which was well enough, but they frequently danced nearly all night and came to work next day late and stupid and sleepy, so that they did their tasks laggingly and made mistakes. Miss Norcross was obliged to call them to account, therefore they disliked her, "made fun" of her behind her back—and to her face so far as they dared. They called her "Old Maid" and even "Crossbones," sometimes "Old Maid Crossbones," and she heard them once or twice. They giggled, perpetually giggled, after the way of thoughtless young girls. They considered that the most dreadful thing in this life was to be a single woman. Of course they expected to be married, every one of them, and "get out of work," not knowing in their awful ignorance that the lot of a poor man's wife who is as crude and untrained as they were is nearly always ten times harder than that of the old maid who is earning a comfortable income.

Expecting to marry, these girls adorned themselves in gewgaws and kept their weather eye out morning and evening to catch the men who were to release them from work, as they foolishly imagined. They were not always very fair as to their skin and clothing—in truth, they sometimes hurried to work in the morning with tangled, tumbled hair, but they always wore upon it the huge flapping hat with feathers—of that you may be sure—and they always giggled.

Now, for better or for worse, it is quite natural for a girl to look forward to marriage. It is also natural, if not wise, for her to try to attract men, if she wants a husband. But, girls, answer me this: Do you think it is either gentle, good tempered womanly or polite to "make fun" of a woman only because she is an old maid? One likes to think of girls as sweet, bright creatures whose minds are occupied with pleasant, kindly thoughts, whose manners are always courteous.

Besides, was the lot of the married women they knew so delightful and enviable that the girls I speak of were justified in jeering at Miss Norcross because she was single? The women they knew had been mostly working girls like themselves. They, too, had worn exaggerated hats and squeezed themselves nearly in two at the waists and danced away two or three years of youth in a sort of dream. They were married, and they found themselves fast married and tied, with a string of children hanging to them and not always fancy enough to buy shoes all round. Sometimes even they had drunken husbands. They "lost heart" then, as weak, ignorant women call it, and did not care how they looked any more. They became bad tempered slatterns. They, too, in their youth "made fun" of old maids. Now they envy the neat and tidy single woman who respects herself and is getting on well in the world.

Is there any reason to expect that the fate of the girls who jeered at Miss Norcross will be any different from that of the girls who went before them?

Miss Norcross had to take care of a sickly mother. She began it when she was sixteen and kept it up till her mother died. She had no time to go to balls, and her money had to be spent on the housekeeping. Meantime she mastered the mystery of business, was engaged in and was promoted to her present place. She has now considerable money in bank. But many a time her heart has been made bitter because of the rude and ignorant girls. The time is quite likely to come when, instead of making fun of old maids, they will envy these with all their souls.

WOMEN'S CLUB HOMES

Boston's New Century

AFTER the club women of the smaller towns showed them how, ladies' organizations in the large cities began also to build homes for themselves. One of the handsomest and most completely appointed feminine clubhouses, one which might be a model for all such structures in suburban places, is to be that at Orange, N. J. Its estimated cost, when completed, is $50,000.

But in villages and small towns women may build clubhouses satisfactorily at much less cost than $50,000, keeping in view still the general idea of the Orange structure. Its plan comprises a two story and basement building. In the basement are the heating apparatus, the kitchen and its appurtenances. The first floor has a general assembly hall, holding 600 persons; also committee rooms and a library. On the second floor provision is made for social entertainments. Here is a large ballroom or dining room, with china cabinets, caterer's room and more committee rooms.

The Orange Women's club expects that when its house is finished it will be able to let its halls for occasional entertainments like concerts, lectures and social affairs, thus bringing a considerable annual sum in rentals. The demand for semiprivate halls, conducted under refined auspices, is greater every year with the rapidly growing intelligent and well to do class in America. In incurring debt for constructing a woman's clubhouse its promoters may safely take into account reasonable receipts from this source.

There are two chief ways of raising money to erect a clubhouse. One is to form a stock company and get the necessary funds through subscriptions. Another way is to borrow money outright and trust to the infinite ingenuity of the feminine brain to pay it. For nearly a thousand years women have been able to pay off church debts for men—it would be a pity if now they cannot raise cash for a woman's club home.

The Boston New Century club of women was aided in the construction of its splendid home by the generosity of Hon. Elijah S. Converse, a large brained, chivalrous man, who believed in women's clubs. The New Century club was composed from the beginning of that highest and noblest human blend—the progressive and the conservative. Julia Ward Howe was its first president. It numbers among its members many of the famous literary and intellectual women of New England.

The first step toward getting the clubhouse was to form the Women's Clubhouse corporation, of which Mrs. Isabella A. Potter was made president. She has just concluded her sixth term of service in this capacity. Mrs. Potter was indefatigable in her enthusiasm and her labors. To begin with she was a clear headed woman of exact mental habit, and she learned the business of building a clubhouse and raising the money to pay for it as she went along. More than all, she is of harmonious temperament and with have no squabbles, great or small, in her atmosphere. In one of her reports she puts the operations of herself and her sister directors of the corporation into words worthy of the thoughtful consideration of every clubwoman. Mrs. Potter writes:

"Your directors have been a faithful, able, earnest, harmonious body of workers. Their purpose has been twofold—first, to secure investment for funds which might be accommodated and find a congenial home here; second, to make a profitable investment, for every stockholder may get 4 per cent on the money invested in the stock of this corporation."

The clubhouse was called the New Century building. It is worth $275,000, with a debt that can be paid without trouble. This is because through shrewd management the building began to pay dividends from rentals the day it was opened. That is what women is able to do in a business way when she sets her head to it.

The structure itself is a substantial five story building in the club heart of Boston. Its various beautiful halls are named from prominent club members. There are the Julia Ward Howe hall, the Abba Gould Woolson hall, the Isabella A. Potter hall and others. The dedication of the New Century club home was a great occasion to New England feminine clubdom. That good friend of woman, Governor Bates of Massachusetts, honored himself and the ladies by being present and making a speech.

Russia is angry at America. She's a bear to all nations.

Now that Mr. Bryan has the stage, what will he do with it?—Passaic Daily News.

Collapse.

Before a United States Commissioner at Trenton this week a man named Orestes Alfantes charged Christ Papanikonpoulostchaki and Andrew Likoglidoostes with unlawfully opening letters. According to their names the wisdom of omitting a few letters altogether might wiel have been urged.

The Philadelphia Record says: "Advertising is the sometimes doubtless pays certain business establishments. As an adjunct of newspaper advertising it is profitable to concerns with unlimited capital. It is to be considered, however, that in this immediate neighborhood (or within the field covered by this newspaper here) are millions of purchasers of merchandise, and of these but a very small proportion take magazines, while nearly all are newspaper readers."

We suggest that the ministers of the various denominations tell their congregations their views on the increase liquor license fee agitation. That the proposition to raise the tax was defeated by a tie vote in the Common Council does not mean that the scheme is forever dead. The anti-liquor element of this city rejoiced over the position taken by the Plainfield Ministers' Association when the measure was introduced. There is no doubt that the ministers can produce a wholesome effect by urging the members of the congregations to be alive to the situation. We do not believe that the action of the Common Council on Monday night reflects the sentiment of this community. No reason has yet been advanced why the proposed ordinance was so suddenly killed. What was the reason?

Y. M. C. A. BOYS' EXHIBITION

WORK OF LOCAL LADS AT RAHWAY ASSOCIATION HIGHLY COMMENDED.

The boys of the local Y. M. C. A. have been warmly commended for their excellent work at Rahway Friday night in their exhibition in calesthenic, gymnastics and basket ball. The boys' departments of Rahway and Plainfield Y. M. C. A.'s. participated in the exercises.

The members of the Rahway boys' department opened the programme with an exhibition of calesthenics, dumbbell drill and apparatus work. Plainfield's boys then took the floor and gave a free hand and dumbbell drill and free floor moves. They marched on the floor forming fours with great precision, moving off in quarter circles with the same military effect.

Three sections were formed for apparatus work under the leadership of Norman Loughlin, Walter Caldwell and William Lambert. There were class and individual movements in all the exercises. The closing performance was on the "elephant," a "horse" covered with mats.

A contest was held in hustle half, Rahway winning two straight games. A chariot race was an exciting and amusing feature of the evening's entertainment. In this two boys from each association raced around the hall, each pair with arms over each other's shoulders. Plainfield's pair won the first match, Rahway's the second and the third was a tie, each team claiming victory.

A "human race" was another event that afforded excitement and laughter. The method in this race was for one boy to carry another on his back the length of the floor "swap" places with him and return. Rahway won two out of three of these contests.

Rahway was likewise victorious in basket ball, winning with a regular team against Plainfield's picked five, by a score of 14 to 2. Plainfield's line-up in the first half was Loughlin and Lambert, forwards; Alpaugh, centre; Caldwell and Stern, guards. In the second half, Vail, Martin and Freeman went in as substitutes.

Wm. Patterson Dead.

William Patterson, a former Plainfielder, well-known as a member of the Plainfield Choral Union, died on Sunday at his home in Upper Montclair. He was sixty-seven years old and is survived by a wife and nine children.

Claude Vision, of Westfield, an expert in the manufacture of leaded and art glass, has moved to this city, and has engaged with James Manning in this business. The firm is located in the Manning flats on Central avenue.

AMUSEMENTS.

When "The County Chairman" was produced at Wallack's Theatre, New York, with its quaint story of village life in the Middle West, the public had grown tired of risque French farces, musical comedies, society dramas and emotional stories of the women with a past, and was ready to take up with avidity this thoroughly wholesome and otherwise delightful work. George Ade's comedy has met with a degree of success not recorded in favor at any other play this year. It has indeed served to pack the theatre every night with audiences whose peals of laughter can be heard across the street.

In "The Secret of Polichinelle" at the Madison Square Theatre, James K. Hackett has a play which has scored the bull's eye. The play is by Pierre Wolff, admirably adapted by Miss Mildred Aldrich, and is by all odds the most tender, witty and delightful little comedy that the town has seen in years. A play so sweet and fragrant as this rewards one's failing faith in the modern playwright. Already it is being played in six different languages in Europe, and in each has scored a triumphant success. The reason is simple enough. The play is close to nature and so human that it draws forth both tears and laughter at the same time. In some respects the cast which Mr. Hackett has got together at the Madison Square is superior to the French original.

The Admirable Crichton is the attraction at the Lyceum Theatre, Forty-fifth street and Broadway. Wilton Lackaye, who achieved fame in Secret Service, takes the leading part and he is supported by a great company of clever actors. The show is one that holds the audience absorbingly interested from the time the curtain goes up at the beginning of the first act until the finale. Evenings at 8:10.

Virginia Earl has never made a greater hit than in Sergeant Kitty, which is now drawing crowded houses at Daly's Theatre at Broadway and Thirtieth street. It is a merry opera, such as seldom equaled on Broadway. The prosperity Girls is enjoying promises to continue until the end of the run. Evenings at 8:10. Saturday matinee at 2.

All authorities on theatrical amusements in New York agree that Klaw & Erlanger's production of the latest Drury Lane spectacle, "Mother Goose," at the New Amsterdam Theatre, is the greatest and most gorgeously staged attraction ever seen in this country. All claims made for it in advance have been more than verified and it can be positively stated that no amusement enterprise of this magnitude has ever been seen in America. "Mother Goose" presents a company of principals, ballet, chorus and auxiliaries numbering over 400 people. The story, which is mainly comic, is told by such well known comedians as Joe Cawthorne in the title role; Harry Bulger, Clifton Crawford, William H. McCart and Pat Rooney, Jr., and such talented artists as Viola Gillette, Leila McIntyre, Aimee Angeles, Edith St. Clair, Adele Archer, Marion Garson and Hattie Waters.

"The Girl From Kays" is the greatest musical show New York has ever had. It has cot the big town crazy and is drawing packed houses to the Herald Square Theatre, where it is now approaching its 100th performance. This musical comedy provides the completest evening's entertainment one could desire. It delights all classes, and is making a record of triumph which succeeding musical comedies will find it very hard to equal. "The Girl from Kay's" is a great big medley of music, mirth and song with a dazzling back-ground of the prettiest young women the stage affords all wearing the most gorgeous and expensive gowns. The gown display alone is sufficient to attract and hold women theatre-goers. The fun of the piece begins at 8 o'clock and for over three hours it continues, a merry and melodious torrent broken at frequent intervals by the roars of laughter of the audience.

NEW BUSINESS HOUSE.

Marcus Hoyt and Charles Woolston to Form a Partnership.

Marcus Hoyt, who has been employed by M. Weinberger, the West Front street clothier, for some time past, will soon form a partnership with Charles Woolston for the purpose of conducting a merchant tailor ing business on North avenue. A building suitable for such a business will be erected on North avenue between T. Timbo & Co.'s restaurant and E. B. Maynard's barber shop.

WINNERS OF CONTESTS AT ST. MARY'S FAIR

Snug Sum is Realized at the Bazaar Conducted by Baseball Club in T. A. B. Hall.

CLOSING ATTRACTION

MISS MARY EGAN CAPTURES A GOLD WATCH IN A CONTEST.

Meerschaum Pipe is Awarded to John Hurley—Clinton A. Shannon the Man Who Successfully Supervised the Entire Affair.

Mt. Mary's baseball team fair closed in the T. A. B. Hall on West Fourth street, last night, after a most successful week's run in which the committee reports that a sufficient amount was realized which will warrant erecting a suitable grandstand and an enclosed grounds next season besides adding a snug sum to add to the fund necessary in securing the pick of professional twirlers from Hoboken and Jersey City. A closing attraction was the popular songs sung last night by Raphael Troice, of New York.

The result of the contests was perhaps the main event of interest at the closing night. Miss Mary Egan was announced to be the winner of the women's gold watch in a contest. John Hurley won the handsome meerschaum pipe. Harry DeMesa won a parlor table lamp; Miss Lizzie Crosby, dress suit case; Miss Mamie Meade, lemonade set; John Flynn, umbrella; Miss Katherine Egan, women's umbrella; Mrs. James Day, Newport scarf; Miss May Neighbor, Elk pillow; Miss Helen Callahan, willow rocker.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was Clinton A. Shannon, chairman; Richard Birmingham, secretary; Henry Wieneke, treasurer; James O'Keeffe, Thomas M. Inerny, Victor Troice, John King and James Strapp, who were assisted by a number of enthusiastic "fans," who supported the team last year. These young women presided at the various tables and who took part in the chaneing: Misses Forrestell, Mrs. James Day, Miss Mary McCauley, Misses Kane, Miss Annie Fistly, Misses Burke, Miss Katherine Ryan, Misses Lawler, Miss Winnie Kanes, Misses Birmingham, Mrs. Bray, Miss Mamie Clark, Miss Lynch, Miss Helen Callahan, Misses Walsh, Miss Anna Kiely, Miss Agnes Egan, Miss Mamie Whalen, Miss Julia Keenan, Misses Hanlon, Miss Mamie Higgins, Miss Mamie Meade, Miss Rosia, Miss Mamie Coster, Miss Rose Creager, Miss Margaret McCarthy, Miss Mary Egan, Miss Nellie Colter and Miss Mamie Carney.

AN EXHILERATING DRAG-HUNT

JOLLY SPORT ENJOYED BY A NUMBER OF PLAINFIELDERS.

There was a drag-hunt on Saturday afternoon which afforded good sport to those who took part in it. There was enough snow on the ground to make good footing for the horses and the hounds followed the scent well. The first part of the run was over G. P. Mellick's land and out to A. G. Beckstein's on Park avenue, where a check of about ten minutes was made. Then the hounds being laid on the scent again, there was a delightful spin across country through Col. Holly's property and on over the old golf course to Plainfield avenue.

Those riding were C. C. Marshall, W. B. deHaven, C. E. B. Bellows, Capt. and Mrs. Mason Patrick, of West Point; Miss Noe, Westfield; B. A. Shebbeare, New York; Dr. M. O'M. Knott and Archibald Mair, whip. Mrs. M. O'M. Knott with Miss Palmer from New York, followed along the roads in a sleigh and saw a good deal of the run, the scent having been laid for some distance within sight of the road.

There will be another hunt Lincoln's birthday at 10 o'clock in the morning, the meet to be held on Watchung avenue opposite the Crescent Avenue church. It is hoped that more people will be tempted to join in the run.

EVENING AT CARDS.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Entertained Members of the Bridge Whist Club.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., of Stelle avenue, entertained the Bridge Whist Club, of which they are members, on Saturday night. The usual features were enjoyed and those present were present: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Miss Munger, Mr. and Mrs. Francis deL. Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mr. and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, James W. DeGraff and Harry Munger. Prizes are not played for by the members of this club.

CENTRAL ROAD'S PLAN FOR NEW FERRY HOUSE

Outline of Scheme for Building Structure at Foot of Twenty-Third St., N. Y.

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

FOUR RAILROAD COMPANIES TO USE THE PROPOSED BUILDING.

Ferry House to be Double-Decked—New Station Will Bring Shopping District Within Convenient Reach of Road's Patrons.

Patrons of the Central Railroad of New Jersey are shortly to have the convenience of a ferry which will land them in the upper portion of New York. The location decided upon is at the foot of West Twenty-third street and a frontage of 100 feet has been secured upon the North River. Work has already been commenced and will be pushed with the greatest possible dispatch. The improvement contemplated is of such an extensive character that the date of its completion cannot be foretold accurately, but the time for which the contractors are striving is the latter part of this year.

This new station will bring the shopping district and the theatre section within easy reach of the road's patrons and at the same time it will be most convenient station for people residing in the upper section of the city or for the uptown hôtel guests.

Four railroads and the city of New York will benefit by this new improposing and convenient entrance to the city. Ranged along the water front side by side will be the ferries of the Pennsylvania, Erie, Lackawanna and New Jersey Central systems, the last named being the furthest downtown. Instead of each road having a distinctive ferry house, arrangements have been made by which all the structures will harmonize in general proportions and architectural treatment, and to this end a single architect, Kenneth M. Murchison, Jr., has been assigned to make the plans for all the buildings.

The ferry house will be double-decked, with provision for loading and discharging passengers from both decks of the boats. There will be two waiting-rooms, one on the main floor, fifty by sixty feet, and one on the upper floor, forty by fifty feet. The lobby will be about forty by seventy feet, and there will be ample and commodious ticket and baggage accommodations, while on the second floor will be offices for some of the railroad company's employes.

It is the intention of the city to acquire the entire block bounded by Twenty - second and Twenty - third streets and Twelfth and Thirteenth avenues, and transform this into a fine approach or esplanade. By this means the ferry will open on a square of about 350 by 600 feet.

Another convenience which will be much appreciated by arriving passengers is an immense shed of iron and glass that is to be wide, known as marquise, which will extend along the front of the ferry house and under which carriages or surface cars may be taken without entering the open. In inclement weather this will add much to the comfort of travelers.

The Metropolitan Street Railway Company is now making its plans to adapt its service to the new conditions, and it is probable that four or five lines of surface cars will converge here. From every point of view the proposed improvement means a great deal for the traveling public. Commuters from nearby places especially will welcome the new method of reaching the city. Many New York residents who have cast longing eyes at the charming points along the New Jersey Central, but have been deterred from making their homes there, because their interests centered in the upper portion of New York, will thus have the last objection removed.

First Negro Voter Dead.

Thomas Peterson, said to be the first colored man to vote in the United States, under the fifteenth amendment to the federal Constitution, giving his race the right of suffrage, is dead at his home in Perth Amboy. Peterson was born in Piscataway township, near New Market, of slave parents owned by the Mundy family, a branch of which lives today in this city.

Stenographic Party.

A number of North Plainfield young people enjoyed a sleigh ride Saturday night to Dog Corners. The committee in charge of the ride was composed of Jacob Muldosky, George Marsh, Louis Green, Louis Clark, and Fred Carpenter.

T. A. B. Reception.

Invitations have been issued for a reception to be given by the T. A. B. Society in its hall on Lincoln's birthday. The committee in charge of the affair is Richard Birmingham, Frank McInerny and John Carney.

PYTHIANS' DANCE DREW A BIG CROWD

Jolly Time at the Casino Enjoyed by at Least Five Hundred Persons.

THE VISITING KNIGHTS

VAUDEVILLE PERFORMANCE A FEATURE OF THE AFFAIR.

Brig.-Gen. Hitchcock and Staff, of Newark, and Delegations from Dunellen, Somerville, Elizabeth and Others Places There.

Everybody enjoyed himself Monday, at the first annual military ball and entertainment given by Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. P., at the Casino. There were five to six hundred people in attendance, among them many from Elizabeth, Somerville and Dunellen, as well as August Riebstein, of No. 5 Company, of New York, Brig. Gen. Hitchcock and staff, of Newark and delegations from companies in Jersey City, Brooklyn and New York.

There was amusement for everybody according to his taste. Those who preferred to listen to songs and witness vaudeville "stunts" had their wants anticipated. Those who were fond of eating were amply provided for with an elaborate luncheon by Thomas Timbo. Those who wished could dance their fill to the excellent music of Eugene O'Reilley's orchestra.

The vaudeville programme was provided by a combination of local and professional talent. W. N. Runyon was pianist and general accompanist. The Euterpean quartette, composed of Elmer D. Cutting, E. Maxwell Honeyman, Sydney E. Titsworth and Isaac Allen, sang several selections. Mr. Cutting, with Clifford Braider as accompanist, sang three illustrated songs, "Louisiana Home," "Down on the Farm," and the "City of Sighs and Tears." The lantern slides were operated by Charles Vail. This part of the entertainment closed with selections by Melvin Shackleford and Charles Simerson, professional vocalists and banjoists.

Dancing was continued until early morning.

The committee in charge consisted of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Phillip Jahn and Elmer D. Cutting. The floor was in charge of William Feiring. John H. Cose, Harry Kean and William Baker contributed valuable services as assistants.

MRS. FRANK HEDDEN IS DEAD

TAKEN SUDDENLY ILL AN OPERATION IS PERFORMED, BUT WITHOUT AVAIL.

Mrs. Frank Hedden, of 402 Central avenue, died Sunday morning following a short illness. She was taken suddenly ill Saturday afternoon while in M. O. VanArsdale's shoe store in East Front street and was moved to her home at once. Early in the evening an operation was performed by Dr. T. H. Tomlinson and Dr. E. W. Hedges, but the patient was too weak to rally and death resulted from internal hemorrhage.

Mrs. Hedden was a Miss Annabelle Parker and was the daughter of Mrs. Lizzie Parker, who resided with her. She had been a resident of Plainfield for many years. She is survived by a husband and a daughter, Miss Olive Marguerite Hedden, a mother and a sister, Mrs. Hubbard, the latter of New York.

GYPSY'S QUEEN'S BODY HERE

REMAINS OF OCTOGENERIAN IN HILLSIDE'S RECEIVING VAULT.

Mrs. Sibbie Risly, known throughout the East and West as the "Gypsy Queen" of the Riley-Harrison-Cooper tribe of gypsies, died on Saturday in Philadelphia at the age of 80 years. For some time past she had been quite feeble and her death was not unexpected. She was the mother of a large number of children composing the members of this tribe of gypsies, many of them marrying.

The remains were brought to this city late Saturday night and placed in the receiving vault at Hillside, there to remain until spring, at which time all of the members of the tribe will gather in this city and hold funeral services in accordance with the rites peculiar to the tribe.

Lecture to Aid Hospital.

Tickets have been issued for a Parsifal lecture here by Ulysis Albert Buhler, at the residence of Mrs. George A. Chapman on Stelle avenue. The lecture will be given Saturday evening, February 13, at 8:30. The proceeds will be donated to the Muhlenberg Hospital.

HISTORIC BANNER PRESENTED TO STATE

Plainfielders Witnessed Ceremony at Trenton, Speeches Being Made in State House.

GEN. DRAKE'S REMARKS

GOVERNOR MURPHY AND SENATOR KEAN REPLY.

Story of the Old Flag—General's Party Entertained by Wilkes Post—About Two Hundred Were Present.

General J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, presented to the State Monday the first American flag unfurled on secession soil during the Great Rebellion. The formal ceremony took place in the Governor's room, in the State House, at Trenton, in the presence of 200 persons, among whom were a number of Plainfielders including former City Judge W. R. Codington, Collector Frank H. Smith, former President of Common Council James F. Buckle Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, and Wm. Newcorn, Esq.

Silas Dewey Drake, of Lincoln, a brother of General Drake, carried the old flag into the room and the speech of presentation was made by the Elizabeth editor. He said:

"Governor Murphy—A few survivors of the Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Militia, called into the service of the United States by the first proclamation of the immortal Lincoln, accompany me tonight to entrust to your official keeping the staff and colors used by that command during the first campaign of the war for the Union.

"The colors, made by the dainty hands of patriotic women of Trenton in April, 1861, and originally intended for Company C, Wilkinson Guards, were formally presented by them to the Third Regiment the day previous to its departure for the defense of the National Capital. The ceremony took place in front of the residence of Mr. Frederick Wilkinson in East State street, and was witnessed by a large concourse of people.

"This sacred relic of troublous times, long since happily passed, has the distinction of being the only home-made flag used by a New Jersey regiment during the Civil War, and, while it did not wave in the forefront of battle during our brief but important term of service, owing to a lack of opportunity, it was the first Union regimental color unfurled on Virginia soil at the head of what soon after became the Army of the Potomac May 24, 1861.

"Lieutenant Franklin S. Mills, of Company D, Third Regiment, correspondent of the Trenton True American, after the advance of our troops into Virginia, makes this statement in his letter to that paper:

"'* * * The first American flag unfurled on secession ground was the flag carried by the Third Regiment, and Ensign Drake, who carried it, planted it.'

"Upon the muster out of the regiment, in Trenton, a few days after the Battle of Bull Run, I deposited the colors, which I had the honor to bear throughout the campaign, in the house of the America Hose Company, which organization I had commanded for several years.

"In 1875 the America company, en route to the eastern states on a pleasure excursion, stopped at Elizabeth, and in the presence of a vast crowd of people, Hon. William Barton, on behalf of the company, in eloquent words, presented me with the colors.

"Since that time the relic, although in my possession, has been proudly borne by worthy members of the Veteran Zouaves of Elizabeth in their triumphal pleasure tours including their trip across the American Continent to San Francisco in 1886.

"An ancient historian relates that the Romans erected monuments upon hills to celebrate the deeds of their heroes, and that the parents of Roman youth, in bidding them study the inscriptions carved in enduring marble, told them, too, would have monuments erected to their memory, and the records of their lives carved upon them if they emulated the virtues and practiced the examples of those who have gone before.

"And so, Governor, we trust, will this old and tattered flag be an inspiration to those who come after us—an incentive for all to love our country and manfully defend its beneficent institutions.

"Having conceded that this color, to which I have been so much attached for nearly forty-three years, should repose with those of other New Jersey regiments in the Capitol, where it can best be preserved and exhibited as a patriotic object lesson, I take great pleasure my comrade, in transferring it to your custody."

Governor Murphy responded, accepting the gift on behalf of the State, and he was followed by United States Senator John Kean, who had come on from Washington. Aaron Wilkes Post, of Trenton, entertained the General and his party.

BUILDING INSPECTOR FINDS UNSAFE EDIFICE

Board of Trustees of First M. E. Church to Comply With Order for Some Changes.

THE IMPROVEMENTS

VESTIBULE STEPS AND STAIRCASE NEED TO BE REMODELED.

As Soon as Change Is Made Congregation Can Get Out of Building Quickly in Case of Fire—To Commence Work at Once.

T. O. Dosne, fire chief and building inspector, is continuing his campaign against unsafe public buildings in this city. About a week ago he requested J. W. Jackson, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the First M. E. church, to see to it that some different arrangement is made in the steps leading from the church and in the staircase leading from the church balcony. The Board has hastened to comply with the Chief's wishes and has instructed Oscar S. Teal, of Newark, an architect who formerly lived here, to draw up plans for necessary alterations.

Chief Doane said yesterday that the steps in the vestibule of the First M. E. church would certainly prove a death trap in case of a sudden rush of an audience following an panic. The steps are semi-circular in shape and it is difficult for one leaving the church to see them. It would be impossible for a number of people in a sudden rush for exit to clear the steps safely. Outside the vestibule doors, the steps leading to the sidewalk are as safe as possible.

The change that Chief Doane suggests is the building of a platform that will remove all steps in the vestibule, the steps outside to lead from it directly.

Another source of danger in the church, says the Chief, is the winding staircase that leads from the gallery and this "must be eliminated."

When these two alterations are made, said the Chief, the church will be safe, as the exits are sufficient in number and breadth. At present, however, the conditions are "more than dangerous."

Chief Doane was asked if he knew of other churches in the city that required similar changes and replied in the negative.

Architect Teal visited the First M. E. church Saturday. He did not announce his plans. The Board of Trustees has done all in its power to expedite the alterations.

NEWARK TEAM WON THE GAME

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. AGGREGATION DEFEATED AT BASKET BALL.

Lack of familiarity with the floor, poor luck in throwing baskets and generally inferior team work were responsible for Plainfield's defeat Saturday at the hands of Newark. The Y. M. C. A. fives of the two cities met on Newark's floor for their second game. The score was 23 to 9.

Newark's passing was excellent and her play much speedier than Plainfield's Smith, of Plainfied, dislocated the finger of his left hand before the end of the first half. Neal made a pretty long distance shot for a goal, but it was disallowed because of a foul made by one of his team mates

The score: Newark—Stager and Long, forwards; Jones, centre; Pollard and Dalrymple, guards. Plainfield—Hand, Smith and Denton, forwards; Scull and Cahoone centre; Heinecke, Neal and Scull, guards. Goals from the floor for Plainfield made by Hand, Scull and Smith. Goals from fouls, Heinecke, Denton, 2. Referee—C. B. Morse. Umpire—Myers, of Newark,. Timekeeper—Wilson. Scorer—Pittinger.

ALIS' BALL TEAM COMPLETED

OPENING GAME ON DIAMOND TO BE PLAYED MAY 23.

The baseball committee of the Alis Club has now completed its teams for the coming season, the only vacancy, that of a second baseman, having just been filled. P. J. Murphy, who plays second base for "Kid" Carney's team in Brooklyn, has been secured to play that position for Alis. He has the reputation of being an exceptionally fast base runner and a strong batter.

The season will be opened on Saturday, May 23, and a schedule will soon be announced. Inquiries from the best teams in the State for games have been received and the management is endeavoring to arrange, among other games, a series of three with Orange A. C., Trenton Y. M. C. A., and the Roebling team of Trenton, all strong teams.

MOTORMAN MEETS DEATH

Vincent Gulick, of the Borough, is Killed in Trolley Accident on W. Front St.

CAR CRASHES INTO TREE

Clarence R. Brokaw and M. A. Higgins Slightly Injured—Car Suddenly Leaves Track and Motorman is Powerless to Stop It.

Vincent Gulick, of 15 Park place, North Plainfield, motorman of Car No. 76 from Elizabeth bound for Dunellen, was instantly killed last Sunday, this car leaving the track on East Front street, crashing into a large tree in front of Roth & Company's butcher shop, and evidently throwing Gulick against the pane of glass in the vestibule and off the car. His neck was broken and his leg severely cut. No one else was seriously injured. The car left the Watchung avenue stand at 6:22 and the accident happened two or three minutes later.

Clarence R. Brokaw, of West Front street, was thrown from the back platform and badly bruised. His arm was twisted and it was at first thought that he had broken it, but examination by Dr. J. H. Johnson who had been summoned, showed that the injury was not serious. M. A. Higgins, of West Front street, was badly shaken up and taken to his home in a carriage. Other passengers were shaken up by the force of the impact of the car against the tree.

Ernest Jones, of 709 South avenue, suffered two broken fingers. He continued after the accident on his way to Dunellen, where he fainted and was taken home. He was considerably bruised.

Exactly what caused the car to leave the track is not known. Division Supreintendent Brown told a Daily Press reporter that the cause of the accident was a mystery to him. It might have been due to the fact that the frost in leaving the ground had caused a depression in the tracks. The conductor, Theodore Stansbury, could not explain the trouble.

The most likely theory advanced was that something was wrong with the car itself. A local trolleyman said this morning that he thought one of the wheels had broken or had a broken flange. Passengers on the car had noticed that something was wrong. The car would "buck" when stopped or started.

It was said also that one of the chains that attaches to the king-bolt of the car may have been broken.

A fifteen-year old boy named Gordon, of Millstone, says that he was standing in the front vestibule in making the trip from Westfield to this city and that Gulick sent him back into the car with he remark that something was wrong and might cause trouble.

The car was not going at a specially high speed according to reports. Conductor Stansbury told a Daily Press reporter that he would estimate the speed at five to five miles an hour. Reports of by-standers who witnessed the accident were conflicting. There were about twelve passengers on the car. The accident delayed traffic two hours although the company sent extra cars out and transferred passengers from one side of the derailed car to the other.

The fact that the car broke the tree in front of Roth's store off at the base is considered remarkable in view of high speed. The tree trunk was decayed. Its presence saved the front of Roth's store.

It is probable that Gulick's death was instantaneous. He was dead when Patrolman Vanderweg picked him up and carried him into the police station. The remains were viewed by County Physican Wescott and taken to Cole's city morgue.

The front of the car was not much damaged. One pane of glass was knocked out, Gulick's head striking against it.

Gulick was twenty-two years old. He was the son of John N. Gulick, of Park place, and was unmarried. He was at one time assistant janitor of the North Plainfield High School and had been employed by J. H. Leggett, the druggist. He had been in the service of the trolley company since last June. He was a member of Somerville Jr. O. U. A. M. and Knights of the Golden Eagle.

INSTRUCTIVE TALKS HEARD BY MEN'S CLUB

Beneficial Form of Entertainment Given by Congregational Church Organization.

A LECTURE TONIGHT

ALEXANDER MILLER, SECRETARY, OF UNION PACIFIC ROAD TO SPEAK.

To Tell the Story of the First Trans-Continental Road—Lectures Already Given, by Joseph E. Morse and Others.

Alexander Miller, of Madison avenue, secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad, will give a talk before the Men's Club of the Congregational church tonight, on the story of the first trans-continental railroad. Owing to his extensive knowledge of railroad work the address should be of peculiar interest. Mr. Miller is an entertaining speaker.

This club, although small in membership, has been very active and a noteworthy fact is that of the recent talks given at the meetings all have been by members of the club who hold important positions in the business world. The first talk was given by Joseph E. Morse, of Franklin place, an organizer of the club. He is chief engineer of the Tidewater Oil Company, and he gave valuable information concerning petroleum. William B. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, a broker and operator in Wall street, was the second one to give an address, his subject being "Wall Street." He told some of the inside history of that important trade centre.

William McIntosh, superintendent of motive power on the New Jersey Central, was the third speaker. He dwelt on the motive power of a great railroad and gave those present a clear insight into the multifarious duties connected with this department. Tonight Mr. Miller will continue the series by telling of the first trans-continental railroad. More than usual interest has been aroused by these talks which is shown by the large attendance of members and friends.

BUSINESS COLLEGE CONCERT

PLEASING AFFAIR GIVEN UNDER DIRECTION OF MISS PHELPS.

The pupils in the Plainfield Business College held a concert and social Saturday night. The affair was under the direction of Miss A. C. Phelps. Some amusing games were played and a programme of recitations and musical selections presented. A piano duet was played by Miss Estella Sofield and Miss Edna Randolph. A musical trio by Martin Stutsman and Miss Estella Sofield on the mandolin, accompanied on the piano by Miss Edna Randolph, a reading by Miss Helen Burns and recitations by Miss Laura VanCampen and Miss Edna Randolph completed the programme. There were about fifty present.

PLAINFIELD ATHLETES, Y. M. C. A. CHAMPIONS

C.E.A. Heywood's Pupils Win Laurels in the North Jersey Inter-Association Meet.

RECORDS ARE BROKEN

GREAT WORK OF WALTER M'NAUGHTON, O. H. MUNGER AND R. M. SMITH.

Newark a Close Second and Summit Third—Plainfield Wins Four of the Five Events Scheduled—The Medals Awarded.

Everything went Plainfield's way Monday in the annual indoor Y. M. C. A. athletic meet for the championship of Northern New Jersey. Plainfield won the meet, which was held in its own gymnasium, and besides capturing four of the five events, established records for the Eastern section of State Y. M. C. A.s in three events.

Raymond M. Smith established a record of 1 minute, 43 3-5 seconds in the potato race. Walter McNaughton destroyed all Eastern records in the high dive and came close to breaking the national record, and O. H. Munger shattered the best previous eastern mark in the three standing broad jumps.

Plainfield's total points, calculated according to the Y. M. C. A. system, were 463½; Newark was second with 415 points; Summit was third with 393½ points; Orange fourth with 366 points; and Jersey City fifth and last with 206.

In the running high dive, Walter McNaughton, of Plainfield, won at five feet, eleven, the eastern record. He tried for the National record at six feet, ¼ inch, and on one attempt cleared it, but struck the stick with his knee in coming down. He was roundly applauded for his good work. John Allen, of Newark, gave him a close rub but had to fall out at five feet, ten inches. A. Poeller, Jr., of Orange, and Albion Buckley, of Summit, were tied for third position at five feet, eight. The national record of six feet in this event is held by Buffalo.

O. S. Munger's record mark in the three standing broad jumps was 29 feet, ½ inch. Otto Kellman, of Newark, was second, with 29 feet; and A. Poeller, Jr., of Orange, third, with 27 feet, 10½ inches.

H. Todd, of Newark, established a new State record in the running high jump. He cleared five feet, six inches; Charles Dean, of Summit, negotiated five feet, four; and Walter McNaughton, of Plainfield, scored a third place at five feet, two inches.

The twelve-pound shot put was another "pipe" for O. H. Munger, of Plainfield, who hurled the spheroid 39 feet, 4¼ inches. Second prizes went to H. Shonber, of Newark, with a put of 38 feet, 6¼ inches. and third medal was won by Charles Dean, of Summit, with 35 feet, ¾ inch.

In the potato race, George Curtin, of Newark, was second to Smith, of Plainfield. Curtin's time was 1 min., 43 3-5 sec.; and the time of William Halsey, of Summit, third prize winner, was 1.46 3-5.

Newark was a close competitor of Plainfield in all the events and the local team was not sure of victory until the final event had been run. A large crowd witnessed the games and was enthusiastic in cheering on Plainfield's three place winners, McNaughton, Munger and Smith. A splendid exhibition of club swinging was given by Fred Mets, the national champion.

Credit for the successful management of the meet goes to Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, who had general charge of the entire affair. The officials were: Referee, George T. Hepbron, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Amateur League of North America; final scorer, John Valiant; assistants, H. S. Brokaw in the three standing broad jumps; E. W. Poinier, in the running high jump, John Steiner, in the shot put, J. W. Gavett, in the running high dive, and John Doane, in the potato race. The judges were the four physical directors, A. M. Chesley, of Orange, in the shot put; F. W. Dixon, of Summit, in the high jump; Leonard M. Smith, of Newark, in the high dive; James R. Downey, of Jersey City, in the three broad jumps. John Steiner judged the potato race. The timers were Messrs. Chesley, Smith, Downey and Poinier. Other officials were Walter L. Long, judge; William Heinecke, W. E. Neal, Percy Hand and F. Marclay, measurers.

After the meet, the contestants and officials partook of refreshments, and medals were presented the prize winners with appropriate congratulations by Secretary George T. Hepbron. The members of the visiting teams were unanimous in complimenting Plainfield's efficient management of the meet.

THEY OBSERVED ENDEAVOR DAY

TRINITY REFORMED SOCIETY LISTENED TO MR. SPROUL'S ADDRESS.

"Endeavor Day" was appropriately observed by the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, last night, at which time there was a programme of more than ordinary interest. H. C. Crawford was the leader of the meeting and there was a cornet solo by Edmund Young, accompanied on the piano by Miss May Randolph.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. J. T. Sproul, of Arlington, president of the State Union, it being a spiritual and helpful talk. He said that there are now three and a half million Endeavorers composing 64,000 societies. He said that the responsibility on the part of the Endeavorers is now more than ever before, which means vital, living relations with Christ. The "quiet hour" was urgently recommended, stating that more intimacy with Jesus will give that power which is needed so much.

The speaker urged possession of the Holy Spirit and the positive need of personal work and his address throughout was in the nature of a personal heart to heart talk which was very impressive and aroused the Endeavorers to a feeling of greater responsibility.

The collection received at the close of the meeting will be given to the Endeavor church building fund.

PARK AND TROLLEY DISCUSSED BY BOARD

Mayor Smalley Explained His Ideas for Public Park Before Board of Trade.

TROLLEY IMPROVEMENT

LINE ON MADISON AVENUE CONNECTING FRONT ST. AND ARLINGTON AVE.

Former Mayor Gilbert's Offer to Make Up Deficiency From Dinner Declined—Facts About Plainfield to Now Directory.

In favor of the proposed combined park for the city and borough, the Board of Trade expressed itself last Wednesday. Mayor Newton B. Smalley addressed the members on the subject and as a result of his request for action a committee of five was appointed on motion of Secretary Frank H. Smith to investigate the matter and if deemed advisable urged immediate action upon the City Common Council.

Mayor Smalley said that the park would improve the part of the borough at its Watchung avenue entrance most in need of improvement. In answer to a query he said that much of the land for the purpose might have to be taken by condemnation proceedings. He proposed the building of an island in the center of the lake to contain a band pavilion for the giving of band concerts for which city and borough should share expenses. Harry O. Runyon spoke of the necessity for quick action and said that the members of the committee appointed should learn the property values concerned, in the proposition and ascertain the sentiments of tax-payers with regard to it.

President Woolston, of the Board, appointed W. A. Coddington, J. T. Vail, H. O. Runyon, of Plainfield, and Herman Schwed and N. B. Smalley, of the borough, as the members of the investigating committee.

In the course of his remarks on the park proposal, Mayor Smalley incidentally mentioned the fact that it was proposed to widen Somerset street this spring and provide it with storm sewers, the improvements to take place between Somerset street and Johnston's drive.

There were seventeen members of the Board present, an unusually large representation.

President Woolston brought up the subject of trolley troubles. He said that the local street railway should arrange to hold its cars at the Washington avenue terminus in time enough to accommodate passengers on Jersey Central trains. He stated that the usual method of the company was to start its cars one or two minutes before the arrival of trains, by this means losing passengers for itself as well as adding another to its many sins of omission and commission in failing to accommodate. H. O. Runyon was appointed a committee of one to bring the matter before the trolley authorities.

Mr. Runyon reported that he had had several conferences already with Col. Hines, the trolley manager, who was himself a former Plainfielder and determined to bring good service to the city. Mr. Runyon mentioned the fact that through trolleys were now running from Elizabeth to Dunellen, as a result of the efforts of the Board of Trade. He said that the change was greatly appreciated by the people in the West End of the city.

It was further announced by Mr. Runyon that the advisability of combining the Netherwood and Arlington avenue lines had been considered by Col. Hines. The proposition was to have the cars run through the city in such a way as to help avoiding congestion at the Watchung avenue terminus, making something of a loop by running from Netherwood to Watchung avenue to Front street to Madison avenue and thence along the present Arlington avenue route. The plan had been considered by District Manager Collins.

Mr. Runyon announced that he had no report to make for the improved street pavement committee, though he announced that he was in communication with experts in the matter.

A communication was read from Maximilian P. E. Grutzman, who invited the attention of the Board to the fact that he had established a school for nervous children in the Mountain Park Inn building, bringing his establishment there from Washington Heights, New York City.

Secretary Smith reported that in answer to a letter to the Atlantic City Board of Trade, he had been informed that that city had received no definite proposition for a new gas plant. He was referred in the matter to City Clerk Ireland, of Atlantic City, from whom he had received no answer to a communication. E. M. Laing said that he had heard from vague sources that cheaper and better gas for Plainfield would be an accomplished fact within a few months under the present regime.

A communication from Milwaukee, Wis., asked the Board to adopt resolutions in regard to discrimination in railroad rates as possible under the inter-State commerce act. The matter was referred to J. E. Coward and H. O. Runyon, to be brought up at the next meeting.

The Board was requested by Wand, the directory man, to arrange a page of information in regard to Plainfield for use in the directory. J. T. Vail was appointed to the task.

Secretary Smith, for the committee on the dinner, said that there was a deficiency of $75 and that former Mayor Gilbert had offered to meet the deficiency from his own pockets. Though appreciating Mr. Gilbert's generosity, the Board thought it best to meet the deficiency from its own reserved fund.

Votes of thanks were extended to the committee on the annual dinner for their services in making possible the most successful dinner in the history of the Board, and to the speakers at the dinner for completing its success.

POLITICS IN THE BOROUGH

TERMS OF TWO COUNCILMEN, TAX COLLECTOR AND ASSESSOR EXPIRE.

The election in North Plainfield this year falls on Tuesday, March 8, and already the political sephyrs are circulating strange tales of who shall be candidates for the offices to be filled. With the exception of one councilman nearly all the candidates will be those who are at present in office.

The two retiring councilmen are James P. Northrup and Charles L. Nichols. Mr. Northrup has frequently declared that he would leave the council on account of the pressure of business. For this reason it is believed that he will not be a candidate again. It is said that Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., will serve out his term of office in spite of rumors to the effect that he still intends to resign. These rumors are vigorously denied by people who are conversant with the matter.

Tax Collector George Brown's term expires in March. When he was asked this morning if he would be a candidate for the office for another term he replied that he had not been officially asked. He could not give a statement for publication. It is believed, however, that he will run for the office again. His candidacy is looked upon with favor by the powers that be in the borough. The term of Assessor Elston M. French also expires this spring. It is probable he will receive a renomination. It is probable that Andrew M. Lotkins will be a candidate for re-election on the Board of Freeholders of Somerset County.

LIQUOR LICENSES IN COUNCIL

TALK AS TO THE POSITION THE CITY FATHERS WILL TAKE.

The Common Council takes action of all liquor applications at the regular March meeting. It has previously been the policy of the Council to retain the present number of licensed places, fourteen, but this year there are three additional applications. That will be done with them is known at present. It is said that J. J. Goff, who applies for a license for his new hotel on West Front street, is likely to have his request granted and that one of the persons now holding a license may be refused.

On the other hand, it is said, that the Common Council will not increase nor change the number of places. Others are inclined to believe that inasmuch as the high license question was defeated the Council may grant the three additional applications for the purpose of receiving the extra revenue. Members of the Common Council are very reticient regarding the license matter and they all appear as though they will be glad when the aippostions are disposed of.

CHURCH SOCIETY MEETS.

Reports Read and Officers Chosen* by Trinity Reformed Young Woman's Mission Band.

Gratifying reports of the past year's progress of the Young Woman's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, were received at the annual meeting of the organization yesterday afternoon in the church. The report of the treasurer, Miss Mabel Wilson, showed a balance in the treasury of $109.32, and the secretaries' reports of membership and the work of the band in the mission field were equally satisfying.

These officers were re-elected: President, Mrs. P. E. Woodruff; vice president, Mrs. Leonard Smith; recording secretary, Miss Abbie VanCleef; treasurer, Miss Mabel Wilson. Mrs. William Olmstead was chosen corresponding secretary.

A TALK ABOUT GUAM.

Little Island in the Pacific Is an Interesting Spot.

People Are Industrious and Glad That Uncle Sam Owns the Island—Causes That Made Agana an Important Town.

The only good map that has yet been made of the island of Guam is the result of a government survey and has been published by the war department. The little sketch map shown here is a reduction from it, and the map will interest many because very few people have as yet any idea of the form of the island, which is shown in the atlases scarcely larger than a dot.

In a rough way the island may be said to resemble in form the sole of a shoe. It is only 29 miles long and from three to ten miles wide, with an area of about 180 square miles, or seven times as large as Manhattan Island.

It is the most southern of the chain of the Ladrones or Marianne islands, which stretches 430 miles north and south. All the other islands belong to Germany, but they are very small, and Guam is the largest and most important of the group. It is four days' steaming to the east of the Philippines.

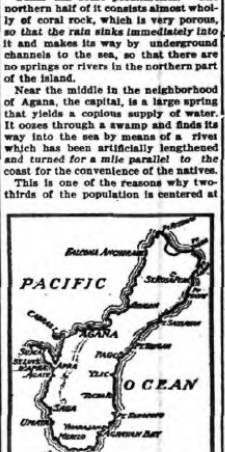
We observe on the map great paucity of information about the interior of the island. The reason is that the jungle which covers it is so dense that not even natives have penetrated far into it, except in two or three places where paths extend from coast to coast.

Guam, like all the other islands of the Ladrones, was built up partly by coral clearings from volcanoes and partly by the work of coral insects; but it has this advantage over islands to the north, that its volcanoes are all extinct, while there are still eruptive mountains on some of the more northern islands.

Guam has some precipitation. The northern half of it consists almost wholly of coral rock, which is very porous, so that the rain sinks immediately into it and makes its way by underground channels to the sea, so that there are no springs or rivers in the northern part of the island.

Near the middle in the neighborhood of Agana, the capital, is a large spring that yields a copious supply of water. It comes through a swamp and finds its way into the sea by means of a river which has been artificially lengthened and turned for a mile parallel to the coast for the convenience of the natives.

This is one of the reasons why two-thirds of the population is centered at



LATEST MAP OF GUAM.
(Island in Pacific Acquired by United States in 1898.)

Agana. The southern part of Guam has a number of streams, some of which lose themselves beneath the surface for a time and then reappear from caverns.

Another peculiarity of Guam is that nearly all the inhabitants, though farmers, live in the town and go out to their ranches to raise their crops. Some of them have rude houses on their ranchos, where their families spend a part of the time.

Nearly the entire population of about 9,000, distributed among six towns, Agana containing 5,400 inhabitants; Asmat, 900; Ynarajan, 650; Agate, 400; Merizo, 300, and Umatta, 200. A number of hamlets, each containing a few huts, are distributed along the shores.

If we were to drop into any of these towns we would meet men and women who would welcome us most cordially. We should find them lighter in color than the Filipinos, fully clad, comparatively free from disease, bright of face and cheerful in disposition, having little money, but procuring their food from their farms or the sea and making of their houses most of the things they need.

In the towns we should see them living in very well built houses, many of them of stone, surrounded by gardens. The country houses erected on the plantations, intended only for temporary occupancy, are little more than huts. On Saturday evenings a procession of *ox carts, a mile long, may be seen bring*ing the families back to the capital after their week's work, so that they may be ready for early mass the next morning.

Found After Many Years.

A pocketbook containing $50 in gold was lost eight years ago by Mrs. Davoit, of New Boston, Mo. She never heard from it until the other day, when the money was found in a peculiar way. A young colt rode up to the Davoit home and tied his horse to a tree near the house. When he returned for the horse he found that it had pawed a pocketbook out of the earth. It was the one Mrs. Davoit had lost eight years before.

Pig with Elephant's Head.

A remarkable animal was lately born at Rye, England. It is a boar pig, with the head and features of an elephant. One ear is of immense proportions, and a trunk protrudes from the forehead. Between the trunk and the snout there is a huge eyeball containing two pupils

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Tuesday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of vast service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

ANOTHER MINSTREL SHOW.

Scheme Is to Raise Money for Free Band Concerts in the Borough.

For the purpose of raising funds for a series of band concerts in North Plainfield next summer, Benjamin LaVere and H. P. Greenwood are endeavoring to organize a minstrel troupe to give a performance in this city within the next two months. Mr. LaVere intended securing some of the leading politicians of this city and of the borough to take part in the performance. Nothing has been definitely decided upon so far, and the date has not been set.

The contract case of A. M. Griffen against James E. Tetten, in Justice Hand's court, has been amicably settled. L. A. Clement, Esq., represented the plaintiff, and V. W. Nash, Jr., Esq., the defendant.

WOMEN'S WORK IN JAPAN.

Girls Employed Now as Conductors of Railroad Trains an Innovation of the Far East.

The social condition of woman is a fairly trustworthy measure of the civilization of a state, and judged by this standard Japan has not yet reached the summit of western culture. This fact, however, is not a reproach, says the London Daily Telegraph, seeing that it is not long since even European nations have bridged the abyss which sunders former barbaric customs from the humane legislation of to-day. And the Japanese are even now working hard to imitate us. Hitherto, and, indeed, at the present moment, the ranks of female "hands" in Japan are recruited from among the rural population by agents, who induce the country lasses to sign contracts for quite a number of years —the best portion of their lives. And the wages averaged 3d. a day! For that miserable mess of pottage the girls not only toil during working hours, but permit themselves to be wholly isolated from the outer world, just as if they were in prison, a hospital or a nunnery. Thus they are entirely in the power of their employers, the least scrupulous of whom take an unfair advantage of their helplessness. Thanks to the initiative of the press and to the high spirits of a few wealthy firms, a strong lurid light has been thrown upon these dark places of Japan, and redress is already in sight. The Manchester of the mikado's realm is this, and it was the terrible state of things in vogue in the mills and works of that city which first attracted attention. The slaves of the southern states of North America had a better time than some of the wretched girls of Osaka, Kioto and Tokio whose lives were thrown upon European markets at nominal prices. Happily, the Guild of Weavers has now set to work to better the lot of these helots, and its efforts are being reenforced by government employes.

Curiously enough, in the higher callings and professions which require skill or scientific training instead of mere manual labor, there was hardly any field for woman's activity. Thus in none of the industries or government offices was a woman to be found as civil servant. The respectable firms of merchants likewise rigidly excluded members of the fair sex, refusing to employ them as saleswomen; only in a few cheap bazars, which cater to mercury England and the pay utterly inadequate, were women to be seen behind the counter. But here, too, a beneficent change is now being made. The firm of Mitsui, the weavers, for example—one of the wealthiest in Japan—have just decided to take on girls.

For a considerable time past women have been engaged at railway stations, especially in dealing with passenger traffic, and now the Sanui line, which had hitherto eliminated the female element, has completely broken with its traditions, and in future the passengers by that company's line will be looked after by lady conductors, and, perhaps, lady controllers as well. The crown prince of Japan takes a keen interest in this movement, which aims at making life less miserable to his future female subjects, and he has begun by setting an excellent example. He has married but one wife, and has allowed it to be generally understood that he is, and intends to remain, a monogamist to the end of his days.

MEET WITHOUT COLLISION.

Device By Which One Train Runs Over Another Without Accident —Like Traveling Bridges.

Even in this age of wonders no one would have expected to experience the doubtful pleasure of a head-on collision without the usual horrors of a smashup, yet that is put forward by an inventor of a recent invention, according to the New York Tribune.

A single track is used, on which railway cars are caused to travel.

Two cars go head-on for each other, at a speed of 25 miles an hour. They approach within the danger limit, and suddenly the car having the right of way runs over the other and lands on the track again, where it continues in safety until it reaches its destination. The under car has proceeded as if nothing had happened.

The cars, although they run upon wheels, are really traveling bridges, with compartments for the accommodation of passengers. Over the framed structure of the cars thus constituted an arched track, also reinforced, runs the car and serving the purpose of providing a roadbed for the oncoming car.

The forward ends of the pilots of the superimposed tracks are provided with rollers and skids, which are so designed that one car shall mount the other without shock.

The skids gently ride up the inclined track of the car ahead, and sufficiently elevate the rollers of the pilots to permit them to run upon the superimposed track without jar. The car itself follows with a motion equally as gentle. In actual practice cars of 11 feet 6 inches in length will be employed, the extreme length being 43 feet.

Where Negroes Legislate.

Each of the small British colonies in the West Indies has its native legislature, and in some of them, notably Barbados, Grenada and Jamaica, negroes and mulattoes are often elected to these bodies by their brethren who enjoy the suffrage. They are usually men of no education or experience in public life, and naturally they make egregious blunders. In Grenada the other day the government proposed that $750 per annum be given to the attorney general for framing the laws of the colony. Thereupon one indignant member rose excitedly to oppose the motion. It was gross extravagance, he said, for his own carpenter would put the laws in a splendid frame for $1.50.

BURGLAR MAKES HAUL WHILE RECTOR IS AWAY

Rev. W. Montgomery Downey's Home is Entered and Many Valuables Taken.

ENTRANCE BY WINDOW

THE DEED SIMILAR TO ONE COMMITTED AT REV. DR. SCHENCK'S HOUSE.

Eighteenth Burglary in Borough in Short While—No Clue to Perpetrator—Negotiable Papers Are Also Stolen.

Rev. W. Montgomery Downey's residence, the rectory of the Church of the Holy Cross, on Washington avenue, was entered Thursday night by a burglar and a considerable amount of money, jewelry, silverware and valuable papers taken. The burglary was committed while the rector and his wife were attending a supper served at the church between the hours of 6 and 8. The loss was discovered by Mr. Downey at 11 o'clock upon his return from the supper. The burglar is believed to be the same man who entered the home of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, recently, and who has committed other offenses of the kind in this city and in the borough.

Entrance was secured through a dining room window which was pried up with a "jimmy." The burglar was careful not to leave any of his footprints in the snow. He walked up to the window on the porch and coping of the veranda. The man was evidently frightened away before he completed his task as is shown by a large amount of valuable silverware and money which he left behind. The bureau drawers upstairs and the drawers in the sideboard in the dining room were rifled. Mr. Downey's desk in his study was broken open and its contents scattered about on the floor. The valuable papers, most of which are negotiable, were taken from his desk. Payment has been stopped on all of these.

About twenty minutes before the rector and his wife returned home, Dr. J. H. Carman stepped up on the porch and left a large basket of silverware and other things in the vestibule. He saw a light within and he tried the door. When Mr. Downey returned home the front door was wide open and the front hall was strewn with burnt matches and some candles.

As soon as the loss was discovered Mr. Downey telephoned for Chief Marshal William Campbell. He told Mr. Downey that the made the eighteenth robbery in the borough since the first of the year. Mr. Downey has lost papers which, if they cannot be recovered, will mean that he is minus a large sum of money. The extent of the robber's thefts cannot be estimated at present.

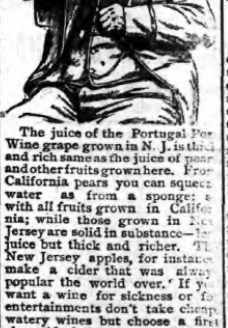
ALFRED SPEER,
THE ORIGINAL
Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of port and other fruits grown here. From California you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—the juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

DELIGHTFUL PROGRAMME AT A CHURCH CONCERT

Recital Under the Auspices of the Church of the Heavenly Rest an Enjoyable Affair.

LIST OF PERFORMERS

ORCHESTRA CONDUCTED BY GARRET T. DUNHAM.

Violin Solos and Piano Duetts Among the Features—Mrs. F. M. Ward's Contralto Solo—Those Assisting the Choir.

Under the auspices of the choir of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a delightful concert was given last Friday in the parish house on Clinton avenue. The programme was composed of a variety of selections, from stirring marches with a military swing, to sentimental songs. The orchestra, conducted by Garret T. Dunham, gave some fine renderings and the chorus choir and orchestra combined for effective work in several selections.

The programme opened with "Joy, Joy, Freedom Today," from the opera, "Gypsey's Warning," given by the chorus and orchestra. Other selections by chorus and orchestra were "Here in Cool Grot," Mornington, "Now the Roll of the Lively Drum," from "La Fillo du Regiment," "Old Daddy Longleg," Jacoby, and "Oh! Hail Us Ye Free," from "Krnani."

A piano duet, "Salata Pesth," Kowalski, was played by Miss Charlotte Conger and Miss Remsen, and "Rest, Dearest, Rest," Kucken, was sung by a quartette of male singers, William Jeffery, Frederick J. Pope, John W. Daub and Joseph Martin. George H. Smith sang a tenor solo, "The Last Watch," Pinsuti, and Miss Ada M. Dunham and Miss Beatrice Miner sang a slected duet. Mrs. Fernand M. Ward gave a contralto solo, "Angus Macdonald," Roockel.

Other numbers on the programme were a selected violin solo by E. A. Parcubek; a duett, "Excelsior," Balfe, by William Holmes and George H. Smith; a soprano clo, "My Best Friend," Hartly, by Mrs. Edward E. Brown; a baritone solo, "Vulcan's Song," Gounod, by William Holmes; a quartette, "Star of Descending Night," Emerson, by Mrs. Brown, Miss Elizabeth Forster, Edward E. Brown and Juan A. Babcock; and a contralto solo, "An Old Garden," Hope Temple, by Mrs. Ward.

The member of the choir were: Mrs. Edward E. Brown, Miss Alice Forster, Miss Elizabeth Forster, Miss Jenny E. Wenzel, Edward E. Brown, Juan A. Babcock. They were assisted by Mrs. Daniel Dunham, Miss Lillie Hardcastle, Miss Marguerite Phillips, Miss Edna Phillips Miss Daisy Houston, Miss Edith Robinson, Mrs. Charles Steiner, Miss Beatrice Miner, William Jeffery, John W. Daub, Charles M. Hummer, Frederick J. Pope, Joseph Martin, John D. Thompson, Louis V. Tallamy, Lewis A. Hummer, Bertram F. Tallamy, Hugh H. MacMurray, Charles Cumberson, William E. VanNorden, RoLert Humpston.

Also assisting were Mrs. Fernand M. Ward, Contralto; George H. Smith, tenor; William Holmes, baritone. Miss Charlotte Conger and Miss Daisy Houston were accompanists.

Those composing the orchestra were: Martin A. Korff, B. A. Parobek, Ernest Higham, Charles Wendell, violins; Archibald Hallard, flute; James Hewitt, clarionet; Whitney Frazee, cornet; Kenneth Shupp, trombone; Dr. J. F. Berg, 'cello; Jacob Byer, bass viol; Frank Manchester, drum; Louis Hummer, piano. Garret T. Dunham was conductor.

UNION FREEHOLDERS' SESSION

ACKNOWLEDGE GIFTS AND ACCEPT INVITATION TO A CONVENTION.

Little business of importance was considered at the February meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders held at Elizabeth. Director J. Frank Hubbard and all of the members were present. A resolution was adopted thanking County Attorney W. R. Codington for copies of maps of the county presented to each member of the Board. These maps were made by Engineer Bauer, of Elizabeth.

A communication was received from the State Charities' Aid Association inviting the Board to attend the convention to be held soon at Atlantic City. A brother of Former Councilman A. F. Beadle, who is connected with this work at Camden, will make an address at this convention. The invitation was accepted.

REV. ALBERT E. FINN INSTALLED AS PASTOR

Recognition Services in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Were Largely Attended.

DR. CHAMBLISS' SERMON

SEVEN MINISTERS TOOK PART IN THE IMPRESSIVE EXERCISES.

Rev. T. E. Vassar, Presided at the Meeting and Rev. J. A. Cubberly Read Scripture—The Opening Prayer by Rev. Mr. Fletcher.

Rev. Albert E. Finn was publicly recognized as pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church at special services held there last Thursday. There were many people present from this city and from out of town, including some from Mr. Finn's former charge in Hunterdon county. The edifice was tastefully decorated for the services. The platform was arranged with potted flowers and palms and the music rendered was exceptionally fine.

The presiding minister was Rev. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth. The scripture was read by Rev. J. A. Cubberley, of South Plainfield and the opening prayer was made by Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market. The recognition sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of this city. The charge of the church was delivered by Rev. W. T. Dorward, of Stelton, and the charge to the pastor was made by Rev. G. M. Shotts, pastor of the Baptist church at Scotch Plains, the oldest Baptist church in the State.

On behalf of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, this city, read the interdenominational welcome. The newly installed pastor in closing made a few remarks and ended the services with a benediction. Two anthems rendered by the choir were: "I will Extoll Thee," by W. T. Sudds and "The Sun Shall Shine with a New Light," by H. W. Woodward. Daniel E. Davis presided at the organ during the services.

In his sermon, Rev. Dr. Chambliss took for his text the passage of scripture found in Rev. xxi:21. "And the twelve gates were twelve pearls, and every several was a one pearl." He said that the twelve gates corresponded to the twelve points of a compass. He showed how it was possible for each nation and creed, who feared God and furthered all His works in righteousness would be profited by following the precepts of the Master. He spoke of the nature of a pearl and told how they are found in the rough but by great labor and made to appear like a fine stone of great value. So it is, he said, with mankind. They who follow the law and precepts of God have at one time in their careers resembled the rough pearl but by close relationship to God would finally shine forth like a brilliant stone and be a power for much good in the world. In closing he referred to the fact of the church entering upon its new life by calling a new pastor. He said that for complete success in the church work it was necessary for the members to work unceasingly to aid the pastor. He referred to General Gordon, who, in one of his speeches in which he described an event in the Civil War, an old veteran stood up and said, excitedly, "I was with you in that battle." Dr. Chambliss said that he hoped it would be that way on the other shore. He hoped the members of that congregation could say "I was with you in the fight for Christ and His Church."

In closing Mr. Finn made a few remarks. He spoke of the quotations of Browning and Tennyson. Of the former he said that in his best moments the great poet said "I hope to leave this world better than I found it," and Tennyson said in his best moments "I desire most of all to have a clearer vision of God." Mr. Finn said that these two quotations are correlated. He said that no man could leave the world better than he found it unless he had a clear vision of God and no man having a clear vision of God could help leaving the world better than he found it. This, he said, applies to each member of the congregation and he hoped that this would permeate the atmosphere of his church. He pronounced the closing benediction.

In charge of the services were the members of the pulpit committee who has had the work in charge of selecting a pastor for the church. This committee consisted of: T. L. Runyon, chairman, T. H. Cumming, secretary, David M. Runyon, deacons, Roland C. Treadwell, John H. Doane, Charles F. Dayton and Nelson Runyon. The public reception of Mr. Finn to the church will take place next Thursday night, at the church.

VICTORY SCORED BY THE LIQUOR DEALERS

Plainfield's Influence on the State as Viewed by the Leading Paper of New Jersey.

FAVOR HIGH LICENSE

STATEMENT OF ORGANIZER OF LIQUOR DEALERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

"If That City, (Plainfield), Should Later Decide in Favor of the Increase the Brewers Would Feel That They Had Lost a Skirmish."

The projected increase of the liquor license fee in Plainfield from $750 to $1,000 has been defeated so far as this year is concerned, but that does not mean that the matter has been defeated for all time. The ordinance raising the rate, which had been passed by the Common Council on two readings, was defeated when it came up for final action by a tie vote, one of the friends and supporters of the higher license being absent. At the next session of the Council the licenses for the ensuing year will be granted under the old rate, but there is a possibility that the ordinance just defeated will be reintroduced and passed with the expectation that it will become effective next year.

The outcome of this movement in Plainfield is of interest in all parts of New Jersey. So important was the matter considered by the State Liquor Dealers' Protective Association that the general organiser of that body was sent to Plainfield to do everything in his power to prevent the increase in the license fee. After the defeat of the proposed ordinance, Organiser Buckridge declared in an interview that its passage would have meant a change in the rate in nearly every city in the State. This may have been an overstatement of the case, and probably was, but there are evidences that the movement in favor of higher license is growing in New Jersey, and that it will eventually prevail. Whether it will be given a setback by the outcome in Plainfield is problematical. But if that city should later decide in favor of the increase the brewers would certainly feel that they had lost an important skirmish.—Newark Evening News.

A PLAINFIELDER'S BEQUESTS

PROVISIONS OF ETHAN LANPHEAR'S WILL ENCOURAGING TO EDUCATION

Rev. L. E. Livermore, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, who is the executor of the estate of the late Ethan Lanphear, who was a resident of Plainfield for many years, is just now engaged closing up the various details of the business. Mr. Lanphear's estate was worth about $15,000 and aside from a few public bequests, the bulk of it was left to the heirs.

The public bequests included an equal sum of money left to the three colleges under the control and direction of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination. Alfred University, at Alfred, N. Y.; Milton College, at Milton, Wis., and Salem College, at Salem, W. Va., will each receive about $2,000. These amounts come out of the money left after all the heirs have been cared for. The only large bequest was one of $50 to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Mr. Lanphear was of the Seventh-Day Baptist persuasion and always manifested considerable interest in the work of that denomination. For years he was especially interested in educational matters, being the author of several books. This no doubt accounts for his especial interest in the educational institutions of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Joint-Committee at Work.

A committee from the Board of Health appointed to inspect garbage collection systems, visited Yonkers Thursday afternoon. Those who composed the party were J. F. Buckle, R. I. Tolles, W. S. Tyler, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Fred W. Dunn and L. T. Thurlow. Other trips of inspection are in view, but none is definitely decided upon.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 14: "Real Friendship."—1 Sam. xx, 1-23.

Jonathan and David—how long these names have stood for manly friendship! How simple and touching is the story of their regard for each other, and what a help it has been for ages to young men who have formed their companionships on its model!

Who can help liking that manly young prince? If it were possible, he is the more attractive figure of the two. Is he the elder? It would seem so, since he was a soldier of valor before David came to the camp. It was Jonathan who began the battle with the Philistine garrison at Michmash and single handed overcame so many that the whole army fled. Perhaps it was this very element of soldierly courage which attracted the two young men to each other. David's defeat of Goliath would appeal to Jonathan's admiration and test his manliness. It would show him at once the strong claims David would have on popular favor and awaken in him feelings of jealousy as he saw his own merits overshadowed, or it would arouse deep sentiments of friendliness and personal attachment to the young champion.

Jonathan was of noble mold. He had all the valorous instincts of his father, Saul, but none of his moroseness and morbid jealousy of superior ability.

Even when Jonathan saw clearly that David's advancement meant his own retirement and would also involve the succession to the kingly dignity he never swerved in the least from the straight path of generous fraternity. It could not be that he despised the kingship. He was too much a patriot not to desire that true a worshipper of Jehovah not to prize most highly the opportunity such position would give to serve his God and brethren. No; it was not lack of appreciation of the place, but it was a nature too large to be capable of coveting for himself a place which he knew another could fill more ably. This is one of the severest trials of friendship. How rare is it to find a nature so generous that it can and does prefer others to itself when honors and advantages are to be distributed! Rivalry is fatal to fellowship, and the only antidote to the spirit of jealousy is a generous subordination of self and pressing the merits of another. "In honor preferring one another" is an injunction of the Apostle Paul. No more genuine example of it can be found than the young Hebrew prince, Jonathan.

But friendship needs two of a kind. David is worthy of Jonathan. Both had an element of real godliness and felt true reliance upon Jehovah. Both were filled with a zeal for the liberation of their land from Philistine rulership and believed that Jehovah would accomplish the deliverance of their freedom. Both were inured to hardship and enjoyed the manly sports of the times, as is shown by David's use of the sling and Jonathan's use of weapons. One was a skilled musician with native talent for the melodies of shepherd life and possibly for the heroic tales of tribal warfare, but surely with skill in religious music. Most influential of all, David had a broad, generous nature, capable of receiving honors and not being spoiled by them. Arrogance is the danger in unusual prominence. Egotism and selfishness trip many feet which tread pathways of unusual height. David kept the simplicity of the shepherd boy's heart in camp and court. He was trustable.

Where could we find real friendship must first make himself such as he desires another to be. It is deeply doubtful if the true development is possible to any one except as there is first an element of fidelity to God cultivated.

With Mary In the Garden.

Let the Christian, seeking a fresh realization of the Lord in His holy intercourse with the individual soul, often walk in the Joseph's garden and listen to that colloquy by the empty cavern, while the morning sun shines upon Mary at the Master's feet. What He was then He is now. He knows the individual name which belongs to the individual heart. He can reveal to the solitary disciple now as then His glory and His grace. He can send us also away, sure at least of this, that we have seen the Lord, and He hath spoken to us all alone.—Bishop H. C. G. Moule.

A Christian Marksman.

He who would do the greatest execution as a Christian marksman must point to God and hit the hottest shot of divine truth at the nearest range.—Presbyterian.

By and By.

The clouds will all have passed away,
By and by;
And there will dawn a brighter day,
By and by.
The earth will be forward out of night,
A radiant future comes in sight,
Wrong and sin shall yield the throne to right,
And truth shall flood the world with light,
By and by—yes, by and by.

The signs that fall shall all come true,
By and by;
The King of kings "make all things new,"
By and by.
Faith long delayed is not in vain,
There shall be bread in famine's plain,
The buried seed yield golden grain,
And flowers that fade revive again,
By and by—yes, by and by.

Earth will feel a balmy breath,
By and by;
Life burst through the gates of death,
By and by;
Love will make all life more sweet;
Brotherhood will be complete;
Kith and kin shall gather meet
At our common Master's feet,
By and by—yes, by and by.

Truth shall spring forth, from the ground,
By and by;
Righteousness and peace abound,
By and by.
Men shall then see more oppress,
Hands be lifted but to bless;
Make another's burden less,
Help and heal the sick distress,
By and by—yes, by and by.

OUR WILD NEIGHBORS

Many of Them Die of Hunger During the Winter Season.

Both Birds and Beasts Suffer for the Necessities of Life and Are Driven to Cannibalism — What Would Men Do?

When I hear a man say, "I wouldn't do that if I were starving," I am led to smilingly wonder how near he has ever been to dying for want of food, and how long he would adhere to his lofty resolutions in the face of actual starvation. A few men, a very few, there are, who know the pangs of extreme hunger, and these will tell you that no man is prophet enough to say what he will or will not do when "the wolf" is snarling in his face.

I regret to say that it is frequently experienced by animals, from deer to field mice. At no time is it so prevalent as in winter, when more food is necessary and less is available than at any other season. Then it is that many birds and other gentle creatures die either of starvation or of cold, which they might have endured had they had sufficient food, and that many less gentle are driven to devour their fellows in order to save their own lives.

In the absence of organized relief amongst animals themselves, it seems reasonable to suggest that those of us who love them might at this season give them substantial evidence of our love. Few of them need shelter; most of them have snug homes of some sort, and about all of them have jackets of feathers or fur which, under ordinary circumstances, will withstand very severe cold; but food, as a rule, is scarce in winter, and a little trouble and a very little expense on our part will save a great deal of suffering.

In giving our attention to this subject, naturally most of us think of the birds first of all. Indeed, it is often difficult for even thoughtless people to avoid feeding the birds, for when the snow comes and covers up their natural food supply, they come to our door yards and hop about beneath the windows, or sit in flocks upon the naked shrubs and trees, as though to remind us to do the decent thing. And it is not much they ask, these little pensioners; they will be grateful for the sweepings from the tablecloth, if that is all we have. But most of us can do at least a little better, for cracked oats, sunflower seed and canary seed are cheap, and a cent's worth will give many birds a breakfast. At a pinch, these seeds may be thrown out on the bare ground, or, if there is deep snow, a place may be swept clear. But it is better, perhaps, to serve them on portable trays, which may be fastened in the trees, to piazza railings, or even to the window sills. If in addition, some of the sparrows' quiet, or the trimmings from the meat, they may be tied upon the trunks and branches of trees, for the benefit of woodpeckers, chickadees, nuthatches and other birds which might not come for the seeds. Among my bird pensioners last winter were juncos, tree sparrows, song sparrows and chickadees, all of which came on the piazza; nuthatches and blue jays, which patronized the suet tied to an old tree stump, and goldfinches, which condescended to pick up seeds.

But the birds are not by any means the only creatures which need help at this season; many of the four-footed animals find food dreadfully scarce, and we can often help them with little trouble to ourselves. Ears of corn, bundles of wheat or other grain, also in the earnest in the trees, will make a fine feast for the squirrels, and the bundles of wheat, tied to the trunks of trees in the woods, just above the snow will be a boon to the grouse, not to mention the wood mice. The idea of voluntarily feeding mice will no doubt seem very funny to many people, but I am very fond of wood mice. All through the year they give me pleasure in my walks, and the least I can do to repay them is to give them a square meal now and then, at a season when square meals are apt to be scarce with them. So, when I am passing their way, I just call and leave a handful of nuts, a slice of bread, or an apple or two, and I have reason to think that sometimes they enjoy their Thanksgivings and Christmases rather more than if I had left them to forage for their dinners in the cold. And the muskrats, too, earn all they get in the way of food which they snore so deep and the thermometer low. A muskrat would go a mile for an apple if he knew where to go for it, and if you are out for a walk it is not too much of a task to carry down a few apples in your pocket.

Of course it is true that any of us can do toward feeding the needy among our wild neighbors, but if each one of those who really love them will take a little trouble every winter we shall not only save many lives which would otherwise be lost to us, but we shall get a better understanding of the creatures whose biographies are so closely interwoven with our own.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 23.—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Some good ways of using the Sabbath.—Mark 1, 2:24.

For many generations the stress laid upon the Sabbath has been from a negative rather than an affirmative standpoint. The emphasis has been placed upon what we should not do rather than upon what we should do. And it may be that if more time and thought had been given to the things to be done less would have needed to be said upon the subject of what we should not do. The best way to overcome evil is by the substitution of good. "Cease to do evil, learn to do well," says the prophet Isaiah, but the best way in all the world to cease to do evil is to learn to do well. He who does well will have neither time nor inclination to do ill. So he that keeps the Sabbath day will have no time to break it. He that fills every hour of this day with things that are permissible will have no time to engage in those things that are prohibited by the laws of God and of man.

What, then, are some good ways of using the Sabbath? The incident selected for our study is that of Christ at Capernaum on a certain Sabbath day. There He entered into the synagogue, taught and healed a man possessed of an evil spirit, and in these events we may learn how we may make a good use of the Sabbath.

1. On the Sabbath day we should worship God in the public place of worship. The public worship of God has always been exacted of His people. It is not enough to have private devotions in the home, nor will the admiration of God in the works of nature suffice; we must not "forsake the assembling together." The worship of the soul needs to worship God, and this public worship would protect us from many temptations to break the Sabbath. The office or business place could not be visited, the morning could not be spent in reading the daily newspapers, all day visits could not be made to friends, keeping them from their duties to God, if we regularly worshiped God in His house on the Sabbath.

2. On the Sabbath day we could be engaged in teaching. Christ "entered into the synagogue and taught." Teachers are needed in the church, in the home and in various other places on the Sabbath day. Children in the homes need to be taught the Bible and Christian duties. How few scholars in our Sabbath schools need faithful and efficient teachers, and outside of these there are non-Christian homes where the teaching of the word of God would be welcomed, and public charitable institutions where the same would be true. Teaching God's word is a good work, and many could do it who are now spending the Sabbath in idleness.

3. On the Sabbath day we should do good to others. Christ did good upon the Sabbath. So may and should we upon the same day. Many about us need our sympathy, encouragement and help. If we would give it as literally as the Master did we would not want for good uses to make of the Sabbath day.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. ii, 1, 2; Ex. xvi, 11-30; xx, 8-11; Deut. v, 12-14; Neh. x, 31; Jer. xvii, 21-27; Mark ii, 23-28; iii, 1-5; Luke iv, 16; Heb. x, 23-25.

"What Christian Endeavor Has Done For Me."

Rev. B. Q. Denham, vice president of the New York State union, is pastor of the Church of Disciples of Christ, New York city. His society recently considered the above topic, and some of the thoughts brought out were so suggestive as to be worthy of being given this wide publicity. Here are some of the points made: "I joined me to testify. Tied me to the church through my work in the Christian Endeavor society. Made me a 'comrade of the quiet hour' for Bible study and meditation. Taught me to search the Bible, whereas I formerly read it mechanically. Trained my zeal. Has given me a vision of the harvest. Taught me the right spirit in which to pray. Taught me to seek, not to read merely, but to understand what the Bible says. Has given me some of the best friends this old world ever saw. Led me to give my life to the ministry of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Led me to keep all the Lord's day for God's work. Has helped me to a closer communion with God. Cheers my life. Has taught me to do little things of service. Made me feel the importance of doing any little good deed. Causes me to realize the closeness of Christ. Has taught me how Christ loves me. Has kept me young in heart and spirit."

Can any one after reading these "leaves from hives" question the value of Christian Endeavor? Is not a movement based upon such positive helpfulness of necessity permanent? Christian Endeavor is not "waning."

Evangelistic Conferences.

A very successful series of conferences in the interest of evangelistic work has just been held under the auspices of the New York State union. The speakers have included Mr. William Phillips Hall, Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, Rev. F. H. Jacobs, Rev. Dr. George B. Stewart and State President Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck. The points touched were Troy, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester and Lockport. In Albany the conference was made the beginning of an evangelistic campaign of two weeks, led by the local union.

Our Work For Christ.

Sometimes we show a wrong conception of Christian Endeavor by striving to work up to Christ instead of out from Him. We need more consecrated purpose, more holy endeavor, in our work for Christ.—Rev. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck, D. D.

TUNIS J. CAREY DIES FROM HEART DISEASE

Former Councilman and Chief of Police Passes Away Unexpectedly in New York.

HIS EVENTFUL CAREER

HIS RAID ON BARROOMS CAUSED SENSATION IN THIS CITY.

Active Temperance Worker, Who Caused a Stir in the Municipality —He Leaves a Wife and Two Sons Living in the Borough.

Tunis J. Carey, for many years a resident of Plainfield, during which time he occupied public positions, first as councilman and then as chief of police during stirring times when the temperance question was warmly agitated, died Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. Badin in East Fourteenth street, New York, where he boarded. Word was sent to his son, Harry Carey, night baggage master at the North Avenue Station, and when he reached New York late in the afternoon he learned that the body had been removed to a morgue.

Mrs. Badin informed the son that his father had been ill three weeks with heart disease, but when asked why she did not inform the family, said he expected to come to Plainfield soon.

Mr. Carey was born between Whitehouse and Lebanon in Hunterdon County, and his boyhood days were spent in that vicinity. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in Captain J. Frank Hubbard's company in the Thirtieth N. J. Vols., serving throughout the war. Afterward he came to Plainfield and engaged in the second-hand and general storage business, his place of business for a long time being on West Front street in the Scheepflin building.

Early in the eighties he was elected a councilman from the Fourth ward on the Republican ticket. For several years afterward he took an active part in politics. He resigned during his second term to accept the position of chief of police and he remained in that office for several years. It was during that time that Plainfield passed through a lively temperance crusade, an attempt being made to close up the drinking places in town.

Mr. Carey held several conferences with the temperance advocates and he told them that if they would furnish the material means he would close the places. This scheme was defeated, but for a year the saloons were closed by the Council, all applications for licenses being refused. It is said, however, that there was more drinking than ever during that period.

It was possibly during the term of the "Big Six," in the Council that Mr. Carey received his greatest prominence and he gave up his office about a year before the members went out of power. During that reign he caused a sensation by raiding the barroom of a local hotel while several Councilmen were drinking after closing hours. He detected the officials by looking through a transom in a door. It was probably this more than anything else that resulted in his retirement from the police department. Mr. Carey was fearless in the performance of his duty and in a great many respects was conceded to be a capable man for the head of the police department of a city.

After his retirement he gave his entire time to his original business, continuing in it until five or six years ago, when he moved to New York. It is said that during his absence he conducted a furniture and storage business in Hoboken. It is not known that he had been doing anything for several months prior to his death.

Mr. Carey is survived by a widow and two sons, Alvah Carey and Harry Carey.

Speaker for Commencement.

The speaker at the Plainfield High School commencement on June 16 will be Rev. Dr. Robert F. McArthur, who for many years has been prominent as pastor of the Calvary Baptist church in New York. Dr. McArthur is a brilliant orator.

W. H. ABBOTT WEDS MISS S. L. RANDOLPH

Nuptial Event at Home of Bride's Brother Witnessed by Concourse of Friends.

PRETTY DECORATIONS

REV. CHARLES E. HERRING THE OFFICIATING MINISTER.

Miss Lula F. Randolph Maid-of-Honor and William Moore Best Man—Groom's Gift to Bride a House and Lot.

Miss Sadie Louise Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester F. Randolph, of West Eighth street, and William H. Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, of West Front street, were married Friday at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother, Edward S. F. Randolph, 927 Park avenue, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, from this city and points distant.

No expense or effort was spared in the details and it was one of the notable events of the winter season. In the decorations the effect was pleasing. The parlor presented the colors of green and white, the dining room was pink and white, while the hall and library was green and white. The arrangement in the parlor included an improvised altar, with a floral bell, surrounded by a bank of palms, with an aisle leading from the staircase to the altar. This was made of smilax and ribbons, the pages carrying the ribbons being Edward Abbott, brother of the groom, and Edmund Smith, of Nyack, N. Y. Smilax and roses were used chiefly in the decorations.

While the Lohengrin wedding march was being played on the piano by Miss May Randolph, of this city, the bridal party wended its way to the parlor Preceding were the ushers, Richard F. Randolph, brother of the bride, and Clifford D. Manning, of this city, and Burns R. Hack, of Ohio.

Following the ushers was the flower girl, Catherine M. Randolph, niece of the bride, who wore a dress of white point d'esprit over white taffeta. She carried a basket of white roses and carnations. Miss Lula F. Randolph, sister of the bride, was the maid-of-honor. Her gown was of pale green crepe, trimmed with pearl and point d'esprit lace. Her bouquet was of white carnations. They were followed by the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. The bride was gowned in Lansdowne, trimmed with point and pearl lace trimmings. She wore a tulle veil fastened in the coiffure with an ornament and a spray of orange blossoms and she carried bridal roses.

The groom and his best man, William Moore, of East Second street, met the party at the altar, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

After the celebration of the happy event, congratulations were received by the couple and an elaborate wedding repast was served. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Abbott left Plainfield to enjoy a southern honeymoon. Upon their return they will live in Plainfield, where the groom has a well-established real estate and insurance business.

The gifts received were handsome and costly, comprising nearly everything that a favored bride might receive. Possibly the most notable gift was from the groom. It was a deed for a house and lot which he presented free of incumbrance. In the exchange of gifts among the bridal party the best man and ushers received from the groom novelty stick pins, while the maid-of-honor received a gold bracelet and the flower girl a gold locket from the bride. Miss Randolph, who played the wedding march received a handsome stick pin from the bride.

The bride is a well-known and popular young woman. There were about one hundred guests present at the wedding from Philadelphia, New York, Newark, Nyack, N. Y., Spring Valley, N. Y., Plainfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Flemington, Salem and from England.

MR. CLARK'S WILL PROBATED

THE MILLIONAIRE LEFT HIS ESTATE TO HIS WIFE AND SONS.

The will of the late James Clark, of West Seventh street, was offered for probate at the Surrogate's office, Elizabeth, yesterday. The records show that his property passes to his lineal heirs, there being no public bequests whatever. The estate is valued at $10,000,000. John H. VanWinkle and son, John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Esq., are the legal representatives for the estate. The property will left to his wife and two sons.

MINISTER'S HOT SHOT FIRED AT "MACHINE"

Rev. John McMurray Hits Those Who Defeated Ordinance to Increase License.

ATTACK ON POLITICIANS

STRONG WORDS OF MINISTER AT Y. M. C. A. MEN'S MEETING.

Are Plainfielders Living Under a Limited Monarchy, He Asked—Declared That Liquor Dealers Won a Victory In This City.

The Plainfield Common Council was mixed fore and aft by a tremendous broadside of oratorical hot shot delivered by Rev. John McMurray, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Sunday afternoon. Mr. McMurray was addressing the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, and was particularly outspoken in his attack. His remarks were the result of the action of the Council in refusing to raise the liquor license fees.

The speaker said that while the people of Plainfield hold up their hands in horror at the practices of Tammany and the leaders of "the ring" in Philadelphia, it is just possible that conditions quite as bad may exist here at home. Several times in the course of his remarks, he referred to the political leader of Plainfield who is able to mold the Council to his absolute will.

He spoke of the hopes that had been entertained by the good people of the city that something might be gained against the liquor traffic when the Common Council had its opportunity to raise the license, and said that those hopes had been dashed to earth by two "suave gentlemen," one representing the liquor interests of the State and the other Plainfield's boss.

Said the first suave gentleman to the second: "We don't want you to make this license, because it would influence other cities in the State to follow your example and injure our business." And it was done as the suave gentlemen ordered. And the result is the same old license fee and an unlimited possibility for more saloons.

"I am sorry," said Mr. McMurray, "to have to stand here and say that the liquor dealers of the State can rightly claim that they won their great victory in Plainfield—a victory against the church and against the home. And it was because these two suave gentlemen were able to mold others to their will like putty." The result is there are seventeen applications for licenses.

Mr. McMurray regarded the liquor traffic as illegitimate, he said. He had nothing personally against Mr. Goff. But the conditions with reference to the saloon in the West End have reached a point where the wonder is whether there is anything to prevent their continual gaining ground.

Back of Mr. Goff, he said, is the Rising Sun Brewing Company of Elizabeth. Before a single brick was laid in his hotel, Mr. Goff was given assurances that he would receive his license. This assurance was given six months ago. And it has turned out that the man who gave the assurance knew well whereof he spoke. He knew his power as boss.

"Is it a little remarkable that we are living in Plainfield? Is the city of Plainfield to be a government of the brewer, for the brewer and by the brewer?"

Mr. McMurray then referred to the effects of Goff's hotel upon surrounding property. Next to it, he said, lives a widow who can ill afford the loss of value that her property will suffer as a result of the saloon's proximity. "The neighbors don't want the saloon," he said, "but the saloon will be there nevertheless, because financially we are living under a Republican form of government. And next year there will be more saloons if the Rising Sun Brewing Company wants them."

I cannot help thinking, said Mr. McMurray, that the five men who voted for a higher license are more truly men than the five who voted against it.

He concluded by asking his hearers to "say to the suave gentleman who manipulates the affairs of the Common Council to tell the other suave gentleman who represents the liquor traffic that the public sentiment of Plainfield will not permit the granting of more licenses."

ENDEAVORERS OBSERVE DAY

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH SOCIETY.

"Christian Endeavor Day" was observed by special exercises last Friday at the Park Avenue Baptist church, in celebration of the twenty-third anniversary of the inception of the Christian Endeavor movement throughout the world. The members of the Junior society joined with the seniors in presenting an appropriate and attractive programme.

Mrs. W. S. Lowry led the meeting and explained the world-wide influence of the Endeavorers' work. She said that the center of the Christian Endeavor Society is in the church; that it believes in and help home missions as well as foreign; that it also does mission work in the homes.

A letter of encouragement was read by Miss Cora B. Brokaw from "Father Endeavorer" Francis E. Clark. J. M. Hawkins spoke instructively of "The Increase Campaign: a World Movement." The pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, gave a valuable talk on "Deciding for Christ."

A consecration service of the juniors with "Christ for the World; Caries for Me" as its topic was held, all of the children answering to their names, as called from the roll, with a verse of scripture. The services opened with the singing of the hymn, "Come Thou Almighty God," a silent prayer and responsive reading. A musical selection was given by a quartette composed of Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Florence Hawkins, W. S. Lowry and Charles VanWinkle.

SIXTY NEW CARS ARE READY

COL. HINE, OF P. S. C., MAKES A WELCOME ANNOUNCEMENT.

Colonel E. W. Hine, the newly appointed assistant to President Thomas N. McCarter of the Public Service Corporation, announced yesterday that sixty new car bodies had been received by the company from Philadelphia, ready to be put to service as soon as the motors could be installed. Three new cars were put in service on Thursday, making forty altogether.

"From now on," said Colonel Hine, "this corporation will be able to place two new cars in operation every working day until the three hundred we have ordered are all in active use. What is most needed is more cars. We will cease instituting radical attempts at reform among our men for the present, and direct every effort to turning out new cars. We have been more or less hampered by delays in shipments, but there is no likelihood that there will be any more delay in that particular, and our workmen are being rushed to their full capacity."

A Brokers' Lunch Club.

The Brokers' Lunch Club was incorporated at Albany on Saturday for the purpose of maintaining restaurant, library and reading rooms in New York city. Among the directors are L. V. F. Randolph, president of the New York Consolidated Exchange, and W. J. Alpers, of Westfield.

MR. MELLICK'S STAG PARTY

DOZEN MEN DINE AND HAVE A JOLLY TIME TOGETHER.

A stag dinner, attended by many pleasant features, was given by George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, at his home last Friday, in honor of Charles Marshall, who recently moved to this city, occupying the property corner of Watchung avenue. Covers were laid for twelve, including guests from New York. Those present were George Wharton Edwards, Elliot T. Barrows, E. H. Ladd, Jr., Charles Marshall, Dexter O. Tiffany, A. H. Ritzebury, George P. Mellick, A. V. Healy and Mr. Morse, Mr. Warren, Mr. Geller and Harry Hatch, of New York.

MARRIED AN ELIZABETH GIRL

JOHN COLLINS WEDDED MISS SARAH FLYNN IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

John Collins, a machinist employed at the Potter Press Works, and Miss Sarah Flynn, of Elizabeth, were married in St. Mary's church, Elizabeth, on Thursday by the rector, Rev. Father O'Neil, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The bride was attended by Miss Kate Smith, of Elizabeth, while William Vogbt, also an employe at the Potter Press Works, was best man. The couple took a short wedding trip and are now residing in Mariners avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Collins received a great many handsome and useful presents from their friends.

Dangerous Rummage Sale.

The rummage sale is making its appearance in various towns throughout the State again. A few years ago these sales were condemned and stopped by the health authorities, and that influence should be set to work again. Cast off clothing and articles of every kind and description are gathered up and dumped into these sales, to be handled by hundreds of women and children, who may thus be brought into contact with disease germs. Such sales are a menace to the public health, especially at a time when small-pox, scarlet fever and diphtheria are epidemic in the community where they are held, as they are in this city. They are apt to do far more damage to a community than the few dollars they net the organization that promotes them can ever repay.—Trenton State Gazette.

Mr. Marsh Spoke.

At the Somerset County Bar Association dinner at Somerville Friday night the principal addresses were made by Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth and Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield. The other speakers were Alvah A. Clark, James J. Bergen, Prosecutor Griggs and Major Nelson Y. Dungan. An elaborate course dinner was served.

Mr. Brady Resigns.

Clifford Brady has resigned his position as bookkeeper in the electric department of the Public Service Corporation at the company's offices in West Second street. He held the position ten years.

ICE GORGE FLOODS

Susquehanna Rising Causes Immense Damage.

PEOPLE FLEE TO THE MOUNTAINS

The Pennsylvania and Lackawanna Roads Are Blocked by High Water—Mill Hands Rescued—Ice Jammed For Thirty Miles.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 10.—The flood along the Susquehanna grows worse every hour, and despite the cold weather the water is still rising. Much of the rise is due to the water backing up from the immense gorge which bottles up the river below Bloomsburg and which grows stronger instead of breaking.

Communication with the west side of the river has been cut off, and the water is over the farm lands opposite this city. Nanticoke is surrounded by high water from both the river and the creek. Plymouth is flooded along the shore front, and street car traffic is suspended. At Espry the streets are under water, and the river is rising at the rate of eight inches an hour. People are hurriedly leaving their homes and fleeing to the mountains. Four feet of water covers the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western tracks at Ruper, and there no trains have gone through on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The rapidly rising river has driven 300 people out of their homes at Plymouth, and a number at Nanticoke have also been forced to leave. So rapidly did the flood rise that a hundred silk mill girls at Plymouth were caught before they could escape and had to be taken out of the second story windows in boats. At Firwood, in the southern part of this city, many families had to leave their homes as the waters advanced, and others who remained in the hope of its receding were taken out in boats. Westmoreland and the flats opposite this city are flooded, and the people there are cut off from this city.

The towns of Bloomsburg and Catawissa, on the north branch of the Susquehanna, are under sixteen feet of water, with a flood coming down the river upon them which threatens to annihilate them.

A monster ice jam thirty miles long, formed two weeks ago, is backing the water up on all sides and gives no evidence of breaking.

Twenty miles above the towns, at Shickshinny, is another big jam. In case this should break untold damage will result for miles below.

People have moved from their homes and are praying for relief.

In many cases the channel of the river has been changed, and it is now flowing over farm lands and through villages.

Employees Jumped to Escape Fire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—More than a dozen employees, among them several women, were compelled to jump from the second story windows by a sudden outbreak of fire in the Brooklyn Chair company's factory in Waverly avenue. Several were overtaken by the flames and severely burned before they could make their escape, and it is feared that two will die. The factory was entirely destroyed, involving a loss of about $100,000. The building was formerly the Central Baptist church. John Sembler, one of those who jumped from a window, is dead. Two other employes are missing, and it is feared that they have perished.

Wealthiest Negro In St. Louis Shot.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 10.—During a gambling quarrel Jim Ray, one of the best known fighters in the local sporting world, a leading negro politician and reputed to have been the wealthiest negro in St. Louis, was shot and killed in a pistol battle in which thirty shots were fired at the Falstaff club, a saloon. His partner, John Arthur, is dying from wounds received in the fight. Samuel Grimes, twenty-eight years old, proprietor of the Falstaff, is under arrest. He was not wounded.

Coffee and Tobacco Used, Died at 102.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 10.—Philip Keifer, a wealthy retired manufacturer, who celebrated the one hundred and second anniversary of his birth a few months ago, is dead here. He came to Dayton from Maryland in 1832. He drank six cups of coffee daily all his life and was an inveterate user of tobacco.

Bandits Crack a Safe.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 10.—A special from Commerce, Tex., says that bandits have cracked the safe of a bank at Ravia, I. T., and secured $1,700. The citizens, aroused by the noise of the explosions, attacked the robbers. Firing ensued, but no one was hurt. The robbers escaped.

COUNCILMAN CLARK TENDERS RESIGNATION

Action of Popular Borough Official a Complete Surprise to His Colleagues.

NO REASON IS GIVEN

DUE TO UNPLEASANTNESS OVER FIRE DEPARTMENT CONTROVERSY.

Letter of Resignation Laid on Table —Councilman Northrop Suggests That His Colleges Urge Mr. Clark to Reconsider.

Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., resigned as a member of the North Plainfield Council last Friday. Mr. Clark was not present. His resignation was read by Borough Clerk Frank Rowley. No reasons were given. The other members of the body were taken by surprise. It was plain that such action on the part of Mr. Clark was not anticipated. The only persons who did not seem to be the least surprised were the firemen who had assembled in large numbers to hear the death knell of the volunteer department sounded. The resignation was not accepted. Councilman James E. Arnold moved that the communication be tabled and Councilman Northrop seconded his motion. In doing so Mr. Northrop said it was with general regret that Mr. Clark has decided to take the action he has not only to the members of the Common Council but to the people at large. He said he was a most valuable man to the borough and he suggested that each member personally see Mr. Clark and endeavor to induce him to reconsider his action.

Mr. Clark's resignation was unaccompanied with any reason for taking such action. The cause dates back to the time when the Council first suggested moving into the new fire headquarters building. The Council, it is alleged, has overstepped Mr. Clark, who was chairman of the fire committee and his friends say he was practically forced to resign. He has been accused of catering to the firemen in the matter and although he has threatened to take the action he did last night it was generally believed that a truce had been patched up. Consequently the offering of his resignation last night produced great surprise among the councilmen. Rumors of such action have been rife among the firemen during the past few days but they could not be verified.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS

COMMITTEE OF CRESCENT AVENUE* CHURCH SELECTING A DESIGN.

The latest congregation to adopt the individual communion cups is the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The matter was decided some time ago. Dr. E. W. Hedges and F. H. Andrews have been appointed a committee to investigate the matter and report on what they consider the most suitable design. The committee is now seeking information on the subject and it is expected that within a short time the new order will be in effect. At present there are several Plainfield churches using the individual sets, including the Seventh-Day Baptist, First Baptist and Park Avenue Baptist churches and Warren chapel. Other churches have the matter under consideration.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Party Given in Honor of Miss Blanche Derry on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Startup, of Westervelt avenue, gave a pleasant party on Saturday in honor of Miss Blanche Derry, who was observing her ninth birthday anniversary. There were nineteen young boys and girls present to enjoy the usual features of such an occasion. Miss Derry received a number of handsome and useful presents and the event will always be remembered as one of the most enjoyable of her life.

Rule Works Both Ways.

The "theatrical trust" in Philadelphia has been rudely jarred by the "newspaper trust," all the daily newspapers with one exception having increased the rate for theatrical advertising to 40 cents a line. Some of the theatres are trying to get along without the newspapers but are losing money and will eventually have to make terms with the publishers.—Camden Post-Telegram.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN DISBAND ON MARCH 15

North Plainfield Council to Make Appointments for Paid Department on Feb. 19.

HOSPITAL IS REFUSED

BOROUGH CAN GIVE NO AID TO THAT INSTITUTION.

Smalley Objected to Aiding Hospital —Councilman Lee Appointed to Fill Vacancy on Park Committee—Reports for Month.

The North Plainfield Volunteer Fire Department has passed into history and after March 15 it will be superceded by a paid fire department. The event was marked by the passage of the ordinance on its third reading at the North Plainfield Council meeting last Friday. The appointments will be made at a special meeting of the Council which will be held on Friday evening, February 19. In order to pay for the increased cost of a paid department in the borough Councilman Northrop made a motion to the effect that the liquor licenses across the brook be increased to $600 a year for wholesale and retail.

This is an increase of $350 a year for the retail dealers and $200 a year for wholesale dealers. Mr. Northrop's motion included a clause to the effect that the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset County be asked to make such charges in the future. It is understood that the liquor dealers "across the brook" will fight the scheme. In offering this resolution Mr. Northrop explained that the increase in license fees would help maintain the department although it would not carry the extra cost entirely. He said it would help keep down the tax rate, incidental to the change. The chamber was filled with firemen and after the meeting their remarks were anything but complimentary to the Council. A meeting was held afterwards in the Warren Engine Company headquarters.

A communication was read from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital asking the Council to contribute $600 a year towards the support of the institution. Councilman Northrop said that there was no law which authorized the Council to grant the petition. He said that the institution deserved the support of all Plainfielders and North Plainfielders but he could not find any law which gave the Council permission to donate that amount. Mayor Smalley declared he would be opposed to donating such a sum to the hospital even if such permission was granted by law. He said that the majority of the people of North Plainfield trade in this city and that the support of the hospital by the trades people was practically the support of North Plainfield residents. It was moved to notify the Board of Governors of the action of the Council.

In view of the fact that Mr. Clark resigned, Councilman Lee, chairman of the police committee, was appointed one of the park committee with Councilmen Arnold and Van-Aradale. The committee will confer with the Board of Trade park committee of this city and also with a committee to be appointed by the Common Council of this city. Mayor Smalley stated that the sentiment in both the borough and city was in favor of the proposed park.

Councilman Arnold offered a resolution authorizing the Corporation Counsel to proceed against the Public Service Corporation to collect $164.20 due on street repair work. Mr. Arnold said that he has repeatedly tried to have this claim settled but without avail. He said the Corporation had ignored the claims of the borough.

Mr. Arnold reported that the street expenditures for the month amounted to $61.50. Mr. Lee reported that there had been ten arrests and $74 collected in fines. Bills amounting to $5,709 were ordered paid. This includes $3,700, which is a balance on the 1903 school tax not yet received. A check for $1,500 was ordered paid to J. H. Snyder, on account of the new fire engine house.

Borough Tax Collector Brown's report was as follows: Taxes, $3,314.15; Board of Health, $43.36; special school tax, $1,800.30; recorder fines, $74; telephone franchise tax, $43.04; liquor license, $679.75; Public Service Corporation, $350; Chief Stahl, $24.50; total receipts, $21,142.36; disbursements, $11,849.11; cash on hand, $9,293.25; borough fund, $8,144.67; engine house fund, $1,148.58.

PARK CLUB TEAM WON BOWLING MATCH

Cranford Casino Captured Only One in a Series of Three on Park Alleys.

WAS A FINE EXHIBITION

LOCAL AGGREGATION ROLLED OVER 800 IN EACH GAME.

Cranford Got Last One by 22 Pins, Rolling a 901—McCutchen Made a 201, Dumont, 204—The Standing of the League.

The Park bowling team took the Cranford Casino team into camp, last night, by winning two of the series of three in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament on the local alleys. The evidence of hard luck which has been following the Parks throughout the season was shown. After rolling considerably over 800 in each of the three games, they lost the last one by 22 pins, the Cranford team surprising themselves as well as their opponents by rolling a score of 901. In the other two games Cranford rolled below 700.

The general work of the Parks was of the prize-winning order. Individually the members rolled much better than in other games thus far. McCutchen rolled 201 in the third game, while Long tallied 200 in the second game. In the last game Dumont rolled up a score of 204 and F. O. Ball, who has been doing fine work throughout the season put up a score of 201 in the first game, 196 in the second and 181 in the third. The Parks rolled more 200 scores than at any time since the tournament opened and ordinarily should have taken all three games.

On the average the Cranford team did not put up high scores. Plummer was high man with a score of 203, while Crane rolled 195, second high score. The detailed score of the series is as follows:

PARKS.				CRANFORD.
W.M'CH'N	182	166	201	Crane	167	174	195
Long	152	200	129	Brackett	159	180	179
M.J.Dmont	177	144	204	Bayliss	137	176	126
F. O. Ball	201	196	181	Bates	156	124	198
Dr. Thiers	130	161	164	Plummer	141	179	203
	832	867	879		760	773	901

This is the standing in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament:

	Won.	Lost.
Westfield	22	5
Roselle	18	9

Cranford	4	20

NO MANŒUVRES.

First Brigade Will Not Hold Its Annual Drill This Year It is Said.

Because the manœuvres of the United States army occur in September the First Brigade of the New Jersey National Guard will stay at home. There is a provision in the army regulation for taking each year one brigade of each State's troops, thus giving all State troops a chance to get "up" in manœuvres.

The time does not fit the demands of the rushing State of New Jersey. Brigadier General Gillmore said: "No State troops of New Jersey will go because September is a busy month and manufacturers cannot let their men go out. We recognize these needs and that is why our State camps are held in July.

"Were we to order out a brigade to accompany army manœuvres many of our soldiers would find their jobs gone upon returning."

Trinity Commandery's Affair.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold its annual "ladies' night" Monday, February 29. A varied entertainment will be given by J. Williams Macey, a professional vaudeville performer of much versatility, a male quartette and an orchestra of six or seven pieces. The committee from the commandery in charge consists of James A. Stafford, Jacob Kirkner, Samuel Bingaman, B. T. Conklin, H. W. Marshall and L. B. Woolston.

Wants Judgment Opened.

An argument over the question of having judgment opened in the case in tort of Lena Cinguage against Victor Roach took place before Judge VanSickle at Trenton yesterday. The plaintiff was recently given judgment for $600 in the District Court in Elizabeth. Negotiations for a settlement in the case are under way and in the hope of their bringing results the argument was adjourned yesterday by agreement of counsel to February 27.

Miss Lillian V. D. Hoagland, of Ocean Grove, is visiting her brother, A. O. Hoagland, of 339 Park avenue.

A RECEIVERSHIP IS STAYED

COURT OF CHANCERY ALLOWS ASSIGNEE TO CONTINUE BUSINESS.

A rather complicated case in law has followed the assignment of James F. Daly, a grocer of this city, to J. Fred MacDonald, the latest development being the granting of permission to MacDonald as assignee to continue to sell the goods and chattels of the assignor until February 23, to which time the application for a receiver has been continued.

Daly made the assignment to MacDonald February 8, and on the following day, on application of W. S. Angleman, Esq., representing Daly and the assignee, the Union County Orphan's Court issued an order empowering the assignee to do business for thirty days more. On February 11, W. R. Codington, Esq., representing Mary E. Goggin, filed a bill in chancery to foreclose two chattel mortgages which his client claimed covered the goods and chattels assigned to MacDonald. One of these mortgages, it was claimed, was taken out by Hirst & Henderson, who formerly conducted the business in question and the other by Daly himself when he first undertook to conduct the business.

Vice Chancellor Stevens granted a rule to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed and directed the assignee to cease doing business. This rule Vice Chancellor Emery, of Newark, yesterday modified and, as stated, allowed the assignee to continue to sell the goods and chattels until February 23.

MILITARY DRILLS IN P. H. S.

BATTALION HAS BEEN FORMED AND DRILLS WILL COMMENCE AT ONCE.

Military drill is to be re-established as a department of the work of the city High School and a battalion will be formed. This was announced at a meeting of the boys of the school, yesterday, conducted by Principal I. W. Trawell.

The drills will begin next Tuesday in Company K's hall on West Front street. They will be held weekly from 2:15 until 3 in the afternoon. Participation in the drills will not be compulsory this year but will count as a supplementary study.

The plan is to allow those who elect military drill to drop a study at the end of three years or to use the percentage obtained to secure a higher rank at graduation. Owing to the shortness of the present term, the buying of uniforms will not be made necessary until next year.

It is probable that three or more companies will be formed, including, as heretofore, a detachment from the Whittier School. As in previous years, Instructor J. D. Macnab, of the High School, will have charge of the drills, assisted by student officers grading down from members of the senior class.

The proposition has met with general favor among the pupils and the work will undoubtedly be undertaken with much enthusiasm.

OPPOSING LICENSE.

West End People to Meet and Protest Against Liquor Application.

That there is a strong feeling among many residents of the West End against the granting of a saloon or hotel license in the vicinity of West Front street and Clinton avenue, cannot be denied, and there has been some talk of holding a meeting of citizens to take some action which will convince the Council of the strength of the opposition.

Rev. John McMurray, of the Monroe Avenue church, while interested in the proposed action, is not a leader in the movement to hold a meeting. Mr. McMurray says he will not oppose such a meeting, believing it to be a wise thing. He also says that it is possible that the meeting, if held, will be at his church. He thinks it is about time the Council understands the sentiment of the people in the West End of the city. No date has as yet been fixed for the meeting.

Glee Club Concert.

The Wesleyan University Glee, Mandolin and Guitar Clubs will give a concert at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Tuesday, April 5. The entertainment will be under the auspices of the Men's Association and the Young Men's Class of the church.

Gum Printing.

A. B. Luce, of the Plainfield Camera Club, will give a demonstration of gum printing on Monday night, February 22, for the benefit of the other members who have not devoted much time to this feature of photography.

ANOTHER APARTMENT HOUSE IS PLANNED

Mr. Stillman Contemplates Erecting Structure to Cost Approximately $45,000.

TWENTY-FOUR SUITES.

THE ARCHITECT HAS ALREADY COMPLETED PLANS.

Building to Adjoin Stillman Flats and to Front on Madison Avenue—Contractors Now Estimating on Approximate Cost.

William M. Stillman, Esq., has in contemplation the erection of a handsome apartment house on his property on Madison avenue, between his present building and the brook, and if the plans, as drawn by Architect Clum are carried out, the structure will be a desirable improvement to that section of the city. The new building, if erected, will correspond in exterior architecture to Mr. Stillman's building on Front street, and will harmonize in all essential particulars.

The plans provide for twenty-four apartments, all to be of the latest design. Owing to the situation of the property the rooms would be light and airy, as well as very convenient. While it is not definitely known what the cost of the structure will be, it is understood that the contract price will be between $40,000 and $50,000. The plans are now in the hands of contractors who are estimating on the same. When these figures are presented Mr. Stillman will decide whether he will build or not.

GOODWIN CASE POSTPONED

CHANCELLORS WANT RECORDER'S ACCOUNT OF TESTIMONY BEFORE HIM.

Before Vice Chancellors Pitney and Hendrickson in the Supreme Court in Trenton yesterday, John Goodwin's appeal of borough of North Plainfield's case against him was reviewed. A postponement was taken to Tuesday, February 23 to give Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed an opportunity of getting Recorder Doud, before whom the case was originally tried, to certify to the testimony given at that trial. Goodwin was represented by Assemlyman Samuel S. Swackhamer.

Mr. Reed applied for permission to secure from the Recorder a certified copy of the testimony of the trial. Mr. Swackhamer objected to this on the ground that from Recorder Doud's own admission to him there was not a penscratch of the testimony taken down, and therefore he could not certify to it.

Vice Chancellor Pitney, however, decided to give Mr. Reed the opportunity he asked for with the stipulation that the borough pay the cost of bringing the evidence up.

To Use Voting Machines.

President Wakelee, of the State Senate says that the voting machines must be used in those places where elections are to be held this spring. An idea had gone abroad that the machines are to be used only at the general fall election, but Mr. Wakelee says that that was erroneous, and the machines must be used at the spring elections in order to comply with the law.

Supreme Court Opens.

The February term of the Supreme Court opened at Trenton yesterday morning with fifty-seven cases listed in the main court and 110 cases in the main branch court. Afterward there were twelve cases added to the list. Most of the entire time until luncheon time was occupied in a readjustment of the calendar.

Church Society's Reports.

The Unitarian Branch Alliance met in All Souls' church yesterday afternoon to receive the reports of the treasurer, Mrs. Gates Willard, and the secretary, Mrs. S. Haff. The money raised by the alliance during the year past has been wholly by subscription and has amounted to $400. This will be devoted to the general church and organ funds.

LATEST WAR DISPATCHES

A dispatch from Tientsin says that the big Russian battery on Golden Hill, guarding the entrance to Port Arthur, has been blown up and it is reported that someone inside the battery did the work. Treachery has been discovered in the Russian ranks. Troops are being mobolized at Port Arthur, the Czar's army preparing for a siege. Report from Shanghai declares that 15,000 troops are embarking on transports for Corea. The Russians have lost 400 torpedoes which were stored on the Varing.

The most interesting possibility suggested by the news from the Far East, says a dispatch from London, is that Russia may abandon Port Arthur and the rest of the Liaotung Peninsula, concentrating her land forces farther north, with the centre at Harbin.

PRODUCED SOME TABLEAUX

GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY OF GRACE CHURCH GAVE ENTERTAINMENT.

The interesting novel "Cranford" was portrayed in a series of twenty tableaux in the parish house of Grace church, last night, by the members of the Girls' Friendly Society. There were over two hundred people present and the entertainment was an unqualified success, $100 being the net profit to be placed in the treasury of the society.

Miss Tracy had full charge of training the young folks for the tableaux and each one brought forth hearty applause. In addition to the entertainment there were fancy and candy tables. Miss Rowland and Miss Rodman were in charge of the candy table and Miss Richardson and Mrs. William Clark the fancy table. Miss Adams was the cashier.

Mrs. E. C. Perkins, as president of the Girl's Friendly Society, had general supervision of the whole affair and to her and her assistants, is due the credit for the success attained.

ALMOST FROZEN TO DEATH

THERE'S A MORAL IN THE MISFORTUNE WHICH HAS BEFALLEN SMITH.

In a fainting condition from a combination of too much drink and exposure, James Smith was arrested on West End avenue and taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon. Smith lives on Grant avenue and evidently lost his bearings on his way home last night. He stumbled upon the piazza of H. D. Williams' house on West End avenue at 10 o'clock, and badly frightened the inmates by calling for help, saying that he was frozen, and was kicking madly at the front door. Mr. Williams found the man almost frozen, but revived him by working his arms back and forth, rubbing his hands and face with snow and employing other methods of resuscitation. Smith will be brought before City Judge Runyon tomorrow morning on a charge of being drunk.

Mr. Clark at Banquet.

Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, attended the banquet of the United Hatters' Association, at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, Tuesday. Mr. Clark is a member of the firm of Wharton & Co., proprietors of a large hat plant in Newark.

Proceeds of Baseball Fair.

It was said this morning by one of the members of the St. Mary's baseball committee, having in charge of the recent fair held by that baseball nine that the net proceeds amounted to $214 85. This is in excess of what the committee hoped for.

Only a Chimney Fire.

A chimney fire in the house of William Davison, of 930 South avenue, called out No. 2 hose wagon and the Chief at 8:20 o'clock last night, on a still alarm. A single extinguisher was sufficient to control the blaze. There was no damage.

AMITY'S CARRIAGE TO STAY IN PLAINFIELD

Trustees of Exempt Firemen's Association Won't Let Relic Be Sent to St. Louis.

DECISION NOW FINAL.

PRIZE OF LOCAL FIREMEN VALUED AT $10,000.

Unsuccessful Efforts to Obtain It for Exhibition at Louisiana Purchase Exposition—History of the Hose Carriage.

The famous Amity hose carriage will not be exhibited at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This was decided upon at a meeting of the trustees of the Exempt Firemen's Association Monday night. The action was taken from the fear of accident befalling the relic the value of which is $10,000 The carriage is mounted with solid silver.

The action of the trustees has occasioned much surprise among those interested. At a meeting of the Exempts last month the matter to allow the carriage to be exhibited was placed in the hands of the board of trustees. It was announced then that former Chief Hale, of Kansas City, had given Chief Doane assurances that ample protection would be afforded the relic.

The hose carriage was originally the property of the Amity Hose Company in the days of volunteer firemen in New York city. The company was composed of wealthy New Yorkers and the carriage was the pride of their hearts. Through the efforts of John W. Murray, Sr., it was brought to this city, after it had had a narrow escape from destruction in the Crystal Palace fire. It had been stored away on Staten Island and was subsequently sold for storage charges.

BOROUGH POLITICAL NEWS

COMING CAMPAIGN PROMISES TO BE A MOST EXCITING ONE.

The political pot in the borough has begun to boil. The friends and enemies of Mayor Smalley are arrayed against each other as they were two years ago and much as some would like to see the question buried for the present, the two political parties are lining up for one of the most bitter political struggles seen in the borough in years, with the possible exception of the campaign of 1901. The ranks of the Democratic party will be augmented by many firemen. Recent councilmanic measures affecting the fire department are responsible for the action of the firemen and their sympathizers. Although some of the borough Democrats are in favor of supporting a citizens' ticket, it is believed that the majority would have a straight Democratic ballot, depending upon the firemen for success. The firemen, on the other hand, it is believed, would like to fight their own battle, their object being to secure representation in the Council.

It is generally conceded that George F. Brown, borough tax collector, and Elston M. French, assessor, are strong candidates for re-election. That they will be again placed in office is almost certain. The real fight will come in electing councilmen. The election of a freeholder, viewed from the standpoint of other borough issues, is quite a secondary consideration. Andrew Lutkins is regarded as the most likely candidate. It is merely a case of speculation whether or not there will be three parties in the field, but the probabilities are there will be but two.

CARRIED A GUN.

Colored Man Arrested as Result of Chief's Strict Orders.

The general police order for the arrest of all persons in the city acting suspiciously caused the arrest last night of Oscar Bell by Patrolman McCarthy. Bell was searched and a revolver found in his pocket. He will be brought before City Judge Runyon tomorrow morning on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Criterion's Dance.

The members of the Criterion Club are arranging to give another dance next month in the Casino. A committee has been appointed to make arrangements. Harry Blimm and Harry DeMeza are the chairmen and secretary, respectively.

Miss Ray Warnock, of Craig place, has returned from a visit with relatives in Englewood.

PROPOSED TROLLEY EXTENSION

AGITATION TO BUILD LINE BETWEEN PLAINFIELD AND MORRISTOWN.

The agitation for a trolley road to Watchung and Morristown from this city is being revived. The farmers who sent a petition to Colonel Hine, of the then Plainfield, Elizabeth and Central Jersey Railway Company, are still in favor of the new trolley and stand ready today to give grants of land free of charge to be used as a right of way if the Public Service Corporation will agree to operate an electric line between here and Morristown. The Somerset county farmers are solid for the improvement and it is believed the Morris county farmers would like to see the same improvement.

There is no direct communication whatever between Morristown and Plainfield excepting by carriage. A farmer in speaking of the improvement said yesterday: "The trolley line would not be over fifteen miles in length at the most. The extension would be built through the Somerset street notch, to Stirling, 5 miles; Millington, 2 miles; Basking Ridge, 2 miles; and to Bernardsville, in Somerset county, 3 miles more. From Morristown to Bernardsville the extension would be a little over 5 miles, making in all, a trolley line about sixteen miles in length. A system of freight express cars could be operated on the line and this would no doubt be generously patronized by the farmers living in that section of the country who would make Plainfield a market for their products."

BANKER'S DOUBLE AFFLICTION

BRUNSON LOSES HIS POWER OF SMELL AS WELL AS HIS EYESIGHT.

The unfortunate condition of Augustus J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, whose eyesight was recently lost while making some experiments in his factory on Rock avenue, may possibly be still further aggravated by a permanent loss of smell. When a bouquet of flowers was placed near his nose for that purpose there was not the slightest response to that faculty.

At the time of the accident the explosion not only caused great injury to the face and eyes, but the fumes of the gasolene were breathed through the nostrils and mouth to the lungs and throat. On Monday a strong light was placed in front of Mr. Brunson's face to ascertain whether he would notice it. He was not informed of the test and he took no notice of it.

WHIST CLUB'S AFFAIR.

Tuesday Night Organization Had an Enjoyable Time Last Night.

Progressive hearts were played last night at the meeting of the Tuesday Night Whist Club at the home of Miss Saunderson on Fairview avenue. There were about twenty members of the club and their friends present and a pleasant evening was spent. Miss Ella Smith, of Westfield, and John Wilson, of Bound Brook, won the first prizes. Miss Lotta Castelton, of Findern, won the woman's consolation prize and John Martin, of Somerset street, was given the men's consolation prize.

In serving the refreshments the young women waited on the men. They asked their escorts to dance. Music rendered by Russel Powers, of Bound Brook, was a feature of the evening.

A. C. Hoagland Resigns.

A. C. Hoagland, who has been in charge of the housefurnishing goods' department at Hill & Stupp's dry goods store, has resigned his position, to take effect March 1. Mr. Hoagland has secured a similar position with a large dry goods house at Long Branch, where he will be near his native town, Ocean Grove. Mr. Hoagland has been in Plainfield five years, during which time he has made a host of friends.

Mr. Whiteside to be Graduated.

Rev. Francis E. Whiteside, of this city, will be graduated from Drew Theological Seminary, at Madison, next week, following the closing examinations. When the Newark Conference meets in March he will apply for admission and for a license as a regular preacher. Mr. Whiteside is in this city at present.

Union's Farmers' to Meet.

A regular meeting of the Union County Board of Agriculture will be held at the residence of E. P. Beebe, East Grand street, near Broad street, Elizabeth, this afternoon. The subject for discussion will be "Spraying of Fruit."

NEW PARISH HOUSE TO COST $20,000

Architects to Prepare Plans for Grace Church's Proposed New Structure.

PARISH IS GROWING

PRESENT BUILDING DOES NOT ANSWER THE REQUIREMENTS.

Sketch of Grace Church—First Called St. Mary's—Cornerstone Laid in 1854—On Present Site in 1875—Its Rectors.

It has been definitely decided by the congregation of Grace church to build a new parish house to take the place of the present structure which has outlived its usefulness, it being too small for the increasing demands of the parish. Steps have been taken to secure a new building, A. L. C. Marsh and Evarts Tracy, architects, having been invited to prepare plans in competition for the structure. It is estimated that the new parish house will cost between $15,000 and $20,000, the purpose being to erect a structure that will fully meet the needs of the parish for many years to come. It will be complete in every detail and be well adopted for the various objects for which it will be used, such as the holding of entertainments, a meeting place for the Sunday-school, the colored mission and meetings of the vestry and committees of the church. It has been announced that all of the collections received at the church on Easter Day will go toward the fund to erect the proposed parish house and a large sum is expected.

Under the guidance and zealous work of the rector, Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, the parish has grown steadily and there is increased interest in every department of the church work.

Grace church parish was formed about the year 1852, it then being known as "St. Mary's." This name being unsatisfactory, it was changed to "Grace Church" in 1853. On the 10th of July, 1854, the corner-stone of the church was laid by Bishop Doane, the location at this time being at the eastern end of the city. In 1868 efforts were made to change the location to one more desirable, but without success; however, the church was enlarged by the addition of a recess for the chancel and transept. In October 1875 property was purchased at the corner of Sixth and Sycamore streets, the present site of the parish house and the following summer the edifice was removed to its present position, rebuilt and enlarged and was used as a church until the present handsome stone edifice was erected at the corner of East Seventh and Sycamore streets, some years later. Among the rectors serving this parish were Rev. Philander E. Coe, Rev. R. G. Quennell, Rev. Dr. Thrall, Rev. Dr. Fox, and Rev. E. M. Rodman, the latter entering upon his duties November 1, 1870 and he continued in that position until Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson became rector a year ago last November. From its inception the church has steadily grown and prospered until today it is one of the most important and influential in the New Jersey Diocese.

SUIT AGAINST LAWYER.

Testimony Being Taken in Case Brought by W. H. Waldron.

For three days last week before William V. Steele, a specially-appointed Supreme Court commissioner, at his office in Somerville, and in Plainfield, testimony was taken in the case of William H. Waldron, of North Plainfield against Winfield S. Angleman, of Plainfield, on a rule to show cause. The rule was returnable before the Supreme Court at Trenton today and will be argued in the near future. It is of much interest to Somerset as well as Union County people, as the trend of the evidence indicates that a settlement was made with Waldron when he was greatly intoxicated.

Star Course Entertainment.

The programme for the Washington's birthday entertainment in the Star Y. M. C. A. Course promises variety of attractiveness. The entertainers include Marie Pierson, soprano; D. W. Robertson, sleigh bell performer, and Howard D. Argoe, musical director and accompanist. Among moving pictures to be shown will be a series of several of the Baltimore fire.

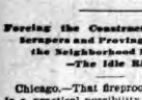
THE PRICE OF LAND

It Is Going Up in the Business District of Chicago.

THE EFFECT OF THE ADVANCE

Forcing the Construction of Sky-Scrapers and Proving a Boon for the Neighborhood Merchant —The Idle Rich.

Chicago.—That fireproof construction is a practical possibility was proven a few days ago when a fire occurred in the Masonic temple. The only thing that burned was the furniture in the suite of rooms in which the blaze started, and despite the fact that it was so high up that it was impossible for the fire department to reach it, it did but a trifling damage to property, and burned itself out within a few minutes for lack of material on which to feed.



Three Hundred Feet Above the Street.

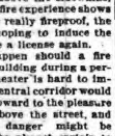
The Masonic temple is the tallest strictly office building in the city. There are within its walls 20 stories of offices and a few lodge rooms, though the masonic fraternity are abandoning it to a large extent. On top of these 20 floors of offices is a roof garden and vaudeville theater, and above this a roof observatory.

The Masonic Temple roof garden has been one of the popular places of amusement during the summer months for several years, and its seating capacity of 2,000 has often been taxed to the limit. The new theater ordinance placed a ban on this place of amusement, as it did on all play houses that were more than 12 feet above the sidewalks, but since the recent fire experience shows the building to be really fireproof, the management are hoping to induce the authorities to issue a license again.

What would happen should a fire break out in the building during a performance in the theater is hard to imagine. The great central corridor would carry the smoke upward to the pleasure seekers 200 feet above the street, and even though the danger might be trifling, it would be almost certain to produce a panic, and probably cause a loss of life before the 14 elevators could convey the audience to the street.

Necessity of Fireproof Construction.

Absolute fireproof construction is becoming more of a necessity every day in Chicago. Real estate conditions, and advance in real estate prices is making this so. The main business section of the city refuses to expand very far beyond a certain narrow limit of not over one square mile. The demand for offices in this little section has forced rentals to an abnormal price, though, of course, not so high as they are in certain sections of New York. This raise in rent values has brought a corresponding raise in land values, until it is no longer profitable to erect a comparatively small building in this section.



Caused by Rise in Land Values.

The First national bank is spending $3,000,000 in constructing a 16-story building on the land it owns at Dearborn and Monroe streets, and refused to improve the property or to add to the holdings it had there until the city council would remove the building limit which prevented the erection of anything higher than 14 stories. As soon as that limitation was removed, the construction of the building was begun, and is being pushed to rapid completion. The Daily Tribune, which had constructed its new building under the old ordinance, promptly added new floors when the new law made such a course possible.

With modern elevators and fireproof construction of steel and brick and stone only, the sixteenth floor becomes as valuable for offices as is the second or third floors. The First national bank considered those two additional floors to mean the difference between a profit or no profit on the investment. The new building is costing some $3,000,000 to construct, and aside from the Masonic temple, which cost $2,500,000, and the new post office, which is costing $4,000,000, is the most expensive building in the city.

Boon for the Small Merchant.

There is another effect this crowding of the downtown district is having. It is building up the patronage of the neighborhood store at the expense of the big department emporiums of the city. It has been the fashion to run to the big department stores for everything wanted. The housewife who wished a yard of ribbon, or the man who wanted a new shirt seldom thought of buying it outside of the business district of the city. They passed by the small store near at home to go downtown for every small purchase.

Boom of the Small Store.

The congestion of imposts into so small a space has resulted not only in crowding the streets there with people, but it has also crowded the transportation lines leading in and out of this district, and the buying public, to avoid these conditions, have turned to the smaller stores nearer home.

State street, Cottage Grove avenue, Milwaukee avenue, Blue Island avenue, Madison street and a large number of other thoroughfares in every part of the city are devoted to retail business interests. They pay cheaper rents than the department store competitors, and the new patrons are finding that, though the stocks are not so large, they can buy as cheaply as they can downtown, besides saving street car fare and the discomforts of a trip to the department stores.

As an instance of this, I know a dealer in men's furnishing goods on Cottage Grove avenue who has struggled along for some years in an effort to make small merchandising pay.

He saw his neighbors pass by his store on their way to the department stores downtown. In no way could he attract their trade. He offered bargains that were genuine, but they didn't attract trade. Then the tide began to turn his way. The people, friends and strangers alike, became his patrons. To-day he is riding on the top of the prosperity wave, and it became the congested conditions in the small section known as the business district of Chicago.

Are Babies Wanted?

It is hardly probable that Bishop Francis, of Indiana, based his recent statement that children are not wanted in the homes of the rich on any investigation he had made in Chicago. I say it is hardly probable for the reason that Chicago would not have furnished a good field for such investigations.

Babies Are Not Wanted.

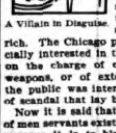
The majority of the really rich families of Chicago have grown in wealth with the growth of the city. The Armours, the Pullmans, the Leiters, the Palmers and many others who are now rated well up in the millions were parents long before they were millionaires. But few of these families, that is the older generation, are typical society people to-day. The late Phil Armour's sons grew to manhood while their father was accumulating the fortune he left them. The elder Leiter, who made much of his wealth by the advance in the price of Chicago real estate, was the father of the present Lady Curzon before he was a millionaire. George M. Pullman was raising Chicago out of the mud, and dreaming of palace cars only when his children were born.

In part, the sons of these pioneer fathers have gone the way of the idle rich—pleasure seeking. But the majority are home lovers, to whom the prattle of childish voices is as sweet as it was to their fathers and mothers.

In the generally accepted sense of the word Chicago has no society at the present time. There are no idle rich to make it. The really wealthy men are busy accumulating greater wealth, and their wives are occupied with the various forms of "new movements" for women. Chicago does not yet need a Freddy Gebhard, a Harry Lehr or a Ward McAllister. There is neither a "400" to organize or to amuse.

An Exception.

I have just said that in the generally accepted sense of the word Chicago has no society. In the current events that statement would seem to need a correction. It is broadly limited, not only in the public press, but in the city courts, that the city is becoming a field for the operations of a class of servants who find their opportunities among the idle rich. The Chicago public was not specially interested in the trial of Tilbury on the charge of having concealed weapons, or of extorting money, but the public was interested in the flavor of scandal that lay back of the charges.



A Villain in Disguise.

Now it is said that an organized band of men servants exists in the city, whose purpose it is to blackmail their mistresses by threatening to connect their names with a scandal. Such an organization would find a poor field for operations except among a class of idle women. The woman who is genuinely busy with the important duties of life has not time to place herself in compromising positions, even though she do so innocently. The busy woman has so little to go automobile touring with a scheming chauffeur.

If the conclusion that chauffeurs of the city have organized for the purpose of blackmailing their employers they will, except in exceptional cases, find Chicago a poor field for their operations, for the city is not a center for the idle rich.

AUTO CANINES.

A Glimpse Into the Future When the Gasoline Dog Will Rule by Steam.

"I admit that I was pretty sore on automobiles when they first came out," confessed the red-faced man, with the horseshoe pin in his scarf, to a New York Sun reporter. "But since our friend Goggleton here has explained their infinite superiority over—well, I don't see how on earth I've managed to be content with horses all these years, 'deed I don't.

"Why, just think, you don't have to feed automobiles, or exercise 'em, or shoe 'em, or anything. While, as for speed, you can make an ordinary passenger locomotive hide its headlight in shame.

"Of course, the smell of some of 'em is a bit overpowering at first, but if you go fast enough you can generally manage to keep in front of it. As I said, I don't see how I've managed to get along without one."

The red-faced man paused, and seemed lost in thought.

"Say," he continued, in a few minutes, "isn't it funny that no one has ever thought of having auto dogs? Now that they've solved the horse problem, why don't they try the dog problem?

"No, no, I don't mean like those little mechanical toys you see on Fourteenth street. I mean a sure enough gasoline dog, with a steam bark attachment. Something that could be regulated by a rubber tube leash with a bulb on the end.

"Just think of it. You could regulate his speed and direction, and there'd never be any danger of his getting in fights. You wouldn't ever have to feed him. And during the summer, if you didn't want to take him to the country, you could store him with some furrier, who would be only too glad to insure him against fleas and moths.

"Great, isn't it? I expect 'most any day now to read in my morning paper that 'Willie Lightweight was seen on the avenue yesterday with his new racing auto-terrier, the Purple Towser,' or 'Miss Dimity Simpleton was noticed in the park exercising her recently imported motor-poodle, the Pink Fido.'

"Of course, there'll be accidents at first, just as there were with automobiles. I shouldn't be a bit surprised to hear most any day that little nine-year-old Lizzie Schlitz was playing with her 16-pup power gasoline greyhound the dog exploded, inflicting slight wounds about the face. Lizzie's face was cauterized and the pieces of dog carefully gathered up and taken to the fun' pound.'

"There are naturally bound to be some accidents, but think of the great good that will eventually—What? No, thanks, old man. I'm going down to look at a horse this afternoon, and wouldn't dare."

FIRST FATAL DUEL

Ever Fought in America Took Place Nearly Two Centuries Ago on Boston Common.

The first fatal duel fought in what is now the United States was upon Boston Common, on Monday, Benjamin Woodbridge and Henry Phillips, on the evening of July 3, 1728, says the United Service Review. These young men had quarreled over cards at the Royal Exchange tavern, in King street (now State street), and under the influence of drink had agreed to settle their differences with swords in the public grounds above named. They met at a little after eight o'clock in the evening, and Woodbridge was mortally wounded and was found dead the following morning.

Both were gentlemen of good social position. Phillips was a brother of George Phillips, who married Marie, the sister of Peter Faneuil, the builder of Boston's famous hall. Woodbridge had not completed his twentieth year. He was a young merchant who had recently been admitted to business as a partner with Jonathan Sewall, one of the most prominent lawyers in King street (now State). Phillips, a young graduate of the college at Cambridge, was about four years older than Woodbridge, having at the time of this melancholy affair completed his twenty-third year. Woodbridge was the son of a sea captain of some distinction in Barbados, one of the magistrates there, who had formerly been settled in the ministry as pastor in Groton, Conn.

The place of meeting was on the rising grounds of the Commons not far from the Great Elm, near where in the olden time a powder house stood. Small swords were used. No one but themselves participated. Woodbridge fell mortally wounded and died on the spot before the next morning. Phillips was slightly wounded, and at midnight, by the aid of his brother Gillam and Peter Faneuil, of famous memory, made his escape to the Sheerness, a British man-of-war lying in the harbor, and before the sun of the next morning had fully discovered to interested friends the miserable result of the unfortunate meeting, he was on his way to France, where he died in less than a year of grief and a broken heart.

The demolition of a steel building three years old in New York city was watched by the experts of the bureau of buildings with reference to deterioration. They report "that no other corrosion of consequence could be discovered than had obviously begun and gained measurably headway before the building was covered in."

HE GAINED CONSENT.

Impulsive Suitor Forces Girl's Father to Capitulate.

Talked, and Talked, and Talked, Until Pater Familias Would Have Been Ready to Agree to Any Old Proposition.

"Sir!" declaimed young Brash, the bookkeeper, "I desire to gain your consent to my marriage with your daughter."

And the intrepid young man proudly threw back his head, awaiting the answer that would be made by his employer.

The great merchant slowly swung his chair around, so that he might face the bold individual who had uttered the words quoted. It was clearly to be seen that he was amazed. "I cannot but say, Mr. Brash," he began, "that this is—"

"I know what you would say, sir," passionately interrupted the bookkeeper. "You would say that my position in this establishment does not justify this presumption on my part. Therefore, sir, I wish to add that I have means aside from the salary that I receive from you. I—"

"Young man! young man!" exclaimed the merchant, his voice rising to a tone seldom adopted by him, "will you not let me have a word? I was about to say that—"

"O, sir!" interposed the bookkeeper, "I feel that you were about to state your conviction that, even if she were of an age to wed, I am not; that a youth of 22 does not realize the seriousness of the step. Do not say, sir, that I am too young! Reflect, sir, upon the fact that I love her dearly; that she is devoted to me, and that if you withhold your consent you may blight two lives! Two lives, sir! Think of that! And if you—"

Then, says the New York Times, the merchant gave a spasmodic clutch at his throat, as if he were going into apoplexy. Then it was noticed in the park exercising her recently imported motor-poodle, the Pink Fido,'

"YOU MAY BLIGHT TWO LIVES!"

recovered the use of his voice, "will you let me get a word in edgewise?"

The young man bowed his head in assent. "Pray go on, sir," he said.

"I desire to say," gasped the merchant, in a broken voice, "that I do not—"

"O, sir, you do not—"

"I do not—"

But the employer's words failed him, and his head sank upon the desk before him. Hastily ringing the bell for assistance, the bookkeeper afforded what relief he could to the exhausted man, until other and more efficacious aid arrived.

When the old man had recovered the use of his faculties, he said to the employes who had hastened into his office:

"Thank you, gentlemen, and now you may leave me with Mr. Brash. I may say, however, that I would esteem it a favor if some one of you would gag the young man, as I much desire to have a word with him, a thing that seems impossible under any other condition than that of enforced silence."

"And now, sir!" he said sternly to young Brash, when once more they were alone, "if you utter another word before I shall have completed the observations which I now purpose to make, depend upon it I shall certainly offer you grievous bodily harm! Listen!

"You wish to marry a daughter of mine. Well, sir, you may! This is not an entire surprise to me. I made no bold some time since as to institute an investigation with regard to this attachment on your part; and the result of that investigation showed me no reasons why you two should not marry. But I submit that I was entitled, in all propriety, in my role of father to four marriageable girls, to ask the usual, formal and conventional query:

"Which one is it?"

Baldness Among Bachelors.

It has been found on study of 200 cases of loss of hair that baldness prevails most with unmarried men, which is contrary to the general belief. The worries of the bachelor may be fewer, but they are more trying to the scalp than are the conditions cares of the man of family. Most bald people are found to live indoor lives, and almost all of them belong to the intellectual class. Usually the loss of hair begins before the thirtieth year. In women it usually constitutes a general thinning; in men it affects the top of the head. Diseases that affect the general nutrition of the body are likely to thin the hair.

TALES OF WHITE BUFFALO.

They Were Very Scarce and the Particular Object of Every Plainsman's Quest.

The disappearance of the stuffed white buffalo from the Kansas state house, presumably taken by the daughter of the man who left it there on exhibition for so many years, will recall some queer experiences to old buffalo hunters on the western Kansas prairies, says the Kansas City Journal. There was a tradition among the hunters that some one had hung up a reward of $1,000 for the skin of a white buffalo. There were white buffalo—albinos, such as are found at rare intervals in all the families of the animal kingdom—but the number of those which existed in fact and of those which existed in the imagination was in wonderful disproportion.

Every buffalo hunter could tell stories of having seen and pursued white buffalo. Many a hunter has been sent on a wild goose chase by false reports of this character. In 1873, for example, old Ben Canfield, who roamed the plains with his tall, gaunt wife for a companion, followed a bunch of buffalo from the northern edge of what is now Oklahoma to the sand hills of Nebraska, thinking to kill a big white bull at the head of his harem of cows. And, after three weeks of patient stalking, Canfield did kill the bull, only to find that he was covered with a coat of whitewash, which gave him the appearance of being white in fact.

An explanation of this phenomenon would not be needed by people familiar with the natural lime beds of western Kansas. The habit of the buffalo is to roll in every pool of water or hole of mud which he comes to. The well known "buffalo wallow" still to be seen over the great plains was the product of this habit.

Canfield's buffalo had simply been rolling in a bed of the native lime, which coated his hide, when dried in the sun, with a kind of plaster. And no doubt these lime holes could account for many of the white buffalo so often reported by hunters.

The plains were the home of many characters, but none more unique than the wife of this same Canfield. She was six feet tall and as thin as the proverbial rail. She came from Arkansas, and she was the type of girl immortalized in a bit of doggerel:

"I can saw'r more wood than man can saw's,
I can chaw'r more terbacker than pa can
Said this gay young girl from Arkansaw'r.

Canfield boasted that she could take the hide off a buffalo quicker than any man on the plains. She certainly could consume more tobacco than her husband. She could swear, too, with an artistic finish not-easily acquired. And when she came to die she died like a hero, as was testified to by the pile of empty "big-50" shells found by her side as she lay dead and scalped with her husband on the prairie some miles north of Wallace. This was in 1875, and the surroundings betokened an Indian fight, in which the husband had died first, leaving his wife to continue the battle.

REMARKABLE PLANT.

Gives Off Combustible Gas—Said to Be Moses' "Burning Bush"—Easily Takes Fire.

A remarkable plant is now at Kew Gardens, London's celebrated horticultural grounds, on the Thames, says the Kansas City Times. The plant has just been brought from the Arabian desert, and numerous scientists declare it to be identical with the "burning bush," which Moses saw burst into flames at his approach and blaze for some time without being consumed. The plant at Kew, which grows to a height of five or six feet, possesses a remarkable property of exhaling an inflammable gas from its flowers, which, on being approached by a light, takes fire and burns brightly for a few moments, the plant in the meanwhile remaining uninjured, owing to its sap.

In the hot deserts of Arabia, where the plant naturally grows more vigorously than at Kew, a larger quantity of this gas is exhaled, and it is probable that the flowers ignite more frequently, cause it to take fire. It cannot be said that the discovery of this plant and its strange characteristics add greatly to the impressiveness of the Bible story, but there it is, to be regarded as you please.

In appearance the "burning bush" plant suggests an arid, sterile habitat. Its leaves are of a dull sage green color and the gas-exhaling blossoms are pale pink.

It is not generally known that numerous flowers give forth gases in a small degree, notably the lily-of-the-valley and the meadow sweet, which grows so profusely in English meadows. The honeysuckle and jessamine exhale their fumes of deadly prussic acid by night, and all flowers throw off considerable quantities of carbonic acid gas in the darkness, this being why it is unhealthy to keep flowers in a bedroom.

A Quaint People.

The heart of Brittany never changes, says Andre Saglio, in the Century, but its life is rapidly losing many of its prominent characteristics with the leveling influence of the French republic. It is only far out of the beaten track, now, or on special occasions like fetes, that you see universally the costumes and customs of the old Armorican peninsula. One of these journeys from Quimper, the modernized chief town of Finistere, and you are among the Bigoudines, a people whose dress suggests the Eskimos and Chinese, whose faces are strongly Mongolian in type, and who in language, customs and beliefs seem to have no relation with the rest of France. More and more the picturesque problem they present is coming to attract attention. Artists, students and tourists alike are fascinated by it.

HOTEL THIEVES.

Have Many a Sharp Trick by Which They Get Ahead of Unwary Proprietors.

"Is Mr. Morgan in?" queried a young man, as he strode to the desk at one of the down-town hotels, according to the Chicago Chronicle.

"Which Mr. Morgan?" inquired the clerk.

"Why, there is but one Mr. Morgan," answered the young man, in a tone that was grieved. "J. Pierpont Morgan, of course."

"Not in," said the man behind the counter.

"Well, that's queer. He promised to meet me here to-day. Had a letter from him last week. Guess I'll register and stay until he arrives."

The man behind the counter looked at the visitor. He saw that he was far from well dressed. "Any baggage?" he inquired.

"Well, you see, there was some mistake, and my baggage did not come on with me. I—" He would have said more, but he was interrupted by the clerk.

"Then you will have to pay in advance."

"Sir! I'd like you to know I'm an honest man. I have more money than you ever saw. I—" But the clerk stopped him.

"I know; but it's one of the rules of the house."

The man turned and left.

"It's an old scheme, and don't you ever get caught at it. He never saw J. Pierpont Morgan in his life. But he figured that if we believed he had an appointment with Mr. Morgan we would take him to be a man worth trusting. He would have run up a bill on us, and then left.

"And there are others who are pretty clever. There is one you want to watch. A man comes in and registers. As he turns to go a letter drops from his pocket. You attempt to call his attention to the missive, but he is gone. And then you notice that it isn't sealed. Well, if you are curious you will read it. That is a part of his game. It will be a letter of introduction from one of the biggest men in the country to one of the biggest men in the city. The chances are that it will be the most complimentary letter you ever read. It's that man's only asset. He is the strength of it he will run a bill that would set back a national bank. Watch them close, my boy, for there are many tricks in the trade."

VOYAGE AROUND THE WORLD.

The Good Ship John Wade Did It in Eleven Months Fifty Years Ago.

The John Wade, a Medford-built ship, was an average Yankee vessel of the early fifties, not in the same class with such extreme clippers as the Flying Cloud, Comet, Sovereign of the Seas, Shooting Star, Flying Fish, and some others, but "good" for 12 knots an hour when the wind was favorable—a little forward of the beam and in plenty, says the Boston Transcript.

Of about 800 tons measurement, she had three masts, "square" (large and long) yards, and great spread of canvas, stun'n' sails on main and fore up to the royals, an immense spanker, five head-sails—inner, outer and flying jibs—fore and foretopmast staysails, a crew of 18 in the forecastle, carpenter, cook and steward.

Our complete voyage around the world was just 11 months, sailing from Boston, September 5, 1851, arriving in New York August 5, 1852; or, more in detail, 130 days to San Francisco around Cape Horn; thence in ballast to Hong-Kong and Whampoa (Canton), 45 days; thence to New York, via Straits of Sunda and Cape of Good Hope, 115 days; balance of time in port, and not a rope was "parted" in this spit and span "carried away" during the entire voyage.

Four different crews were on board, as the men shipped in Boston ran away in San Francisco, and the next were only "for the run" to Hong-Kong, whence we had a crew entirely of Chinese to Whampoa, and "limejuicers" of "limejuicer," an English vessel, "encouraged" by an English sailor of our crew from San Francisco, took French leave in the night, when the Wade was ready for sea, and came on board for the passage to New York, and a fine lot of men they proved to be.

The English sailor, "Tom" Bakewell, also came home with us, and, sailing soon after for Liverpool, was lost overboard from the jibboom in a heavy head wind and sea.

It will appear strange to people of the present to learn that we carried onions to California as a part of our miscellaneous cargo. A house the size of the main hatch, and six feet high, was made fast over the hatch, after the other cargo was stowed, and filled with onions through a scuttle in the top. They did not all reach San Francisco, as many decayed, and not a few were a welcome addition to the fare in the forecastle, which, however, was the best of its kind, as Boston ships always furnished.

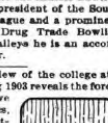
SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Bowling, the great winter indoor sport which has made such marvelous strides in popularity during the past five years, is more than holding its own. Heretofore the work of the tenpin fraternity has been chiefly centered in promoting an interest in the game, but now that it has been thoroughly demonstrated that bowling has come to stay and is established from the Atlantic to the Pacific, its leading admirers have been directing their attention to the legislative features, with an idea of perfecting organizations and eliminating all injurious features which have been brought to light during the last 12 months. Since the introduction of the game in America it has not experienced a year so notable for innovations and changes in rules and general government of the players. Early in the year the American bowling congress, the national governing body, set the pace by altering its constitution and by-laws. Godfrey Langhenry, of Chicago, author of the new plans, saw the necessity of some practical changes two years ago, but it was not until the Indianapolis convention that the delegates approval of his schemes. Langhenry's plans provided for city associations which deal exclusively with clubs, and as there is an annual fee for each club, one-third of which goes to the national organization, it has been the means of putting the congress on a sound financial basis. In addition to those changes local associations control the conduct of the players, and have the power to impose penalties for infractions of the rules. When everything is summed up bowlers and bowling have had a successful year, and prospects are even brighter for the next 12 months. Oscar W. Schmidt, who was recently elected president of the Chicago Bowling association, is a representative of the type of bowler that has done much to put the game on a substantial basis. He bowls because he is fond of the sport and takes sufficient interest in it to devote some of his time to legislation. He is vice president of the Illinois Bowling association and president of the South Side Intercity league and a prominent member of the Drug Trade bowling league. On the alleys he is an accomplished performer.

O. W. Schmidt.

"A bird's-eye view of the college athletic world during 1903 reveals the forces of evolution active in track athletics, baseball and football, and quiescent in golf and tennis," writes Horace Butterworth, former director of athletics at Northwestern university, in reviewing the work of the past year. "Games of golf between the universities were confined to matches between the University of Chicago and the University of Michigan as inaugurated last year. This indicates either a lack of interest on the part of the students in the game or a disinclination on the part of the athletic associations to help the sport financially. The interest in tennis was about as usual, the absence of any bright and particular stars denuding the annual tournament of that feature of the spectacular which appeals most to the imagination in this era of chronic excitement. An interesting and successful experiment was made in baseball by the formation of a league, comprising Illinois, Michigan, Chicago, Northwestern and Wisconsin.



H. Butterworth.

"The year 1903 has been noteworthy from the viewpoint of the football rooter by reason of the advances which have been made in the standard of excellence set by the big teams in the matter of both individual and team play and in deceptive work by the backs, by the unusual number of the games, by the kaleidoscopic changes of form displayed by some teams which have not been before been known as in-and-outers, by the failure of the quarterback run to make any marked difference in the style of game. The intercollegiate conference committee found little more than routine business confronting it at its last meeting, its strenuous efforts of the past years having borne fruit in what is considered to be the most satisfactory condition of intercollegiate athletics that has ever been obtained in this section. With no cloud in the sky and a record of "well done" marking every sport, the intercollegiate year of 1903 is ready to be placed in its proper niche in the hall of fame."

Jacob Schaefer, the American billiardist, now in Paris, has published a letter challenging any billiard player in the world for two matches—one at 18-inch balk line, two shots in, 8,000 points, the other match at cushion caroms, 1,500 points.

D. W. King, jr., president of the Colorado State Rifle association, has taken a world's shooting record. In the presence of the requisite number of witnesses and under the conditions prescribed to make the record valid, he made a total of 917 points in 100 consecutive shots with the rifle. The shooting was strictly offhand, without mechanical aids of any kind, at a standard American target. The previous record was 905 points, made by Col. H. Pope, and had stood a long time.

FOR THE SCHOOLGIRL.

Some Dainty Modes For Street and Party Wear.

The young girl who is still at school has many pretty costumes designed for her.

The blouse costumes, either short or long, are eminently becoming to her, and when these are made of stout material of fancy weave the effect is very jaunty, especially when there is a wide belt fastening with a prettily jeweled buckle.

Collars and wide cuffs of embroidery add much to the simplest costumes.

A PARTY DRESS.

and navy blue and dull red are tones which lend themselves best to trimming with embroideries.

Loose sack coats and plaited skirts are among the smartest tailor modes for the young person, and to be very smart the hat should match. This may either be of the tricorne or the sailor shape trimmed with a twist of velvet and a couple of good quills.

The wide hat of velvet or taffeta is very becoming to a youthful face, and particularly so when it is trimmed with a wreath of velvet shaded flowers.

Beaver hats adorned with coque feathers to match are worn with workmanlike cloth costumes. Some charming models in rough beaver, trimmed with ostrich feathers and faced with white cloth, have been designed to wear with elaborate toilets of cloth or velvet.

The prettiest material for a party dress is crepe de chine, next to white filmy fabrics, and the latter are not always suitable. The illustration shows a very dainty little frock of crepe de chine trimmed with maltese insertions and lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

COLORS AND TEXTURES.

The Revival of Jet—Flowered and Pompadour Silks.

The large Spanish comb is revived, and it will be much worn in the hair this spring. Jet will be worn in the hair also, but brilliant jet which sparkles like gems. It will be shaped into flowers and wide wings.

There is an entire revival of jet in blouses, boleros and entire costumes.

PALE YELLOW WAIST.

Sometimes silver is introduced, but all black is more fashionable. All black, all white and judicious mixtures of black, white and gray are seen on the leaders of fashion now staying in the Riviera.

The revival of flowered and pompadour designs in silk is apparent even in the linings of garments and furs. Petticoats, too, are made of these dainty fabrics and are trimmed with dyed lace and bands of plain silk of a contrasting shade.

Taffeta in pretty pastel shades is smart for evening gowns, but it must be softened by chiffon or soft lace.

All of the new silks come in soft lustrous weaves to allow of plenty of fullness in the making without any stiff, awkward effect.

Skirts for spring wear will be full and wider than those that have been worn during the winter. Plaits of all sorts and sizes will insure a perfect fit over the hips, and many ingenious devices have been conceived to give the necessary flare.

The cut shows a waist of pale yellow crepe de chine, yellow lace and black velvet ribbon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

BOLEROS AND BLOUSES.

They Will Divide Honors Equally This Spring.

The bolero, which was threatened by the three-quarter effect, has come back into extreme fashion again. There are two kinds of bolero which are especially noticeable—the loose affair, cut sleeves and body in one, and the other, practically sleeveless, cut up in the back to show the abnormally wide belts so many of us are wearing. The latter bolero appears in many different kinds of material. Sometimes it is of velvet and sometimes of cloth, and then again it is a combination of both; but one fact is striking—it remains always of the same color as the skirt.

Sometimes these boleros are made of plain thick material trimmed with fringe and cord. These are charming in black, gray or mole color, opening over a dainty blouse and a wide band of leather or silk.

Spring street fashions will show a variety of these blouse costumes in sibeline, in gray, black and white and other mixtures. They will be trimmed with pipings of velvet or heavy silk, and the wide belt will be of the same.

Dress waists blousing all around, both back and front, over the very wide belts will be among the most chic spring models, and the skirts which accompany these bloused effects will be very full and only held down part of the way.

The picture shows a spring tailor made of dull blue cloth trimmed with bands of Persian and a dark blue belt. JUDIC CHOLLET.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Black Taffeta Gowns For Elderly Women—Moleskin Cloth.

Black taffeta inset with black chantilly lace and made up over white silk which shows under the insertions makes a very smart dress for a middle aged woman, but there should be some fine tuckings to break the stiffness of the taffeta, and the bottom of the skirt should be edged by tiny frills or ruching. Bands of mink are particularly artistic for trimming either cloth or thin materials. It is possible to obtain beautiful markings even in a narrow strip.

Moleskin gray cloth makes a dainty costume and is very dressy when relieved by applications of silver and lighter gray.

There is a new princess gown made with a sort of guimpe. The body part is of black jetted or embroidered material, and the guimpe is of very thin spangled or plain material with transparent sleeve puffs.

Trains even on evening gowns are much shorter, and the sides are longer, so that a round, full effect is gained.

It is rumored that the ruby will be the popular gem of the coming season, and this will be combined with dull silver and platinum.

The illustration shows an evening gown of pink mull made with shirrings. It is trimmed with duchess lace applications. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR EVENING AND DAY WEAR

Brocade Petticoats—The Full Skirt Is Here to Stay.

Some pretty simple evening gowns for debutantes are of spotted net and even of very fine cloth gathered into a waistband of soft silk.

Evening petticoats are particularly gorgeous. White cambric has given way to beautiful brocades trimmed with ruchings of taffeta and entredeux of lace of heavy makes with inner frills of accordion plaited taffeta.

Nowadays the petticoat is an important consideration, as so many of the fuller dress skirts are unlined.

Brocades are also used for petticoats for day wear, but these are of much darker shade, and they are economical, for brocade wears far better than taffeta.

The full skirt has come to stay, and it is trimmed in many elaborate fashions with ruchings, flounces of lace, etc.

An ultra fashionable evening gown seen recently was of heavy yellow lace, the skirt made with five ruffles and the decollette bodice having a deep bertha. Each ruffle was ornamented with a row of little ermine tails.

Flower sprays are used to brighten evening gowns that are otherwise little trimmed. They consist of violets, orchids or roses, with long trailing vines or maidenhair fern.

The picture represents a girl's frock of white velling and narrow lace. The belt is of white glace silk.

ADVANCE SPRING FASHIONS.

Gray and Heliotrope Combinations. Lace Hats For Future Wear.

Ribbons are being used more and more for trimming, especially velvet and taffeta ribbons. The former are shirred and the latter laid on flat in bands which grow wider as they reach the bottom of the skirt.

It is rumored that a new soft shade of green will make its appearance

GRAY EVENING GOWN.

among the spring novelties. Combined with touches of black and with yellow lace, it will be very smart.

The smartest color combination is gray and heliotrope, and this will become more and more popular as spring approaches, for it adapts itself to all sorts of spring millinery flowers, pansies, violets, etc.

Lace is being worn even more than ever as a dress trimming, and it not only decorates the waist, but appears in bands on the skirt. All lace to look its best should have chiffon beneath it unless it is point de venise or duchess lace on black velvet. A berta of fine lace makes a delightful finish to a plain satin gown.

Hats of lace, both plain and shirred, are now being made by the leading milliners. They serve a double purpose, as they can be worn during the evening in winter and on the street for dressy occasions during the summer.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Works, Walks and Hopes

A LADY of whom I know is noted among her acquaintances for being a terrific talker. Not one moment of her waking hours is that clacking tongue still. It is certain that she talks to herself when she is alone, for she has been overheard many a time. It is also probable that she talks in her sleep. Well, this lady went for a day's journey with another woman. When she returned she assured her family she had had "not a bit good time" because the other woman had talked her nearly to death. She did not get a chance to put a word in edgeways, she said, and she was just worn out with that incessant gab. Whereupon the family smiled, and one niece slid off by herself in a corner and roared. "The idea of anything but a phonograph being able to talk Aunt Harriet down!" said she. And, speaking of incessant gabblers, did it ever occur to you that many persons employ quite four times as much talk as is really required to express themselves and to impress themselves on others? The great talker is invariably a shallow, flighty person. Her memory is poor. She forgets what she ought to remember, she gets tangled in her statements, and no wonder. She does not still her tongue long enough to digest any thought in her mind or to wholly take in any fact. Wherever she sees two or more people together, or hears others talking, up she comes, pushes herself in and shoots off her opinions, right or wrong. The silent person is the one that wins. She conserves her thought and manifests a fine, dignified reserve concerning the private affairs of herself and others. She does not waste her nerve substance in vocal froth. When she does open her mouth to speak, two words of hers are more effective than half a day's gabble of the talking woman.

Women are in general far too biddable. Let each develop for herself thinking power and will and be an individual. I sometimes doubt whether a woman who never thinks, reasons or wills for herself, but is the mere echo of others, has any immortal soul.

Professor Margaret E. Maltby is so learned that she is professor of physics in Columbia university, New York. Yet women students are not allowed in her classes; only men. The girl students must stick to the instructors appointed for them in Barnard college, the women's annex of the university. The superstitions of the sex question cause mankind to cut strange capers.

A lady I know has started a club of one. It is the Speak No Evil club; its object, to say no word condemnatory of any human being. When she says anything at all of an acquaintance it is something favorable. She looks for the good in everybody and always finds it, on the principle that we find what we look for. You have no idea how popular this woman is.

It is selfish to dress always in forlorn, terrible black. Those who do it forget about its depressing effect on the nerves and spirits of others, especially those who live in the same house with them. Even in mourning apparel it is possible to lighten up the melancholy, dreary effect by touches of white here and there. Dead black garments constantly worn inevitably lower both the mental and physical tone not only of the wearers themselves, but of those who daily see them. They may not know it, but the fact is undeniable. There is enough of gloom in this life that we cannot get away from without gratuitously adding to it.

Sometimes a woman has a little bit of an income, enough to half feed and clothe herself on. All over this land, even in Alaska and in Canada, are openings for such women to earn a generous living and something more. They are in the country, and they are to be found in the vast undeveloped industrial fields of farming, fruit and flower culture, bee keeping, chicken raising and dairying. Too much can hardly be said in this direction. The population of the Union is increasing so fast that home production will soon be unable to keep up with home consumption. There are country towns where eggs are 30 cents a dozen this minute, and the supply is short.

The present is a time of outrageous overdressing among women. Never since the American nation began have its women been so extravagant in their costuming. It is mostly the tradespeople and the men dressmakers who have forced this era of extravagance. There will have to come a reaction from it back to the simplicity of good taste.

It is said that a French architect has devised a revolving house, one that may be swung around like a railway engine upon its turntable. The house is made to follow the sun, which thus shines in every room in the mansion in succession every day. That's the kind of house I want.

London fashionable society has the reputation of having in its ranks one lady, the Countess of Shaftesbury, who is absolutely truthful. She is so sincere she will not even tell white lies. The countess visited America during the past summer. Telling the exact truth seems to be something so rare that her habit of sincerity has made the countess celebrated.

SEEN HERE AND THERE.

Elaborate Black Gowns—The Season of the Taffeta Hat.

Black cloth street gowns are made up with much fringe and applications of dyed lace over white satin foundations. They are also trimmed with ruchings of bias chiffon velvet and fagotings of heavy black silk showing the white foundation.

Black chiffon gowns lined with net are trimmed with applications of silk ver embroidery and bunches of silk poppies in black and palest green.

The skirts of these chiffon evening gowns are made very full, with many narrow ruffings, and the short sleeves are also made of the same small ruffings.

A gown recently seen was of black chantilly having a shirred skirt and a waist trimmed with tiny black silk rosebuds and their leaves and a wide belt and applications of dull green chiffon velvet.

Taffeta hats are now being worn, and they will continue the vogue until straw takes their place. They are mostly shirred in bands held together by coarse lace or chiffon gaugings.

The picture shows a plain taffeta hat trimmed with a twist of tulle and a long black ostrich feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Plumed Hats Are Good Investments. Easter Gowns Made of Lace.

A plumed hat is about the best millinery investment any woman can make.

Elbow sleeves continue to be most popular for evening wear, but they are of a most fancy description, trimmed with many ruffles and ruchings and even decorated with tabs and ends of narrow velvet or flowered ribbon.

Entire gowns of ecru lace never go out of fashion, and they are always easy to remodel in a dozen different ways.

Spangled tulle over pale colored satin makes a delightfully dainty evening gown, although it is decidedly perishable.

There is also a revival of pale colored brocades, but these are more suitable for middle aged women than for younger matrons. A stiff silk is never, of course, suitable for a young girl.

Washable shirt waist costumes of white serge will be worn a great deal this summer, and wise women are making them up at present. To be practical they should be unlined, of course, with neatly bound seams. A blouse waist is the best, and it can be worn with a wide kid belt, either white or colored, to match the novelty skirt.

Persian lawn and the soft finished lawns which look so much like chiffon, as well as the all over English embroidery, are commanding great attention for blouses. The backs are trimmed as well as the fronts, although perhaps not quite as elaborately, the cuffs being of lace or embroidery to match the rest of the trimming. A great variety of shapes are to be seen in these cuffs, some extending almost to the elbow and others being deeper on the outside of the arm than on the inside. Deep lace berthas of valenciennes or renaissance lace are a novelty for trimming the finer blouses.

The cut shows a costume of moleskin gray cloth trimmed with touches of light gray silk and white lace medallions. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SHADED EFFECTS.

They Are Seen In Chiffon and In Feathers—Shot Silks.

Shaded effects are very much the fashion just now. They are seen in ribbon and in accordion plaited chiffon. Gray in all the shades, ranging from deep gun metal to almost white and from the deepest church violet to pale lavender, is the favorite tint. In feathers there is a long plume shaded from the faintest pink to a deep flame color.

Some beautiful shot effects are also to be seen, such as mauve showing through blue, with a suggestion of scarlet beneath it, and purples combined with pinks and silver grays.

A new weave of satin is called satin messaline. It is a soft, lustrous weave which falls into exquisite folds. A pink satin gown seen recently had a key pattern around the neck worked in silver embroidery, and this was duplicated on the edge of the hem of the skirt. The girdle was of silver.

Fringes of all kinds, including gold, silver and jet, are used. The gold and silver are used with fine cloth in the pastel shades. Silver fringe is particularly pleasing used with pale green cloth.

Elderly women are wearing beautifully embroidered cloth gowns, the embroidery designs being taken in many cases from antique patterns.

Moleskin gray is a shade which exactly matches the fur. It is very popular for walking costumes and general utility wear. When relieved by touches of pale blue cloth, it is even dressy.

The cut shows a gown of black velling trimmed with velvet and applications of silk guipure.

NOVELTIES OF DRESS.

Short Boleros—Silver and Gold Braid. Lace Trimmings.

Boleros are quite short and show a good deal of the wide waistband. They are made of every conceivable material, including lace.

Silver and gold braids appear both on hats and on tailor mades. Toques are narrow and elongated, but picture hats are very large.

For evening wear mousseline de soie and crepe de chine are mixed with coarse Irish lace and guipure. On the other hand, thick cloths are enriched with the most delicate embroidery.

The velvet bolero and the skirt of cloth banded with velvet are a smart fashion, and a great deal of velvet is used to decorate skirts and blouses. Sometimes this is cut out in figures—lozenges, diamonds and squares—and it is fastened down with fancy stitching.

Velvet will be worn late in the season. Amethyst, violet and Lincoln or sage green are smart colors, and fine silk braid and heavy laces are used as trimming.

Those who are forced to be economical will welcome the sets of mixed materials—velvet, lace and fur—which replace the too expensive fur stole and muff. Better a thousand times such novelties than the muff and stole made of cheap fur.

The illustration shows a white taffeta waist trimmed with white silk beading run through with narrow black ribbon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MEN THAT GIRLS LOVE

The Seven Ages of Love

"I AM going to write a little sketch and call it 'The Seven Ages of Love,'" remarked the worldly wise girl.

"Er—er—what!" exclaimed the bachelor, rousing himself from his reverie in front of the open fire.

"The first age," replied the worldly wise girl softly, "we will call 'the little boy next door.' He spun his top in front of her house and she watched him with admiring eyes from the upper window. And he knew she was watching him. Then one day he handed her a red apple through the railings of the fence, and still another time his nurse met her nurse, and while they hobnobbed and related the gossip of the different households he and she made—oh, delightful occupation!—mud pies together."

"Now, let me go on to the second age. We will call that the dancing school age. In all the glories of crisp muslin and pink ribbons she attended it twice a week, from 4 to 6, and no ball, no great reception, in after life seemed half so grand, for did not 'young gentlemen' take the place of boys, and was she not called respectfully Miss Jones? And there she met 'him,' the tall high school boy who appeared such a perfect Lord Chesterfield to her as he piloted her through the intricacies of the reverse in the waltz or favored her to the envy of the other girls, during the german. And that lasted until he was eclipsed by the third age—the age of the football hero. She saw his picture once in the room of a friend, and then she saw him at a game, and she lost her heart completely. By great good luck she managed to be introduced to the great man. Then she heard that he was engaged to her dearest friend, and after two sleepless nights she made up her mind that she would never love again. And this lasted until one day she went to a play and saw her ideal man. He was a tall, well set up young fellow and played the hero's part. What fascinated her was the man-of-the-world air he had. She worshiped him, but fortunately the company left town suddenly, and she was whisked off for the summer by her watchful mother. And that summer, having left behind the football hero and matinee idol age, she entered upon the fourth age—the man in uniform. He was a West Point graduate, of course, and it goes without saying that he knew how to flirt. She thought she knew how, too, but she learned a good deal from him that she had not dreamed of. It wasn't such a pleasant experience, after all, for it left a sting and the memories of moonlight strolls and the music of taps over the hillside and the way his eyes used to look into hers.

"THE MAN IN UNIFORM."

"And then for a whole year she didn't love any one until she met the reverse of the soldier—the poet. She admired his genius, and he wrote her verses and said she was his inspiration until she became tired of his long hair and his erratic ways and found out, too, that, owing to his artistic temperament, she was not the only one who was his inspiration, and then"—

"And then?"

—"she entered upon the sixth stage, the sensible age, and she made up her mind to marry the man her mother chose for her, a rather oldish man, a little stout, too, and fond of good living, but with an excellent income and good social standing. She used to go out to dinner with him and with her mother and out to ride in his automobile, to the envy of the neighbors, and then suddenly one day she rebelled, right in the midst of the trousseau, and threw up her entire engagement. She let her days and die an old maid rather than marry a man she didn't care for merely in order to get a home. And then she entered upon the seventh age, the age of true love. I suppose she married a plain man, not at all like the others, and was happy ever after," she concluded lamely.

The bachelor leaned forward with a curious look in his eyes and took her hand in his. "Your story sounds very well, Marjorie," he commented, "all but the last, and you don't seem quite sure of that. Don't you think, dear, that you made a mistake; that there were not seven ages, after all, but only six, and that she merely came back in the end to the first age—the little boy next door?"

Church society in Rahway gave an "egg supper" on Friday night. Considering their high price, it is reasonable to suppose that the eggs were as scarce as oysters in the average stew dished out at a church festival.

The war correspondents in the far East have the Jersey newspaper correspondents skinned to death. Even that enterprising fellow down in Stamford, Conn., who spins out more sensations in a day than generally occur in this State in a month must be chagrined at the ingenuity of the men who are reporting the conflicts between the Russians and the Japs.

AMUSEMENTS.

Suit has been begun against two vaudeville performers in New York for singing the new song hit of "Babes in Toyland" at the Majestic, entitled: "He Won't be Happy 'til he Gets It." The song is the property of Hamlin & Mitchell and all infringements on their rights will be vigorously prosecuted. Re-arrangement of the third act necessitated by the new song brings into prominence Miss Virginia Folts who has been entrusted with a speaking part. She has acquitted herself cleverly so far and does much to make the scene a success. The originality of Miss Bessie Wynn, one of the principals in the "Babes," has been made evident in the new powder puff bracelet she has designed. The bracelet contains a compartment which flies open when a tiny spring is pressed, revealing a fluffy puff. The design has been patented and is called the "Bessie Wynn" bracelet. Special matinee on Washington's birthday.

The fact that Robert Edeson in "Ranson's Folly" is now in the sixth week of his stay at the Hudson Theatre is gratifying news to those of the public who like good acting and healthy American plays. There seems to be little doubt that Richard Harding Davis, Henry B. Harris and Robert Edeson have found another success like unto "Soldiers of Fortune." "Ranson's Folly" is a rattling good comedy with freshness and force in its main situations with a skilful plot and many opportunities for effective and unusual stage pictures. "Compared to many of the recent plays," says John Kendrick Bangs, "it is like a whiff of pure, sweet air, fresh from the pine clad hills." The leading role of the fun-loving lieutenant is played capitally by Mr. Edeon, who is peculiarly in tune with the type of American thoroughbred that Mr. Davis draws so trenchantly. The unfolding of Ranson's character is consistently shown and the actor as usual makes natural impressions out of situations that in other hands might be theatrical.

Charles A. Bigelow grows funnier as the engagement of "An English Daisy" continues at the Casino. And at the same time pretty little Christie MacDonald has rounded out her work in the prima donna-soubrette title role so effectively that it is doubtful if there is another girl on the stage who appears with such satisfaction to audience. She is in exceptionally good voice and dances and act with a graceful ease that is delightful. Assisting Mr. Bigelow in maintaining the fun of the rollicking musical play are such clever entertainers as Fred. Lennox, George Beane, Frank Lalor, Louis Wesley, Frank Hammond, Geo. P. Smith, Walter VanAlien and Alfred Truschel. The singing contingent includes with Miss MacDonald, Miss Truly Shattuck, Miss Clara Belle Jerome, Miss Kitty Baldwin, Miss Jean Newcombe, Miss Nemie Dare, Henry Leone, Templar Saxe, Franc V. LeMaur, Osborne Clemson and Arthur Stamford.

Miss Carrie B. Runyon, of West Fifth street, is now convalescing from a severe attack of pneumonia.

AMUSEMENTS.

The next attraction at the Broadway Theatre, New York, following the engagement of "The Medal and the Maid," will be the new comic opera, "The Yankee Consul," which Henry W. Savage will produce for the first time in New York on Washington's birthday matinee, Feb. 22 with Raymond Hitchcock in the title role. The book of the new opera is by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., whose "Checkers" has pleased thousands, and the music is by Alfred G. Robyn, whose songs "Answer" and "You," the Manzanillo dance, and several operas have won for him an important place in the ranks of composers. The new production had long runs in Boston and Chicago. The scenes of the opera are laid in the tropical Republic of Santo Domingo, thereby giving many opportunities for brilliant scenery, elaborate costumes and for tuneful music of the Spanish style. In the new piece Mr. Hitchcock will not wear a grotesque make-up as in "King Dodo," but will play the part of a lazy, happy-go-lucky representative of the United States Government in Santo Domingo. He is in love with a wealthy widow, Donna Teresa Ribera (Eva Davenport) and is constantly interesting himself with the affairs of every one on the island. He is of an inventive turn of mind, but his schemes and plans, like those of Colonel Bellairs, never materialize. He is fond of threatening the natives with the entire American army and navy.

Twofold is the triumph which crowds the Belasco Theatre, New York, with such amazingly regularity. Henrietta Crosman's fine and forceful rendering of the title part in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" is the histrionic achievement of the year in New York; while the play itself, truly Belascoan in every line and situation, is the one notable hit now on the Metropolitan stage. No character ever played by Miss Crosman, always a thrilling and magnetic artiste, has been so finely drawn to fit the measurement of her unusual talents. Kitty Bellairs is among the most human, convincing, captivating heroines evolved by the master pen of Belasco. Again he has created a living type, bound to take its place among the permanent portraits of the stage "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" is certainly "old comedy" in all its striking and delicious characteristics. To praise a Belasco play is, of necessity, to praise Belasco's art in the stage presentation of it—for the two go hand in hand. The charm, beauty and impressive reality of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," pregnant with "atmosphere" of the old days in Bath during the picturesque Gainsborough period, are not equaled or even approached in any other play now upon the New York stage. Mr. Belasco and Maurice Campbell, by arrangement with whom Miss Crosman is playing "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," will retain this attraction in its present home throughout the season. Special matinee is to be given on Washington's birthday.

"The Virginian" continues at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, as one of the most popular—if not the most popular—of current offerings. It is seldom that a play pleases men and women in equal measure, but both men and women delight in this stage romance made from Owen Wister's fascinating story. Women follow with a curious pleasure the incidents of their sex in the wild locality in which the play moves, and they enjoy with great zest the love making of the hero, impersonated ideally by Dustin Farnum. Men are strangely fascinated by the incidents of the cowboys' life that so materially differ from those of life in the cities, and they follow with keen interest the development of the story as it relates to the Virginia and Trampas, and the pistol duel that leaves the former triumphant. Much interest is felt in "Cowboy Night" at the Manhattan, arranged for tonight, when Colonel Cody ("Buffalo Bill") and a large number of noted men whose early lives were spent on the plains will witness the play. Members will be given on Washington's birthday, in addition to the regular matinee performances on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

MRS. H. F. DUNN DEAD.

Widow of Aaron Dunn Passes Away in Her Eighty-Ninth Year.

Mrs. Hume F. Dunn, widow of Aaron Dunn, died Friday night in her eighty-ninth year, following a long illness. She was a member of the First Presbyterian church. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Jacob R. VanWinkle, of Elm place; Mrs. W. H. VanWinkle, of Park place, North Plainfield, and Mrs. Hettie Phillips, of Somerset street, and one son, N. Mr. and Mrs. George White, who are now at Daytona, Fla., are expected to return home early in the spring. They will remain here about a month after which they will go to Maine for the summer. They report having had a delightful time in the South.

P. S. C.'S THIRD ORDER FOR TROLLEY CARS

The Builders Throughout the Country Asked to Submit Prices for Cars Wanted.

FOR ENTIRE SYSTEM

A CONSIGNMENT OF CARS HAS BEEN SHIPPED FROM PHILADELPHIA.

Old Officials May be Reinstated—Col. Hine Says There is a Lot of Work to be Done Yet—Sixty Cars in Meadow Shop.

The Public Service Corporation has decided to place a third order for new trolley cars with one of the large manufacturing concerns of the country. The carbuilders have been made aware of this intention and among the bidders will be the John Stephenson Company of Elizabeth.

Since the city officials have begun to twist the tail of the trolley company, considerable improvement has been noticed in the local service.

New cars are arriving fast and Colonel Hine, the new general manager, thinks he will soon be able to turn out three a day from the Plank road meadow shops, where the electrical equipment is being fitted to the cars as fast as they are received.

To rush things along, a force of men from the John Stephenson Car Works has been sent over to assist the Public Service employes in this work. Today there are about sixty new cars at the meadow shops and every effort is being made to have them ready to go into commission within a week.

Besides the cars which have recently been received from the Brill Brothers' factory at Philadelphia, it was given out this morning that another consignment is on the way from a firm in Cincinnati. The new cars will be scattered over the system on the long runs.

Some new cars were shipped from the Brill shops in Philadelphia yesterday which are included in the sixty at the shops today. New electrical equipment has arrived from Pittsburg to be fitted to these cars to be put into commission for the road.

In speaking of the general condition of the system, Colonel Hine said the things were getting into fairly good shape. "There's a lot to be done yet, but we are getting along satisfactorily," he remarked.

There is some talk of Colonel Hine reinstating some of the old superintendents and other officials who were discharged under the Wheatley administration. Among these mentioned in this connection are Charles M. Shipman, formerly superintendent of the Essex division, and Thomas Brady, recently superintendent at Jersey City. This rumor will not be confirmed by anyone connected with the Public Service, and the men who are nominated for reinstatements do not know anything of it themselves.

FIFTY PERSONS JOIN CHURCH

FIRST BAPTIST CONGREGATION HOLDS AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

Unusual interest was manifested in the service at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning, nearly fifty persons were received into membership. The majority were received on confession, there being a few received by letters from other churches. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor-emeritus, was present for the first time in many weeks, and he assisted in the service. He gave "the right hand of fellowship" to Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblies, the pastor, and his wife, after which Dr. Chamblies gave "the right-hand-of-fellowship" to the new members. As he did so he presented each one with a text of scripture written on a card. His words to the new members were both impressive and appropriate.

Following the reception of members the regular bi-monthly communion service was held and in this Dr Yerkes assisted the pastor.

Radel's Company Backs Another.

At the hearing of the application of the Elizabethport Amboy and Long Branch Traction Company, at Woodbridge Thursday for a franchise in that township, the fact became definitely known that the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company is behind the other concern. Y. M. C. A. PREPARING FOR GYMNASTIC AFFAIR Contests to Take Place Engaging the Attention of the Champion Athletes.

HANDBALL CHAMPIONS

COMPETITION AT SAME TIME AMONG MEMBERS OF BOYS' DEPARTMENT.

Silver and Bronze Medals to be Awarded R. M. Smith and C. B. Koons Have Been Received by Physical Director Heywood.

Attention of the members of the physical deparment of the Y. M. C. A. is now turned to preparation for the gymnastic contests to be held probably next month. These events, which take place annually, are for the individual gymnastic championship of the association. To win the title of champion it will be necessary to prove superiority on the high and parallel bars, horse and rings. It is possible that contests in tumbling and other gymnastics "stunts" will also be featured. Practice in the events is held several times weekly.

The handball championship of the association will be competed for at the same time. R. M. Smith, the present holder of the title, is still in the game and, if he enters should make a good bid for a second victory.

The gymnastic championship for the members of the boys' department will be contested at about the same time.

Silver and bronze medals to be awarded R. M. Smith and C. B. Koons, winners of the championship and second place in the athletic contests recently closed, have been received by Physical Director Heywood as have also similar prizes for the gymnastic winners and silver medals for the handball champion and boys' gymnastic champion.

MERRY JUVENILE AUDIENCE

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND" GIVEN BY S. M. B. AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

"Alice in Wonderland," portrayed by the members of the Sunshine Mission Band, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, delighted a large juvenile audience Friday afternoon in the Sunday-school rooms of that church. There were four scenes cleverly reproduced by the twenty members of this organization. The object of holding the entertainment was not only to interest the children in a holiday but to raise money for the benefit of the Day Nursery in Syria. The hall was filled with young people and the proceeds footed up to a large amount.

In charge of the arrangements were Miss Helen Bowne, the president and Miss Harriet Goddard, vice president. These two young women made most of the costumes and drilled the children in their respective parts. Leonard Lewis, a lad of five years, charmed the audience with several vocal solos accompanied by Miss Roxanna Love on the piano. Phonographic selections were given by Mrs. Harriet Hall.

BANKER'S EYESIGHT TOTALLY DESTROYED

A. J. Brunson Terribly Afflicted as a Result of Explosion While Making Experiment.

EYES SEARED BY FIRE

SPECIALIST SAYS THAT HE WILL BE PERMANENTLY BLINDED.

Brunson Kept in Ignorance of His Awful Misfortune—Not Known What Caused Explosion—Victim But 32 Years Old.

It was in a search for a new avenue of wealth that August J. Brunson sacrificed his sight. As a result of an explosion while he was experimenting with chemical compounds in an attempt to discover a quick veneering process his vision was totally destroyed. His eyeballs were almost seared from his head by flames emanating from gasolene and volatile chemicals.

Mr. Brunson is president of the First National Bank and a clever financier. A year ago, in a isolated part of this city, he erected a small brick building, the interior of which he zealously guarded from prying eyes. Almost every afternoon the would go to the place and remain in it until evening, but for what purpose no one knew.

On Thursday afternoon, Feb. 4, residents in the vicinity of "the secret factory," as it is called, were startled by a terrific explosion. Rushing to the place they found one end of the building entirely blown out. Going inside, the bank president was found amid the wreck of a small gasolene engine and unfamiliar paraphernalia. His face and head were a mass of burns, and his clothing was in shreds. He was carried to the home of Dr. George Endicott, where he was made as comfortable as possible while his injuries were closely examined.

Dr. Endicott at once discerned that his eyes were in a critical condition and he summoned Dr. Kipp, a Newark specialist. The latter declared that Mr. Brunson's eyesight was permanently destroyed, as the flames had swept across the eyeballs. As yet the injured man has been acquainted with the facts in relation to the burns, and he is eagerly anticipating the time when the bandages can be removed.—New York Herald.

MR. BESLER TO SPEAK.

Vice President of Central Road to Talk Before First Presbyterian Men's Club.

The Men's Club, of the First Presbyterian church, is arranging for its monthly meeting to be held Thursday night in the chapel of the church. At that time W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield, general manager and vice president of the New Jersey Central, will give a talk concerning railroading. He will tell of the important work in connection with the transportation department of a railroad and relate many interesting details. After the talk there will be a musical programme. It is expected that a number of sub-officers of the New Jersey Central will be present to hear Mr. Besler.

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying or exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. Cream Balm is recognized as a specific. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail. A cold in the head immediately disappears when Cream Balm is used. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

LITERARY.

St. Louis is hot in summer, but thermic conditions this year will be matched by the intensity of converging interests. Such a combination as a great world's fair and a political convention is not frequently obtainable. The convention is almost certain to be one of peculiar excitement. There will be no such certainty about the outcome as there was four years ago. Not only the candidate, but the branch of the party in control, will probably be undecided before the meeting, and there is likely to be a long, hard struggle, with the chances beyond prediction in advance as between a Bryan and a Cleveland man, and a compromise. If two of the participants establish newspapers in St. Louis in order to impress the one his candidacy, the other his control, another diverting ingredient will be added to the cauldron. American life seems to us peculiarly interesting at present, and St. Louis will be the focus for many of the most interesting streams of it.—Collier's Weekly.

The American Boy for February with its title page showing boys snowballing, its skating story, "The Honor of the School," its "How to Hunt Muskrats," and its first chapter of a biography of Washington, is a model February number for a boy's paper. Other timely features are an illustrated article entitled, "Get Ready for the Flowers," written by Dr. Hugo Erichsen, a short biographical sketch of Lieutenant-General Adna R. Chaffee, and a description of "Tribucket Nights," a Connecticut's pet name for Washington's birthday, further chapters of Kirk Monroe's famous story, "The Blue Dragon," the editor's "Three Yankee Boys in Ireland."

DR. SCHENCK SPEAKS ON LIQUOR PROBLEM

Trinity Reformed's Pastor Praises the Mayor and Condemns Council's Action.

THE PEOPLE DEFIED

PROTESTS AGAINST THE GRANTING OF ADDITIONAL LICENSES.

Plea for Home Rule—Does Not Believe That Leaders in City Government Are Callous to Public Opinion.

With "A Temperate View of Temperance" for his subject, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, spoke "a word in season" Sunday p. m. to the Common Council with reference to its stand on the raising of liquor license fees. He discussed the action of the Council with moderation, hopefully suggesting that the members vindicate themselves by voting against the granting of additional licenses.

Taking for his text Galatians V, 19-21, Dr. Schenck began with a general consideration of the drink evil. Drunkenness, he said, is a sin. It is not, legally, regarded as an excuse for crime. Is not the saloon that enables men to get drunk, he asked, morally responsible? The Word of God condemns the drunkard, he said, and condemns the saloon, the factory of drunkards, that makes brutes and beasts of men, that demoralizes everything it touches.

He referred to the official recognition that is given the saloon as a breeder of crime and lawlessness in times of strain or great disasters such as fires or floods, when stringent orders for their closing are issued. He mentioned Lincoln's opposition to the liquor traffic which was called by the great emancipator a "cancer in society." He quoted Ruskin who said that drunkenness is a crime and he advocated personal abstinence as an ounce of prevention against the drink evil.

Dr. Schenck then attacked the problem in its relation to local conditions. He spoke in complimentary terms of the Mayor who saw an opportunity to raise the liquor license, to curtail the influence of the saloon and improve conditions in Plainfield. The Mayor made the proposition for a higher license, correctly interpreting public opinion in so doing, he said, and twice the Council approved without a dissenting voice. And then in the final action, the Mayor "was turned down in the house of his friends and public opinion was defied with no reason at all assigned."

"I claim the members of the Common Council as my friends," said the preacher, "and I speak of them candidly, temperately and kindly. I merely say that the natural and inevitable inference from this reversal of action is that something mean while was 'doing.' Some influence or some person had been at work. One man might have changed his mind and his vote in the ordinary course of events, but not five. If I were a councilman, I should feel it my duty to myself to vindicate myself from the possibility of the inference of improper influence. I should feel that the only vindication could be a refusal to increase the number of licenses even by one."

Dr. Schenck said that there are three applications for new licenses; one for a saloon on Park avenue in a store now occupied by a jeweler, the granting of which by the Council would be a "sin and a shame." There is no call for such a place, he said, and, besides its evil moral effect, it would depreciate surrounding property. Another application, he said, is for a saloon on West Third street, already "sin-cursed and drink-cursed." The third is for one on West Front street beyond Clinton avenue, and this application, the pastor said, according to current report, was likely to be granted.

He continued: "Personally I shall refuse to believe that the Common Council is under bond and mortgage to grant that license until I am constrained to by events."

Dr. Schenck dwelt upon the fact that the people in the West End do not want Goff's saloon. "No one wants it except those who would profit by it, to direct money from the factory to the saloon." He alluded to the fact that the Republican party was insistent upon home rule in politics last fall, going so far as to turn down its regular party nominees in an effort to secure it. Why, he asked, should not this same principle of home rule apply in the case of the granting of a license for a saloon in the West End, when the people don't want it and only out of town brewers do? Dr. Schenck could not believe that the leaders in the city government could be so callous to public opinion as to sacrifice the future at the dictation of the liquor traffic. He warned the Councilmen of the fate that befell "the six" who voted for the saloon on Second street several years ago. "It is not right," he said, "to trade upon the moral sense of the people." He concluded with a prayer that the West End would be saved the terrible disgrace, sin and poverty that would follow the granting of the license.

In his morning sermon, Dr. Schenck alluded to Goff's $18,000 establishment and asked the members of his congregation to use their influence to discourage the granting of the application for a license.

MRS. HAGERDORN ENTERTAINS

RECEPTION IS ATTENDED BY TWO HUNDRED SOCIETY FOLK.

A charming social function of Saturday afternoon was an "at home" given by Mrs. Adolph G. Hagerdorn at her handsome home on Rahway road. There were nearly two hundred guests present, including a number from New York. The home was decorated with flowers, there being a pleasing harmony of various colors throughout the rooms. In the dining room the color scheme was red.

Assisting Mrs. Adolph G. Hagerdorn in receiving were the Misses Hagerdorn and Miss Wupperman, of New York; Miss Emma Meyer, of Brooklyn, Miss Ethel Bowen, Mrs. George Kirkner, Mrs. Otto Arens and Mrs. Herman Hagerdorn. An elaborate menu was served by a New York caterer. This was the first affair of the kind given by Mrs. Hagerdorn since her marriage last June.

VALENTINE PARTY.

Miss Grace Emmons Entertained Thirty Friends in a Delightful Way.

Miss Grace Emmons, of 15 Jackson avenue, last night, entertained thirty friends at a valentine party at her home. There were guests present from New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth and other places. The evening was spent in playing progressive hearts and in dancing. Music was one of the features of the evening's programme.

The hostess and her mother, Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, received. The house was prettily decorated for the event with festoons of red curled tissue paper, with hearts hung pendants from the chandeliers. At a late hour refreshments were served.

S. P. C. A. OFFICERS.

The Somerset County Association Chooses Officers for the Ensuing Year.

The annual meeting of the Somerset County S. P. C. A. was held in Somerville Saturday. Special officers reported the investigation of nearly one hundred cases. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Joseph Fitzgs; vice president, Evelyn W. Murray; secretary, John Voorhees; treasurer, Henry Reimers; counsel, Miss Mary M. Steele; executive committee, Mrs. Caroline Sterling, Miss Mae Loomis, Emily Messler and Kate Veghte, and Mrs. Henry Hardwicke.

MAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

Divine Guidance Necessary for Making Vital Decision, Says Y. M. C. A. Speaker.

Kenneth Robbie, boys' Y. M. C. A. secretary, led the men's meeting in the association hall Sunday afternoon and spoke from the topic "Kadesh Barnea." He said that the time for making a supremely vital decision comes to every man at least once in his life and that he cannot go far wrong in his decision if he looks to a divine source for inspiration. Kenneth Shupp led the singing and with DeWitt Frazee gave instrumental selections.

EUCHRE PARTY.

Mrs. W. A. Millard Entertains Card Club of Which She Is a Member.

A progressive euchre party was given by Mrs. W. A. Millard at the home of her son, E. A. Millard, in East Second street, Friday night. The women's first prize was presented to Mrs. Millard, while W. A. Millard received the first prize for the men. The consolation prizes were presented to Miss Mary Schenck and I. N. Wyckoff.

After the play there was a musical programme and refreshments were served.

To See "The County Chairman."

The Fortnightly Whist Club at its meeting held at the home of Councilman and Mrs. B. I. Tolles, last week, completed arrangements for witnessing a performance of "The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre in New York, on Washington's birthday. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Smith, formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York, will entertain the club after the show.

New Firm of Brokers.

BIG ENGINEERING FEAT AT CENTRAL'S BRIDGE.

West Wing of Great Structure over Newark Bay Now in Position.

WAS BUILT IN THE AIR.

OFFICIALS WATCH THE WORK WHICH WAS WITHOUT A HITCH.

Difficult Problem Solved Yesterday Morning—Weight of Lift 1,500,000 Pounds—Old Structure Is Dangerous.

An interesting feat of engineering was practically completed Sunday when, what may be called the west, or Jersey wing, of the great Jersey Central lift bridge at Newark Bay was lowered for the first time. The bridge, which is the only one of its kind in the vicinity of New York, was constructed in an unusual manner. The immense lift or "leaf" as the engineers call it, was built in the air above the old bridge without stopping traffic. Weighing more than one and a half million pounds and 120 feet in length, each leaf was constructed in a perpendicular position directly over the passing trains. Yesterday, for the first time, traffic was interrupted.

The old Newark Bay drawbridge became so weak that all trains have run across it slowly for more than a year. When it was decided to build a new structure a lift bridge was selected, largely because of the character of the Newark Bay traffic. Tug-boats and scows are about the only craft that pass through the draw. An ordinary drawbridge has to be swung just as far around to pass a tug as a full-rigged ship, but a lift bridge needs to be raised only a few feet. This saving of time in moving the bridge will result in much quicker handling of trains, the officials declare.

The construction of the new bridge in its peculiar position without interfering with traffic was at all times considered a difficult problem. The work was delayed for two months by an accident on Aug. 26, 1903. A big wooden tower, supporting two derricks used in building the bridge, was struck by a sudden squall and toppled over into the bay. Four men were killed and the tower had to be lifted out of the water before work went on. The men working on top of the great leaf frequently have had to crawl around on hands and knees because of the wind.

The last train ran over the former structure at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and immediately afterward workmen began to clear away for the leaf. As it never had been moved before, much of the machinery used in operating it was untried. Yet when the order was given, the ponderous frame dropped without a hitch. So perfectly was it balanced by heavy counter weights at its lower end that a man can lower it, though, of course, slowly, by merely turning a crank.

When the leaf finally dropped upon its stone support, some of the by standers were startled to see the huge mass of steel quiver like a reed. The end of the leaf rose and fell several times before settling. The engineers said, however, that this elasticity was a good thing. The final lowering of the leaf was greeted with loud applause from whistles of a nearby fleet of tugboats.

Work will be begun immediately on the second leaf, which will be built east of the one completed yesterday. The reason for building another span is that the charter of the Jersey Central requires that two channels shall always be kept open to navigation.

An interesting feature of the Jersey Central bridge is the use for the first time of gasolene engines for motive power. There are two separate 75-horse power engines. They are so arranged that either or both can be used to lift either or both leaves.

Another part of the bridge which attracts the laymen's eye, although it is not an engineering novelty, is the huge counter-weights. Two of these weights are fastened to one end of the leaf. Each weight consists of over a hundred cast iron blocks, each block tipping the scales at about 1600 pounds.

The construction of the superstructure of the new bridge was scarcely more difficult than that of the piers on which the superstructure rests. These piers had to be sunk directly in line with the old bridge, but without disturbing the piling on which it rested. The piles for the new piers had to be sawed off at a depth of 35 feet below the water. At first the contractors said it was impossible to cut them at that depth.

When the piles for the first pier had been driven a big box with a bottom consisting of four layers of heavy timbers was built, with detachable sides. Then the concrete pier was laid upon the bottom of the box, which was floated close to the bridge, filled with water and sunk under the old bridge, on the top of the submerged piles driven for it. Then the sides of the box were uncovered and sent to the surface to be used in building the next pier.

All the actual work of planning and construction was carried on under the supervision of Chief Engineer Joseph O. Osgood, of the Jersey Central, and the bridge engineer, Austin Lord Bowman. Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler and a party of officials watched the work yesterday. When the tracks had been laid on the new structure they crossed in an inspection locomotive. All trains on the road between New York and Elizabeth and points beyond Elizabeth went by way of the Newark branch up to a late hour last night.

PLAINFIELDER'S BROTHER DEAD

HENRY B. WILLIAMS SUCCUMBS TO TYPHOID IN HIS PHILADELPHIA HOME.

Henry B. Williams, aged fifty-five years, brother of E. F. Williams, of West Seventh street, died Monday at his home, 5150 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, following an illness with malarial typhoid. Mr. Williams was born and always lived in the vicinity of Philadelphia. He was a successful produce merchant and occupied a prominent place in the business interest. of Philadelphia. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, one of the latter, Miss Edna Williams, being the fiance of Henry Baldwin Drake, of Duer street. Miss Williams was visiting in this city when she was called home by the serious illness of her father.

DEMOCRATS ENJOYED DANCING

VAUDEVILLE PERFORMANCE AN ATTRACTION AT THE LOCAL CASINO.

"Big Bill" Devery and "Tim" Sullivan, the New York politicians, were invited to the second annual ball and reception of the Plainfield Democratic Club held Monday p.m. at the Casino, but did not attend, the committee having received word from these astute statesmen that it would be impossible for either of them to be present. Nevertheless the dance was a success, there being fully two hundred people in the place. Guests were present from Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield, Roselle, Newark and New Brunswick.

Before the dancing began there was a clever vaudeville performance, by out-of-town talent. Among those who favored were James A. Monaghan, songs and overtures; Giff and Millikan, illustrated songs, and scientific bag punching by Harry Dilts, of this city. This proved the most enjoyable part of the evening's programme to those who did not dance.

It was said by the committee last night, that the dance was a success financially and socially. The purpose of holding the dance was to increase the size of the club's coffers in anticipation of its removal into larger and more commodious quarters.

In charge of the arrangements were the officers of the club: President, C. A. Stuhlman; vice presidents, Charles L. Moffett; secretary, Charles Messerschmidt; financial secretary, Victor Troice; treasurer, H. W. Marshall, assisted by P. J. Reville, Andrew J. Nolan, J. V. F. Dilts, J. J. Kane, L. B. Skillman, M. O'Keefe, James Harrigan, Vincent L. Frazee, Frank L. Shattle, Frank McInerney and J. J. Kinnierv.

A Handsome Clock.

J. Harvey Doane, the Park avenue jeweler, has just completed the work of making a handsome clock which is attracting considerable attention. It has a circular dial made of a solid piece of mahogany, an inch thick. On the face the figures and hands are made of brass, gold plated. These are the only ornaments. The works are of an excellent make and the clock keeps accurate time.

FIRE HOUSE NEARLY READY.

It is probable that the new fire house in the borough will be ready for occupancy by April 1 when the lease on the present quarters of the Council expires.

Caveat Dismissed.

The caveat filed by Sidney Frazee and Mrs. George Voehl, of this city, against the filing of the will of Mrs. Catharine Munn, has been dismissed and the will has been admitted to probate in the Surrogate's office at Newark. Undue influence was alleged by the caveators.

Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION CLOSED SUNDAY

Fred H. Andrews and W. D. Murray, both of city, conducted Special Meetings.

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK

PLAINFIELDERS CHOSEN MEMBERS OF STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

As Result of Appeal $500 is Cabled to Japan for Y. M. C. A. Work There—C. E. A. Heywood Attended the Session.

With one of the most inspiring meetings of the week, the Y. M. C. A. closed its State convention at Trenton Sunday. Fully 2,000 were present at the afternoon meeting. Frederick H. Andrews, of this city, read the scriptures at this meeting, and Mr. Andrews and William D. Murray, of this city, conducted meetings in Trenton churches during the day.

The principal speaker Sunday was John R. Mott, one of the most active of Y. M. C. A. workers, who made an urgent appeal for an aggressive foreign campaign. As a result of an appeal by Mr. Mott, the sum of $500 was cabled to Japan today by the Y. M. C. A. international committee to start a special work in the Japanese army similar to that maintained in the American army in time of war.

A conference of the student delegates on the State school library was conducted Saturday by W. D. Murray, of this city, a member of the international committee and a vice president of the convention. As members of the State executive committee for the term ending 1908, Messrs. Andrews and Murray were chosen. A conference of physical directors was attended by C. E. A. Heywood, of the local association.

Many interesting facts in regard to Y. M. C. A. work in New Jersey have been roughs out in the biennial report of the State executive committee as presented to the State convention at Trenton. Frederick H. Andrews, of this city, is chairman of the committee of which William D. Murray, of this city, is also a member.

There are now, according to the report, twenty-four city, town and railroad associations that employ secretaries, also one student association, one colored department and one army association with employed officers. Including the State secretaries there are now sixty-eight men employed by the New Jersey association. There are fourteen student associations, two in army posts and seventeen town associations that do not employ a general secretary.

In 1902 the association at Atlantic City was organized and employed a general secretary, as did the association at Ridgewood. A total membership of 14,266 is distributed as follows: Men and boys of city and town associations, 10,912, railroad associations, 1,637; student, 1,509; army, 148; colored, 57.

The current expenses of the associations the past year aggregates $143,370.

In Bible study a total of 1,630 men and boys have been enrolled in the classes during the past year.

In the association year ending May 1, 1903, the city association reported 9.1 per cent. of the total membership, exclusive of boys, in Bible study; 26.6 per cent. of the boys in classes, and 2.7 per cent. of the membership of the railroad associations in Bible classes.

Many of the associations are planning for larger equipment in the educational department and the placing of this work on a more satisfactory basis.

In the boys' department, within the two years covered by this report, 740 boys have decided to live for Jesus Christ and 214 are known to be united with the church. The New Jersey boys' work is now in the first place in the whole country.

A fourth railroad association has been organized at Secaucus. The railroad membership in Hoboken, Camden and Trenton aggregate 1,640.

Eighteen associations occupy their own buildings, which, with the real estate, has a total valuation of $983,000 and on which there is a mortgage indebtedness of $66,600. In addition the associations have endowment, libraries and furnishings valued at $186,100. The total amount of building funds pledged and partially paid in is $130,850.

During the two years the work conducted by the State committee cost $21,551.26.

Approaching Nuptials.

Mr. and Mrs. Jona Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Jordan Valiant, to Charles Francis Corning, of Baltimore. The wedding will take place in the First M. E. church, Wednesday evening, at 6:30, on March 2.

W. R. HEARST BOOM FORMALLY ORGANIZED

Frank Shattle, Recently Secretary of Democratic City Committee, Made President.

MORE MEMBERS ADDED

VOTE OF THANKS GIVEN WM. RANDOLPH HEARST FOR HIS PICTURE.

Committee Appointed to Draw Up By-laws—Members of Plainfield Democratic Club Join Forces With the Hearst Boomers.

In spite of the alleged opposition to the Hearst boom in this city on the part of members of the Democratic the Club the members of the W. R. Hearst Association met for organization Thursday at the barber shop of James Jiovino, at 430 Watchung avenue, and fifteen new candidates, most of whom are connected prominently with the Democratic organization here were added to the membership. It is said that among those whose names were entered upon the membership roll of the new organization last night were some of the older club's staunchest supporters of the newspaper owner.

The officers were elected: President, Frank J. Shattle; vice president, James Jiovino; recording secretary, John D. McAleer; financial secretary, William Mills; treasurer, Paul Metsener; sergeant at arms, Abraham R. Castor. A committee was appointed to draw up a set of by-laws. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday night, February 24. Meetings will be held once each month.

A resolution of thanks was drafted to be sent to Mr. Hearst, thanking him for a large framed picture of himself, which was received here together with a letter several weeks ago.

The attack made upon the club by the Plainfield Democratic organization was informally discussed at last Thursday's meeting but as no definite accusations were made against the president of the club, no official notice is to be taken of it at present.

CHARGES HIM WITH SLANDER

ROW BETWEEN POLANDERS RESULTS IN A SUIT FOR HEAVY DAMAGES.

For swearing in Polish at Mrs. Susanna Olach, Joseph Manhattan, of this city, is facing a heavy damage suit for slander. Both parties to the suit are Poles.

According to the plaintiff, the action of the defendant was wholly unwarranted. Mrs. Olach's story is that she was seated on the front porch of her residence on East Second street on December 24, when Manhattan approached and, without provocation, called her several unpleasant names in Polish including an epithet which translated means something like "small rubbish that none but the lowest will associate with."

Because of this and other complaints of a like nature, Mrs. Olach retained William Newcorn, Esq., as her counsel, and started suit in the District Court for $300 for slander. The day before the suit was begun, Manhattan again made his presence felt by going to police headquarters and lodging a complaint there that Mrs. Olach was conducting a disorderly house. An officer was sent to investigate the matter and discovered, after breaking into the house late at night, that there was no truth in the charges.

After this second outbreak of Manhattan's, the case in the District Court was discontinued and a new suit for $5,000 for libel and slander started in the Supreme Court.

Manhattan's right name is Machetti, which it is said he discarded for the sake of euphony.

STORING COAL.

Lehigh Valley Railroad Preparing for Anticipated Freshets Piles Up Coal at South Plainfield.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has been preparing for some time for the breaking up of winter and the annual flooding of the Lehigh Valley, by rushing coal to South Plainfield and Perth Amboy.

Some of the cars going into South Plainfield and Perth Amboy are covered with snow two feet deep. The ice in the Lehigh river and its tributaries is of about the same thickness. It is feared that when the ice breaks up and the snow melts the freshet will be unprecedented. Practically nothing can be done to avert the expected trouble, but the company will lessen the suffering incident to it by having large quantities of all sizes of coal at Perth Amboy and South Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Flannery, of New York, have been the guests of Plainfield relatives.

RECEPTION IN HONOR OF REV. A. E. FINN

Park Avenue Baptists Gather to Extend Welcome to Their New Pastor.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

REV. CHARLES L. GOODRICH AND REV. A. C. NICKERSON PRESENT.

Held Under Auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society — Enjoyable Programme Rendered—Those in Charge of the Affair.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, a reception was tendered to the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, and his wife in the parlors of the church, Thursday. There was a large attendance of members of the church and congregation and all united in giving the new pastor and his wife a most cordial welcome. The rooms were appropriately decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, flowers, the prevailing colors being green and white. Banquet lamps placed about the rooms added to the general attractiveness.

Mr. and Mrs. Finn were assisted in receiving by Mr. Finn's mother, Deacon and Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon and Mrs. Thomas H. Cuming. After everyone had had an opportunity of meeting the pastor and his wife, a short informal programme was presented. This consisted of piano selections by Mrs. Harry Johnson and vocal selections by Charles L. Lewis, each being encored several times.

The rest of the evening was devoted to sociability and the serving of refreshments. Mrs. F. T. Ostrom, as president of the Ladies' Aid Society, was the general chairman of the affair. Those presiding at the tables were Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, Mrs. Charles Steiner and Mrs. James S. Pray. Assisting as waitresses were Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Violet VanWinkle, Miss Elizabeth VaWinkle, Miss Helen Cuming, Miss Bessie Thompson, Miss Adelia Runyon and Mrs. Arthur Kross.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, and Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of All Souls' church, accompanied by their wives, represented the Plainfield Ministers' Association at the reception.

BIG CROWD AT THE CONCERT

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA PLAYED BEFORE AN ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE.

The thirteenth concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra not only filled the large association hall last night but the entrance hall as well. The accommodations were altogether insufficient for the crowd that wished to hear the popular numbers and the soprano solos of Miss Florence Ackor, accompanied on the piano by Miss Charlotte Conger.

The programme presented was the same as that of the twelfth concert given February 1 at which the number of those turned away was enough to warrant a repetition of the programme. Admission to the concert was free, and the silver offering taken up an encouraging benefit to the association. The descriptive march, "The Burning of Rome," which furnished a climax to the programme, was again a popular and capably rendered number. Martin A. Korff led the orchestra.

CELEBRATED LINCOLN DAY

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS, G. A. R., HELD PATRIOTIC EXERCISES.

Following the regular business meeting of the Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R., Friday, patriotic exercises were held in honor of Lincoln's birthday, in G. A. R Hall, on East Front street. The entertainment provided by the members was cleverly carried out and a pleasant time was had.

The exercises were in charge of Department Instructor Mrs. Emma Cox, assisted by Corps Instructor Mrs. Sarah Mattox. The business meeting was conducted over by the president, Mrs. Sarah E. Baglin, who occupied the chair to which she was recently elected for the first time last night. Miss Try Mattox pleased those present with a recitation entitled "Lincoln." Mrs. John Manley sang as did Mrs. Charles Westphal. Mrs. Cox recited. Remarks were made by Comrades M. C. Dobbins, Francis L. Whitely, John Manley and others. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Miss Martin at Home.

A ten-pound girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Martin, of Duer street, Thursday.

ESQUIMALT DEFENSES

British Naval Station Is Being Strengthened with Big Guns.

One of the Three Fortified Points in Canada—Size of the Fleet Reduced—The Story of Two Scotchmen.

At Esquimalt, the British naval station which lies three miles to the southwest of Victoria, B. C., and commands the entrance to the harbor, a battery of quick-firing guns is being installed at the navy yard and the work is nearing completion. Extensive mines have been laid in the harbor entrance, and it is reported that the work of constructing a fort on the high bluff overlooking "Royal Roads," (as the approach to the harbor is called) which was planned some years ago by a royal engineer, is soon to be commenced. Recently additional ground was purchased by the imperial authorities and plans were prepared for large and modern magazines, in a sheltered and concealed location, separate from the other buildings. This is taken as an indication of the intention to keep a still larger supply of munitions of war on hand.

But while the general defenses of the station of Esquimalt have been strengthened, the size of the British fleet there has been reduced, so that now, besides the flagship Grafton—which boat is a first class cruiser—only two second class cruisers and two steam launches for use of engineers are stationed there.

But while the fleet has been reduced in size, the strength of the station has been increased, as we have already said, and new guns installed. A description of those guns will prove interesting. They are large 9.2 guns, weighing, with their equipment, 30 tons each. These cannon arrived from England in the fall of last year and were placed in position upon the top of Signal hill, which commands the whole harbor. These guns are said to throw a 380-pound projectile five miles, and with an elevation of 15 feet they have a range of seven miles. The guns are said to have cost $26,000 each. They throw the projectile from the muzzle at the rate of 2,347 feet per second and punch a hole in 18 inches of wrought iron at a range of 3,000 yards. In addition to these heavy guns a battery of quick-firing guns is being installed in the navy yard, and these also cover the entrance to the harbor.

The Briton visiting Esquimalt looks with pride upon these big, frowning, formidable guns, and a feeling of self-confident security creeps into his heart and rings out in the tones of his voice as he talks about what would happen in case of war. A friend of the writer who visited Esquimalt a summer or two ago tells an amusing incident of two Scotchmen whom he overheard in conversation. One was fresh from the homeland and the other was a resident of the states. One saw everything that was British through a magnifying glass and stamped with a great big B and a roaring lion, the other had seen some of Uncle Sam's big guns and knew that Esquimalt with her big guns and little and her dry dock could be dropped down in one corner of some of the fortifications of the States without crowding her American cousin or exciting envy or alarm.

Mr. Scotchman with the magnifying glass found great satisfaction in telling what Esquimalt's big guns could do in even of war, and he had the American navy to its last ship sunk in the deep sea outside the harbor entrance, while the American army was in wild retreat towards Washington. But Mr. Scotchman from the States, with a good nature which comes from confidence of one's position, invited his friend to come across the border and see the real things in the way of cannon. But as far as we [illegible] he stubbornly refused to come and kept busy bragging about what [illegible] big guns would do in case of war.

NUPTIAL KNOT TIED BUT NO FEE REQUIRED

Young Women Who Take Advantage of Leap Year Will be Married Free.

PRESENTS FOR BRIDES

JUSTICE HEZEKIAH HAND'S LIBERAL INDUCEMENT TO LOVELORN GIRLS.

Generous Squire Says He is Making No Attempt to Corner Matrimonial Market, But is Acting Merely for the Benefit of Humanity.

If the ranks of the marriageable are not rapidly depleted this year, it will not be the fault of Justice of the Peace Hezekiah Hand. If the harvest time for willing maids with bashful suitors has not arrived, no one can blame the Judge. If the leap year prerogative of marriage proposals is not employed to good purpose and eligible masculinity ensnared by ambitious spinsters, no one can say that it was because that same esteemed magistrate did not do his utmost.

Marriages performed at cut rates, with special inducements for such as are the result of the bride's proposal, is the Judge's liberal offer. He has given notice that he will perform the marriage ceremony free of charge in the case of all couples who come to him with a statement that they are contemplating entering holy wedlock and that the bride was the one who made the proposal according to her leap year privilege. The Judge will go further than that. He will pay even the fee for the marriage certificate from his own pocket.

To this handsome offer, Judge Hand adds other inducements to those contemplating a marital venture. He announces that all persons coming to him to get married within sixty days from date (February 12) will be given a special present, the exact nature of which he has not yet divulged. This offer holds only in the case of non-leap-year marriages. Judge Hand himself denies that he will give trading stamps.

In an interview with a reporter for The Daily Press recently, the Justice characterized as untrue a report that he was attempting to corner the matrimonial market. He said he was acting merely for the benefit of humanity in general and aspiring spinsters in particular. He also authorized a denial of the statement that he was connected with a marriage trust like the entrapping of unwary bachelors.

It is reported that Chief Kiely will order out a special squadron of police to guard the Judge's office on Front street against the immense throngs who are expected to take advantage of his unparalled inducements for "committing matrimony."

MILITARY EUCHRE.

The Misses Lounsbury Afford an Enjoyable Time at Their Home in Plainfield Avenue.

The Misses Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, entertained a number of friends at their home Thursday, a military euchre, followed by a dance and supper being the attractions. At the conclusion of the euchre first and second prizes were awarded to Miss Bessie Ulrich and Miss Conklin for the women and to Bert VanCampen and Paul Whitford for the men.

Those present to be guests: The Misses Lounsbury, Conklin, Windsor, Edna Long, Gussie Long, Minnie Serrell, May Serrell and Maude Hazeltine, and Bert VanCampen, Arthur Spicer, Paul Whitford, Howard George, Frank Haseltine, Fred Lounsbury and Jesse Lounsbury.

Birthday Party.

In honor of the forty-second anniversary of her birthday, Mrs. Weigmann, of West Front street, entertained a number of friends Thursday at her home. The evening was spent in playing game and dancing and at a late hour supper was served. There were about forty guests present.

Engine Company's Invitations.

Warren Engine Company has received invitations to participate in the Firemen's Day parades at Flemington, on September 14, and at New Brunswick on October 4. At the latter place they will be the guests of Phoenix Company No. 3.

Plainfielder's Grandfather Dead.

The Trials of Life.

The question was asked Josket of an old and noted Philanthropist of New York, what shall I do? I am so debilitated. His answer was do as I and others have—use Speer's Port Grape Wine; it is unexcelled.

Mrs. W. H. Sampson, of East Fifth street, who has been ill with pneumonia, is recovering.

LOBSTER AND EAGLE.

Strange Encounter in Which the Proud Bird Came Off Second Best.

As an excuse for dragging a lobster story in I can at least claim that much of the contention between the French and the English over the French shore difficulty in Newfoundland hinges upon the point as to whether or not a lobster is a fish, since the French fishermen claim the right to build lobster factories on the treaty coast in virtue of the clause of the treaty authorizing them to erect buildings for drying their fish.

The fisherman in this case was one of the white-headed eagles popularly known in Newfoundland as a grip. The story is told by Col. Haggard, with whom I visited Newfoundland a few years ago in search of salmon, says a writer in Forest and Stream. "John Stroud, one of our guides, and I," says the colonel, "were sitting on the rocks by the seashore watching the grip soaring around in circles, when suddenly we saw him dash into a pool of water close by us on the beach and reappear holding an enormous lobster in his talons. It was an old lobster, with a huge claw, white with barnacles, shining white in the sunlight. Only for a second, though. The ripples on the recently disturbed pool had not yet died away, the large troops of water had not ceased to fall upon its surface from the soaring eagle's feathers and the captive lobster alike, when the latter suddenly awoke to the seriousness of the situation, and to think with that apparently helpless creature was to act, for he was a lobster of action. Up came the great white barnacled claw and seized the eagle around the neck. The grip had got the grip now with a vengeance. There was a furious fluttering and beating of his wings, a frantic squirt from his choking throat and then, tumbling and rolling head over heels in the air in a confused mass, down came eagle and lobster again splash into the pool. We rushed forward, thinking that we could, perhaps, in some way, secure both combatants, as the splashing of the conflict continued in the shallow water. But we had hardly time to pick up a rock apiece to heave at the eagle, before the lobster, feeling himself at home again, let go his hold. Now, with his claw all torn and devoid of feathers, away flew the bedraggled eagle to a neighboring cliff, while, still brandishing his enormous claw in defiance, the lobster remained smiling at the bottom of the pool. But the grip will doubtless tell you, if you meet him, that the lobster fishing in Newfoundland is very poor at present, and that he is going to give it up, as the game is hardly worth the candle."

ERRORS IN ILLUSTRATIONS.

They Are Very Easily Made, and in Newspaper Work Almost Unavoidable.

"Perfection or detail," said the cartoonist, according to the Philadelphia Record, "is very rare in the making of pictures, whether they be painted on canvas by the great masters or drawn in line by the men who illustrate the daily newspapers. It is the general effect that tells. There are few newspaper pictures—and I don't exclude my own—in which you can't pick some flaw from the standpoint of realism. In the hurried effort of the newspaper artist who counts the minutes by the clock, there may be some excuse for this, but when we see a man carving a turkey left-handed on the cover of a magazine we must agree that the artist has either been careless or else has employed a left-handed model to pose for him, and the latter solution is scarcely probable. A fisherman landing a trout on a light rod with never a finger on the reel is quite a common mistake among magazine illustrations, and in the matter of costumes of various periods the illustrators are woefully lacking in information.

"To illustrate how apt we are to make mistakes," continued the cartoonist, "several years ago I drew a figure representing Cuba, emaciated, starving, a skeleton in skin, before its bones. The figure was half naked, and I tried to bring out all the horrible detail—the shrunken limbs, the gaunt face, the ribs protruding through the skin, and, above all, the hollow cavity where the stomach should have been. A friend of mine, a doctor, took me to task about it. 'Persons who are starving to death,' he said, 'may be abnormally emaciated in every other part of the body except the stomach. The abdomen in the advanced stage is expanded, with gases until it puffs up like a balloon, giving the victim a grotesque appearance.' To substantiate this statement he showed me some photographs taken in India during a famine, and I was forced to admit that he was right."

Lighter Than Cork.

In spite of the formidable rivalry of the feather, the cork has hitherto held the foremost place among the pseudonyms for lack of weight. This supremacy is now seriously imperiled by the discovery of marea wood, as reported to have been made by Capt. Peel, in the Bahr-el-Ghazel and the neighborhood of Tchad. It belongs to the same species as the mimosa, and as observed growing on the shores of Lake Tchad, reaches a height of from 12 to 15 feet. It throws off shoots near the ground, and its branches bear thorns and yellow flowers. The wood is lighter than cork.

BOROUGH BOWLERS DEFEAT A CITY TEAM

Plainfield Aggregation Loses to Park Club in Three Consecutive Games.

ON CASINO'S ALLEYS

WILLIAM BARLOW, OF PARK CLUB, MADE A 201.

Park Club Wants a Return Game—Final Game Won by 170 Pins—The Make-Up of the Two Teams—The Totals.

An ante-holiday event of unusual interest to the city and borough was the bowling game at the Casino, last Thursday, between a team of 10 men of this city and a like number from the Park Club. The series went to the Parks, the first game by a margin of 24 pins, the second by 50 pins and the third by 170 pins. The home team was not in the best condition and was easily defeated. On the other hand the Parks not being accustomed to the Casino alleys had some difficulty in rolling high scores. William Barlow, a junior member from the Parks, made high score, 201. His bowling attracted considerable attention.

While of course the Plainfield team was anxious to win the series, and was disappointed in not getting at least one game, the social features amply repaid them for their defeat. The Parks seemed to enjoy the meeting as keenly and hope to be able to secure a return game soon.

The two teams lined up as follows:

Parks—F. O. Ball, R. T. Willis, William Barlow, Frank Rogers, Morgan Townsend, Dr. Thiers, William Faber, Walter Long, Morris J. Dumont and F. H. Ball.

Casino—G. F. Earle, W. C. Kinney, Howard Fleming, C. O. Burke, Sr., B. A. Beebe, Howard Beebe, J. E. Erickson, Irving Brown, George Oathcart and Stuart Patterson.

MR. AND MRS. MINER'S PARTY

YOUNG COUPLE GIVE A DELIGHTFUL RECEPTION TO THEIR FRIENDS.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph K. Miner, who were married at Freeport, L. I., last December, gave a reception to their friends at the home of Mrs. Miner's uncle, Emil Messersmith, of East Fifth street, last Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Miner were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith.

Those assisting in the dining room were seven young women, members of a club, of which the bride is a member. They were the Misses Elizabeth Stackhouse, Josephine Morrison, Lynda Morrison, Jessie Pruden, Clara Williams, Etta Rayberd and Alice Jenkins.

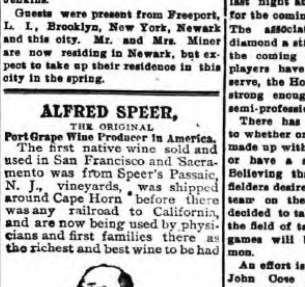
Guests were present from Freeport, L. I., Brooklyn, New York, Newark and this city. Mr. and Mrs. Miner are now residing in Newark, but expect to take up their residence in this city in the spring.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of peaches and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF BOROUGH BOARD

School Authorities Consider Scheme to Send High School Pupils to City's Institution.

MATTER IN ABEYANCE

AN EFFORT BEING MADE TO GET BACK SCHOOL TAXES.

Mr. Valiant Explains Position of Board and Council—Seats in School Rooms Unsatisfactory—Routine Business.

The plan suggested by the North Plainfield Board of Education to send some of the High School pupils of the borough to the High School in this city may be accepted by the Plainfield Board of Education at the proper time. Samuel Townsend, who has had this matter in charge, stated at a meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education in the Somerset street school Thursday that he has received a communication from Superintendent Maxson, of the city schools, in which the latter states that the majority of the members of the city Board of Education favor the scheme. It is not likely that any action will be taken until the proposed new high school building here is ready for occupancy. An opinion on the legality of the plan is necessary. Mr. Townsend stated that Deputy State Superintendent Betts had told him there was little probability of any legal complications and that so far as he knew the plan could easily be put in operation.

John Valiant reported having consulted Borough Tax Collector George F. Brown and Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed regarding the collection of back school taxes. Both said that the Board was entitled to the money and that it would be collected and placed to the credit of the Board of Education. Mr. Valiant declared that some citizens have been given the impression that the Board is at loggerheads with the Council in regard to this matter. There has been no trouble whatever in this respect, said Mr. Valiant.

The seats ordered recently were reported to be in an unsatisfactory condition. The castings are weak and the Board ordered payment on the bill stopped until the defects are remedied. Mr Wightman reported that the half time and ungraded classes were working in a satisfactory manner.

PLANS FOR HOPE'S TEAM

CHAPEL BOYS ARRANGE TO HAVE A PURELY AMATEUR NINE ON DIAMOND.

A conference of the Hope Chapel Young Men's Association was held last night and the subject of baseball for the coming season was discussed. The association will have on the diamond a strictly local list of players the coming season. The probable players have been selected and if all serve, the Hope Chapel team will be strong enough to meet many of the semi-professionals in this vicinity.

There has been some discussion as to whether or not to have the team made up with semi-professional talent or have a straight amateur nine. Believing that the majority of Plainfielders desire to see a purely local team on the diamond, the managers decided to take his course and confine the field of talent to Plainfield. All games will be played on Hope Common.

An effort is to be made to secure John Cose as manager. Who the other officers will be is now merely conjecture. George Cose will probably be selected as captain of the team. The outlook for a favorable season is godo, say the members, and they are confident of making a decided hit on the diamond next season. The baseball committee is composed of John Cose William N. Runyon and George E. Firstbrook.

ANNUAL INSPECTION.

Officer of the Regular Army to Inspect Co. K in This City.

The annual inspection and muster of Company K will be held in the local armory on Friday night, February 26, before an officer of the regular army from Governor's Island, New York. This is held under the provisions of the Dick law making the National Guard a part of the regular army. All soldiers will appear in fatigue uniform with white gloves.

Troubles of Firemen.

Westfield is not alone in its fire department controversy. North Plainfield is somewhat mixed up on fire department matters also and Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., has tendered his resignation as a member of the borough Council. It is said the resignation is due to unpleasantness over the fire department controversy.—Union County Standard.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

REV. LESTER G. LEGGETT HAS RECEIVED A CALL

First Presbyterian Church of Nebraska City, Neb., Asks Him to Become Its Pastor.

HAS MADE NO DECISION

NOW IN CHARGE OF WORK AT EAST THIRD STREET CHAPEL.

Conducted Bible Conference at Nebraska City Last Fall—Rev. Mr. Leggett Will Soon Announce His Plans.

Rev. Lester Girard Leggett, who has been engaged to do special work at the East Third Street chapel, having previously occupied the pulpit of several Presbyterian churches as pastor, has received a call to the First Presbyterian church of Nebraska City, Neb.

Last fall while representing the General Assembly's committee on evangelistic work in Nebraska, Mr. Leggett held a ten days' Bible conference. He made such a favorable impression and was so well liked that immediately upon the resignation of the pastor, a call was sent to him. Mr. Leggett now has the call under consideration and will announce his decision within a short time.

Mr. Leggett has been doing good work at the East Third Street chapel, where he has aroused the interest of all. If he decides to go west he will be greatly missed here. His pastorates have always been successful, as he has considerable ability as a pastor and church worker.

LETTERS FROM MISSIONS.

Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-School Receives Thanks for Its Deeds.

As an evidence of the genuine appreciation felt among those located in faraway mission fields when they receive remembrances from churches and Sunday-schools in the East, two letters recently received by the missionary committee of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, one from the Sunday-school at Cloud Chief, Oklahoma, and the other from the Sunday-school at Cordell, Oklahoma, give much encouragement. These letters, which were read at Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school last Sunday, are as follows:

Cloud Chief, Okla.,
Jan. 10, 1904.

"As a representative of the Cloud Chief Sunday-school, I wish to thank the Plainfield Sunday-school for the generous Christmas box so kindly sent us.

"To say that the children were delighted is expressing it very mildly. In addition to supplying all of our Sunday-school children with candy and presents, many needy families in the neighborhood, who otherwise would have had a very meager Christmas, were made happy with some of the useful and pretty articles which the box contained. The committee was very careful to see that every child in the neighborhood received something.

"The cloaks were given to ladies who had no outer wraps, one of them a young lady in our Sunday-school, and were highly appreciated.

"Again thanking you for making so many of our little ones happy, I remain, Yours in the work,"

Mrs. R. L. Kais, Sec.,
By vote of Cloud Chief Sunday-school.

Cordell, Okla., Jan. 4, 1904.

"The Lone Tree Sunday-school received the Christmas box sent by your Sunday-school for which please accept our heartfelt thanks. We were highly pleased with its contents and a goodly number of the children would not have received any Christmas presents had it not been for your generous gifts. If you could have seen the joy pictured on the faces of the children you would have felt repaid for your trouble many times. There was just enough presents to go around. May God bless you all in your noble work. Although we may not meet on earth, may we all meet in Heaven, is the prayer of your brother in Christ."

Rev. Lester G. Leggett has received a call to the First Presbyterian church of Nebraska City, Neb.

Last fall while representing the General Assembly's committee on evangelistic work in Nebraska, Mr. Leggett held a ten days' Bible conference. He made such a favorable impression and was so well liked that immediately upon the resignation of the pastor, a call was sent to him. Mr. Leggett now has the call under consideration and will announce his decision within a short time.

Mr. Leggett has been doing good work at the East Third Street chapel, where he has aroused the interest of all. If he decides to go west he will be greatly missed here. His pastorates have always been successful, as he has considerable ability as a pastor and church worker.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 21: "Using the Sabbath."—Mark 1, 21-34.

The sentiment with which the Sabbath is regarded depends largely upon early training and association. One who in the quiet of country or village life was early taught to avoid all unnecessary labor and noise, to attend church and spend the rest of the day in reading or some neighborly calling on sick and needy ones will never become completely accustomed to the noise and activity of the metropolitan centers, where many things go on as during all other days.

Though the rigid rules of the Jewish Pharisees and of the sterner types of New England Puritans of former days may not be desirable at the present time, the utter laxity so widely prevalent is much worse than that.

It is not good for body or mind or soul to work without intermission. It has been repeatedly demonstrated that the machine must have their periods of rest or deterioration. One day in seven for physical rest has been found by ages of trial of all possible schemes to be the best interval. How this was first found out we cannot tell with certainty. Among the ancient Babylonians it was surely common. The Hebrews early placed the seventh day rest in their laws, and in later ages it has prevailed among Christians everywhere.

The most needful use of the rest time is for the soul life rather than for the body. It is this fact which makes Sabbath recreations and excursions most harmful. They are usually indulged in under the plea of hard work during the week time and the need of a change on the Sabbath. The usual result of such efforts is greater fatigue on Monday and less of fitness for work than usual. The unusual exertion and excitement of excursions and visiting and such like diversions tax the body and mind excessively and often require several days to restore the balance. The efforts are exhausting instead of restful. The effect on the moral nature is still worse. The spirit of reverence is violated; sober thinking on spiritual concerns is dissipated; the spirit of worldly frivolity dominates, if not something worse, is invited.

The example of Jesus must ever stand before us as authoritative. He had no sympathy with overrigid observance of the day and no allowance for such monstrosities as Pharisaism, but His custom was to take part in the synagogue worship, to meet those who were interested in seeking spiritual advancement and to help the poor and sick. What a Sabbath was that described in the Scripture lesson for this week! It will well repay close study.

We need to meet God's people. We need the solemn influence of the sanctuary worship. There is restfulness to body and soul in the hymns, the prayers, the meditation. New insight into God's trust and will for us, broader views and more hopeful outlook come to us in the sermon and Bible reading. Companionship and interest in welfare of others are stimulated by meeting with the people in worship. Our part in the work of church and community and world comes home more forcibly, and higher resolves are formed. God truly meets us, and a holy spirit helps us more sensibly than at other times and places.

The day should have some quiet intervals for meditation alone, for private prayer and heart examination.

If well used, the Sabbath becomes a delight and blesses all the other six.

The Victory of Faith.

When we reach heaven we may discover that the richest and deepest and most profitable experiences we had in this world were those which were gained in the very roads from which we shrank back with dread. The bitter cups we tried to push away contained the medicines we most needed. The hardest lessons that we learned are those which teach us the most and best ways for service here and glory hereafter. It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like and to trust Him when the path is all sunshine. The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lesson and the rod are of His appointing and that His all wise love has engineered the deep tunnels of trial on the heavenward road He will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to obey and desert Him.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Zeal According to Conviction.

There is great power in enthusiasm. Not one of the disciples who had been in intimate companionship with the Master, seen His miracles, heard His wonderful teachings, observed the crystal purity of His life, surpassed Paul in zeal for the gospel. With his mind at rest concerning the truth of the gospel and with the powers of his logical and cultured intellect employed in persuading men to be reconciled to God through Christ, Paul's zeal made him well nigh irresistible. It was not a zeal without knowledge, but a zeal according to intense and settled convictions.—Independent.

Strength by Trial.

The purest lives I have known have not been those carefully screened from the world, but which, coming up in it, have kept themselves undefiled. The sweetest and truest have grown and ripened under conditions, you would say, most hostile, but which have been wrought into the means of a grandly elevated faith and life.—J. F. W. Ware.

The Christian Life.

Put your whole soul into the Christian life. No one ever was guilty of backsliding who was pressing with all his might toward Jesus.—Philadelphia Methodist.

A FILIPINO SENTINEL

Joke Played on the Crew of an American Warship.

They Greatly Admired the Courage Displayed by a Man of Straw—An Amusing Incident of the Philippine War.

Soon after Aguinaldo had established his government at Malolos, and had gathered the main portion of the Filipino army about him at that place, his busy spies brought him information that the American forces were preparing to advance from Manila upon his new capital. Hastily dispatching a considerable force from his army, he sent it to resist the advance of the Americans, and set the remainder at work to erect fortifications about Malolos.

The forces dispatched to resist the advance of the Americans, displayed great activity, and employed every possible means at their command to delay the progress of the enemy. They destroyed roads, burned bridges, and laid an ambush in every tongue of timber that reached the highway, and in every tangle of bushes and vines that offered concealment for a line of troops.

A favorite method employed by the Filipinos called for the display of a high order of courage. Selected marksmen were sent into the tops of tall cocoanut and palm trees, from which concealment they were directed to fire upon the advancing Americans. Owing to the dense foliage of intervening trees these men were seldom able to use aimed fire until the enemy was almost upon them. Many, in consequence, remained in the trees to obtain this advantage, and but few who did so ever escaped capture or death at the hands of the Americans.

Sometimes, however, the sharpshooter remained for some time undiscovered in his perch among the leaves. In the bivouac of one of the regular regiments, made in a grove of palm trees, not far from Malolos, the occasional crack of a Mauser rifle, seemingly overhead, caused a careful examination of the surrounding tree tops by the troops in an effort to discover if possible the place from which the sound came. The firer was discovered at length, clothed in the green leaves of the palm, lying stretched out at full length on a branch of the tree.

While the land forces were moving forward on the highway not far from the sea, the United States monitor Monadnock followed up the movement abreast of the troops. Occasionally, as she proceeded, she cast a shell into the Filipino entrenchments that lay within view of her decks. Once, just before dark, as the ship neared Malolos, an extensive line of works was discovered, in front of which a white-clothed Filipino sentinel was leisurely pacing back and forth. A shell was quickly discharged at the works, but the missile falling a little short struck the ground near the sentinel. Other shells followed in rapid succession, but each time the man put an end to the firing, a number falling so near to the man that they covered him with dust when they struck the earth. He remained, nevertheless, on his post until an officer appeared and took him away. A new sentinel almost immediately took his place, and standing rigidly erect in front of the works gave no evidence of fear, although a number of shells struck almost within reach of his hand.

On the following morning the sentinel was observed still on his post in front of the works, apparently as defiant and fearless as ever. A number of shots were then rapidly fired at him, and more would have followed had not the captain discovered that the gunners were firing at the sentinel instead of at the works, and caused the firing to cease.

After the fall of Malolos, and the retirement of the Filipino forces, the great ship fell back to the place where she had joined the sentinels. To the surprise of all on board the sentinel was still at his post, as rigidly erect and immovable as when shot and shell were falling fast and furiously about him. A boat was quickly manned and a crew sent ashore to reconnoiter. The sailors cautiously approached the sentinel, who stood the meanwhile silently in his place. As they came near they discovered to their chagrin and amusement that the Filipino sentinel whose supreme courage they had so much admired, was simply a man of straw, a substitute, and a dummy.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 28—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Heroism and other lessons from China.—Acts xiv, 19-28.

There is no Christian mission field that has not its stories of self denial and heroism to tell. These characteristics are seen in the apostle Paul upon his first great missionary journey, as illustrated in the passage before us. Paul is at Lystra and has been received with favor for his work's sake. But enemies come from Antioch and Iconium. The people are stirred up against the apostle. They stone him and carry him out of the city, supposing him to be dead. But he was not so, and as the disciples stood about him he arose, went back into the city and thence to Derbe, continuing to preach the gospel. Is not this heroism? And yet it is but the story that may be told of every missionary field.

Turn from Asia Minor to China and to modern missions, and you will find this assuredly true. I have on the wall of my study a picture containing the portraits of five comparatively young men who sailed from these shores to look at them now. Their faces are handsome, intelligent and cheerful in appearance. Their every expression shows culture and refinement. Beneath this little group I read these words: "Martyred Missionaries of Pantingfu, China, June 30, 1900."

June 30, 1900! Over 1,800 years since Paul was supposedly martyred at Lystra, yet still the work of martyrdom goes on in leading the world to Christ, and nothing further than the group of martyrs may teach us "heroism and other lessons from China." The names of these missionaries are Rev. F. E. Simcox and wife, Dr. C. V. Hodge and wife and Dr. George Y. Taylor.

1. Missions in China teach heroism, and nowhere is this better illustrated than in our group of martyrs. They knew of the Boxer movement and of their danger, yet they heroically stood at their post of duty. When their mission house was attacked Mr. Simcox had firearms, with which he might have caused great destruction among his persecutors, but he threw them down, refusing to use them. The house was set on fire, and there they stood, these five heroes and their children, and died as heroically as any martyrs ever died for Christ. The last seen of them was Mr. Simcox holding the hand of his little child as the flames leaped all about them. Such examples should spur us all to Christian heroism. We should dare to do our duty no matter what may be the difficulties or dangers that surround us.

Where duty calls or danger,
Be never wanting there.

2. Missions in China teach lessons of sacrifice and self denial. These young people were all from Pennsylvania. Dr. and Mrs. Hodge were Philadelphians and members of two honored Philadelphia families. They all left homes of comfort—yes, even of luxury—to go to China to preach the gospel and heal the sick for Christ's sake. None but those who go knows what it costs to leave home and country and to go to a foreign mission field, where you are cut off from all familiar associations except with the little band of people at the mission station. We speak of our self denial for Christ, but what is it in comparison to the sacrifices of those who leave all for Him and risk all for Christ and His cause? The sacrifices and Simcoxes occasionally and ask ourselves, What have we done for Christ in comparison to those who have died for Him in distant lands with no human eye to pity and no human hand to save?

3. Missions in China teach lessons of loyalty. This is beautifully illustrated in our little group of martyrs. Dr. Taylor was absent from the mission house at Pantingfu when the danger became most imminent. He was then away on a business trip, but had promised to return. But before returning he heard of the danger that threatened his friends. Other friends pleaded with him not to return, but he listened not to their entreaties, but went back to keep his promise and to face life or death with his associates, as the case might be. What a story of loving loyalty and how it should teach us to be loyal to our friends, and especially to our greatest friend, the Master Himself!

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 8, 17-19; Isa. vi, 1-8; xxxv, 1-10; Matt. x, 16-33; Luke x, 1-12; xxiv, 45-48; John xv, 26; Rom. x, 14, 15; II Cor. xi, 13-33.

He's My Brother.

A gentleman once met a little girl carrying in her arms a sturdy little boy. Thinking the load of the burden was not somewhat heavy. "Why, he's my brother; he's not heavy," was the simple but beautiful reply. How love lightens burdens, and how much easier all life is when lived in the spirit of love.

Pennsylvania State Song.

[Tune—"Trust and Obey."]

Pennsylvania for God!
By the Lord we will stand
We will reach every village and home,
For the Master says, "Go!"
And He will love fills us so
That we gladly will herald His "Come!"

CHORUS.

Come to the Lord!
Oh, believe in His word,
And the love He will manage you
From all sin by His blood.

To the rich and the poor
Christ has opened the door,
And He stands to tell them the way,
With a heart full of joy
Tell each girl and each boy
That the Saviour will save them today.

Then, with Christ in the lead,
To His voice giving heed,
We will fight till we conquer the foe.
So we'll all lend a hand,
And together we'll stand
True to 'Christ and the Church" here below.

BOROUGHITES TO VOTE ON THE SCHOOL PLAN

Public Meeting Set for Feb. 23, by the North Plainfield Board of Education.

A SITE IS RECOMMENDED

THE ENTIRE EXPENSE IS ESTIMATED AT $35,000.

Proposition to Locate Building on Grove Street Between Rockview Avenue and Greenbrook Road —Purchase of a Lot.

A public meeting of voters will be held in North Plainfield Tuesday night, February 23, for the purpose of taking action on the propositions of the Board of Education's regarding the site and expense for the erection of the much needed additional school building in the borough. This date was decided upon by the members of the Board at last night's session. The voters will also be asked to allow bonds to be issued.

The propositions are to purchase a lot, with a frontage of 300 feet, on the west side of Grove street between Rockview avenue and Greenbrook road; to authorize the erection of an eight room structure on that lot and to issue bonds to the amount of $35,000.

It is believed by the members of the Board that this site is the most desirable. It is in a part of the borough which is rapidly growing. As far as the sanitary condition of the location is concerned, it cannot be excelled.

There are a number of people, however, who believe that the new building should be located in the eastern part of the city, where the school census taken in the borough, showed that there was the greatest number of small children of school age in the location bounded by Somerset street, Fairview avenue, Westervelt avenue and East Front street. There is a division of the Board in the selection of the site.

ESTIMATED BALTIMORE'S LOSS

HERBERT BUXTON, OF THIS CITY, CONFERRED WITH INSURANCE ADJUSTERS.

Herbert Buxton, of Madison avenue, who is an insurance broker, has returned from Baltimore, where, with representatives of all insurance companies affected by the great fire in that city, conferences have been held with a view to adjust losses. Mr. Buxton says that the lowest figure at which the insurance men are able to place the gross loss is $135,000,000 and the most conservative will lose about $150,000,000.

Mr. Buxton has a loss of $350,000 to adjust as a broker. He says that every insurance company in Baltimore, excepting the German, of that city, has been forced to the wall. He tells some interesting incidents in connecting with the losses sustained by the insurance companies. The representative of a British insurance company cabled the company as to facts and received in reply a cablegram stating "Glad we are one of the heaviest losers in the fire. Cable us for any amount necessary."

PROTESTS AGAINST TAX.

New Yorker Appeals to State Board Against Assessment on Farm Near This City.

William C. Arnold, a lawyer of New York, has appealed to the State Board of Taxation for a reduction in the assessment levied on his property on the road leading from this city to Metuchen. The papers were served on William A. Spencer, counsel for the township, yesterday. The property is a farm of about 50 acres and was assessed for $4,000. He has also been assessed for $500 personal property, half of which was taken off by the commissioners of appeals when the case was brought before them for consideration. The place was assessed for but $3,000 until last year. Before that time Mr. Arnold began to make improvements to the house and property and has fitted it up as a summer residence.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Affair.

A patriotic concert and exhibition of moving pictures including photographs of the Baltimore fire will provide entertainment for the Y. M. C. A. boys on the afternoon of Washington's birthday. Selections of a patriotic nature are being rehearsed by a glee club. Admission to the concert will be free. There will be a silver offering.

Plainfielders at the Shore.

Among the many Plainfield visitors to Atlantic City at this season are Mrs. Griscom and her daughter, Miss Griscom, of Sycamore avenue, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Joy, of Myrtle avenue, and Mrs. and Mrs. Walter A. McGee, of Rockview avenue.

MOTORMAN'S FUNERAL DREW MANY FRIENDS

Vincent Gulick, Killed in Trolley Accident, Buried in Hillside Cemetery.

TRIBUTES OF RESPECT

MEMBERS OF FRATERNAL ORDERS PAID THEIR LAST RESPECTS.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. Dr. S. L. Earp Officiated—Brothers of K. G. E. and Jr. O. U. A. M. at the Obsequies—The Pallbearers.

Representatives from Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. G. E., Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and employes of the Public Service Corporation, together with a very large number of relatives and friends gathered at the funeral services of Vincent Gulick, the young man who lost his life Sunday night while running a trolley car on East Front street. The services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home in Park place and at 2:30 o'clock from Warner's chapel. At each place the attendance was large, showing the high esteem in which the dead young man was held.

His popularity was also shown by the beautiful flowers contributed, the most noteworthy being a complete trolley car design made of flowers. It displayed everything pertaining to a car including the fender, vestibule, and the number of the car of which Mr. Gulick was in charge was shown. This tribute came from the motormen and conductors on the trolley line. Other flowers included a wreath from the Knights of the Golden Eagle, a pillow from Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and a pillow from the family bearing the words "Our Vincent." There were also many smaller contributions in flowers.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and Rev. E. L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, were in charge of the brief services at the house. At the chapel the Scriptures were read by Dr. Earp, while Mr. McKelvey made a few remarks and offered prayer. Following the services an opportunity was given to view the remains.

The interment took place in Hillside cemetery, the various organizations, together with relatives and friends accompanying the remains to their last resting place. For this purpose several trolley cars were placed at the disposal of the organizations. The pall-bearers were Louis Kelley and Charles Delebunt, motormen from the trolley company; John Staats and Fred Windham, from Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and Percy Banghart and A. R. Vail, from Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle.

SECOND DECISION.

William H. Rogers Corporation to Carry Suit Against It to Highest Court in the State.

In the case of International Silver Company against William H. Rogers Corporation, Vice Chancellor Fredrick W. Stevens has just filed a long opinion in which he holds that the methods adopted to prevent confusion of the corporation's goods with those of the complainant while sufficient as to jobbers and perhaps retail dealers are not sufficient, as to retail purchasers who may not see labels and etc., and that the use of "Wm." as the other abbreviation of William, in connection with the word "Rogers" by the defendant, ought to be enjoined, but that the defendants should not be enjoined from using the name "Rogers" its president, if made distinctive whenever used, by the addition "W. Henry" and "Plainfield, N. J." in connection with its trade-mark.

This is the second decision in the case. In the first, on motion for preliminary injunction, the decision was in favor of the defendant. The defendant is not satisfied with the present decision and will at once take the case on appeal to be highest court in the State. The counsel in the case were Edward A. Day, of Newark; Hiram O. Mills, of Hartford, Conn., and John P. Bartlett, of New York, for complainant, and Craig A. Marsh for defendant.

Firemen's Parade.

The New Jersey Board of Engineers of the Fire Department has decided to hold its bi-ennial parade and celebration on Tuesday, October 4. It is expected that the firemen of North Plainfield, who by that time will be exempts, will again be the guests of Pioneux Engine Company No. 3. It is planned to have between twenty and thirty companies in line.

Famous Woman to Reside Here.

It is said that Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, will soon give up her residence in Newport, R. I., and live in this city with her daughter.

PREACHER DISCUSSES THE NEGRO QUESTION

Rev. John McMurray Says the Freedman is a Good Citizen and Should be Encouraged.

PLEA FOR ASSISTANCE

EMIGRATION OF NEGROES WOULD WORK GREAT HARM.

Quotes Booker T. Washington to Show That Education of His Race Has Reduced Crime—Asks Aid for Freedman's Educational Society.

"Abraham Lincoln and the South Land" was the subject of a sermon by Rev. John McMurray at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Sunday morning. What the martyred president did for the south was one of the greatest acts of civilization, he said. The slaves were freed but the question of today is, what shall be done for them? To export them to Africa, from whence they originally came, the pastor said, is out of the question from an economic standpoint as the support of the south depends largely on their labor.

During the last year, said Mr. McMurray, there has been a scarcity of cotton, but ordinarily there is a scarcity of labor in the cotton and rice fields in spite of the fact that there are millions of negroes at work. If the colored people are exported it would be necessary to import other labor. It might even bring to this country a large number of Chinese Coolies. The minister maintained that the negro is needed here, and should be given the same opportunity for advancement as is accorded the thousands of immigrants which come to these shores continually.

Continuing Rev. Mr. McMurray said: "The foreigner comes to this country opposed to government and law. He very often departs with his pockets filled with the fruits of his labor to his native country without becoming naturalized. Not so with the negro. He knows what government is and loves it. He is brought up to respect it. If he prospers he does not go to some distant country and spend his earnings there. He stays right here and spends it among his own people. He should be accorded the same rights of suffrage as the foreigner, and he should be encouraged in his efforts to secure an education."

Mr. McMurray's text served to introduce the work being done in the south by the Freedman's Aid and Southern Educational Society. He commended the work of this organization in the hegest terms and said that it would do no harm if the government were to appropriate a sum annually to assist in educating the people in the south. The speaker said that he once heard Booker T. Washington say that none of the graduates of the Tuskagee Institute were to be found in prisons or penitentiaries and none of them had stained the name of the institution by committing the crimes which in the south are punishable with lynching. As far as illiteracy is concerned the pastor declared that the percentage in America is only 44½, which is not so high as in Spain, Portugal, Africa and many other countries.

"PARSIFAL" EXPLAINED.

Wagner's Opera Made Clear by Talk and Illustration at Home of George A. Chapman.

A lecture on Wagner's opera, "Parsifal," with illustrations on the piano, was given Saturday at the home of George A. Chapman, of Stelle avenue. An admirable idea of the plot of the opera, its scope, meaning and purpose, as well as its general musical effect and worth, was obtained through the explanations and artistic renderings of Ulysse Albert Buhler, of New York city. The affair was arranged by a musical coterie interested in obtaining an intelligent understanding of the New York production of the opera. It was for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS

FANWOOD AND SCOTCH PLAINS VOTE FOR ONE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

County Superintendent Shearer yesterday received the official report of the result of the Fanwood-Scotch Plains school election held Wednesday. The vote was unanimous for consolidation. This is the method that has obtained in the two districts heretofore, but under the provisions of the new school law the matter had to be referred to the vote of the people. The board of school directors will be composed of nine members. Each town will elect four members and the State will appoint one.

Elections on the question of consolidation will also be held in New Providence township and New Providence borough, Linden township and Linden borough, and Westfield and Mountainside.

LIVELY CAMPAIGN EXPECTED AS RESULT OF PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Some exciting campaigning is promised prior to the next election in North Plainfield. Election day falls on Tuesday, March 10, and as yet the Democrats are the only ones who have held a council of war. The fight promises to be waged fast and furious when it starts. The firemen do not deny that they would like to see the coming vacancies in the Council filled by men favorable to their interests. A politician, whose sympathies lie with the firemen, in speaking of the action of the Democrats in agitating for a non-partisan ticket, said it is a plan to gain the support of the firemen so that a Democratic representation in the Council can be secured. The hopes of the Democrats in North Plainfield, it is said, depend largely in getting the firemen arrayed with them.

According to the resolution passed in the Council at the February meeting when the paid department ordinance became a law, the volunteer system will disband on election day, March 15. This is a thorn in the side of the firemen which, they say, will spur them on to bitter hostilities during the coming campaign.

Saw Baltimore's Ruins.

Mr. and Mrs. William Abbott, who have returned from their honeymoon, spent a portion of the time at Old Point Comfort and stopped at Baltimore, where members of the Naval Reserves escorted them about the ruins of the great fire.

Saved Hired Man's Life.

A man named Delafield, living near South Plainfield, saved his hired man from being asphyxiated by inhaling escaping coal gas in a chicken house Thursday night.

Miss Nana Texier, of Somerset street, is detained at home by sickness.

ZERO WEATHER.

Within Ten Hours Mercury Fell Twenty-five Degrees.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Only a few steps to spring; the pale anemone and the modest violet, and yet to have weather below zero! With March less than two weeks distant, the temperature is such that the arteries almost congeal outdoors; but, still worse, the federal forecaster declares that by night the mercury will fall even farther and will continue low, while gales drive the chill into every nook and crevice of Gotham's homes.

Within ten hours the mercury fell twenty-five degrees in this city and in the surrounding country, and at 9 o'clock the official record was 1 degree above zero, that being the lowest officially for twenty-four hours, although suburban thermometers ranged from 5 to 10 degrees below.

Just to emphasize his chilling powers old Winter has added a keen northwest wind that brings a chatter of teeth with every gust and adds to the prosperity of fur muff manufacturers. "More cold," the weather forecaster says. In the city streets men, women and children are holding to their ears, and flat dwellers are whistling down the dumb waiter shaft to the poor, tired janitor the old tune, "More heat."

But hope is high in the human breast, for signs of spring are not lacking even if water pipes are freezing and yesterday's wash clings stiff and unyielding as a preacher's dignity. Seed catalogues for 1904 are in circulation, the days are getting longer, and farmers are polishing up their plows.

BLIZZARD AT CAPE COD.

Several Trains Stalled In Snowdrifts All Night.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Feb. 17.—The entire Cape Cod section, which has been swept by a furious blizzard—the worst since that of November, 1898—has not recovered, and traffic on land and navigation are delayed. The employees of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad have succeeded in digging out several trains which were stalled during the night.

One of these was a train which had left Boston for Provincetown. The locomotive struck a big drift at Beach Point, and the train remained stalled. The trainmen, in spite of the bitter cold, managed to send word to Provincetown for assistance. Two relief trains were started, but they, too, became stuck in the drifting snow, and the attempt to dig out the Boston train had to be abandoned for the night.

The passengers on board realized that it would be foolhardy to abandon the cars, in view of the terrific storm. They had nothing to eat until rescued. The track was cleared by a large force of men, but it was late in the day before traffic was resumed.

At many points along the railroad the snow is packed and drifted much worse than during the gale of 1898.

Fight Over Valentine; One Dead.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 17.—As the result of a quarrel which started over a valentine John Carley, aged thirty, is dead from a bullet wound, and Mrs. Minnie Howard, in whose house the affair occurred, is under arrest charged with the shooting. William Ewing and Maud Goodwin received cuts and bruises and were locked up as witnesses. The trouble occurred in a boarding house conducted by Mrs. Howard. It is said that she fired the shot which killed Carley to prevent him from killing Ewing during a general scrimmage. After lying for several hours unconscious Carley died at the City hospital.

Gallagher Gets Prison For Life.

TAUNTON, Mass., Feb. 17.—John E. Gallagher, who was recently arrested at Seattle, Wash., and brought here charged with murder in the second degree for shooting his brother-in-law, Joseph McMahon, in this city in 1899, was found guilty by a jury and immediately sentenced to life imprisonment. Gallagher had separated from his wife, who was living with her brother. He entered the McMahon home late one night, and the shooting, which the defense claimed was accidental, followed.

Jaggers Found Guilty.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 17.—George Jaggers has been found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Mary E. Bevans. Mrs. Bevans was killed and her husband was seriously wounded by shots fired through a window in their home in Sandystone township on the night of Oct. 23. Jaggers was arrested on suspicion on the day of Mrs. Bevans' funeral. The evidence against him was all circumstantial. He will be sentenced on Feb. 27.

Mas and Morasne Held In Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The preliminary inquiry into the charges of perjury made against Lucien Mas and Alfred Morasne in connection with the testimony given by them with regard to the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, who were killed in an automobile accident in France in August, 1902, has been concluded and the accused committed for trial.

A Cowardly Murder.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 17.—Near Winfield, Putnam county, an unknown person killed Ted Thomas Sparks by firing through the window of his home. Sparks was eighty-three years old, and only his daughter, an elderly woman, lived with him. She was out of the house when the shooting was done.

Frozen to Death in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 17.—Thermometers registered from 5 to 10 degrees below zero in and about Pittsburg. At Corry it was 30 degrees below zero. Two men were found frozen to death, an unknown man in Allegheny and Robert O'Brien at Coraopolis, a suburb.

I. C. T. ELECTS.

Officers Chosen and Committee Appointed to Select New Club Rooms.

These officers were elected at the meeting Saturday night of the I. C. T. Club: President, William Waters; vice president, Edward Texier; secretary, Arthur Caleen; treasurer, Raymond McVoy; assistant treasurer, Berlin Banks; sergeant-at-arms, Geo. B. Cose. V. W. Nash, Jr., and Edward Texier were elected a committee to seek suitable rooms. It is said an effort will be made to obtain club rooms in the Woodhull & Martin building. These two members are also on the pastime committee and have decided to hold a "ladies' night" in the Central Hall club rooms on Monday night, February 22.

Funeral of John Dedodo.

LINCOLN'S CITIZENS HONORED EMANCIPATOR

Silas Dewey Drake, Gen. J. Madison Drake and Rev. J. B. Cleaver the Speakers.

BANQUET A FEATURE

REV. J. C. CULP OFFERED THE OPENING PRAYER.

The Misses Egel Sang Patriotic Songs, Accompanied by Mrs. vonMinden—S. D. Drake's Speech—Told of a Precious Flag.

A celebration in honor of Lincoln day was held in Lincoln Friday. Speeches were made by Silas Dewey Drake, of Lincoln; Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, and Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth. Songs were rendered by the Misses Egel, accompanied by Mrs. VonMinden, and a banquet followed.

The exercises opened with a prayer by Rev. J. C. Culp, of Bound Brook. Mayor Silas Dewey Drake was master of ceremonies and in the course of his speech he said: "I am proud of the fact that I lived in the day of Abraham Lincoln, and was familiar with his life, his struggles and his triumphs. I am proud of the fact that I could answer his call for troops, to help beat back the foe that fired on our starry flag, and who sought the disruption of our glorious union. The soldier boys of '61 to '65 called him father Abraham as they used to sing on the tented field and weary march, 'We are Coming Father Abraham 300,000 more, from California's Golden Gate, and from New England Shore.'

"Last Monday night a hundred old veterans of the war, accompanied Gen. J. Madison Drake to Trenton where they presented to Gov. Murphy, as custodian of the State, the first flag that was unfurled on Virginia soil, my mind goes back to that dark night in '61 when that march was made across long Bridge, and if I believe that were Lincoln living today, he would say that that night was an eventful one in his life, as he realized that our brave boys were about to enter the enemy's country, and I saw that old battle flag laid away last Monday night, and could see the tear drop on the bronzed old veterans faces, I could imagine the spirit of Lincoln looking down, and saying, while each State House in our country holds the flags of this regiment, 'There go at last the flag that its bearer, Ensign J. M. Drake, carried on Virginia soil, on that eventful night in '61, and while I have passed away so long ago, after finishing the work that God laid out for men, and a majority of my soldier boys have answered the last roll called, and the few that are left are striving over relics and flags for safe keeping, where generations yet to follow may get an inspiration and that will fit them for good citizenship and patriotic duty.'"

Rev. J. B. Cleaver spoke for fifty minutes in his eloquent way, after which Gen. J. Madison Drake delivered a short address. A repast was served to the one hundred persons in the lower hall.

SCHOOL MEETING.

Citizens of North Plainfield to Decide Whether a New School Building Shall be Erected.

A special school meeting will be held in the North Plainfield High School on Somerset street, Tuesday night, February 23, at 8 o'clock, at which time it is proposed to take action concerning the purchase of a plot of ground upon which it is desired to erect a new public school. The Board of Education will ask the voters to authorize the borrowing of money with which to purchase ground and erect a new school, the sum total thought to be necessary being $35,000.

Commensurate Punishment.

In the New Jersey Legislature a law was introduced which proposed imprisonment for three years for any dealer selling cigarettes to boys under 16 years of age. But Governor Murphy quite sensibly insisted upon a change making the imprisonment part three months. Of course, it is an evil to sell cigarettes to mere boys, but a misdemeanor of that sort should not be classed with felonies and crimes which rightly merit severe punishment. The masses would recognize the injustice of the case, and in the end public opinion would practically do away with the law. Good strong fines serve a better end in matters of this sort.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Mrs. Geo. Angleman in Hospital.

Mrs. George Angleman, wife of Plainfield's former street commissioner, fell down stairs at her home in New York, a few days ago, and fractured her arm. She is now in St. Luke's Hospital.

ROBERT A. MEEKER'S TALK ON GOOD ROADS

Plainfielder Makes Address Before Members of Good Roads' Congress in Conn.

JERSEY'S FINE WORK

MR. MEEKER IS THE STATE SUPERVISOR OF ROADS.

Recites Provision of New Jersey's Law—Movement Here One of National Growth—The Money That Has Been Spent.

Robert A. Meeker, of this city, State Supervisor of Roads of New Jersey, is a delegate to the Good Roads' Congress which is being held in Hartford, Conn., this week, and the Hartford Times, of Wednesday contains a full account of the proceedings of the congress, together with the pictures of the prominent men present. An excellent likeness of Mr. Meeker is shown.

Mr. Meeker made an address Wednesday afternoon on what had been accomplished by State aid in New Jersey. He said in part:

"The good roads movement in New Jersey is one of natural growth and gradual development. Beginning, as it does, where the street pavements end, and extending through the outlying suburbs to the farms beyond, its end and aim is to bring city and country into closer contact. For this purpose it was necessary to procure a road covering that would be hard and smooth at all seasons of the year, and, at the same time, much less expensive than city pavements.

"Under the provisions of the original New Jersey State aid act, the property owners are required to pay one-tenth and the State one-third of the cost. These payments are virtually a free gift to the county, which pays the remainder and therefore must keep the roads in repair. It is also mandatory upon the boards of freeholders to build a road whenever the property owners present a petition for its improvement and agree to pay one-tenth of its cost.

"The passage of this law created a demand by the friends of the good roads movement for its enforcement, and also an equally determined opposition, which opposition resulted in an appeal to the courts and the mandatory features were sustained. Since that time there has been an increasing demand for roads to be improved under this act, and to meet this it has been necessary to increase the State appropriation by gradual stages from $75,000 in 1892 to $250,000 in 1903, while our present law provides that it may be increased to $400,000, and even this sum would not satisfy all the demands we receive for State aid. In further proof of this, the number of miles built bear testimony. From 34.9 in 1893, the number of miles constructed annually has increased to 155 in 1903, making the total number of miles of roads improved under the provisions of the State aid law, from its enactment to the present time, 959, toward the construction of which the State has contributed $1,551,168.55; in addition to the above there are 48 miles in process of construction, thus bringing the grand total of roads built and under contract, under State supervision, up to 1,000 miles. The foregoing is a brief resume of the growth and progress of the State aid law in New Jersey."

PLAINFIELDERS AT DAYTONA

DELIGHTFUL CLIME ATTRACTS THOSE WISHING TO ESCAPE CHILLY BLASTS.

While Plainfield is experiencing a long and severe winter, some of its citizens are enjoying the sunny and delightful clime of Daytona, Florida. Here the temperature has been hugging the zero mark of the thermometer, while at Daytona it registers in the vicinity of 84 degrees, such being the temperature in the shade only a few days ago on the porch of the Daytona Hotel.

The people in Daytona are now feasting on delicious fresh peas and strawberries, and other delicacies, enough to make one's mouth water and wish for "the good old summer time," and they are being refreshed by daily baths in the ocean.

In the colony of Plainfielders at Daytona are Clarence M. Rogers, Mrs. W. B. Maxson, Miss Ida Bocap, Mrs. William Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Robert Gordon and daughter, Evelyn, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Newton Highlands; Mr. and Mrs. Edward White, Miss Ernestine C. Smith and Miss Lillian A. Force. Daytona is rapidly becoming a popular resort for Northern people, who want to escape the cold and chilly blasts of winter. The spot is an ideal one and the people are most hospitable.

WM. M'DOWELL CORIELL DIED YESTERDAY

Prominent Citizen Passed Away at Age of Eighty-Nine Years.

FATHER OF B. F. CORIELL

FOR MANY YEARS A DIRECTOR OF FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

Ruling Elder of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church—Hat Manufacturer by Trade—Director of Old Washington Insurance Co.

After a long battle with death, William McDowell Coriell, one of Plainfield's representative men, succumbed to old age, passing away at his home in Clinton avenue yesterday. He was eighty-nine years of age and had been ill for some time. Surviving him is one son, B. Frank Coriell, of West Fifth street, sheriff of Union County and prominent in civic, industrial and fraternal affairs in this city. His other two sons, William E. Coriell, and Ephraim Coriell, are dead, but the former left surviving Mrs. F. Valentine and the latter, Raymond and Ephraim, both of whom live in Larchmont, N. Y. B. F. Coriell's children are William Coriell and Miss Lucy Coriell.

The dead man was a son of Ephraim Coriell and was born in Dunellen on December 19, 1815. After receiving the advantages of a district school education, at the age of seventeen he was apprenticed to VanNostrand & Conover, hat manufacturers, who had an establishment on Clinton avenue, which was then a part of Plainfield township.

On October 30, 1840, Mr. Coriell married Miss Eliza C. Runyon, daughter of Benjamin Runyon, of this city. She died in January, 1881. In 1844, with five others, he succeeded that firm in the business, but two years later he purchased the plant himself. In 1849 he erected a large establishment. His son, B. Frank Coriell, was taken into partnership in 1873 and the firm continued to prosper under the name of Coriell & Son until 1894 when it was dissolved.

Mr. Coriell settled on the estate of his grandfather, Lenex Coriell, in 1842, which was in Clinton avenue, and in 1856 he erected the commodious dwelling in which he lived until the time of his death.

When Plainfield was incorporated in 1865, Mr. Coriell took an active interest in civic affairs, becoming a member of the Common Council, in which he served for several terms. Previous to that he had been a member of the Plainfield township committee. He took no interest in fraternal orders, but spent much of his time with affairs connected with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which he became a founder in 1857. He was made a ruling elder of the church, succeeding his father in that office in 1858.

Mr. Coriell was one of the directors of the old Washington Fire Insurance Company of Plainfield and was also a director of the old Union County State Bank, of this city, which was succeeded by the First National Bank, he being a director of the latter institution until a few years ago.

The funeral will take place from his late residence Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and the interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

INTEREST IN LICENSE QUESTION

BIG CROWD EXPECTED TO WITNESS COMMON COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Considerable attention is just now being directed toward the probable outcome of the license question to be considered at an adjourned meeting of the Common Council to be held tomorrow night. At this meeting action will be taken on the applications for liquor licenses, retail and wholesale, as well as hotels. While temperance people in general have been much exercised of late concerning the John Goff application for a license to sell liquor in his new hotel on West Front street, many Councilmen are profoundly silent.

"It is to be regretted exceedingly," said one of the city fathers last night, "that Councilman Wilson was absent from the last meeting. It makes no difference how he would have voted on the question of high license, the fact that he was absent gave rise to the belief that he remained away intentionally. I believe that it would have looked far better if Mr. Wilson had been present, especially as he is a new member. He must necessarily have the interest of the city at heart to some extent."

It is expected that the lobby will be filled with interested spectators tomorrow night. That there will be remarks pro and con there seems to be no doubt, as several ministers have signified their intention of attending the meeting and having something to say. Then there will be a number of petitions, private and public. In many of the churches on Sunday petitions were presented for signatures, petitions protesting against the granting of licenses to Mr. Goff for a retail license on West Front street and Adolph Wolgang for a wholesale place in Park avenue.

The Republican leaders of the Fourth ward are making a canvass for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is any real opposition to the granting of a liquor license to John Goff for his hotel on West Front street, near Clinton avenue.

BANKERS TO MEET.

First Annual Convention of Association to Convene at Atlantic City on Friday.

Representatives of the local banking institutions will attend the first annual convention of the New Jersey Bankers' Association, which will be held at Atlantic City, on Friday and Saturday. The association has a membership of about 125, which includes representation from every institution of any consequence in the State.

The programme includes addresses by Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, Gov. Franklin Murphy, Congressman Charles N. Fowler, former Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage and Attorney-General Robert H. McCarter. The bankers will be formally welcomed by S. T. Sayy, Mayor of Atlantic City.

The Plainfield members of the association are the Plainfield Trust Company, the City National Bank and the Dime Savings Institution, William F. Arnold, cashier of the City National Bank, who is a member of the executive committee, and J. Herbert Case, secretary, treasurer and director of the Plainfield Trust Company, will attend the convention, which will be held at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City. Edward C. Stokes, president of the association, will preside.

Miss Mary Smith, of this city, has been visiting Raritan friends.

SCHOOL BOARD'S PLAN DEFEATED BY CITIZENS

Proposition to Erect Schoolhouse on Grove Street Vetoed at Public Meeting.

FIREMEN WIN FIGHT

VOLUNTEER MEN LINED UP AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION.

Dr. H. K. Carroll Presided at Meeting Held in Somerset Street School—Citizens Out in Force —Another Delay Necessary.

The North Plainfield volunteer firemen fought against Mayor Newton E. Smalley at last Tuesday's special school meeting and incidentally ruined the Board of Education's scheme to erect a school house on the Grove street site. The opposition to the plan contended that the proposed site is on filled-in land and for that reason is unhealthy as well as impracticable. The defeat of the suggested plan was a decisive one, 315 votes being cast against it while 187 were piled up in the favor. As a result there will be a further delay in bringing about relief for the overcrowded schools and many of the pupils will be compelled to submit to half-time sessions for some time to come. Naturally the Board of Education as a body is much chagrined over the defeat, although a few of the members disapproved of the proposition submitted to the citizens.

The session held Tuesday in the Somerset street school building was attended by over 400 citizens and a lively interest was taken in the proceedings. James R. Joy, president of the Board, called the meeting to order, stating the object of the call. Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll was chosen chairman and Percy Brown was selected as secretary, without opposition.

Mr. Joy read the report of the committee appointed to investigate the school proposition which was incorporated as the report of the board. It dwelt at length upon the overcrowded condition of the school—a condition worse than that of any other school district in the entire State — and pointed out the absolute necessity for relief. The seating capacity is but 990 while the enrollment reaches 1165. Consequently 175 pupils are affected by the present situation. The causes for the delay were briefly related and then the plan of the Board was presented. It called for an eight-room building to be erected on the French property in Grove street at a cost of $35,000. The argument made was that the Grove street site was preferable to all others for the reason that the future growth of the borough is more likely to be in that direction, the eastern section of the municipality being well built up at present. The report stated that no fear is felt on the part of the Board that the site is an unhealthy one and moreover there would be no great expense in building a substantial foundation for the structure.

Without any debate this resolution was submitted to the citizens:

"Resolved, That the Board of Education of the borough of North Plainfield be authorized to purchase the lot 200 feet on the west side of Grove street between Green brook and Rockview avenue at a cost of $1,800, and that the Board of Education be authorized to issue bonds of the borough to the amount of $35,000 in the corporate name of the borough in such sums and a such rate of interest as the legal voters of the borough may direct. This will be used to defray the expense of the erection of such building, the purchase of school furniture, and other necessary equipment, the latter to include heating, ventilating and a proper water closet system; to be placed on said plot of land and that bonds be issued in $500 denominations at five per cent. interest to be payable as follows: One in 1910; two in 1911; two in 1912; two in 1913; five in 1914; ten in 1915; ten in 1916; ten in 1917; ten in 1918; ten in 1919 and eight in 1920."

Max Munger and Thomas H. Stafford were chosen tellers and Harry Brokaw was selected as clerk. When the result was announced after much delay occasioned by time necessarily consumed in casting the ballots the opposition to the scheme, the majority of whom were opposed to the plan on principle, rejoiced over the victory.

Mayor Smalley declared that he has no regrets. "My enemies," he said, "are willing to sacrifice principle and the good of the borough, in order to accomplish my defeat. They can not defeat me for I am on the side of the right, working as I always have been for the best interests of the borough. You can say for me that I was proud to see the type of citizens supporting me last night. They were a strange contrast to those composing the opposition. I hope to deserve their support in the future."

Samuel Townsend, who has spent much time in bringing about the much desired relief from overcrowded conditions in the schools, said today: "It is a strange thing that so many residents of the western section of North Plainfield, known as Washington Park, should have made it their duty to attend the meeting and vote for the proposition to erect another school house, only to find their good efforts frustrated by citizens of the eastern section of the community. The people of Washington Park are slightly benefitted by the schools. They pay their taxes and send their children to other schools which their means allow them to do. The people who voted down our proposition, as a rule, send their children to the public schools. They are the ones that will suffer. I feel that I have done my duty, which I promised to do when accepting a position as a member of the school board."

Mayor Smalley says that Mr. Joy delivered a rebuke to Dr. J. H. Cooley, another member of the board, last night, who had charged that trickery had been resorted to by the friends of the school house plan. Mayor Smalley declares that Dr. Cooley had secretly removed many ballots, which were marked against the $1,800 appropriation, and caused them to be distributed about the borough during the day.

NEW TRIALS ARE ORDERED

FRED KANEN CASE TO BE HEARD BY JURY AGAIN IN UNION COUNTY.

The Supreme Court yesterday ordered new trials in the two Plainfield cases of Frederick Kanen against the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, and Myra Rose Searles against the Elizabeth-Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company, both on the ground that when the first trials were held, the physicians were unable to testify definitely whether the injuries were permanent or merely temporary. The verdicts in the first trial of Mr. Kanen's case was for $18,000. Craig A. Marsh, counsel for Mr. Kanen, says that the boy's parents are glad that there is to be a new trial next May, because the physicians now know that the injuries are permanent, and a much larger verdict is expected.

In the Searles case, the court decides the first point in favor of Mrs. Searles—namely that the Street Railway Company is liable. The court next declares that the physicians admitted that the result of the operations performed a few weeks before the trial was not entirely clear when the trial took place. The court says that if the injuries were permanent, the verdict of $15,000 would not be too large, but as the plaintiff's own physicians could not testify that the full benefit of the operations had been ascertained, justice required that there should be a new trial. Mr. Marsh is also counsel for the plaintiff in this case, and says that the court could hardly have done otherwise under the medical testimony, and that on a second trial, it will be easy to prove that the injuries complained of are permanent.

The Prudential in 1903.

During last year The Prudential wrote a larger amount of business than it did in any other year since it was founded, placing no less than $298,000,000 of new insurance, and bringing the total amount of insurance now in force up to $831,000,000. This result attests its popularity, and such figures have not been equaled by any other company when of the same age as The Prudential, nor by The Prudential itself in any former year. The causes which have brought about such exceptional success apparently are greater appreciation of life insurance by the masses and the excellent business methods of The Prudential. Write to the Home Office of the Company, Newark, N. J., for information concerning its policies, which furnish guaranteed protection to the family as well as dividends to the policy-holder.

P. H. S. BATTALION OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN

First Drill of Re-Organized Troop to Take Place in Co. K's Armory on March 1.

ANDERSON IS MAJOR

ANNUAL PRIZE DRILL TO BE HELD IN JUNE.

George L. Babcock is Named as Adjutant—Battalion and Company Officers Are Appointed by the Commandant.

Officers of the Plainfield High School battalion which, since newly organized, will hold its first drill Tuesday, March 1, in Company K's armory, have been appointed and will serve, beginning March 1, in the drills to be held weekly. For major, the highest office of honor open to the pupils of the High School in the battalion, former Capt. Anderson has been chosen, and as captains, offices almost equally coveted, former Quartermaster Koons has been appointed to Co. A, and former Sergeant Thompson to Co. B.

The drills will end in a prize drill probably in June and James D. Macnab, the commandant and instructor of the battalion, has offered a special prize of $5 for individual excellence.

As field officers and staff, Captain Anderson has been promoted to be major; Adjutant Babcock will continue in that office; Sergeant Neagle will be quartermaster; Sergeant Eckert, sergeant major; Cadet Cline, quartermaster sergeant; Sergeant Elliot, color sergeant; Cadet Strong, principal musician; Bugler Briggs will again be bugler, and Scott will continue as drummer.

In Company A, Quartermaster Koons will be captain; Sergeant Fenno, first lieutenant; Sergeant Craig, second lieutenant; Sergeant Brown, first sergeant; Corporal Slocum, sergeant; Corporal Titsworth, sergeant; Corporal Leichtentritt, sergeant; Corporal Clanders, corporal.

Those promoted as officers of Company B are: Sergeant Thompson, captain; Lieutenant Tweedy, first lieutenant; Sergeant Long, second lieutenant; Corporal J. Gavett, first sergeant; Cadet Platt, second sergeant; Cadet T. Gavett, sergeant; Corporal Rottberg, sergeant.

The appointments are made by order of James D. Macnab, commandant and counterasigned by Adjutant G. L. Babcock. By the amount of interest exhibited in the drills by the pupils, a highly successful season is indicated.

Musician Strong is a new member of the battalion, coming to Plainfield from the Montclair Military Academy. He was a bugler at Montclair. With this year's graduating class, most of the field officers and staff will leave school. Examinations will probably be held the latter part of May to fill the vacancies for the fall term. All cadets possessing uniforms will be requested to wear them during the drills of this spring but others will not be required to buy them during the present school year.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' LUNCHEON

SILVER CROSS CIRCLE HOLDS RFFAIR IN PARK CLUBHOUSE.

Under the auspices of the Silver Cross Circle of King's Daughters, of North Plainfield, a charity luncheon was given at the Park Club, yesterday. The purpose of the affair was to raise a fund to fulfil the pledge of $50 which the Circle made to the City Union, King's Daughters, toward the support of the city nurse. There were nine tables very attractively decorated and there were about seventy five members of the Circle and their friends present. A delightful menu was prepared and served by Mrs. Johnson, wife of the steward of the club. Between $75 and $80 was the net receipts and it is believed that about half of the sum will be profit.

Following the luncheon an informal musicale was given in which Mrs. W. L. Saunders sang, Miss Hyatt played the violin and Miss Saidee Mae Howell gave piano selections. Miss Howell also accompanied Mrs. Saunders and Miss Hyatt. The various numbers were cordially received.

Mrs. F. W. French, as president of the Circle, was in charge of the luncheon, and she was assisted by other members, nine being selected to preside at the various tables.

MONROE AVE. CHURCH SUPPER

FAIR A FEATURE OF ATTRACTION AT WEST END CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A fair and supper given last night in the Monroe Avenue M. E. church by the Ladies' Aid Society was one of the most successful and profitable to the general church funds of any yet held. There were 135 seated at the four tables and many more who enjoyed the informal musical programme.

In charge of this affair was this committee: Mrs. I. T. LaRue, Mrs. Fred Wenzel, Mrs. Nicholas Brouard, Mrs. J. W. Daub, Mrs. W. E. Granatt, Mrs. J. C. Pierson. The serving committee consisted of Mrs. Theodore VanPelt, Mrs. E. J. Cumberson and Mrs. J. D. Brown. Presiding over the four tables were Mrs. N. M. Smith and Mrs. R. M. Sortor, Miss Charlotte Aldrich and Miss Lida Ackerman, Miss Emily D. Haff, Miss Grace Palmer. The waitresses were Miss Editn Manning, Mrs. Walter Manning, Miss Daisy Brouard, and the Misses Beulah and Olla Cline.

The tables were attractively arranged and their contents found ready sales. At the fancy table, Miss Anna Wenzel and Miss Mary Cumberson presided. Candy was sold at a table in charge of Miss May Brouwer, Miss Sadie Brouwer, Miss Carrie Brouwer and Miss Meeker. A musical programme of mandolin, banjo and piano selections was presented by the Misses Brouwer.

TOLD OF JAPS.

Missionary From Flowery Kingdom Attended Forward Movement Club Session.

Rev. Sheldon Painter, the missionary lately returned from Japan, who is en route to his home in England, held an informal discussion on things Japanese with the members of the Forward Movement Club of the Y. M. C. A. last night. President Cahoone, of the association, presided. The discussion was confined principally to Japanese customs concerning which Mr. Painter answered questions of all sorts.

Mr. Painter is spending the week as the guest of Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., who was his pupil in England. He will sail for England on the Campania Saturday.

A. S. PARK DEAD.

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at His Home in Emerson, Ga.

Word has been received here of the death of A. S. Park at his home near Emerson, Ga., on February 18, last. Mr. Park moved from Bound Brook to 151 Duer street, North Plainfield, in 1888 and was one of the bosses employed in the construction of the Pond Machine Tool Works. Several years ago he moved to Georgia, where he continued his residence up to the time of his death. While in this city he made many friends. The funeral services and interment took place at Emerson on February 19.

To Produce Faust.

The Willard Dramatic Club has no dates for future performances definitely fixed but expects to give a presentation of "Faust" directly after Lent. There is a general plan for holding entertainments by club talent every two weeks in their hall on East Second street. The hall has a seating capacity of one hundred and the stage and scenic equipment are complete. Besides rehearsing "Faust," the club is continuing work on "Who Is Who," which was to have been presented at the Casino last night.

Entertained Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kirch, of 66 Duer street, entertained about thirty-five of their friends at their home last night. The evening was spent in playing games, while a feature was the vocal music by George Taylor and "Skinny" Wilson. They also gave banjo duets and entertained the guests for over an hour. Before the guests retired to their homes a collation was served.

Women to Conduct Sale.

The house committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. has issued invitations for a sale of cake, candy and useful articles on Wednesday afternoon, March 23, from 2 to 6 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. F. C. Harder, 632 Madison avenue. A silver offering will be received at the door.

The Woman and the Ballot.

The regular weekly meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the rooms on Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon at the usual hour. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, county superintendent, will be present and give a talk on the subject: "How Will the Ballot in the Hands of the Women Help Reform?"

WHAT THE SALOONS ARE COSTING PLAINFIELD

Alexander Millar Gives The Readers of This Paper Astonishing Statistics.

FACTS AND FIGURES

1,650 MEN ARE PAYING $88,000 A YEAR FOR RUM.

Each Drinking Man Deposits $53 Per Year in the Barrooms—Great Responsibility Rests on the Common Council.

I have been much interested in the discussion which has recently taken place in the pages of this paper over the license question in Plainfield, not only regarding the action of our City Council in rejecting Mayor Jenkins' recommendation to raise the fee, but also in relation to their probable action on applications for an increased number of saloons. My interest is due partly to the fact that I came from a Massachusetts no-license town with a population similar to Plainfield, but more largely due to my constant amazement at the lethargy of this intelligent, cultured, and generally religious community in permitting such a drain on the lower and working classes as the saloon, to exist in our midst.

This interest has led me to do some figuring on the probable cost of our saloons to the community and while no accurate figures are obtainable, a pretty good approximation can be had. We are often told that our saloon business is not very bad and that we do not have many in proportion to the population. On analyzing the figures, however, we find the saloons draw their subsistence from a small number, comparatively, although a much larger number are unfavorably affected by their operation. Let me present some figures as to the city: Population, estimated, 15,000; families, estimated, 3,000. Allowing two minor children to a family, or say 6,000, leaves the adult population 9,000, of whom one-half are women, leaving: Adult male population, 4,500. Estimating that 1,200 men go to business elsewhere, daily, leaves 3,300 men residing or working daily in the city, on whom the saloons must draw. Assuming that one-half of these men patronize the saloons, we have in round numbers 1,650 men supporting fifteen saloons.

Now as to their cost, and necessarily these figures are estimates: 15 fees, averaging $800, $9,000; rents, average $600, $9,000; salaries, 30 at $1,000, $30,000; other expenses, $10,000; profit, average $2,000, $30,000; total, $88,000, which equals $53 a head on the male population of 1,650 as above estimated.

Who and what these 1,650 men are I cannot even guess. They do not belong to the commuter class to any extent, and I cannot believe that any large proportion of our self-respecting, skilled artizans are spending either much time or money in such resorts. On whom then does the burden fall?

Even if my figures are 100 per cent. out of the way, we must conclude that the money comes from even less than 1,650 men, and that those who thus tax themselves and those dependent on them, do so to a much larger extent than a possible dollar a week, large even as that aggregate appears. If this is true then the cost of the saloons comes from the poorest paid part of the working population, that part which can least afford to spend in that way, the result being that such poor are always getting poorer and poorer and less able to cope with old age and disease. The Salvation Army, the city missionaries, the churches and local charities can easily supply the details which make the sad history of the poor cursed by the saloon.

If this poor class of people are now investing $88,000 more or less in rum, instead of putting it in food, clothing, furniture and education, absolute necessities in an intelligent community, what possible excuse can we the voters, or our servants the Council, give for opening more doors to consume the money which represents the toil of the poor?

If our City Council fairly represents the sentiments of the voters, then Plainfield ranks very low in moral force in spite of all our boasting; but if on the other hand the Council is acting independently of public opinion they assume a responsibility which men can only afford to assume when they know absolutely that they are right.

If any of your readers can give me actual figures where mine are estimates, they will be appreciated.

Very truly yours,
Alexander Millar.

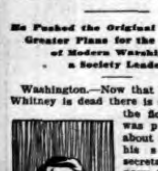
FATHER OF THE NAVY

Chandler and Not Whitney Is Entitled to the Title.

CREDIT DUE TO THE LATTER

He Pushed the Original and Added Greater Plans for the Building of Modern Warships—He a Society Leader.

Washington.—Now that William C. Whitney is dead there is a revival of the fiction which was prevalent about the time of his service as secretary of the navy to the effect that he was the father of the new American navy Whitney was a very efficient and progressive secretary and did what was in his power to advance the interests of the navy which he had in his keeping, but it is a great mistake to imagine that he had anything to do with the inauguration of the system under which the navy has grown during the past 20 years.



Hon. William E. Chandler.

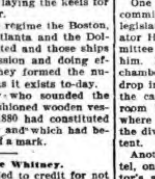
The real father of the new navy was William E. Chandler, who was secretary of the navy under Arthur, who was afterwards a United States senator for 12 years and who is now at the head of the Spanish treaty claims commission. Secretary Chandler created a commission of experts who traveled through Europe acquiring information upon which to base a report for a complete reorganization of the navy on modern principles. He took their report and put it into practical effect, by securing from congress the necessary appropriations and laying the keels for modern men of war.

Under Chandler's regime the Boston, the Chicago, the Atlanta and the Dolphin were constructed and those ships are still in commission and doing effective service. They formed the nucleus of the navy as it exists to-day.

It was Chandler who sounded the doom of the old-fashioned wooden vessels which up to 1880 had constituted the American navy and which had become a mockery and a mark.

Credit Due Whitney.

Whitney is entitled to credit for not reversing Chandler's policy on the incoming of a democratic administration and for not recommending a suspension of the work on the new ships and a suspension of the large appropriations necessary for the expanding service. He was a big, broad, progressive business man and it is fortunate that he came on the scene as he did, for his policy committed the democratic party to the idea of a modern navy, thus making it a national instead of a party affair. Had a narrower man become secretary at that time the development of the navy might have been set back for years.



Hon. William C. Whitney.

Those who remember Whitney as secretary will recall his enthusiasm in the new ships and the models which used to fill every available space in the office at the department which he occupied.

Whitney occupied the big reception room at the department which is now used for exhibition purposes and from which lead the offices of the present secretary and assistant secretary. He had a high desk at which he used to stand while at work and where he was accustomed to receive ordinary callers with whom he did not care to carry on a long conversation. It was easier for him to dismiss a troublesome visitor in this way than if he had received him in a room by himself.

Whitney was capable of accomplishing a great deal of work in the course of a day. He never seemed to be hurried and he had a capacity for turning details over to subordinates, reserving for himself only the broader questions of general policy. He was extremely popular with everybody in the department and he was one of the most efficient secretaries the navy ever had.

Revolutionized Society.

Perhaps Whitney's greatest claim to remembrance in Washington, however, was his revolutionizing the social life of the capitol.

The Western Millionaire.

Before he came to Washington with the first Cleveland administration society in Washington was a comparatively simple and inexpensive affair. It was provincial and some of the swell entertainers of to-day might think it bucolic. Whitney was the first to introduce entertainment on a lavish scale. He bought the house of former Secretary Frelinghuysen on fashionable old I street, spent a great deal of money in modernizing it and built a ball room in the rear which was the finest thing of the kind in Washington and which still remains about the best thing of the kind about this capital. He gave entertainments to which he invited all official Washington and everybody else who was worth while and upon which he lavished money without stint. There had never been anything like it here before.

It was at one of these entertainments that Mrs. James Brown Potter, then a society leader, made a national sensation by reciting "Outler Joe"—a poem which would not attract any great amount of attention nowadays but which was thought then to be decidedly risqué.

To the first Cleveland administration through Whitney belongs the distinction of starting Washington on the career of social extravagance which has been growing more pronounced ever since.

There is a great deal more money here now than there was then. The western millionaire has invaded the town with his ostentation and gaudiness, but there has never been anything more sumptuous than the entertainments which Whitney used to give. It was he who inaugurated the cabinet dinner as it now exists.

Hanna's Many Interests.

Senator Hanna has a larger correspondence than any other two senators put together. This comes partly from his position as chairman of the republican national committee and partly from his business connections.

Senator Hanna.

In order to carry on his correspondence he keeps three offices running here in Washington and a separate force of clerks in each, all under the general supervision of his private secretary, Elmer Dover.

One office is at the capitol in his committee room. There he strictly legislative business is carried on. Senator Hanna has not been in this committee room since it was assigned to him. It is too far from the senate chamber to be convenient for him to drop in, and such people as he sees at the capitol he takes into the Marble room back of the senate chamber, where he can sit at his ease on one of the divans and talk to his heart's content.

Another office is at the Arlington hotel, on the same floor with the Senator's apartments. Here is where Dover reigns and here is where the most important personal and political business is attended to.

In the McLean building, just across the way, is still another office, which is devoted to miscellaneous work and where three or four clerks are employed.

Senator Hanna has more different kinds of business to attend to than almost any other man in public life. He does not let go his grip on his affairs in Cleveland while he is in Washington, but keeps a close watch on everything. His enterprises there are complicated, and extensive, including ships and opera houses. His position as chairman of the national committee is sufficient to keep one man of ordinary capacity busy and besides all this he does a great deal of hard work as any of his fellow senators in purely legislative business.

The Birch Bark Statesman.

J. Adam Bede, who came forward early in the congress as one of the most interesting characters in the house, with his speech on the general political situation, which made a decided hit and established his reputation as one of the most effective and witty debaters in congress, has a rare faculty for retort of the good-natured kind that is sure to cause the discomfiture of an opponent whenever he cares to use it, which is not too often.

Bede's Birch Bark Letter.

Bede used to be a democrat in the first Cleveland administration. Now he is a republican of equal intensity. It was lucky for him politically that he changed parties, for he would probably never have been elected to congress as a democrat in the Duluth district, and as a republican there is no reason why he should not represent the district in the house for years to come.

One of Bede's recent predecessors from the Duluth district was Charles A. Towne, who was elected to congress as a republican, made his reputation by delivering a free silver speech, flopped to Bryan in the 1896 campaign remained one of Bryan's staunchest supporters until after the election of 1900, and who is now a Tammany democrat in New York. Thus the Duluth district has had liberal experience with representatives of varying political views.

Bede is known as the "birch bark" statesman on account of the peculiar way in which he entered federal politics. At the beginning of Cleveland's administration he applied for the position of United States marshal and wrote his petition on birch bark. The president saw it in looking over the papers, was struck by its oddity, wrote out to Minnesota, discovered that Bede was all right and appointed him offhand.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

DEATH TO THE CRAWFISH.

Carbolic Acid Used to Destroy the Creatures That Undermine Mississippi Levees.

Carbolic acid is being used more extensively than ever before by the men who are seeking to preserve the levees from attack by that clawing and insidious member, the crawfish, reports the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Crawfish are more numerous, too, than ever before, at many points along the river. Probably the extreme high water of last spring had something to do with making the members of this family more numerous. At any rate, they are here in large numbers, and as usual have been boring holes through the levees at many places.

Under direction of the Orleans levee board the slaughter of crawfish has been progressing quietly at certain points within the board's jurisdiction, and the work has been carried on by other agencies. Down about Jackson Barracks, the Orleans board has within the last few days used carbolic acid with good results in an effort to exterminate the crawfish. The method of using carbolic acid is simple, and the remedy is an old one, but seems to have been using carbolic acid for many years, and of recent years the levee boards along the river have used this method of extermination.

The acid is simply poured into the holes which are burrowed by the crawfish, and escape from them is impossible. They sicken and die under the influence of the acid which pollutes the water. Often it is impossible to reach the crawfish with the acid, for the reason that they burrow into the embankment from a point below the water level. It is only possible to reach them when the opening is above the level of the water.

The quantity of acid used depends upon the depth of the opening in the levee's side. Crawfishes burrow irregularly and the contour of the hole, its depth and distance are always matters of uncertainty.

Recently there has been some talk among levee experts of using carbolic acid experimentally on the muskrats in the lower parish, where these pests thrive in great armies, and where they often undermine the levees. The muskrat is really a serious problem, and almost any method of extermination would be welcomed. The destruction of crawfish would to some extent minimize the damage, but muskrats go into the levees, because it would make burrowing more difficult. Crawfish holes frequently make the way for the muskrat, and they follow the holes from the riverside, catch, kill and eat the crawfish, and come out by the landside. In this way, in this way they become a great menace to the integrity of the levees. How to reach them with carbolic acid is a question which levee experts who have considered the question have not yet solved. The indications are that they will take the matter up at some early day, for the purpose of seeing what they can do.

In the meantime the crawfish will continue to get carbolic acid in large and unbroken doses.

BRITISH PISTOL LAW.

Greater Pains Taken to Reduce the Facilities of Murder Than in This Country.

Great Britain's criminal statistics show a very small proportion of murders as compared with the statistics of the United States. The reasons for this are to be found, not merely in the stricter enforcement of the law, but in the heavier penalties inflicted, but also in the pains that are taken to reduce, so to speak, the facilities for murder, says the Chicago Record-Herald. A man with a pistol in his pocket may still be arrested when he would commit the crime if he had to go to a store to purchase the weapon. A man who is able to buy a pistol at any time that he has the price may kill another when he would not do it if the sale were hedged about with restrictions. Such restrictions are imposed by a new law passed at the last session of parliament, which British magistrates are now busily engaged in enforcing.

The law provides in the first place that every dealer selling or letting a pistol must enter the transaction in a record book that will always be open to the inspection of the police. In addition it prohibits the sale or letting of pistols to persons who do not have a gun or game license, unless they are entitled by law to carry weapons without such license, or unless they are householders who intend to keep the pistols in their own homes, or unless they wish the pistols for use abroad. Purchasers, not under the age of 18, except in a few exempt cases, is permitted to buy, hire, use or carry a pistol under any circumstances. For violations of the law the penalties range up to $25, but where a dealer knowingly sells to any person intoxicated or not of sound mind, the penalty may be a fine of $125 or imprisonment with hard labor not exceeding three months. Good results are expected from this law, especially as there is being made to acquaint the entire population with its terms, so that offenders will have little chance to plead ignorance in excuse of their acts.

Louisiana Acadians.

In southwestern Louisiana there are settlements of Acadians, the remnants of the voyagers from Canada, whose only idea of the benefits of education is that their children may be made from chalk. At any big entertainment the women may be seen with their faces chalked till they resemble nothing so much as a company of corpses. These women do not bother about preparing the chalk; they simply take a chalk pencil and rub it into the skin with unction and the more ghastly the result the better are they pleased.

ON A JANUARY WALK

The Interesting Things a Naturalist Sees in the Snow.

How He Digs and Studies the Animals in Their Winter Homes—A Stroll Through the Woods.

A few days before the recent January thaw, I started for a tramp through the snow-covered woods. The thermometer stood at ten below zero, but, as the snow was 20 inches deep on the level, the exertion of getting through it made me glowing warm before I had gone half a mile, and when occasionally I got out of the wind, the air seemed almost springlike.

Whether we enjoy winter or dislike it depends largely on whether we are prepared for it or not. Cold weather has no terrors for us if we know that we are not going to be cold in it, and half the nuisance of snow is gone if we are sure that we can go where we like without getting out feet or clothing wet. I am speaking now for those of us who mind getting their feet wet; some of us don't. In other words, with warm clothing and a pair of rubber boots, or show shoes if the snow is deep enough, there is nothing to prevent any healthy person from enjoying himself in the worst weather the winter can turn out. For a winter walk in the country, an overcoat is a mistake; it trails in the snow, and continually gets in the way. What one requires is some form of clothing which will permit perfect freedom of movement.

A pair of gloves, however, will go a long way toward making one enjoy a walk on a bitterly cold day. Not kid gloves, but a pair of big, loose, thick mitts low for a generous air space around your hands inside, and with gauntlets which come over the cuffs of your coat, and keep out not only the wind but the snow. And if you are going along alone in bad weather, it is a wise precaution to tell your friends which direction you intend to take, and the length of time you expect to be gone. When the snow is deep and the air intensely cold, a sprained knee or a broken leg may mean death, if assistance does not arrive in time.

I had not gone far into the woods when, in passing a low-growing wild apple tree, I noticed that the surface of the snow beneath it had been disturbed in an irregular manner. It was furrowed, and here and there were holes, leading into little runways, which extended downward as far as I could see. So no one were much too large to have been made by a meadow mouse, and quite too small for a muskrat, and I doubt if I should have discovered what animal had made them, if the impudent head of a red squirrel had not appeared suddenly at one of the holes. He had a look of astonishment on his face, and a small apple in his mouth. He dropped the latter on the snow in front of him, but retained the former for about five seconds, until, with a frightened squeal, he darted to the invisible regions below. The little apple, lying upon the snow, told a pathetic story of the little fellow's hunger, and of his efforts to satisfy it, and I wondered if he had any sense keen enough to tell him where each individual apple lay, or whether he tunneled blindly, with the hope of finding one occasionally.

"HE FLEW UPON MY FINGERS."

Further on I came to a stretch of half-open country, covered with barberry and other bushes. And here I found the paths which the rabbits had made the night before, and all along these paths the twigs of the bushes under which they ran had been cut off clean, as though with a penknife, by the sharp front teeth of the rabbits. And thus the snow, with which it does the animals an injury in one way, by covering up their food upon the ground, served them well in another way, by lifting them to a height at which they could crop the tender twigs nearer the tops of the bushes.

But the most delightful incident of my walk occurred when I was nearing home. A flock of hungry chickadees flew into a maple tree above me, perhaps hoping that I had come to acquaint the entire population with its wants, so that offenders will have little chance to plead ignorance in excuse of their acts.

THE MEAN MAN LOST.

Fate or Something Else Came to the Aid of the Pink-Haired Stenographer.

The Broadway car was approaching Thirteenth street, relates the New York Sun.

The fat man leaned forward with a gasp and touched one of the meekly standing women with his folded newspaper. Then he rose with a mighty sigh, moved toward the door while his grateful beneficiary dropped into the vacated seat.

A pink haired stenographer, not ravishingly pretty, who clung to a strap immediately in front, viewed the incident with surprise, and afterward assumed a contemptuous smile. Then the car lurched into Dead Man's Curve and she swung out on the strap like "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night." Her lips moved busily for a lasting arch of scorn.

The mean man, seated opposite, was interested. Over the top of his paper he observed these facial changes of the pink haired stenographer, and he notes their cause with fiendish pleasure.

The passenger beside him was folding his paper and buttoning his coat. As the passenger rose the mean man touched the woman standing next the pink haired stenographer and drew her attention to the vacant seat.

The pink haired stenographer looked over her shoulder with a glance of amazement and hatred. Then she saw the mean man's expression, and understood that he had acted with malice aforethought. She turned her back squarely, crimson to the tips of her ears.

The mean man exulted inwardly. Watching the seated passengers narrowly, he was prepared to repeat this performance twice more, each time landing another tired woman in a seat, and leaving the pink haired stenographer still clinging to the strap. In the opposite direction he could see her face reddening, and her lips were set in a dangerous line.

The supply of standing passengers was depleting. The mean man began to look worried. Then came the influx from the crosstown line at Thirty-fourth street, and business seemed to be picking up.

The new arrivals were crowding up the aisle, when suddenly the pink haired stenographer abandoned her strap with a curious gleam in her eye. Wedging herself insinuatingly into the advancing mass, she brought it to a struggling pause just in front of where the mean man sat.

There was a wild swaying and shuffling in which the pink haired stenographer's gray jacket mingled vaguely. Then the car started with a jerk, a confusion of outstretched arms, and the mean man's hat was knocked from his head far into the aisle.

He sprang forward to save it from certain destruction, and was back in a second—and he found the pink haired stenographer comfortably settled in his seat. But the scornful arch had vanished from her lips, likewise the dangerous line; and her eyes looked beyond the mean man in a gaze of dreamy contentment.

Then the mean man hooked himself into a strap and tried to look calmly reflective as he computed the running time to Eighty-third street.

EXERCISE IN HOUSEWORK.

Something of Physical Culture in Almost Everything That Is Done.

Since almost all of the regular house work is of such a sort as to require forward motion of the arms, the thing to guard against is contraction of the chest. Sweeping and dusting become good exercise when proper attention is given to the position of the body. The sweeping not only starts the circulation and increases the respiration, but it also gives some good arm and waist exercise, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Bed making is fine exercise when the windows are open to admit plenty of fresh air. A great deal of bending is necessary, but this alternates with straightening of the body. No one position is held for any length of time, side motions of the trunk and arms being necessary. This is free play for the chest, the lungs are filled with fresh air, and the general circulation is quickened in this brisk work.

But, as in every other detail of house work, clothing should be such as to give no pressure or undue weight. But the most lowly and despised detail of house work, is, after all, the one that is the most valuable from the standpoint of hygiene.

The scrubbing and wiping up of floors are two movements in which the weight is taken entirely from the feet. In the position on the hands and knees gravity acts to the best advantage, and the shoulder movement is comparatively free. In fact, this exercise is recommended as the best possible to reduce undue stoutness.

To Break Glass.

Don't take a hammer or throw it upon the ground, that is to say, if it needs to be broken in any required form. Preferably make a small notch by means of a file on the edge of the piece of glass. Then heat a thin rod of iron red hot, apply it to the notch in the glass in any desired direction or shape. A neat crack will mark the course of the hot iron and there the glass can be safely severed.

Home-Made Cider.

The making of cider in small quantities is rather a difficult matter. The apples should be allowed to mellow under cover for about two weeks, then they should be crushed and allowed to stand until somewhat cleared. Pour off and strain well, then draw off into a large cask and allow to stand; for winter use cider can be bottled.—Good Housekeeping.

FUTURE OF AUTOMOBILE.

Will Solve Many of the Problems of the Great Cities as Soon as Perfected.

The automobile is about to take on more of the character of a reliable servant, declares the Metropolitan. It will be kept in the stables of the rich for regular use in going to the opera, to the office, to the shopping district and in going about for social ends. It will require no one to wait until it is harnessed, until it has finished eating, or until it has been shod. It will be kept because of its being always ready to leap forward in response to an intelligent touch. It will enable one to catch trains at short notice, to be more leisurely at the breakfast board before starting for the office, to linger longer at the dinner table and yet see the curtain rise.

The boon of its utility will not be confined to the wealthy. It will have all the democratic range of patronage that has the street car. It will be a much the handservant of the middle classes as of the wealthy. Clerks and salesmen who cannot now afford to own a horse and buggy will be able to economize by using a motor carriage. The automobile will be so cheap to maintain, so easily managed and so reliable that it will be used by railroad commuting residents of the suburbs in traveling between home and place of business. The motor vehicle is yet to exert a tremendous influence in the development of suburban property. It will offer a means of speedy access to localities now too remote from railroad and trolley to be popular.

SILVER AND WOUNDS.

White Metal Has Antiseptic Properties Not Popularly Known—Silver Leaf Excellent for Dressings.

Dr. Rollins has made use with excellent results of silver leaf and silver foil in dressing wounds and ulcerations, according to an exchange. The silver sticks closely to the surface of the wounded or ulcerated tissue and a small quantity of boron soaked in colodium is first applied to the part. When the wound is fresh it heals quickly with no inflammation or suppuration. A peculiar cicatrization of ulcerated cancerous sores has been attained by this means.

The antiseptic properties of silver are not popularly known. Some years ago Dr. Roulin, of Lyons, in cultivating microbes in a bouillon which he had placed in a silver cup, found that the microbes perished and at the end of a few hours completely disappeared, and the fact was all the more remarkable as the same microbes multiplied when placed in another vessel. Pursuing his investigations, Dr. Rollin analyzed the bouillon which was contained in the silver vessel and found there a very small trace of silver, which infinitely small quantity had rendered the bouillon antiseptic.

THE TEST OF FIRE.

Crisis in Financial World Necessary in Process of Developing New and Better Methods.

The new methods and the new projects are going through the test of fire to-day, and some of them are being consumed, asserts Charles A. Conant, in Hunt's Merchants' Magazine, which weeded out the badly organized and incompetent of the early stock companies, which drove to the wall the "wildcat" banks of ante-bellum days, and which wiped out dividends and stock rights in badly managed railways, are now being applied to the new forms of organization which have been the growth of the past decade. But the stronger and better organized of these new corporations are likely to meet these trials without disaster or to modify their methods to conform to the teachings of experience until there remains to the financial world a valuable residuum of new methods for giving flexibility to capital and promoting its transfer promptly and efficiently from the industries where it is not needed to those where it will render its highest service.

Among the Ainus.

The Ainu women are the family tailors, as well as cloth manufacturers. Although there are no dry goods stores in the land, when a new outfit of garments is desired free and unlimited raw material is at hand. In the early spring they go to the mountains and get loads of elm tree bark, from the fiber of which they weave cloth. The bark is put in water to soak and get soft, after which it is taken out and the fiber arranged into threads and wound upon balls. It is then woven into narrow rolls of cloth, on a primitive loom. The garments are rough, and have a faded blue color. A few well-to-do Ainus wear Japanese clothing. In winter the women sew bear, deer and wolf skins over the bark fiber garments for greater warmth.—N. Y. Tribune.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon, raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocket-knife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing, so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Canadian Forestbeds.

There are millions of acres of forest lands in Canada as yet untouched; the Ontario Government is taking an early precaution against the extinction of forests in that province.

St. LOUIS STATUARY

Orders Are Being Executed in a Wholesale Manner.

Economical Methods That Are Saving Many Thousands of Dollars to the Exposition—The New Jersey Workshops.

Of the many millions of dollars contributed by the government of the United States and by the legislatures of the different states to the Louisiana Purchase exhibition, an effective proportion is being put into the statuary for the decoration of the fair. Americans have learned from this and previous exhibitions at home and abroad how to measure the good done by such works in educating and elevating public taste. Over 250 groups and about 1,000 figures are now being made, and the artists realizing that the occasion is one to inspire the best effort and a patriotic duty as well, are stimulated by ambition and love of art to do their best.

The monumental and architectural sculpture for the Louisiana Purchase exhibition is being executed according to a well considered and carefully supervised system, so that the money expended upon this part of the fair is being made to go much farther than it otherwise would, and accomplish more in the way of artistic results. Instead of commissions begin given to the artist or sculptor in a haphazard manner, instead of the enlargement of figures being done in many different studios, and material for the plaster figures being purchased by different persons in small quantities, everything is done as a well organized business corporation should carry on such operations. Commissions for execution of figures and groups are awarded in the first instance, not by directors or other officials unfamiliar with artistic requirements, but by a chief of sculptors, Mr. Karl Bitter, aided by an advisory committee of sculptors consisting of Messrs. John Q. A. Ward, Augustus St. Gaudens and Daniel C. French, men whose names are a guarantee that what meets with their approval must show a high standard. The general sculptural scheme, and the figures and groups executed in accordance with it, thus come before the public with the approval of qualified representatives of the sculptural profession, while the mechanical work is placed on an economical basis, the enlargement of figures being done in one large workshop instead of several small ones, and material for this purpose being purchased in cart-load lots.

It is the fashion with some to cast slurs upon the modern methods of executing statuary on a large scale as though turning out such a vast number of figures and groups must involve a sacrifice of art. But such a result need not follow. The improved mechanical inventions merely conway with a great deal of the arduous mechanical labor which formerly was incident to the enlargement process, and the artist who models the original figure from which the enlargements are made must live in the same artistic atmosphere, must aspire to the same high ideals, and must labor with the same ardent desire to produce artistic and inspiring creations as sometimes done by, when the old masters in the field of art did their work.

Our illustrations give a glimpse into the workshops at Weehawken, New Jersey, where the enlargement processes are being carried out. Nearly 100 sculptors were commissioned to design and execute figures and groups for the adornment of the fair. The models which these sculptors made in the privacy of their studios are enlarged at this workshop, and to do this work of "doubling up" the statues require the services of about 100 other persons—some of them sculptors and art students. Over 20 car loads of statuary have been turned out from the workshops, and from the work shops

THE NEW WOMAN

She Is Wide Awake and Moving

LATELY an estimable lady whom I knew fell ill and was unable to attend to her household duties. She and her husband live alone in a flat, and the wife, a thorough housekeeper, does her own domestic work in a dainty, immaculate by neat way that I admire. But when she fell ill it came about that the husband had to do his own cooking and the housework—that, too, nights and mornings in the intervals of business hours. He had never done anything of the kind before, and it came hard, very hard. At first all was a hopeless tangle, and the good man went wild. He used bad language. Then he set in to cut off first this, then that, of the items of housework. He reduced the variety of food. He adopted eatables that were simple and required little labor in the preparation. I am afraid, too, that he omitted the dusting here than once during that week of the disablement of Mrs. X. Finally he got his housework down fine. He rose to the point where he could contemplate it philosophically. He summed it all up thus: "Women are stupid. They make themselves twice as much work in housekeeping as they need to. They want everything just so nice and so fashionable. Now, what's the use of having two dishes where one will do? Potatoes will do for vegetables at dinner; salad will do for vegetables at dinner. What's the use of having both? One is enough. It's foolish to have so many courses and so many different kinds of silver to be cleaned, a fork to eat this food, another kind of fork for that food and a sharp spoon for this, a blunt spoon for that and a pair of tongs for something else. Women are stupid, I say." That settled forever the point in his mind. Worst of all, he was more than half right. Civilized housekeeping, with its innumerable fashionable requirements, has become a burden so heavy it is no wonder women try to get rid of it. Women do make work for themselves that is unnecessary.

I don't know when I have been more pleased and heartened than I was on an evening recently when I went to hear several addresses at a public meeting. One of the speakers was a lady of high position and forceful character. She was a beautiful woman, large, queenly, nobly proportioned. Her waist was not compressed in the least; her dress skirt was of convenient walking length. She wore a handsome gown—some kind of a confection of black and white lace and silk, quite up to date and most becoming to the lady, perfectly "stylish," if that is what one wants. But you scarcely thought of her dress at all. Your attention was attracted by the healthy, comely, radiant face, with its large, shining blue eyes. When it came her turn to speak this admirable woman reached her hand back into a pocket in her gown—and her pocket, mind you, one that did not mar the look of her skirt in the least either—and drew from it the notes she used in a ringing address, full of tact, fearlessness and logic. The lady was M. Carey Thomas, LL. D., president of Bryn Mawr, and one of the most scholarly women living.

Let us train ourselves to be as pleasant as the good natured Japanese. Good temper wins every time. Here in New York is a luncheon place that advertises itself as a Japanese restaurant. As a matter of fact, the only thing Japanese about it is the man in charge of the dining room, the head waiter, yet he meets everybody who comes in with a manner so polite, so smiling, cordial and agreeable that he is drawing crowds to that little eating place just by that way he has.

In present day records is no utterance more touching than the dying words of George Francis Train, "I am sorry to leave the children and the birds."

There is one debt every human being owes to the innate human dignity residing in himself and in everybody else. It is the debt of politeness and good temper. Pay your debt.

The best spot on this earth for a woman to live in is New Zealand. There the gap between wealth and poverty is not so great as in the United States, nor is the social class line between rich and poor anything like so sharply drawn as in the old world. Poverty is almost unknown. It is the most prosperous country on the globe today. But what is the best and grandest fact of all connected with New Zealand is that there women have full citizen's rights. They can vote and be voted for at all elections and are in the eyes of the law the perfect equals of men. I shall steal off and go and live in New Zealand one of these days.

At the last general election in Melbourne, Victoria, women voters organized themselves thoroughly, cast a heavy vote and carried the day for the ticket of the Labor party, which now holds the balance of power in parliament.

FRESH AIR.

It Has a Value Which Some Women Do Not Seem to Recognize.

"Fresh air is one of the greatest discoveries of modern times." As the doctor made this remark he smiled whimsically.

"But people always had fresh air!" cried the little woman, who took things literally.

"Yes, but they didn't use it. In the middle ages windows and doors were shut and remained shut for indeterminate periods, just as the floors were only swept on state occasions and baths were a luxury. Nowadays there are plenty of people living in as unventilated a way as if they were back in the middle ages. Stuffy offices, heavily draped windows, unaired, overheated bedrooms—these are the things which bring wrinkles to a woman's face before she has passed her first youth and make a man's skin flabby and yellow and destroy his appetite and thereby his constitution, paving the way for consumption. And then what happens? It is a call back to nature. He is not put into a warm bed in a warm room and fed medicines. He is sent up in the frozen north to sleep, eat and fairly live out of doors, with the thermometer at 30 degrees below zero and deep snow on the ground. Protected by a fur coat and heavy mittens, he breathes in the pure life giving air that he starved for so long and gradually becomes a well man.

"There are plenty of women who cannot be made to realize what fresh air he will do for them. They pay for beauty tonics and face massage when all they need is more pure, bracing atmosphere. You, for instance, my dear madam, have complained of headache and lack of energy in the morning. How do you sleep? With your window shut? It's cold? Nonsense! Keep the heat on, put on more clothes, but never think of going to sleep without fresh air and plenty of it. Sleep with your window open, both at the top and at the bottom, so that the air is constantly changing. Make it a practice to take a walk every day, no matter how cold it is, unless it is raining. Never allow your rooms to become overheated, and several times during the day open the windows and air them out." HELEN BENTLEY.

A SUN ROOM.

An Arrangement Which May Be Carried Out in Town or Country.

Nowadays, when there is so much talk of the benefits to be derived from sun baths, a sun parlor is an excellent place for the members of the family to gather for their fancy work, reading, etc.

In a city house a top room under the skylight may be used by extending the skylight until it covers almost all the ceiling of the room. In a country house a corner of the piazza can be partitioned off with glass. The cut shows this arrangement.

The sides are of glass arranged in small panes, and there are removable shades of bamboo matting possible to a shelf extending all around the room, upon which plants are placed. A bamboo divan with cotton pillows occupies one corner, and wicker lounges, chairs and tables add to the comfort. The portieres are of Japanese material. The rugs are of jute, pretty, but inexpensive. The ceiling is also in a Japanese pattern representing a big sprawly yellow sun on a rich blue ground.

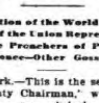
PEOPLE OF GOTHAM

Where the Population of New York Comes From.

IS A CITY OF SOCIETIES

Every Nation of the World and Every State of the Union Represented—Some Preachers of Prominence—Other Gossip.

New York.—This is the season when the "County Chairman," with no political purpose in mind, calls to order his people. The season is "banquetia" of the Sons of the Somewhere.



A Son of "Somewhere."

For such reunions New York is a wonder. Southern Society is a power in politics, finance and trade. It includes such men as John S. Wise and John G. Carlisle, with promising juniors like David Lindsay Gordon and his like. The Ohio Society needs less mention. The president of the Maine Society tells me that he has on his lists 800 men eligible to membership. Of course they do not all come, but all could come and all, it is worth remembering, are successful men in a city of fierce competition and unusual temptations. The Vermont Society is less strong than in Boston; I think it is the only state organization of which this is true. Even the far western states are represented by smaller eating clubs.

Then there are such looser organizations as the New England Society, which every year renews the dispute as to which day of the year really is "Pilgrims' day;" and the Holland Society, which includes many of New York's aristocracy, and which at its recent peace banquet chartered an Atlantic cable for an hour for the sending of messages back and forth between New York and London. True to their nativity, the Hollanders never get together that they do not eat gekruide Zuurtjes and korstjes van paddenstoel. The Emerald balls and the St. Andrews' day celebrations complete a list of festivities which has in the meantime included an extraordinary succession of county societies from New York state. There are 60 of these counties, say 55 outside of the metropolis itself, and nearly every one has its society in the city.

The Old Dutch Family.

Of the native New York city elements the original Dutch have endured most sturdily. They have a president of the United States just now; and the names of the Vanderbilts, Stuyvesants, Wallis, Duryeas, van Rensselaers and the like bulk big in finance.

A Modern Etopement.

Wall spells ropewalk. The Walls and Waterburys in the old days were rope spinners. The trade was hereditary for generations. Out of it and from real estate they made ample fortunes which the present generation rather dissipated in Cordage Trust some years ago. A fair daughter of the house of Wall was the heroine of the recent romantic marriage; they always call it that when the old folks disapprove—with Jules Neilson, the brother-in-law of Reginald Vanderbilt, who had almost to steal his bride from her father's house.

Reginald Vanderbilt is the youngest son of the late Cornelius; he was the hero of the most famous gambling episode in "Dick" Canfield's fort-like sporting house; he was married early to Miss Neilson, who is somewhat his senior and now that at 23 the young couple have a new baby Mr. Vanderbilt has turned a sedate family man.

The Neilsons are Catholic; the Walls Protestant; this accounts for the spirited resistance the parents of Mrs. Jules Neilson made to her marriage. The Vanderbilts were originally of the Dutch Reformed church, but are now Episcopalians, though more than half of the younger generation have married Catholics. The highest society of New York, which a generation ago was largely Presbyterian and Low Church Episcopalian, is rapidly becoming Catholic and Episcopalian of the High Church faction.

Dr. Greer and His Successor.

The induction of Dr. David H. Greer as coadjutor bishop of New York, was celebrated in the presence of the clergymen whose eminence in the community and whose far-reaching activities testify to the influence of the "fashionable faith," as it may without offence be called.

Dr. Leighton Parks.

Dr. Greer was called "the Vanderbilt pastor." Again without offence, what it meant was, practically, that when ever Dr. Greer wanted money for any of the manifold activities of one of New York's greatest "institutional churches he went to Cornelius Vanderbilt with his case and got a check, quietly, unostentatiously and almost as a matter of fact. Thus backed, St. Bartholmew's has grown into a gigantic congeries of religious orders, boys' clubs, mothers' meetings, sewing classes and everything that could enhance the comfort of the poorer parishioners.

I suppose Dr. Greer inherited a claim upon the younger Vanderolits, though it would not be so handy to collect. The father was always to be found attending to business. It is no easy matter to catch with a subscription paper a young fellow sky-hooting across country 60 miles an hour in an automobile. In Dr. Parks New York will have a business-like successor to a business-like clergyman. Either Dr. Parks or Dr. Greer, in ordinary raiment, would be taken for a merchant or perhaps a railroad official. Each is in fact many things, not a spiritual advisor alone, but architect, sociologist, administrator, general commanding of a host of people. Dr. Parks is called to admnister a parish whose property and endowments amount to more than $3,000,000, and whose annual income is nearly $250,000. He needs to be a business man, and he is, trained by similar work in Boston. The employment agencies of St. Bartholmew's church "place" 5,000 persons in a year; its free physicians make 15,000 calls. It has six Sunday schools, including one each in Chinese, Armenian, Swedish and German. Two are in English.

The Sunday Saloon Question.

One thing New Yorkers can never quite make others understand is the demand of the church element, or a large section of it, for Sunday saloon opening.

The Association of Neighborhood Workers, formed of young men and women who knew best the needs of the poor, has just revived the old question by voting in favor of Sunday opening. The greater part of the Episcopalian church favors it. Dr. Parkhurst asks for it. It is unnecessary to say that all these people have no sympathy with the saloon. They regard it as a necessary evil under the circumstances and are almost bitter toward those who assert without knowing the fact that the Sunday opening is the road to ruin.

There are two answers which the church people, the Settlement people and the officers of the law, like District Attorney Jerome are accustomed to make:

First, the saloons are open now, many of them; the "Raines Law Hotels" legally open, others illegally open. To have them open against the law keeps no one sober and brings the law into contempt.

Second, the feeling that the "reform element" tries to keep the saloons closed drives thousands of honest people who do not go to church, but who do take a drink now and then to vote on the wrong side in most municipal questions. This alone gives the "saloon power" its political importance.

There is no doubt that the saloon men voted for the reform candidate in 1901 because they were tired of the price Tammany made them pay for the privilege of breaking the law. Last fall they voted for Tammany because they feared the reform administration unable to furnish the promised "liberal" construction of the law. In both instances they carried the day.

And so the whole matter comes up again before the legislature in the form of local option measures, each of which is worse than most of the others. It has even been proposed that each election district have the right to vote upon the Sunday opening question.

A Wealthy Probation Officer.

There is no lack of earnest effort to help the poor and the unfortunate; what their real needs are by people of wealth and leisure. As an instance, young Richard Stevens and his sister, Mrs. Alexander, appointed probation officers of Hoboken.

The Probation Officer.

Stevens was a household name in civil war times, when Commodore Stevens, head of a famous house of engineers, presented to the government at his own cost the famous Steven's battery. In those days the Stevens fortune was one of the greatest in the country, as it is still respectable size. Stevens' castle in that beery suburb was one of the show country houses of America, and is still one of the most conspicuous, a prominent object to every one who passes down the Hudson.

This young man and woman will make it their business to assume charge of delinquents, particularly of boys and young girls, who are permitted to leave court upon suspended sentence. The probation officer watches over them, tries to get work for them, makes weekly reports concerning them to the court and acts the part of big brother or sister.

Mr. Stevens and his sister get salaries of $1,200 each. They will pay out this sum for assistance, so that the office can be done by liberal, leaving them free to get out among the sheep. There are over 500 probationers to be looked after.

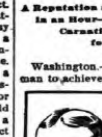
WASHINGTON LETTER

Timely and Interesting Gossip from the National Capitol.

THE FAME OF J. ADAM BEDE

A Reputation as a Humorist Achieved in an Hour—McKinley's Love for Carnations—Gymnastics for the Army.

Washington.—It is exceptional for a man to achieve fame in an hour in the halls of congress. There have been just enough of these exceptions to prove the rule. The last one was the case of J. Adam Bede, the new representative of the Eighth Minnesota district. Bede didn't expect to accomplish such a result, but struck just when our staid congressmen were in a mood to desire amusement, and he furnished it on the vaudeville order.



Congressman Bede.

Bede has his full share of friends in Washington. He could not help that if he wished to, for he is a likable fellow, who makes friends with whoever he meets. It is a trait characteristic of the life he led for a number of years as a roving newspaper reporter and printer. During those years he picked up a large acquaintance throughout the southern and western states in which he has written fire and police reports, "done" local politics, and all the various odds and ends that fall to the lot of the general reporter in daily journalism.

Bede was originally a republican, then in 1888 he flopped over to the democrats and voted for Cleveland, going back to the republicans again at the time of Bryan's nomination in Chicago. It is rather coincident that Bede should have won fame by one speech in which Col. Bryan figured prominently, and that Col. Bryan should have gained fame in a speech—"The Cross of Gold"—which drove Boies out of the democratic party and sent him onto the stump for McKinley. Such are the strange ways of politics.

Bede is by no means a novice at politics, though he is not a proverbial office holder. Cleveland appointed him United States marshal for Minnesota in 1892, but he resigned within a year, and remained a private citizen until elected to congress last year. He is originally from Ohio, and was born on a farm in Lorraine county in that state in 1856.

In Memory of McKinley.

The superintendent of the white house conservatory chose a delicate way of showing his regard for the late President McKinley on January 29. The flowers sent to the president's desk on that day were the choicest of red carnations. The same flower was in great demand by members of congress and officialdom in Washington in general, for it was McKinley's favorite flower and was worn on that day in memory of the lamented president.

President McKinley Remembered.

President McKinley was seldom seen in Washington without a carnation in his buttonhole. His favorite among the carantions was the red or carmine. He wore one of these in preference to the white, as a rule, and when he wanted to show his pleasure at meeting some one he invariably gave a carnation, most frequently a red. All over the country to-day are women who have in various states of preservation carnations given to them by the president when they called with their husbands or others to visit him. The president liked little girls, and it was a pleasure to him to pin carnations on their little dresses or give them one each to take away in their hands. No honor could have been higher to these fortunate ladies and misses than this. There were times when a bevy of school girls would call at the white house. President McKinley would see that he could not give them all carnations, as he did not have that many on his desk, but a number of times some of the more courageous girls would ask for the flowers. These girls got what they asked for, with a charming smile in addition.

Athelics in the Army.

The continued agitation of the subject of physical culture has at last taken hold of the army in a practical way, and new and commodious gymnasiums are to be built at all of our army posts, and a member of the general staff has been detailed to superintend, not only their construction and equipment, but their maintenance and systematic use as well. A wise provision.

Hood and Bertha Effects—Shirred Bolero of Lace.

Where a bertha effect is not desired a hood effect is often simulated by means of flat folds of lace lined with bright silk. Panels of oriental embroidery run perpendicularly on skirts and are finished at the ends with fringed trimmings.

A full shirred bolero effect of lace is often used over a tight fitting bodice belt.

Black chiffon velvet makes a delightful evening gown, for it allows of a full gathered skirt owing to its supple, shining folds, and the waist can be prettily draped and finished off with a deep bertha of fine creamy lace.

Jet is being enthusiastically revived—not the cost of mail jet, but jet embroideries, jet leaves and jet flowers. Jet dog collars encircle the throat and are set off by fastenings of diamonds, and a wreath of jet leaves worn in the hair is excessively smart.

LOUIS XVI. EFFECTS.

Pompadour Silks, Ruched Trimmings and Tiny Flower Nosegays.

Evening gowns are becoming more and more elaborate, and many of them show marked Louis XVI. effects. This is shown in the long pointed girdles, the sleeves with wide ruffles and the wide skirts with their festooned ruching. As up to date models recently seen in the workshop of a great dressmaker had a shirred and corded waist with a wide pointed girdle and elbow sleeves, plentifully ruched and ruffled. The skirt was gathered in very full all around the waistband, and it was trimmed at the bottom with rows of ruching. The material was a beautiful pompadour silk in a blurred design.

Roses and their buds made of chiffon adorn many a pink chiffon dancing frock, and these pretty trimmings can be bought by the yard and detached. Velvet ribbon threaded through coarse lace is another dainty trimming, and so are medallions of lace appliqued at intervals on flowered ribbon.

Ruchings, however, are far and away the most popular, and they are particularly handsome made of chiffon or brussels net.

Spangled robes are "in" once more, and these are made up with the addition of lace or chiffon.

The long, voluminous hanging sleeves are a feature of every evening gown. They are often accordion plaited and edged with a tiny ruching.

The hair dressed low, with a big black velvet bow, is an evening style greatly in favor among red haired and blond women.

A most becoming white stock is adorned with violets composed of French knots, the neckband fastened with three tiny buttons, revealing a touch of pale blue, while the short stole ends are adorned with chiffon violets.

The picture shows an evening gown of white tulle over white silk, trimmed with a pink sash and tiny pink roses.

GIRLS WHO ARE FOOLISH

Several Kinds of Them

"THE list of foolish girls is bound to be a long one," remarked the bachelor as he lighted a cigarette and settled himself comfortably.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," retorted the worldly wise woman severely. "I should think if you have to meet many girls of that description it is because you have made fools of them."

"Will you please head your list," the bachelor went on, without paying any attention to her, "by mentioning the girl who writes letters to men?"

"Did you get many of those?"

"Did I get many of them? Well, on an average three or four every morning with my business mail. Oh, I don't mean nice little letters inviting me to tea or dinner, but soulful affairs written on the whiteness of the wherefore order. Sometimes they were inspired by something I had said, and then I used to curse myself and vow to cut it out, whatever it was, and then again the weather would inspire some, or a peculiar mood. Oh, I used to tremble when a letter began this way: 'I am in a peculiar mood today, so I thought I would write to you.'

"Well, it is my turn to put in a few, I think. I speak from the woman's point of view. Out of the silly, silly girls is she who gets crushes on men and then tells about it. She will say: 'Oh, I met such a stunning man the other day, and, do you know, I think he likes me. He said, etc., and when he parted he looked at me in such a way and said, etc.' And worse still the girl who makes friends with a man's sister and asks her ingenuously if she thinks her brother likes her—a lot of fun for the sister, but if the brother is in love he can find plenty of ways of showing it."

"Then there is the girl who washes the family dirty linen in public to whoever will listen. She makes me feel such a cad, and yet I can't tell her to shut up, can I?

"Nor can you squelch the girl who insists upon telling you the history of her hard, hard, misunderstood life. If there is any type of girl women dread it is the girl who has continual hard luck story. She bedews herself with her own tears, and her eternal cry is, 'Poor little me!' "

"DO YOU THINK HE LIKES ME?"

"Well, there is another type of foolish girl who perhaps wouldn't strike you at first sight, as a man, because she only shows that side of her character to her own sex. I refer to the lady with the mania for confessing her weaknesses and her sins to her friends. Instead of concealing them forty fathoms deep this misguided one feels bent in two under their weight until she unburdens herself to some intimate friend under a pledge of secrecy, which lasts as long as the friendship and no longer, if, indeed, it lasts so long. 'For goodness' sake let people find out your bad qualities. They will do so fast enough,' I have repeated again and again to one of these foolish virgins. But in vain. It is a fatal habit which is almost unconscious. Silly women, to run down or belittle themselves, their homes or their families!"

"To a man it is sometimes amusing to see how women run after each other if they think something is to be gained."

"Yes, and when a girl tries to do things rapidly that way she usually gets turned down too. Even women don't like what comes too easily."

"And the girl who quotes the social calendar—have you forgotten her? What Mrs. Astorbilt wore at the Van Ulpheds on Wednesday. What Mrs. Willie Social Leader's first cousin by the second marriage did at the institucie, etc.?"

"Yes, and it's all out of the society columns of the yellow journals. She doesn't get a soul to like her."

"And the girls who ape extremes in dress and the very latest extravagances in near silk and near fur and near velvet instead of sticking to a ladylike cut and a material which they can afford to have made decently."

"And the girl who always goes 'you one better. If you say you can sing, she will relate what the great So-and-so said about her voice."

"Oh, stop the list! It is all too long."

"What did I tell you?"

"Never mind. They make us appreciate all the more the girls who don't make fools of themselves."

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,
PUBLISHED AT
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Ed... and Proprietor

Thursday, Feb. 25, 1904.

If you should happen to want an article that has gone out of fashion, the best place to look for it is in the store of the man who never advertises.—Exchange.

John G. Rockefeller has given himself a dividend of $16 per share on Standard Oil stock for the first quarter of the year. Bet Dr. Harper had a fainting spell when he heard the news.

The Trenton State-Gazette says that "James Smith, Jr., would like to see Grover Cleveland Governor of New Jersey, but he never will." It fails to state however, that the principal reason why James Smith's wish will not be granted is that Grover Cleveland is altogether too great a man to accept a governorship after twice filling the highest office in the gift of the whole people of the United States.

The Exempt firemen will not allow the $10,000 hose carriage to be taken to St. Louis. If any of the sightseers at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition would like to take a glance at the precious relic we invite them to come to Plainfield, where, at the same time, they will be afforded an opportunity of seeing a model municipality.

A Southwestern railroad manager whose interest is to attract not only travelers but also settlers to that section is convinced that by expending for newspaper space the sums heretofore paid for elaborate and costly booklets he can achieve much better results, says the Philadelphia Record. This is the tendency not only of railroad, but also of many other kinds of advertising.

Washington, N. J., man has a flying machine. There's a whole lot of Democratic "Presidential possibilities" who deserve seats in it.

Professor George Ryan says that he is proud of being a citizen of New Brunswick. We merely draw attention to the fact to show that some people are easily satisfied.

When you get a good man in office, keep him there. Competent men are scarce in political offices, but Plainfield and North Plainfield have been singularly blessed with trustworthy and efficient public servants. The complimentary word uttered by the expert accountant who examined the books of the treasurer and collector for North Plainfield, George F. Brown, are entirely deserved. Mr. Brown is possessed of every qualification necessary in discharging the duties of the offices he holds and he is a man that makes use of those qualifications.

DRAG HUNT MUCH ENJOYED

JOLLY PARTY OF PLAINFIELDERS FOLLOWED THE HOUNDS OVER COURSE.

A successful and highly enjoyable drag hunt was held on Saturday afternoon, a number of persons from this city and other places joining in the exciting sport. The hunt was started at G. F. Mellick's bungalow near the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, a boy starting a half-hour in advance on a pony, dragging the anise seed bag. The hounds, ten in all, were laid on the scent in the fields near the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Oak Tree and they followed it closely to the finish near the old golf grounds on Plainfield avenue. At Oak Tree there was a rest of fifteen minutes while the check was made.

At times the hunt was very exciting, the hounds making considerable noise and leading the riders a merry chase. Those who rode horseback were R. B. DeHaven, C. S. Bellows, Irving Clark, Dr. O'M. Knott and Archibald Mair, the whip, of this city; Captain Mason Matthew Patrick, of West Point; Miss Noe, of Westfield; R. A. Shebbeare and Miss Palmer, of New York.

If the weather is favorable there will be another hunt on Saturday.

School Quarantined.

Unfortunately a case of diphtheria recently developed at the branch of the Randolph Cooley Collegiate school, 107 West Seventh street, and Miss Hartridge, who conducts the school, has been able to arrange with Mase Edwards to continue the school at the Casino. Miss Hartridge appreciates Mr. Edward's kind offer, enabling her to cause no interruption in the studies. No. 107 West Seventh street has been quarantined.

Miss Maria Flynn, Miss Maggie Flynn, Miss Delia Flynn and Miss Annie Carty, of this city, attended an entertainment in New York Saturday.

AMUSEMENTS.

The success is has achieved is the best criterion to go by when theatrical attractions are concerned and that is why "The Girl from Kay's" is drawing crowded houses at the Herald Square after being on the boards at that play house for nearly four months. Sam Bernard, whose reputation is as wide as the continent, and Hattie Williams, whose name is a synonym for clever work, made a hit the first night and since then the popularity of the production was assured. There's sixteen songs and 5,000 laughs for the man in the orchestra chair was well as for him among the gallery gods. In is a fountain of fun which sends forth a continuous stream of wit. Evenings at 8:10; Saturday matinees at 2:15.

At the Academy of Music, New York, Shubert-Nixon & Zimmerman are presenting "The Jefferson De Angelis Opera Co.," in the musical hit, "The Toreador," which is one of the most satisfying musical comedy productions that we have had in a number of seasons. It is filled with fun, its music entrancing, and nothing but admiration expressed for its scenic surroundings and costuming. Every moment of Jefferson De Angelis' assumption of the timid and unwilling adventurous "Tiger," Sammy Gigg, brings laughter for his unique personality and frolicsome humor. The music of the "Toreador" is full of gems of song, choruses and comic ditties. De Angelis' "Dreamy Eyes;" Edgar Norton's "Everybody's Awfully Good to Me;" Margaret McKinney's "Language of Flowers;" Edward Metcalfe's "Toreador Song," and Norma Bell's "Keep Off the Grass," are among the most popular numbers which get at merons encores. This engagement will be limited to two weeks, owing to time booked elsewhere and the inability on the part of the management of cancelling same.

The introduction to Broadway of something out of the ordinary has been the obligation assumed by John C. Fisher and Thomas W. Byley in bringing out their Daly Theatre success, "Glittering Gloria," hence described as a comedy with music." The work is by Hugh Morton who wrote "The Belle of New York" that ran so long in the city, while the music is by Bernard Rolt, a young Englishman who has rapidly come to the front abroad. That the public likes "Gloria" there is every indication and the length of time she will shine on the stage of Daly's will be determined only by her own sweet will. The comedy is refreshing in that it is composed of a coherent story, the plot of which is never lost sight of is described a comedy with music, so it is and the introduction of the several dainty choruses and individual vocal efforts does not destroy or seriously interrupt the course of the story. The company was selected with a view to make actor and character fit and in Cyril Scott, Percy Ames, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Forrest Robinson, Eugene O'Rourke, George Schiller, Adele Ritchie, Phyllis Rankin, Adelaide Prince and other well known stage people, the character is created by the author are carefully and consistently portrayed.

There are an unusual attractive array of specialists at all of the Proctor houses for the Sunday concerts, which will continue from 2 until 11 p. m. At the Twenty-third Street among the leading entertainers will be the Kaufman Troupe, Adolph Zink, Ward and Curran, and Blocksom and Burnes. The Fifth Avenue will offer as its principal features, Paul Spanjer, Adele Chipman, Binns, Binns and Binns; T. Nelson Downs, etc., while the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street will present Ryan and Richfield, Julius M. Tannen, Bailey and Madison, Eddie Lack, and other stars, and at the Fifty-eighth Street Lillian Burkhart, Cressy and Dayne, Raymond and Caverly and Irene La-Tour will head the lengthy programme.

CHURCH SOCIETY'S BIRTHDAY.

First Anniversary of Young People's Society of Swedish Pilgrim Church.

Anniversary services were held at the Swedish Pilgrim church Saturday night, marking the first anniversary of the Young People's Society of that church. Rev. C. E. Peterson, of East Orange, officiated in the absence of the pastor, Rev. L. T. Lindholm, who is detained at his home with a severe cold.

The society was organized shortly after the erection of the present church and has continued to grow ever since. The anniversary exercises were featured by several selections by the string quartette composed of Mrs. L. T. Lindholm, Miss Judith Johnson, Miss Elizabeth Anderson and Miss Anna Lindmark. The choir also rendered several selections. Miss Ida Johnson gave a recitation entitled "Youth" and Miss Emily Lind recited, "An Old Man's Advice." An address on "Daniel" was given by Rev. Mr. Peterson. Refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the arrangements was Rev. L. T. Lindholm, Mathilda Gustafson and Miss Ida Johnson.

"HIAWATHA" PRODUCED AT THE CASINO

Ojibway Indians Sing While Frederick R. Burton Explained the Play.

BEFORE TWO AUDIENCES

SONGS IN THE INDIAN TONGUE AFFORD ENTERTAINMENT.

The Descendants of Famous Tribal Chiefs in the Troupe—Performances of a High Standard—In Native Costume.

Frederick R. Burton, of Yonkers, and his band of Ojibway Indians entertained two audiences at the Casino Friday afternoon and night. They presented "Hiawatha," "the Indian play, a literary and musical entertainment," a reproduction so far as possible indoors of the forest drama which is an annual event on the shores of Lake Huron. Scores from the play were presented in costume with the songs of the Ojibways sung in the aboriginal manner and followed by Mr. Burton's "harmonised versions in English."

The play was realistic and the actors, several of them, descendants of famous tribal chieftains. Mr. Burton claims for the songs of the Ojibways that they are "the highest type of aboriginal melody that has yet been discovered, they constitute a native American folksong of such intrinsic beauty as had not been supposed to exist;" and his claim was well sustained by the performances of yesterday.

The play reproduced faithfully in the Indian songs Longfellow's story of "Hiawatha." The teaching of the boy, "Hiawatha," to shoot, sing and dance, was illustrated with an Indian boy as the principal and decidedly clever actor. The various dances, the Indian gambling game, and songs sung beautifully by untrained voices without accompaniment, appropriate to the events in Hiawatha's career, composed the unique and instructive programme They revealed, among other characteristics not popularly supposed to belong to the Indian, his humor, and expressiveness. The laughing song magnificently sung that closed the entertainment would have done credit to an opera singer, and some of the love songs of the people as given last night would embellish an Italian opera.

NOW MRS. J. S. VOORHEES

MISS CORNELIA MILLER WEDDED AT HOME, TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATING.

Miss Cordelia Miller, daughter of the late Theodore J. Miller, and J. Stanley Voorhees, of 838 Carlton avenue, were quietly married Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride on Park avenue, in the presence of only the immediate relatives, owing to the recent death of the bride's father. There were no attendants. The home was simply, but prettily decorated with palms and flowers.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, assisted by the groom's cousin, Rev. A. A. Murphy, of New Brunswick. Following the ceremony, there was a wedding repast, after which the couple left for a short trip in the South.

The bride and groom are both actively engaged in the work of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The groom is engaged in business in New York, and has been a resident of this city several years.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT

SCENES FROM THE HOUSE BOAT ON THE STYX PROVED ENJOYABLE.

The reproduction of scenes from the "House Boat on the Styx," by John Kendrick Bangs, given by the class of 1905, Plainfield High School, at Franklin Hall Saturday night, successfully entertained a large audience and netted about $60. The humor of the play was well displayed and the players showed effects of good training under the direction of Miss Ball. A mandolin duet by Chester Briggs and Theodore Gaveit was heartily applauded. A candy table conducted by several girls of the class of 1906 was a special attraction. Dancing was in order after the performance. Music was by Suhr's orchestra.

Old Trolley Schedule Again.

The management of the Public Service Corporation has put the Elizabeth-Plainfield trolley cars back on the old time schedule, that is giving each car one hour and forty minutes to make the trip one way, instead of one hour and twenty-five minutes.

REV. DR. WORTMAN AT TRINITY REFORMED

President of General Synod Preached at Morning and Evening Services Sunday.

GIFTED AS A MINISTER

FIRST ADDRESS IN BEHALF OF DISABLED MINISTERS AND WIDOWS.

"Patriotic Indebtedness to the Netherlands," the Subject of His Discourse at Night—Desired a Certain Sum From Congregation.

A large congregation was present at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning and evening to hear Rev. Dr. Denis Wortman, an able divine. Dr. Wortman is president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, and is known as an author, poet and preacher. In the morning he spoke in behalf of the Disabled Ministers' and Widows' fund and his earnest words stimulated a greater interest among those present for this work. Dr. Wortman referred in condemnatory terms of the present day tendency of churches in general to get rid of a pastor who is advanced in years and secure a younger man for the pulpit.

He said that in the business world a man with experience is the most to be desired. By way of illustration he pointed to instances where men after serving a long time in the judiciary and having been retired their services and advice are eagerly sought after. In his opinion the minister who is ripe in years, experience and Christian living is more valuable than the young man and should be regarded as such by a congregation.

In the evening he delivered a sermon on the subject "Our Patriotic Indebtedness to the Netherlands," during which he held the closest attention. His earnest plea in behalf of greater patriotism for this country could not help but arouse a deep feeling in the hearts of all. During the services, the choir rendered one of Dr. Wortman's compositions.

In the morning after the sermon the annual collection for the object represented by Dr. Wortman was received, a goodly sum being contributed. The preacher desired that Trinity Reformed church contribute $75 annually toward the Disabled Ministers' and Widows' fund and no doubt this will be done. In the evening a large American flag was used to decorate the pulpit.

HOPE'S PATRIOTIC SERVICE

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUPILS HOLD A SPECIAL CELEBRATION.

Special patriotic services were held by the Sunday-school of Hope Memorial chapel Sunday afternoon. Hymns, responsive readings and addresses made up the programme. Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, of the chapel, gave an interesting address on Patriotism and Ira W. Travell read an extract from one of Rev. Dr. William R. Richards' lectures on Christian Patriotism. A pretty feature of the exercises was the part taken by the children of the primary department who were drilled by Mrs. Noble C. King. Each of them marched about the platform each bearing a banner with a letter inscribed, the whole spelling out "God Bless America." "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" was sung by the entire primary class and the same hymn sung by the entire school closed the services.

PAYING GOOD WAGES.

Girls at Local Skirt Factory Entered in a Competition.

What is believed to be a record breaker for the amount of work turned out by an operator in the skirt manufactory of Hersig & Kapp, on Watchung avenue, is held by Miss Pauline Hamilton, who is known in the shop as "Operator No. 5." In thirteen and a half days she made $28 40 working on piece scale, which is equivalent to $2.10 a day. This is the highest amount ever made by an operator at that factory and, it is believed, of any in the city.

This enterprising firm has established a merit system in the shop and this is the result of the first month's trial. A spirit of friendly rivalry has been encouraged in this shop between the operators. Some of the operators have decided to eclipse this record held by Miss Hamilton.

COMPANY K'S FAIR DRAWS A BIG CROWD

Curios and Relics Attractive Among the Many Exhibits Displayed in the Armory.

CAPT. MARTIN IN CHARGE

YOUNG WOMEN ASSISTING SOLDIER BOYS IN THE UNDERTAKING.

Booths Gayly Decorated—Dancing a Feature—Some Historic Flags Shown—Fair to Continue the Remainder of the Week.

Company K's fair had a distinctly successful opening Monday. The attendance was large, from seven to eight hundred, the booths furnished attractions for everybody and dancing on the company's floor generally considered the best in the city, made a delightful feature. The decorations consisted of the National colors as befitted a military fair, the walls being covered with American flags. Among the curios exhibited were the first American flag raised in Honolulu, which floated over the customs house in 1898 and which is the property of Co. I, of Elizabeth; the flag that waved over the Capitol building at Washington when the House of Representatives was debating on the Spanish-American war; the autograph of President Roosevelt, and a silk handkerchief embroidered by Mrs. McKinley.

The booths were decorated in green and red and included a chocolate booth from which souvenir cups were given with every cup of chocolate sold; a fancy table and candy, ice cream and novelties table; and a refreshment counter. Elaborate preparations for the reception of guests at the fair, including a private reception room, had been made. Music for dancing was provided by Suhr's orchestra.

Those in charge of the booths were Mrs. C. A. Peterson, Mrs. A. I. Littell, Mrs. A. Goldsack, Mrs. W. B. Harsel, Mrs. A. R. Tranchand, Miss L. Conkling, Mrs. L. Emmons, Miss F. Bilyeu, Miss H. M. Apgar, Miss Daisy Snyder, Mrs. Judson and Mrs. A. Niles, composing the women's auxiliary committee of the company.

Of the general committee in charge of the fair, Captain W. B. Martin was chairman. The floor committee consisted of Sergt. A. I. Littell, chairman; Lieut. Lewis, treasurer; Sergt. Peterson, Sergt. Sellers, Corp. Apgar, Corp. Bilyeu, Corp. Harsell, and Private Wilson, Post, Frazee, Jennings and Brennan. The printing, tickets and press committee included Corp. Tranchand, chairman; Privates Conkling, Clark, Vail and Stiglitz. On the donation committee were Corp. Whitney, chairman; Privates Sampson, Stiglitz, Jennings and Brennan; contests committee, Corp. Bilyeu, chairman; Corp. Apgar and Private Weaver; refreshment committee, Corp. Urth, chairman; Corp. Apgar, Ex-Stover, Privates Peterson, Brennan, Judson and Goldsack; decoration committee, Lieut. Kitchell, chairman, Privates Weaver, Frazee, Post and J. Niles.

Smoking was not allowed and the ventilation of the hall was as nearly perfect as possible. An inspection of the hall had been made by Chief Doane, of the fire department, who announced that he had no changes or improvements to suggest and that the arrangements were excellent. Exceptionally good order was preserved throughout the evening. A fireman is in attendance at the ball throughout the week of the fair.

WILSON CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY

REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS AND W. D. MURRAY JOIN IN THE OBSERVANCE.

Celebrating the fourteenth anniversary of the organization of the Wilson Memorial chapel in Washingtonville, the members of that congregation held special Sunday-school services on Sunday. The attendance in each instance was large and the singing was a special feature.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, formerly pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, who 14 years ago conducted the dedicatory service, spoke on "The Permanancy and Power of Right Living." Secretary Rogers, of the Sunday-school, read the annual reports and they showed that the school is in a prosperous condition and new members were being constantly received.

Miss Beeching, of the Sunday-school, presided at the meeting and violin selections were rendered by the Spear Brothers, of this city. The evening services were in charge of W. D. Murray, of this city.

Miss Lillian Hoagland, of Asbury Park, who has been visiting her brother, A. C. Hoagland, of Park avenue, has returned home.

BOROUGH COUNCIL FIXES ANNUAL BUDGET

North Plainfield's Governing Body Arranges to Run Municipal Machinery for $20,800.

AUDITOR MAKES REPORT

TREASURER G. F. BROWN COMPLIMENTED ON SHAPE OF HIS BOOKS.

Mayor Smalley Makes a Speech—West End Hose Company Offers to Sell its Wagon and the Council Will Consider Proposition.

There was little business to transact at the special meeting of the Borough Council, held Friday. It was one of the few remaining sessions to be held before the election, and the most important action was to fix the amount of the annual budget. Mayor Smalley and Councilmen Nichols, Lee, Van-Arsdale and Arnold were present, while in the lobby was a large delegation of borough firemen interested in whatever action might be taken regarding the fire department and its chances.

Collector Brown's report showed the following receipts, expenditures and balance: Cash on hand January 1st, $130.07; Board of Health, $1.15; special school, $22.31; John H. Snyder, sale of brick, $2; balance February 1, $9,393.35; total receipts, $9,636.75; disbursement, $7,692.53; cash on hand, $1,944.26.

In connection with the above report, the statement of Edward L. Suffern, certified public accountant, employed by the borough to examine the books of the collector and treasurer, is of special interest. The accountant has audited the books for the fiscal year ending February 8 and found them correct. He states that the apparent deficiency of resources is to be considered as arising from the fact that the full amount of the bond issue for the engine house appears among the liabilities, with regard to the date of maturity. The amounts shown as due from future tax levies for the Watchung avenue assessment, as well as the proportions of unpaid taxes due the Board of Education and the Board of Health, are as given him by the treasurer. Mr. Suffern further states:

"It seems proper, that in submitting this report, I should call your attention to the excellent manner in which the collector and treasurer's accounts have been kept, which have always been noticeable during the four years for which I have had the honor of making the audit. The accounts show great care and exactness. The cash receipts for the year have been $87,797.02 and the disbursements, $85,980.04."

The resources show $1,944.26 in cash; $14,943.97 in unpaid taxes from 1887 to 1903, inclusive. The total resources, less proportions due school and Board of Health, when collected, $1,898; Watchung avenue assessment, tax title to property bought in, $196.10, and deficiency to balance, $3,837.13, are $18,823.46. The liabilities amount to $18,833.46, itemized as follows:

Watchung avenue bonds, $8,000; less amounts to be collected through future tax levies, $7,000—$1,000; Somerset street improvement certificates, $3,000; engine house bonds, $10,000; Board of Education, $22.31; Board of Health, $1.15; bills payable, $4,500. The latter amount is accounted for by the fact that under the new school law, the assessment for schools for 1903, was paid in full, and not when collected, as heretofore.

Mr. Arnold offered a resolution authorizing the borough clerk to have 500 copies of the annual report printed for distribution among the taxpayers. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution specifying the various amounts thought to be necessary to run the borough for the coming year. These are the various sums: Police, $5,000; fire department, $3,000; streets, $6,000; light, $5,000; water, $1,800; poor, $1,000; incidentals and interest, $1,000; Watchung avenue bond, $1,000; Somerset street certificate, $500; total, $30,800.

The above resolution was adopted by unanimous vote

Mayor Smalley introduced the subject relative to the disposition of the West End Hose Company carriage, stating that there were representatives of the company present and he invited them to speak. Charles Keller acted as spokesman and he said that the cost of the carriage complete was $494.50. He said that the company would like to sell the carriage to the borough, that it is in good condition, having been in service only since 1902.

Mr. Lee's motion that the report from the company be received for future consideration was adopted.

Mayor Smalley then made a few remarks on the subject. He said that no doubt the hose company would like to have the Council settle on some proposition at once and he believed that the Council would at the proper time treat with the company in a fair manner. He said that naturally the company would like to dispose of what it now has on hand, but he wanted all to understand that the Council is running this part of the government and would continue to do so. That the Council would treat the company as men he had no doubt. In conclusion he said that the new fire house was built so that the department could be put on a better basis and he believed that the West End Hose carriage would be needed there in the near future. "While some people believe that the Council is controlled by a one-man power," said the Mayor, "I believe that the company knows best what it wants to do and I am willing to believe that they will act independently and do what is for the best."

PRODUCTION AT GRACE M. E.

CLEVER SKETCH GIVEN BY THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH.

Not one of the many people who witnessed the production of the sketch entitled "Parson Poor's Donation Party" by the young people of Grace M. E. church Friday who did not speak in the highest terms of the entertainment. The church was well filled and each participant took her part cleverly. It was given for the benefit of the church and was financially a great success.

The cast was made up of the young people connected with the Epworth League. The cast: Parson Poor, Benjamin Schuck; Mrs. Poor, the Parson's wife, Miss Adelaide Marsh; Parson Poor's daughter, Lucy, Miss Edna Sebring; Peter Poor, son of the parson, Harry Schuck; four boys visiting the parson, Arthur Stewart, Fred Kranse, David Fairchild and Harry Allen; Mrs. Martha, Duesenberry, Miss Carrie VanArsdale; Tersah Ann Stubbs, Miss Grace Clark; Deacon Pinkett, Dykman Winkler; Mrs. Pinkett, Mrs. Dykman Winkler; Mrs. Sarah Jane Beebe, Miss Laura Dean; Mr. Hezekiah Beebe, J. Russel Harden; Madamd Bradford, Miss Minnie I. Marsh; widow Sharpe, Miss Ada VanHorne; four girls, Misses Anna Hoagland, Lillian Treter, Jennie DeMott and Bessie Conroy.

A novel method was employed in collecting the admission to the entertainment. Each person with ten pounds was charged for each seeking admittance. This provided much amusement to all. Dykman Winckler was official weigher and gathered in the sheckles. The net proceeds will probably exceed $30

During the programme Vincent Sokol presided at the piano and Dykman Winkler favored with violin selections.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was Mrs. Dykman Winkler, chairman; Miss Emma Smalley, Miss Mary E. Steiner, Miss Allon Clark and Miss Della Voehl.

INSPECTION OF COMPANY K

BRIG.-GEN. GILMORE AND MAJOR DUNGAN AMONG THOSE PRESENT.

The annual drill and inspection of Co. K, held Friday in the armory on West Front street, was one of the best in the history of the organization. The company went through the regulation drill under the direction of Captain Martin. The inspection and drill was witnessed by Brig.-Gen. Gilmore and Major Nelson Y. Dungan.

SERIOUSLY CUT.

Judge Coddington's Hand Nearly Severed by Fall of a Chandelier.

In endeavoring to break the fall of a large chandelier at his home on East Second street, Sunday, former City Judge William A. Coddington severely cut his hand, severing several arteries and causing a flow of blood that was not stopped for several hours. The fingers and palm of the left hand were badly gashed. Judge Coddington was romping with his pet dog when the accident occurred, the jarring of the floor loosening the chandelier. He was attended by Drs. Pittis and Adams.

J. O. Osgood to Speak.

Joseph O. Osgood, of North Plainfield, chief engineer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, will address the Men's Assembly of Grace M. E. church at its meeting on Friday night. He will talk on bridges, making special reference to the new "lift" structure over the Newark bay.

"No Standing Room" Orders.

Stringent orders against allowing spectators to stand in aisles and in the rear of seats at public halls of entertainment or meeting will be enforced in this city by Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane.

Oh My, It's a Boy!

A son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs George Alexander, of Lincoln place, on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Vroom are grandparents of the young ster.

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON FIRE DEPARTMENT

Mayor Smalley Gives Administration's Version of Council's Relations With Firemen.

HITS WARREN HARD

STAND TAKEN BY MAYOR IS SUPPORTED BY NORTH PLAINFIELD CITIZENS.

Why Council Decided to Use Part of the New Engine House—The Dealings With the Firemen—What is Planned.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley delivered a special message to the North Plainfield Council Friday, his subject being a review of that body's relations with the borough firemen. The object of the communication is to set before the people the administration's version of the unpleasantness which has culminated in an ordinance for the disbandment of the volunteer fire department.

This is his message as read by Clerk Frank W. Rowley:

"Gentlemen:

"On this occasion, when we are closing our year's business and reporting to our constituents what has been accomplished since our last annual meeting, it will doubtless be proper for me to say something relative to one of our most important actions. Especially is this due to those of you whose terms are about expiring, and whose actions particularly in regard to the establishment of a paid fire department, are now the subject of much, and to my mind unjust, criticism.

"To put the matter fairly it is necessary that the facts be briefly stated. In the first place, every Mayor and Council of this borough has done all in their power to make the volunteer department a success, and to gratify its wishes. When, a year or two ago, Warren Engine Co. claimed that the engine house was too small to accommodate the accumulating apparatus, this body cheerfully joined in the effort to procure a new and larger house. At this time there was no claim that the second floor, or meeting room could not be used, the ceiling room is insufficient. It was the ground floor that was too small.

"The issue of bonds to the amount of $10,000, authorized by popular vote, was found inadequate. This council came gladly to the assistance of the company, and by practicing the strictest economy in every possible direction, succeeded in arranging to devote out of the general funds, the additional $5,000 necessary to make the new house possible. Beyond doubt we all believed that the members of the company appreciated our efforts, and would in turn be glad to assist us in economizing and saving money, in order that our liberal expenditure on behalf of the department might not increase the burden of the taxpayers.

"One argument used at the time of the election to authorize bonds, was that the old engine house might be used as Council chambers, and thus a material saving of rent to the extent of several hundred dollars a year, would result. No formal action on this subject was taken, but the suggestion met with general approval, and doubtless would have been carried out but for other developments.

"During the past few years it has been becoming more and more apparent that the borough court room and lock-up are wholly inadequate for our needs. The court room fails to accommodate even those who are obliged to be present at many trials. The lock-up was never intended for other than the most temporary detention of prisoners. The action of the county authorities at Somerville, in repeatedly turning loose persons sent to the county jail from this borough, to serve terms to which sentenced by our court, has made it necessary to keep our prisoners in the lock-up, if they are to be imprisoned at all. For any such purpose the lock-up is absolutely unfit. To imprison anyone there for any protracted term is out of the question. No one who will examine it will deny the truth of this statement. If the peace and good order of the borough are to be preserved, a suitable lock-up must be provided. When it was recently suggested that the old engine house be used for borough lock-up, court room and police headquarters, for which it can be fitted at small expense, the wisdom of such suggestion became at once apparent. To carry out this plan it was necessary that the council first secure other meeting places, and the second story of the new engine house at once suggested itself. No one supposed the engine company would object. They would still have far more room left upstairs than they had in the old house, and it never had been asserted that the upstairs part of that was too small.

"When the proposition was made to the company, however, it met strong opposition. The company did not want the Council to meet in the building. A resolution was passed to that effect, and one of the spokesmen for the company said in effect that while a few members had voted to allow the Council to occupy a room in the building, that every one of them was really opposed to it. "Why," he said, "you want the best part of the house." Undoubtedly he spoke the truth from the point of view of the members. The social features are the main thing with them. They regard the building as a clubhouse furnished at public expense.

"Members of the volunteer department are frank to say that except for the social features, they would not belong to the department, and this is undoubtedly true. While the department theoretically belongs to the borough, practically it is a social organization in which the attendance on fire duty is merely an infrequent incident. It elects its own members, the council having only the power of veto. Threats that it would disband have from time to time been made when the Mayor and Council merely sought to exercise its duty of appointing officers, who were not always the choice of the members. Like all volunteer departments, it uses its organization in politics to elect councilmen who will serve its ends, and when the engine company formally resolved that the council should be refused permission to save expense to the taxpayers by occupying a small portion of a building erected at the public expense, it seemed to you and to me time to call a halt, and in this I believe the taxpayers will agree. Volunteer departments have everywhere given way to paid departments in the march of progress, and for the same reasons: The paid department is better, and in the end cheaper. They are the recognized servants of the people, and directly responsible to them. Many of our most prominent citizens and largest taxpayers have communicated with me, commending our action in this matter. I quote the following from a letter which is a fair sample of what has been said to me on the subject:

"'Dear Sir: Permit me to express my approval of the action of yourself and council in regard to paid fire department. I hope there will be no wavering in bringing about this reform. When a department of the borough puts its own interests or convenience before that of the taxpayers, it is time the latter asserted their rights. The only permanent solution of this problem is to discard sentiment and put the fire department on a strictly business basis, with paid employes responsible only to the people, represented by their Mayor and Council. December 18th., 1903.'

"Many other communications of similar character might be quoted, but it is unnecessary. The taxpayers of the borough are awake to the situation. The new department, for which you have provided, will be more effective, and in the long run far more satisfactory than the old. The latter has done as good work as any volunteer department could do. It deserves the thanks of our citizens, and will go down into history as one of the pleasant things which the town has outgrown, like the old system of street lighting and street sprinkling.

"You gentlemen, serving the public as you do, without other reward than the consciousness of duty well performed, have in my humble judgment earned the fullest commendation of your constituents. Not only in this particular, but in all things have you served them honestly and well. The bark of the critic may sound loudest now, but the time will come, and soon, when your faithful discharge of the trust reposed in you will receive the appreciation it so well deserves.

"Newton B. Smalley.
Mayor."

JERSEY CENTRAL'S SCHEME.

Sending East Bound Freight for New York Central Over Another Route.

The New Jersey Central was experimenting last week with a view of sending all east-bound freight for the New York Central Railroad from Easton, Pa., by the way of the Lehigh and Hudson and the Central New England railroads over the Poughkeepsie bridge. Many miles are saved in transit and the haulage across the North river is also saved. For Central Railroad *crews have been on the Le*high and Hudson conducting the experiments, but it is not known whether the plan is considered a success or not. Should the scheme be adopted the Central would take off about three fast freights daily across this State.

FRANCIS J. BLATZ FOR BOROUGH COUNCIL

Young Lawyer Will be Running Mate of Mr. Nichols on Republican Ticket.

PRIMARIES NEXT WEEK

ELSTON M. FRENCH NOT LIKELY TO RUN FOR ASSESSORSHIP.

Citizens' Party Has No Definite Plans to Announce—Walter Linbarger It is Reported Wants An Office—Political Gossip.

Francis J. Blatz, Esq., will be the running mate of Charles L. Nichols on the Councilmanic ticket of the Republicans in North Plainfield, according to the party leaders. Mr. Blatz will succeed James F. Northrop, who declines a renomination, unless the proposed citizens' party will be strong enough to defeat the present administration at the coming election. It is reported that John P. Emmons will be named by the Republicans for assessor. Elston M. French is not likely to accept a nomination for that office again and the Democrats, who propose to adopt a fusion ticket, will select another man for the place. It is said that Walter Linbarger is after a nomination for the office.

The Republicans will hold their primaries next week, but the exact date has not been set. It is said that no one has been slated for justice of the peace, there being two vacancies to fill by expiration of terms. The proposed citizens' party has given out no information as to its plans, although it is claimed that representative men will be on the fusion ticket.

Have you visited "The Fair" in the Babcock building? There the best bargains are offered in fine women's ware. Everything is sold on the one-sale-small-profit plan and consequently the purchaser reaps the benefit. In the stock displayed is seen some of the finest women's waists and skirts, ready made, but fitting just like tailor made.

When the inner man gets hungry nothing but a substantial meal will satisfy. It is for this reason that so many people dine at Timbo's restaur*ant on North avenue. A first-class* meal with all the appetizing accompaniments can be had there for a reasonable price.

If you can't find anywhere else in Plainfield goods of quality equal to Peck's, West Front street. You can't find the same goods in any large city stores with very few possible exceptions. Peck's dry and fancy goods are the choicest, in many cases varities prepared especially for Peck.

There is a good deal to be gained by buying your clothing at Rothberg Brothers' New York bargain store. There is good reliable clothing in up-to-date styles to be gained for one thing, and for another there is a big gain in the saving in price which at the N. Y. bargain store is the lowest in town; for a third advantage there is the fact of one of the largest assortments of the very best fabrics from which to choose. In addition special inducements are offered those who wish to take advantage of an extraordinary mark-down sale of winter goods.

EARLY MORNING FIRE; 3 FAMILIES HOMELESS

Thrilling Escapes From a House on Manning Avenue, Firemen Aiding in Rescue.

LADDIES WORKED HARD

THE LOSS ON BUILDING ESTIMATED AT $1,200.

A Lamp is Said to Have Caused the Trouble — Adjoining Building Saved—One Man Was Badly Burned About His Face.

Thrilling escapes from second story windows attended the fire which broke out Thursday at 4:40, in the home of Mrs. Celia Lewis at 88 Manning avenue. An alarm from box 139 at the corner of Manning and Westervelt avenues was turned in as soon as the fire was discovered by the sleeping inmates. On account of the extreme cold and the difficulty in rescuing those who were imprisoned on the top floor the firemen were hampered somewhat. Flames were leaping from the roof before the alarm was sounded.

Three families live in the house which is conducted by Mrs. Lewis as a colored boarding house. In the building were Mrs. Benj. Butler and the family of S. A. Cardwell. Smoke was discovered ascending from the down stairs rooms by the occupants of the upper floors and panic stricken they dashed for the hall stairs scantily clad only to find their exit cut off by flames which shot up the stairway.

A key to an alarm box was secured from John Goodwin's house and a neighbor turned in the alarm. In the meantime the people imprisoned in the rooms above gathered in the front room and heaped shoes in the street to secure a ladder. When the firemen arrived the last person was being removed and Chief Stahl directed that the first stream be turned on the adjoining house owned and occupied by Mrs. John Carey, colored. The flames were already communicating with the walls of this house and were licking the shingles. Prompt action doubtless saved this building from being destroyed or damaged.

The loss will probably amount to $1,200, only partially covered by insurance. A lamp exploding in the rooms below is said to have caused the fire. Benjamin Butler in trying to save some of his personal belongings was severley burned about the face and hands.

Patrolman Messler saw the lurid reflection in the sky from his beat on East Second street and started to turn in an alarm from box 15 at the corner of Second and Washington streets. He had broken the glass to secure the key when he heard the alarm ringing in North Plainfield. He thought that the reflection was from a fire on East Front street.

OLD NASSAU'S SONS TO DINE

PRINCETON CLUB OF UNION COUNTY TO MEET AT ELIZABETH.

The executive committee of the Princeton Club of Union county at a meeting at the home of Dr. William H. Murray, has arranged for a dinner the club to be held in Elizabeth on of the evening of the 24th of March. The dinner of this club of enthusiastic sons of Old Nassau are famous for their jollity, good fellowship and unbounded enthusiasm, and have been held uninterruptedly for the past eight or ten years. All men residents in Union county who are graduates of or have been students at Princeton are eligible to membership in the club, and are urged to attend the dinner.

BOWLING SCHEDULE.

Six Matches Yet to be Rolled Before The Daily Press Trophy is Won.

The Daily Press Bowling Dragon tournament will be continued on Thursday night, February 25, at which time Cranford Casino will roll Roselle Casino on the alleys of the latter. The following night, February 26, the Parks will roll at Westfield. The matches will conclude the series for February. There remain six matches to roll and it is believed that Westfield will win out. However, Roselle has a possible chance, providing the team wins the majority of the nine matches it has yet to roll and Westfield drops a few. There is no chance of the Parks finishing a winner, much to the regret of their admirers, but they have made a strong effort. It is hoped that they will make a gallant finish.

HONOR THE MEMORY OF FRANCES WILLARD

Plainfield W. C. T. U. Held Special Meeting at Mrs. Geo. H. Babcock's Home.

SKETCHED HER CAREER

MEMBERS CONTRIBUTED LIBERALLY TO THANK-OFFERING.

Miss Cornelia Miller Sang Miss Willard's Solo, "On Heights of Power"—Mrs. Maxson Read a Biographical Story.

A largely-attended parlor meeting was held Wednesday, Feb. 17, at the home of Mrs. George H. Babcock, of West Eighth street, under the auspices of the local Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The meeting was in the nature of a memorial and thank-offering to Miss Frances E. Willard, the late president of the National body of the order, the proceeds being used in the work of organization. Similar meetings were held throughout the world yesterday by all Unions.

The programme opened with a soprano solo, "On Heights of Power," composed by Frances E. Willard, by Miss Cornelia Miller, followed with the reading of Tennyson's poem, "Merlin and the Gleam," by Mrs. J. Everett Kimball. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, county superintendent, read a selection, "Miss Willard's Optism," written by Mrs. Helen M. Barker, National treasurer of the W. C. T. U.

A biographical sketch of Miss Willard, written by Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, National president of the W. C. T. U., was read by Mrs. H. M. Maxson. Mrs. Maxson also read "The Flower of Temperance Chivalry," written by Mrs. M. D. Fry, National corresponding secretary of the Union.

After the programme there was a social hour and refreshments were served. The thank offering was gratifying to the Union, there being a liberal response.

CATHOLIC CHURCH IN N. J.

VOLUME BY VERY REV. J. M. FLYNN, OF MORRISTOWN, HAS BEEN PUBLISHED.

The book "The Catholic Church in New Jersey," by Very Rev. Joseph M. Flynn, rector of the Church of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Morristown, has just come from the press. The work is one that has been awaited with anticipation, and a very general interest will be taken in it.

The sizable volume contains nearly 700 pages, and is fully illustrated. The binding is in blue and gold. In the upper left hand corner of the front cover is the seal of Archbishop Bayley, and in the other corners are the seals of Archbishop Corrigan, Bishop Wigger and Bishop O'Connor, the seal of Seton Hall having a position a little below the cover's centre. The seal of the State of New Jersey is impressed on the reverse cover.

The opening pages are devoted to "The Colonial Period," this part of the historical review being followed by sections on "The Revolutionary Period," and "The Formative Period."

Then come sketches of the individual parishes and of eminent churchmen, with accounts interspersed of events of importance to the Catholics of the State. A valuable feature of the work is the list, printed in the appendix, of names of "secular priests who have labored in the diocese of Newark, some of whom were not incardinated, from its foundation to the present." In the appendix, is given, also, the portion relating to New Jersey of the baptismal records of Rev. Ferdinand Farmer. The work is completely indexed. The book is published at Morristown.

CLASS ENTERTAINMENT

Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-School Members Guests of Teacher.

Class 30, of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school celebrated the second anniversary of its organization Thursday at the home of the teacher, Horace J. Martin, at 263 East Front street. Addresses were made by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, and by the superintendent, F. E. Smith. Fifty people were present. Music, both instrumental and vocal, and games, were the principal features of the evening. Elmer Wheeler rendered flute selections. Mrs. Holmes read, the Spear brothers gave renditions on the piano and violin, and Miss Bessie and Horace J. Martin sang. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Elmer Wheeler and Mrs. William Lindsay.

THE CROWN PRINCE

Short Sketch of the Heir Apparent of the German Empire.

One of the Most Interesting Young Men of Europe—Resembles His Distinguished Father in Many Ways.

A great inheritance like the German imperial crown is apt to weigh a trifle heavy on youthful shoulders. The German crown prince was only six years old when he became heir apparent, and from that time the idea of his future duties and responsibilities was always kept before him till the boy became serious beyond his years. Now, as a young man of nearly 22, he shows the marks of his rigid education, being of a quiet and thoughtful disposition and still somewhat shy.

With a father of such striking personality as Emperor William, the prince is naturally somewhat in the background, but it is not from weakness of character. The emperor has always made a great companion of his eldest boy, and father and son are much alike in many ways—the stern sense of duty, military tastes and love of sport, for instance.

As the future head of a soldier nation, Prince William was encouraged in things military from his very cradle, tradition relating that at 2½ he insisted on sleeping with a miniture rifle on his arm. He was a delicate, slight boy, and made as tiny soldier indeed when he entered the Prussian foot guards at the age of ten, according to the custom of German princes. With his next brother, Eitel Fritz, the crown prince worked very hard, first at home in Potsdam, and then at the college at Plon, in Schleswig-Holstein. On finishing his course there, the prince went to Bonn, where he thoroughly enjoyed university life, and matriculated with due honors.

It was whilst he was at Bonn that he was besieged one day by a deputation of schoolgirls, who begged postcards for him to sign. After the prince had attained his majority—celebrated with much ceremony at Berlin—he came out into the world by visiting foreign courts.

The prince had often been in England, where he was much liked by his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and when over there the summer after her death he was invested by King Edward with the order of the garter.

Last spring the prince and his brother, Prince Eitel, made a tour in the east, and came home by Rome, having an audience of the late Pope. Leo XIII. spoke of the young prince as the pambino pia grande—the eldest little boy, much to the brother's amusement. Now the prince has settled down to military duty in Potsdam with his guards' regiment.

The crown prince shows his English origin by his love of outdoor life. He is a crack rider, and has competed in several military races—hardly altogether to his father's satisfaction, as the emperor detests horse racing. But shooting is his favorite pursuit—not in big court drives, but a quiet day's sport with only a forester in attendance. The prince has been very successful in deer stalking, and displays the utmost patience in following his quarry.

At home he proves his talent as a pianist, for all the princes have been taught some musical instrument, and the emperor and empress are very fond of quiet family musical evenings at Potsdam. The question of the day is: "Who will the crown prince marry?" He is a little susceptible, but the choice of a wife is as yet in the balance.

The Speaker.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon confesses to his personal friends that he sometimes chafes under the restrictions of his office as speaker of the house of representatives. Way down deep in his heart he feels that he would sometimes be easier in a rough and tumble debate on the floor than in the speaker's chair struggling to wield the gavel with solemn dignity and in strict accordance with parliamentary law. "If I could use both hands in presiding over this house," he remarked in all earnestness, "I might handle this speakership job with more satisfaction to myself and in a manner more acceptable to my brethren on the floor. It's no use, I can't do myself justice in talking when I am compelled by custom to keep my hands still. I am ill at ease when I try to strike a dignified attitude with one hand resting on the book of rules and the other leaning on the gavel. I give more thought to controlling my hands than I do to what I am trying to say."

Bad Advice.

"Did you let papa win from you at poker the way I told you to?"

"Yes; and he said a man that played such a fool game should never marry his daughter.—Chicago American.

JONES AT BELLEVUE.

Warning Against Pride That Comes from New York.

Different Luck of Two Hospital Patients—One Had a Pull Which Was Utilized by a Hobo Who Knew a Good Thing.

It was the third time that Jones had been "ill" this winter, and the patience of his friends had been almost exhausted. At all events, they decided that the same financial outlay would not be necessary in this instance, as in the others.

Jones needed hospital treatment, says the New York Sun, and it was decided that he had better go to Bellevue. There was greater comfort in the private hospitals; but there was also greater expense. So he went to Bellevue for the three days it usually took to bring him around.

There were other excellent reasons why this institution should be selected. One of the youthful physicians on the staff was his friend, and might be expected to look out for Jones.

So Jones found himself in a ward along with some fellow sufferers who could all attribute their troubles to the same cause. After he had lain in some discomfort on his narrow bed, an orderly came up to him.

"Is your name Jones?" he inquired, with the lack of sympathy usually shown to invalids of this class. "H. C. Jones?"

The patient shuddered until the iron got rattled on its unsteady pins.

"It is possible," he thought in terror, "that I am known to be in this place?"

Then he answered:

"No," he said. "My name is Brown."

The orderly moved to the next bed. "Is your name Jones?" he asked of its frowsy occupant.

The answer was in the affirmative and the effect was magical. The tone of the orderly changed immediately. It grew gentle and obsequious.

More marked was his changed treatment of the patient. All that sympathetic solicitude could suggest was done for him.

The first Jones seemed to suffer in exact ratio to the attentions bestowed on the other man. Once he tried to make himself more comfortable by changing his position.

"IS YOUR NAME JONES?"

"Lay still there!" came from the orderly, who was handing an orange to his pampered patient while the other's lips were parching with thirst. "Lay still, I tell you."

Ice tinkled coolingly in the mineral water frequently served to the astonished hobo who went through the list of luxuries he liked best. He was loath to leave such a paradise and lingered until the other Jones had recovered his health and departed. He was allowed to remain only through the same influence that had so thoughtfully contributed to his comfort.

"Well, the doc treated you all right, didn't he?" asked his best friend when the real Jones had left the hospital behind him.

"Did nothing at all for me," was the answer, "but showered attentions on a fellow in the next bed, and he was a bum at that. Gave him everything he wanted and wouldn't even let me sit up."

"Did he know who you were?"

"Of course not," was the answer; "although the orderly found out my real name in one way or another and asked me if I was Jones. I denied it, of course."

Then for the first time he understood how all the kindness and favors withheld for him had gone to the other Jones.

Salem's Old Witch House.

The Witch house, an ancient building, which is still regarded with great interest and awe at Salem, Mass., is said to be the oldest building in that part of the country, the reputed date of its construction being 1631. Modern additions from time to time have almost changed its identity. The Witch house is where people suspected of practicing the black art were tried. The original building had peaked gables and was of a very ancient style of architecture. The present structure is hardly more than a reminiscence.

Has Hundreds of Rings.

Queen Christina of Spain has very pretty hands, and she is aware of their beauty. Her various colored sets of her jewelry are about 200 rings. To display her nice hands she makes a point of wearing all her rings in turn, changing them every time she changes her dress, which she does as frequently as four or five times a day.

Where Smiling Is Dangerous.

The China sea and the Bay of Fundy are said to be the two roughest seas in the world.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

DRAKE JOINS WILKES POST

HAPPY CULMINATION OF FAMOUS FLAG EPISODE IN WHICH HE FIGURED.

General J. Madison Drake has become a member of Aaron Wilkes Post, No. 23, G. A. R., of Trenton. The entire post turned out to the ceremony and among those present was Col. E. C. Stahl, past department commander of New Jersey. A number of speeches were made and the meeting wound up with a banquet. This culminated the famous flag episode. General Drake was, previous to the Civil War, a resident of Trenton and at the outbreak of the Rebellion was an alderman and publisher at the State capital. After the war he removed to Elizabeth. His election in Wilkes Post had to be made under a suspension of rules and a special dispensation. The post has requested him to tell the story of the war at a public meeting to be held in Trenton in the near future.

BUILDING INSPECTOR'S ORDER

T. O. DOANE DIRECTS A CHANGE MUST BE MADE TO DOORS OF CHURCHES.

In order that all public buildings may conform more strictly to the city building ordinances and minimize the risk in case of fire, Building Inspector T. O. Doane has given orders that the main doors in all churches, as well as other public buildings, must be hung so as to swing outward, instead of in, as is the case at present in most buildings. Strange as it may seem, nearly every church edifice in the city has been affected by this order and the work of changing the doors will be general.

Chief Doane argues that in case of fire or any excitement that would cause a hasty exit of a great crowd of people, the main exit doors should swing out, making it less possible for accidents to occur. In every case where the order has been given there has been perfect willingness to comply, and the work will begin at once.

A Happy City Engineer.

City Engineer H. C. VanEmburgh is wearing the-smile-that-won't-come-off today and his friends are slapping him on the back. You see it is all because there's a bright little girl down at his home on Richmond street. She tips the scales at nine and a half pounds, but her papa says she's worth her weight in gold.

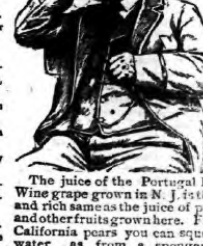
The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn, before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is rich and rich sameas the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—its juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

UNANIMOUS INVITATION EXTENDED DR. EARP

Grace M. E. Congregation Asks That Present Incumbent be Returned.

IS DOING A GOOD WORK

THE REPORTS READ AT THE QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

Thirty-Two Accessions to Membership—Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, Presiding Elder of Elizabeth District, in the Chair.

Interesting reports of the year's work at the Grace M. E. church in North Plainfield were read at the quarterly conference in the church parlors Feb. 17. The congregation unanimously invited the pastor to return for another year. Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, the presiding elder, was urged to prevail upon the Bishop to grant their request to allow Dr. Earp to remain for another term.

John Valiant, superintendent of the Sunday-school, read an interesting report of the Sunday-school work of the year in which it was stated that the work being done there was bringing good results. Dykman Winkler, president of the Epworth League, reported the society in a good condition financially and spiritually and E. W. Winkler reported for the trustees of the church.

Rev. Dr. Carroll made his annual report as local preacher which was followed by the pastor's report, in which he said there had been thirty-two accessions to the church membership during the year. Various committees were appointed for the year.

Grace church has shown a wonderful growth during the pastorate of Dr. Earp and his energy and fine personality have made for him many friends. That his work has been appreciated is shown by the fact that his people want him to remain with them another year.

FINGERHUTS DISPOSSESSED

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS WHICH RECALL A SIMILAR ONE IN WASHINGTONVILLE.

Theodore Fingerhut and his wife, whom Plainfielders will recall in connection with the Roerick shooting about half a dozen years ago, have again been legally dispossessed of their home; but this time there will be no armed posse sent to oust them and no resistance of the landlord's demands. Mr. and Mrs. Fingerhut are living on a farm in Union village, of which the owner is Stephen Sturges, a New York lawyer. The suit for possession of premises was brought in Justice Smalley's court in the borough.

The dispossessed tenants have accepted their new misfortune resignedly. They have complied with all the demands of the court and signified their intention of leaving the house at any time desired. Owing to the extreme cold weather, Mr. Sturges authorized Constable W. N. Pangborn, who served the papers, to give the tenants an extra week of grace.

At the time of the Roerick affair, Mr. and Mrs. Fingerhut lived on the Allen farm near what was then Washingtonville. Landlord Roerick, who was a jeweler of New York, taking with him Lawyer Clark and a gang of men, all armed, went to the farm prepared to eject the tenants by force. They found Mrs. Fingerhut, who was a foreigner ignorant of law, alone, and she answered their threatening appearance and violent demands by shooting Roerick dead. In the trial that followed, Mrs. Fingerhut was given six months imprisonment and a $500 fine which was afterwards remitted by the Board of Pardons.

Another Big Building.

Henry VanName, who occupies property on East Front street recently purchased by Dr. Albert Pittis of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, has received notice to vacate by a certain time. Mr. VanName owns the building he occupies and he will open another location. It is the intention of Dr. Pittis to erect a modern building on the property in the spring. During the past few years Dr. Pittis has acquired considerable property on East Front street, including the building occupied by M. C. VanArsdale, Vali & Gardner and Henry Mehrten.

WILLIAM G. BESLER SPEAKS ON RAILROADING

Vice President of the Central System Tells of the Practical Operation of a Road.

DEVELOPMENT OF MEN

EMPLOYES OF CENTRAL HAVE IMPROVED MORALLY HE SAYS.

Requirements for Promotions — Drunkenness a Cause for Immediate Dismissal—Duties of the General Manager.

A largely attended meeting of the men's club of the First Presyterian church Thursday was addressed by W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield, vice president and general manager of the Central Railroad.

Mr. Besler began by illustrating the purpose of a railroad which is to furnish transportation for persons and things. He mentioned some of the things expected and required of employes. He spoke of the general moral improvement which had taken place among the employes of the Central in recent years. This he attributed in part to better schools and Y. M. C. A. work, but more largely to the men themselves.

All applicants for positions on the road, it was explained, must be sound in morals, mind and body. All employes are regarded in the line of promotion according to their ability and merit, men older in service being preferred, with other things equal.

There are certain offenses, said Mr. Besler, for which the penalty is sure and immediate dismissal and most prominent among them is drunkenness. No excuse for intoxication is accepted and the guilty employe is instantly discharged.

The manifold and varied duties of a manager of a railroad were described. It was said that the manager who undertakes to do everything himself makes a stupendous failure. As to applicants for positions in his office, the manager has usually to advise candidates to seek technical and practical knowledge of some sort in some one of the many branches of railroad work.

Mr. Besler sketched the development of the railroad historically. He said that of 231,774 miles of tracks in the United States, Canada and Mexico, 215,734 or 93 per cent. are operated in the United States. He explained the adoption of a standard time at the general time convention in 1883, the number of standards being reduced from fifty-three to four. He discussed the American Railroad Association and the International Railroad Congress which will convene in Washington, D. C., in May, 1905.

General passenger traffic, the speaker said, is extremely unprofitable. There are only two railroads in the country which claim a profit from passenger traffic, and the probability in these cases is that the profit may be explained by the peculiar system of bookkeeping in vogue. The many items of expense, care of cars, stations, baggage, etc., were mentioned in illustration, besides actual running expenses of the trains. Each car costs $13 to $15 for every 1000 miles it travels.

Mr. Besler referred to the automatic block signal system and said that the system of the Central Railroad is considered among the best if not the foremost in the country. He described some of his own experiences in meeting railroad emergencies including train robberies.

At the conclusion of Mr. Besler's talk, refreshments were served. A musical programme included vocal solos by William Jeffery and R. Wilson Derby.

VAN STRUCK BRIDGE.

John Winnenreid Sustains a Loss by the Accident.

In driving under the Clinton avenue bridge Wednesday morning, the top of a van driven and owned by John Winnenreid hit the structure and was badly damaged. The harness was broken. Mr. Winnenreid, it is said, is contemplating starting a suit for damages against the city authorities, who, he claims, are obliged by law to make the bridges in the city twelve feet from the ground. This law he claims, in the case of the Clinton avenue bridge was not complied with.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS HAD A MERRY TIME

Trinity Reformed Society o Little Folks Rendered a Programme of Merit.

CHILDREN ARRANGED IT

VIOLET VAN WINKLE MADE THE ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Vocal and Instrumental Music and Recitations—Candy Table a Feature—Those Who Participated in the Affair.

Between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon the members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held a social in the Sunday-school rooms, the principal features of which were recitations, songs and instrumental music. The young people spent a very pleasant afternoon. The arrangements were wholly in charge of the children, and the chairmen of the various committees having arranged the programme.

Violet VanWinkle, the president of the society, made an address of welcome, and then this programme was presented: Recitations, Harold Schenck and Rosmond Rogers; duet, Ella Cole and Helen Smith; recitation, Harold Storr; solo, Florence Bennett; recitation, Maude Macafee; piano solo, Nettie Robinson; chorus, "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton," Ida Tier. Violet VanWinkle, Ethel Van Winkle, Beulah VanWinkle, Pansy Luckey, Edith Leek, Ida VanArsdale and Ethel Lorton, pianist.

Ida VanArsdale recited "Your Missions" in a very clever manner. The balance of the programme was: Man*dolin selection, Elsie Tier; recitations,* Ernest Stevens, Adelaide Cole, Violet VanWinkle; solo, Pansy Luckey; recitation, Millard Macafee; piano selection, Ernest Stevens; address, Arthur Gaskell; dialogue, Raymond Stevens and Madelaide Straiter; duet, Clarence and Arthur Hoffman; conundrums, Edson and William Day; solo, Paul Busby; recitation, "Charge of the Light Brigade." Beulah VanWinkle; piano solo, Melville Roseberry; solo, "Dear Homeland," Florence Bennett; mandolin solo, Russell Hoagland; solo, Raymond Stevens; dialogue, "Three Little Mothers," Mildred Premier, Ethel Vail and Lulu Trewin.

In one corner of the big Sunday-school room the little workers arranged a candy table which was in charge of Beulah VanWinkle and Ida VanArsdale.

The success of the social is due largely to the efforts of the members of the different committees who have been preparing for the event for several weeks. They are: Russell Hoagland, Violet VanWinkle, Ethel VanWinkle, Beulah VanWinkle, Ethel Lorton, Harold Schenck, Cornelius Schenck, Edith Leek, Ida VanArsdale and Bessie Leighton.

DUNELLENITES SELECT PASTOR

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CONGREGATION CALL REV. MR. CASSELBERRY.

The members of the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, at a meeting held Wednesday night, voted to extend a unanimous call to Rev. Willis Winfield Casselberry, of Haddonfield, N. J., to become the pastor of the church. A committee was appointed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, moderator, to wait on Mr. Casselberry and inform him of the call. While it is known definitely whether he will accept, it is believed that he will.

Mr. Casselberry was born at Spring City, Pa. He was graduated from Princeton University in the class of '91, and from the Seminary in the class of '94. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of West Jersey and his first charge was at Haddonfield, where he has been ever since. It is understood that his work there has been very successful.

Ragtime Barred.

After extended deliberation and numerous conferences, the officials of the St. Louis Exposition have decided against the ragtime song, or even the ragtime music without words to accompany it. The musical director of the Exposition, and the chairman of the musical programme, have issued an edict that all songs, either in the State pavilions, Festival Hall, or along the Pike, shall be strictly classical and modern if possible, but all element of the ragtime music hall style of singing shall be eliminated.—Collier's Weekly.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 28—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Heroes and other lessons from Christ.—Acts xiv, 19-28.

There is no Christian mission field that has not its stories of self denial and heroism to tell. These characteristics are seen in the apostle Paul upon his first great missionary journey, as illustrated in the passage before us. Paul is at Lystra and has been received with favor for his work's sake. But enemies come from Antioch and Iconium. The people are stirred up against the apostle. They stone him and carry him out of the city, supposing him to be dead. But he was not so, and as the disciples stood about him he arose, went back into the city and thence to Derbe, continuing to preach the gospel. Is not this heroism? And yet it is but the story that may be told of every missionary field.

Turn from Asia Minor to China and to modern missions, and you will find this assuredly true. I have on the wall of my study a picture containing fifty-five or more comparatively young people, two ladies and three men. I look at them now. Their faces are handsome, intelligent and cheerful in appearance. Their every expression shows culture and refinement. Beneath that little group I read these words: "Martyred Missionaries of Pantingfu, China, June 30, 1900."

June 30, 1900! Over 1,800 years since Paul was supposedly martyred at Lystra, yet still the work of martyrdom goes on in the world to Christ, and without going further this group of martyrs may teach us "heroism and other lessons from China." The names of these missionaries are Rev. F. E. Simcox and wife, Dr. C. V. Hodge and wife and Dr. George W. Taylor.

1. Missions in China teach heroi m, and nowhere is this better illustrated than in our group of martyrs. T knew of the Boxer movement and their danger, yet they heroically st at their post of duty. When their m sion house was attacked Mr. Sim had firearms, with which he mi have caused great destruction am his persecutors, but he threw it w down, confiding in the Lord. The he was set on fire, and there they stood, these five heroes and their children, died as heroically as any martyrs ever died for Christ. The last seen of th m was Mr. Simcox holding the hand of his little child as the flames leaped all about them. Such examples should spur us all to Christian heroism. We should dare to do our duty no matter what may be the difficulties or dangers that surround us.

> Where duty calls or danger,
> Be never wanting there.

2. Missions in China teach lessons of sacrifice and self denial. These young people were all from Pennsylvania. Dr. and Mrs. Hodge were Philadelphians and members of the Presbyterian church of Philadelphia families. They all left homes of comfort—yea, even of luxury—to go to China to preach the gospel and heal the sick for Christ's sake. None but those who go knows what it costs to leave home and country and to go to a foreign mission field, where you are cut off from all familiar associations except with the little band of people at the mission station. We speak of our self denial for Christ, but what is it in comparison to the sacrifices of those who leave all for Him and risk all for Him? Let us think of the Hodges and Simcoxes occasionally and ask ourselves, What have we done for Christ in comparison to those who have died for Him in distant lands with no human eye to pity and no human hand to save?

3. Missions in China teach lessons of loyalty. This is beautifully illustrated in our little group of martyrs. Dr. Taylor was in the mission house at Pantingfu when the danger became most imminent. He had gone away on a business trip, but had promised to return. But before returning he heard of the danger that threatened his friends. Other friends pleaded with him not to return, but he listened not to their entreaties, but went back to keep his promise and to face life or death with his associates, as the case might be. What a story of loyalty and love it should teach us to be loyal to our friends, and especially to our greatest friend, the Master Himself!

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 8, 17-19; Isa. vi, 1-8; xxxv, 1-10; Matt. x, 16-33; Luke x, 1-12; xxiv, 45-48; Acts i, 1-11; xv, 26; Rom. x, 14, 15; II Cor. xi, 18-33.

He's My Brother.

A gentleman once met a little girl carrying in her arms a sturdy little baby brother and inquired if the burden was not somewhat heavy. "Why, he's my brother; he's not heavy," was the simple but beautiful reply. How love lightens burdens, and how much easier all life is when lived in the spirit of love.

Pennsylvania State Song.

[Tune—"Trust and Obey."]

Pennsylvania for God!
By the help of the Lord
We will reach every village and home,
For the Master says, "Go!"
And His love fills us so
That we gladly will herald His "Come!"

CHORUS.

Come to the Lord!
Oh, believe in His word,
And the Saviour will cleanse you
From all sin by His blood.

To the rich and the poor
Christ has opened the door,
And He sends us to tell them the way.
With a heart full of joy
Tell each girl and each boy
That the Saviour will save them today.

Then, with Christ in the lead,
To His voice giving heed,
We will fight till we conquer the foe.
So we'll all send a hand,
And together we'll stand
True to "Christ and the Church" here below.

STAGE LOVE MAKING.

Marie Cahill Is Opposed to Enthusiastic Osculation.

Thinks It Detracts from Sacredness of the Food Salutation and Believes That Kisses Should Mean Something.

Miss Marie Cahill, the star of "Nancy Brown," does not believe in ardent stage kissing. She has an individual viewpoint on footlight morality that is interesting and bans enthusiastic osculation. The clever comedienne contends that respectability is the first essential of true stage success and she does not believe that savage love-making is necessary before an American audience.

"There are only three men in the world," says Miss Cahill, in the Chicago Chronicle, "who have the right to really kiss a woman—her husband, her father and her brother. I think the stage wooing of some actors is entirely too ardent, and as kissing is one of the most sacred forms of salutation it is bad taste, from my viewpoint, at least, to degrade by overdoing it.

"I do not think the American people are a demonstrative race. It is more natural for us to feel our affection than to express it in an exaggerated way. By the same token I believe this strong habit of repressing our feelings is one of the grandest traits of the people of this country.

"From what I have heard Miss Anglin's portrayal of Camille made a deep impression on Americans and they say her most effective scenes were distinguished by the very intensity of her repression. These terms may seem a bit paradoxical, but I mean that it is sometimes possible for an actress to be more impressive before her audience more by what she feels than what she says. Pantomime is frequently stronger than oral expression.

"Why should a player indulge in osculatory madness before the type of audience which frequents the Garrick, I ask her? The occupants of the house in all likelihood do not turn their domestic kissing into violent exercise, so it seems unnatural for a player to do so on the stage.

"There is no human virtue greater than self-control, and because they exercise this quality more than the men

MISS MARIE CAHILL.
(Noted Actress Who Is Opposed to Osculation on the Stage.)

of any other country I think American men are the manliest in the world. The quietest men are usually the greatest heroes. The most determined men are usually the most courageous. It is not the fellow who is continually gesticulating and tearing his hair and declaiming in a loud manner who may be depended upon in a crisis, but the cool, calm, manly things who has little to say and means a great deal more than he says.

"We have all met the boastful, strutting fellow, who is continually shouting to all the world the great things he intends to do. He usually does nothing. Now, because this quality is an inherent part of American character, I think it unnecessary to make passionate love before an American audience.

"They understand.

"One continually hears actors and managers decrying the intelligence of the general public. They say 'the people out front are thick. You must exaggerate. You must drive your words and your meaning into their skulls with a sledge hammer,' and lots more of such arrant rot.

"I never held such an opinion. People do not come to a theater and pay their money to find fault. They come to be amused. They are not hypocritical and wish the player to do well. Whenever the audience does not seem amused by my work I know there is something the matter with me or the lines I am speaking and I try to discover wherein the trouble lies and how to correct it.

"It's all very well to delude one's self with the idea that the audience is not intelligent and cannot understand, but it is ordinarily the failure who resorts to such absurd self-satisfying arguments. Indeed, you will usually find it is the bad actor who has the bad audience. The bad only diagnose his own work from a viewpoint outside and then go he would find that he is the stupid person.

"In my opinion the quiet school of acting is the thing—the calm, natural style of diction which is just as convincing as the gunpowder school of declamation. Passionate kissing is not at all necessary to accentuate a love scene before an American audience. There are more ways than by exaggerated osculation to express one's affection. It might be all very well in the demonstrative Latin countries, but Americans are not a kissing race."

Irish Is a Happy Race.

The average of suicides is less in Ireland than in any other country in the world.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 28—"Princely Men in the Heavenly Kingdom."—Acts xiii, 1-4.

The world is vastly changed by some men, and they not always the ones most prominent and best known among those of their own times. Some cities come to stand for certain facts also, so that the mention of their names is equivalent to the statement of a principle. Such a city is Antioch. Such men were Barnabas of Cyprus, Simon and Lucius of Cyrene and Saul of Tarsus. They were of great stature in soul, whatever they may have been in body.

Was this Simon Niger, the one on whom the cross was laid as Jesus sunk under its weight on the way to Calvary? If so, and it seems likely to have been so, then he had good cause to remember Christ and to become a prophet as well as cross bearer. Barnabas was a princely spirit among the early disciples. Only less influential than the very apostles themselves, he was leader in all generous enterprises and the first to find out how to relieve the poor disciples in Jerusalem by sale of his own private property. He was the discoverer of a St. Paul in Saul of Tarsus. He alone of all in Jerusalem had confidence in his integrity and in the genuineness of his conversion when he returned from Damascus to Jerusalem. And when the work in Antioch became extended and the interest of the gentiles required a master mind to aid then Barnabas went to Tarsus after Saul. This same Barnabas is also leader in the first missionary tour ever voluntarily undertaken and deliberately planned. What a large souled man he is in all his doings! Even when John Mark deserted in the midst of dangers he did not judge the young fellow harshly, but on the very next trip insists that he shall go again with him. When the more rigid Paul cannot endure such cowardice and will in no way consent Barnabas goes straight ahead and takes Mark with him to Cyprus and *lets Paul go his own way. And Bar*nabas was right. He was a valuable helper whom Paul was glad to welcome in after years as beloved companion in toil.

With all his peculiarities and angularities where will you find a more princely man than this same Paul? More scholarly than any other man in the early church, saturated with the learning of the Jewish rabbis, but overmastered by the logic of Stephen, receiving at Damascus an experience profoundly moving all his nature and completely shifting his viewpoint and altering all the current of his life, he came to be the great evangelist to the gentiles. His influence changed the face of the world. His writings have determined the teaching of the Christian church in all subsequent ages. His views and opinions have become the doctrines of the church to such an extent that lately it has been suspected that some interpretations put upon them are wrong. Yet the unsurpassing glory of the truth as taught by Christ Himself.

No man of whom the world has preserved memory was ever more completely devoted to another than was Paul to Jesus Christ. Whatever others may think of Jesus, it is clear that Paul gave Him the place of God. Whatever others may think of the resurrection of Jesus and His power to save, Paul believed He had risen and was alive and would in the fullness of time raise all His true followers *in His own blessed likeness and bring to con*summation this world age in the kingdom of God the Father.

Other missionary heroes the church has had and still has of whom it is well that we should learn, but these first missionaries of Antioch lead the van of princely men.

Trust God.

Providence hath a thousand keys to open a thousand doors for the deliverance of His own when it has come to the greatest extremity. Let us be faithful and care for our own part, which is to do and suffer for Him, and lay Christ's part on Himself and leave it there. Duties are ours; events are the Lord's. When we have faith goeth to meddle with events and to hold a court, if I may so speak, upon God's providence and beginneth to say, "How wilt Thou do this or that?" we lose God. We have nothing to do there. It is our part to let the Almighty exercise His own office and steer His own helm.—Samuel Rutherford.

Compromises.

Men and women who compromise too much become insincere and untrustworthy. These who do not compromise enough are stubborn, obstructive and useless. Those who compromise just enough, at the right point and the right time, become good husbands and wives, large hearted fathers and mothers and useful members of society.—Christian Register.

Word and Work.

Word and work—the two W's. You will soon get spiritually gorged if it is all word and no work, and you will soon be without power if it is all work and no word. If you want to be healthy Christians, there must be both word and work.—Moody.

Life and Death.

We cannot solve the mystery
Which o'er each pathway lies.
Yet this is given each reverent soul
To know—our God is wise!

Life's mysteries may never be
By sages understood,
Yet it is given the little child
To know our God is good!

Why death despoils the happy home,
While all around are those
To whom its rests were welcome gift,
Our Father only knows!

Yes, He doth know and He doth rule
O'er sin and woe and strife,
And He can give the crown of death
Who gave the joy of life!
—Universalist Leader.

AGRICULTURISTS IN SESSION

FARMERS DISCUSS THE EFFECT OF THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

The Union County Agricultural Association met Thursday afternoon at the home of E. P. Beebe, East Grand street, Elizabeth, with J. L. Headley, president, in the chair, and F. E. Woodruff, secretary, in his position. There was a large attendance, including some visitors. Three new members were elected. The association appears to be having a new lease of life as much interest is being taken in its meetings and in the subjects discussed. William Henry Rogers, of Watchung, a member of the State Board of Agriculture, was present and joined in the general discussion.

"Spraying for San Jose scales," was the principal subject introduced at the meeting and after a lengthy discussion of the various methods for spraying and the kind of a spray used, it was decided that as the subject is such an important one, to continue the discussion at the next meeting to be held on Thursday, March 3, at the same place.

Mr. Sperry, an agriculturalist of Cumberland County, Pa., was present at the meeting and he gave an interesting talk on fruits. He spoke of the robin, declaring himself in favor of the bird. He claims that the robin is an insectivorous bird, which does much good. He condemned the action of the Legislature in adopting measures to kill the robin, claiming that such work is cruel and unwarranted. Other members took exception to Mr. Sperry's remarks concerning the robin, claiming that all the bird does is to eat *worms and fruits. A ma*jority of the members, however, favored the action of the Legislature.

TOLD OF WORK IN THE WEST

FORMER MISSIONARY MADE ADDRESS BEFORE CONGREGATIONAL ASSN.

A missionary tea held under the auspices of the Women's Home Missionary Association of the Congregational church, Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, of 452 West Eighth street, attracted a large number of members and friends of the organization.

After the transaction of a little routine business, including the presentation of the monthly reports of the secretary and treasurer, Mr. Baird, of New York, a returned missionary from North Dakota, was introduced, and for over an hour he held the closest attention of his audience.

The minister told of the encouraging and discouraging features of the work in the far west, yet with it all he said that the task is progressing most satisfactorily and converts are being received into the church steadily. He praised the Congregational church for the work done in the home mission fields, declaring that it was the pioneer denomination in that work in the United States. Incidently he related many interesting incidents in connection with the work of the missionaries. The speaker was a missionary in North Dakota for many years, but now holds a clerical position for the denomination in New York.

After the address tea was served and a social hour enjoyed. Miss Kirkner and Miss Louise Jenkins poured in the dining room, and they were assisted by Miss Wadsworth and Miss Ethel Molntosh.

A feature of the programme was two soprano solos by Miss Etta Raybert.

Plainfield Tramp ?

Charles Bowman, the tramp whose feet were frost bitten so badly that he was obliged to stay at the asylum three days under care of Dr. J. E. Ferry, said that his home was at Plainfield, N. J., and that he came to Providence to seek employment but failed. On his way back he slept in a barn, where both feet were frozen. Keeper Osborne has instituted a new rule at the asylum, requiring every tramp who applies for lodging to saw wood at the wood pile two hours before eating his breakfast. "Hoboes please take notice," no more free luncheons.—Wakefield notes in Westerly, R. I., Sun.

DISAGREEMENT OF JURY IN THE CRUDUP CASE

Colored Pastor Will be Tried Again on Charges Preferred by Member of Congregation.

CHARGE A SERIOUS ONE

JURY STOOD ELEVEN FOR CONVICTION AND ONE FOR ACQUITTAL.

Letter Signed by Woman Figured in Case—Attempt to Prove An Alibi—Claim of Duress Made —Jury Out All Night.

The jury in the trial of Rev. Essex J. Crudup, pastor of the Filmore Avenue Baptist church, who was charged with immoral conduct with Regetta E. Randolph on April 7 last, has disagreed. The case was given to the jury by Judge Benj. A. Vail, of the Court of Quarter Sessions, at Elizabeth, at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and was discharged the next morning at 10:15 o'clock. It was reported that the vote stood eleven for acquittal and one for conviction. The disagreement means a new trial.

As witness for the State, Richard Randolph, Martha Randolph and Mary Randolph were called yesterday and gave direct testimony as to the pastor's conduct on the night in question. For the defense, Robert Randolph and Ella Randolph, Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Thomas testified that Crudup was at a prayer meeting April 7, and counsel for the defense attempted to prove an alibi. Dr. O. C. Anderson, called by the defense, testified to making a call at Crudup's home to treat a sick child but admitted on cross-examination that it was on the night of the 6th instead of the 7th of April.

A letter signed by Miss Regetta Randolph, in which she characterized as untrue certain allegations of improper conduct on the part of her father, Richard Randolph, was produced, as was an affidavit signed by her before Justice Huff and witnessed by John Manley which stated that before her preliminary trial she had been kept in concealment and her testimony forced by Crudup. Miss Randolph claimed yesterday that the statements were made under duress.

The State was represented by Wil*liam Newcorn, Esq., and the defense* by Codington & Swackhamer and William G. DeMeza.

Another charge of a like offense against Crudup is also before the court. In this, the clergyman's accuser is Miss Eleanor Johnson. The *case was to have been tried first yes*terday, but when it was called Constable Cram informed the prosecutor that he had been unable to find Miss Johnson, who it disappeared mysteriously. He said he had searched unsuccessfully for her in Madison and Chatham.

Still another charge of the same sort against Crudup was brought by John Alston, but the Grand Jury refused an indictment on this account, partially, it is said, in the hope of reuniting Alston and his wife. Since *then, Mrs. Alston has also mysteri*ously disappeared.

NOT A BRANCH STORE HERE

REPORT THAT FIEDLER'S WILL LOCATE IN PLAINFIELD IS INCORRECT.

This item appeared in the February number of "The House Furnishing Review," of New York: "Plainfield, N. J., is to have a department store, which will be known as 'Fiedler's.' The incorporators of the company which will conduct this store are: William C. and Bertha Fiedler, Louis Borsum and Frank H. Somer. The capital is $50,000."

Inquiry was made at the home of Louis Borsum, of Woodland avenue, concerning the statement and it was denied that the company is to locate a department store in this city. It was said that the company has two stores in Newark and it is proposed to make one of them a department house.

LITERARY.

The contents of the Popular Magazine for March offer an enticing array of stories for those who like their fiction full of dash and spirit. The leading story is by Arthur W. Marchmont, the famous English author of adventure fiction. The story, "The Eternal Snare," has as a background Mr. Marchmont's favorite field, Constantinople. It describes the adventures of an American multi-millionaire who endeavors to Americanize for commercial purposes a part of the Turkish Empire. The complete novel is "The Peril of Horace Dunn," by W. Bert Foster. There are thirteen other stories, including a new serial, "O'Bourke, Gentleman Adventurer," by Louis Joseph Vance. Street & Smith, New York. Ten cents.

KING'S DAUGHTERS HELPING POOR GIRLS

Cup Bearers Circle Gave a Tea to Raise Funds for a Reading Room.

REALIZED A NEAT SUM

ENTERTAINMENT TAKES PLACE AT THE PARK AVENUE HOTEL.

Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., President of Organization—Hotel Handsomely Decorated for Occasion—Young Women in Charge of Affair.

For the purpose of raising funds to carry on the worthy charity of supporting a reading room and classes for poor girls in New York city, the Cup Bearers' Circle, King's Daughters, of this city, held a Martha Washington tea and sale in the Park Avenue Hotel, Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6. The Circle is composed of a large number of bright and energetic young girls, who, under the direction of Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., have been greatly interested in their mission work.

The hotel parlors were appropriately decorated with American flags and flowers, while the members of the Circle were dressed in Colonial costume. They were all much admired.

Miss Norma Northrop and Miss Verna McCutchen were in charge of the tea room, assisted by Miss Fredericka Mead, Miss Marion Brown, Miss Lillian King, Miss Marjorie Howard, Miss Gladys Peck and Miss Madeline Reed. In addition there was a candy table in charge of Miss Lucia Budlong, Miss Aurelie Asten, Miss Florence Stewart, Miss Antionette Hill and Miss Constance Wilcox. Those in charge of the ice cream were Miss Louise Saunders, Miss Bessie Flanders, Miss Molly Perkins and Miss Helen Stevens. A doll table was presided over by Miss Rae Hooley, Miss Mabel Hooley and Miss Katherine McCutchen.

At least $85 will be realized.

The officers of the Cup Bearers' Circle are these: President, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr.; vice president, Miss Dorothy Averill; treasurer, Miss Lucia Budlong; secretary, Miss Alice Titus.

MRS. CATHERINE COMBS DEAD

WIFE OF A BOROUGH GROCER PASSES AWAY AT THE AGE OF SEVENTY-ONE.

Mrs. Catherine A. Combs, aged seventy-one years, wife of William H. Combs, the grocer, died on Sunday at her home in Linden avenue. She had been ill some time. Mrs. Combs was the daughter of John and Abigail Taynor, of Warren Township and she was born in that place. She had been a resident of the borough most of her life. She is survived by a husband and a son, the latter living in the West, and a niece, who lived with her. The funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from the late home, Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp, of Grace M. E. church, officiating. The interment will be at Bordentown, N. J.

J. R. LEWIS BURIED.

Funeral Services in the Basking Ridge Presbyterian Church Conducted by Rev. Mr. Reeves.

The funeral services of the late John R. Lewis were held Sunday afternoon from the Presbyterian church, Basking Ridge, where there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Reeves, pastor of the church, conducted the services and the choir of the church sang two selections. The interment took place in the cemetery near the church.

Mr. Lewis was born at Basking Ridge and lived there until five years ago, when he lived with his brother, Israel Lewis, of Somerset street. He was the son of Alvah Lewis, one of the best known drovers in the State, and Mr. Lewis afterward continued his father's business. Beside a son, John Lewis, of the borough, two grandchildren, Miss Edith Bentley and George Bentley, of Putnam avenue, survive.

P. H. S. WON FROM THE LEAL'S

SUPERIOR ALL-AROUND WORK AT BASKET BALL BRINGS VICTORY.

Defeated in the first game of the series, Plainfield High School revenged itself upon Leal's School in basket ball at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Friday afternoon. The score was 17 to 5. Leal's never had a chance against the superior all round work of the High School boys, who knew that they had to win to keep in the game for the championship of the series, and who did not fail to take advantage of every opening.

Every member of the High School team played fast ball. Thompson was in the game to the finish, and it was largely his excellent guarding that kept Leal's score down. Collier made his re-appearance on the team and distinguished himself by good work. The High School team work was good, and Leal's, handicapped by an injury to one of her regulars, played pluckily. The third and final game of the series will take place March 11. Summary:

High School—Collier and Thompson, forwards; Guinn, centre; Gavett and Fenno, guards. Leals—Chapman and J. Haughey, forwards; Abbott, centre; L. Haughey and G. Strong, guards. Goals from the floor, Thompson 5, Collier 2, Guinn, Chapman 2 Goals from fouls, Thompson, Strong.

HIS LAST LETTER

Senator Hanna on Deathbed Thanked President.

"YOU TOUCHED A TENDER SPOT."

Roosevelt Replied With a Heartfelt Wish For Restoration to Health of His Friend—Letter Will Be Treasured as Memorial.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Senator Hanna's last written words were in the form of a pathetic letter to President Roosevelt, in which he acknowledged in a way quite characteristic the president's thoughtfulness in calling at his hotel to inquire about his condition. The letter was written by the senator on the afternoon of Friday, Feb. 15, and was the last business of any kind transacted by him. Mr. Dover that afternoon informed the senator that President Roosevelt had called to inquire about his condition.

"Wasn't that nice of him?" whispered Senator Hanna. "Wasn't that good?"

Later the senator again expressed his deep appreciation of the president's courtesy and a little while afterward called for pencil and paper and wrote the following:

"My Dear Mr. President—You touched a tender spot, old man, when you called personally to inquire after me this a. m. I may be worse before I can be better, but all the same such drops of kindness are good for a fellow."

The next day a reply was received from the president with a note stating that it was to be shown to the senator when Mrs. Hanna thought best. Senator Hanna never saw the reply, which was as follows:

"Indeed it is your letter from your sickbed which is touching, not my visit. May you very soon be well again, old fellow, as strong in body and as vigorous in your leadership and your friendship as ever."

After Senator Hanna's death President Roosevelt sent the letter to Mrs. Hanna, one of that copies of it might be made by the family for preservation. The original will be returned to President Roosevelt, who will treasure it carefully in memory of his dead friend.

German Will Move Against Hereros.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—Colonel Leutwein, governor of German Southwest Africa, cables that a number of Ovambes under Captain Nechale attacked the police post at Amatoni and were repulsed, with a loss of sixty-seven killed. A division under Lieutenant Schultze had a fight with the Hereros at South Tsumana in which the enemy lost ten men killed. The Germans sustained no casualties, and Lieutenant Schultze captured large herds of cattle. The principal German forces are gathering at Okahandja, where they will await the arrival of re-enforcements before undertaking a general movement against the Hereros, but in the meantime the enemy will be engaged occasionally as *opportunity offers. The Hereros are ap*parently centered about Otjosongati and Waterberg.

Suicide of Yale Student.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 24.—The body of Robert J. Rich, a member of the sophomore class in the academic department of Yale university and whose home was in Fort Dodge, Ia., was found on a ledge near the foot of West rock. The rock rises almost perpendicularly from the flats of West river and is 384 feet above the sea level. While laboring under heavy mental depression due to causes not known unless the result of overwork at his books, Rich hurled himself from the top of West rock. When some Yale students discovered the body it was not yet cold, but that the man was dead was at once apparent.

TO REVISE MILITARY LAWS

BILL IN PREPARATION FOR INTRODUCTION AT SESSION OF LEGISLATURE.

Again the military authorities of New Jersey are wrestling with a revision of the military laws of the State, in the effort to make the act of 1900 jibe with the recently adopted Dick act, which makes the National Guard an adjunct of the regular army. Some time ago it became apparent that much tinkering would be necessary to overcome some of the many discrepancies between the national law and that adopted in the State at the time of the Voorhees reorganization of the guard.

This duty was assigned to General George E. P. Howard, judge advocate of the division, and a bill drawn by him will be presented to the Legislature in the near future. Certain changes will be made in the document to meet the views of the present soldiers of the State Military Board who do not take kindly to some of the provisions of the judge advocate. It is reported that the new bill will provide for carrying regimental officers who are not recognized in the regular army, such as paymasters, and the men who profess to know tell that in time of service, either in camp or on any other kind of duty, when the men of the guard are in the pay of the Federal Government, there can be no provision for the payment of these officers, unless the State shall foot the bills for them. The further statement is made that the new bill makes no provision for a company artificer, admittedly a useful man in a military company and recognized as such by the War Department and provided for in the regulations of the department. Instead, the bill is said to contain a provision for a company commissary sergeant, an officer not countenanced by the department and for which no pay is allowed. It is predicted that the new bill will contain a provision for paying to the officers of the National Guard a stated sum annually to defray the cost of uniforms and equipments.

Quartermaster General Donnelly will shortly make requisition on the National Government for the new khaki uniforms for the enlisted men of the State Guard, and when the requisition is honored the officers will be required to equip themselves with khaki also. There is some talk of discarding the sickly robin's egg blue shoulder straps and trousers stripes for the officers and of returning to the more popular and lasting white, and there will be another item of expense for the officers.

LITERARY.

The pictures in the March Red Book, now on the news-stands, are better than ever before. The cover itself is a brilliant and striking portrait of Miss Alice de Winton, leading lady of the theatrical company which Charles Hawtrey brought from England to play "The Man From Blankleys." Miss de Winton posed for the portrait, which was painted by Gustavus O. Widney for The Red Book. Seventeen photographic art studies are included in the number, nine of them being specially posed by the Baker Art Gallery of Columbus, O., and eight by Morrison of Chicago. The illustrations to the stories are better than the average. It is announced that beginning with the next number The Red Book will be printed on coated paper throughout, and half-tone illustrations will be used. Beginning with the April number a series of specially posed studies by Falk of New York will appear in The Red Book.

Ainslee's for March opens with a novelette which takes the shape of autobiographical notes by a society girl which tells of her experiences from the time she was fifteen years of age to the time of her engagement. It is original and dramatic and, what is more important, interesting. It is called "Miss Vanity." Edited by Mary Hamilton Park. Maarten Maartens has one of his characteristic tales called "Five Minutes' Conversation." "Her Letters from Dakota" deals with a timely theme in an extremely taking fashion. It is by Miriam Michelson, author of "In the Bishop's Carriage." The second of the series, "Stories of the Street," by James H. Gannon, is called "The Matrimony Syndicate." Roy Horniman has an intensely interesting and dramtatic story called "The Wits of Basil Wynyard." An unusually humorous tale is "The Undoing of Ulysses Updegraff," by W. D. Nesbit.

EXPLOSION NEAR PATERSON FELT HERE

Slight Damage in Both City and Borough as Result of Blowing Up of Power Mill.

LAFLIN - RAND WORKS

THREE MEN KILLED AND TWO HOUSES DESTROYED.

People in Plainfield Thought An Earthquake Had Struck the City —Window Glass Broken and Other Affects of the Jar.

The Laflin-Rand Powder Co.'s plant, six miles west of Paterson, was wrecked Saturday by an explosion in one of its powder houses. Three men were instantly killed and two of the houses of the plant totally destroyed. So great was the force of the explosion that damage was done in this city and in North Plainfield.

The deep rumbling sound followed almost instantly with a vibration which could be felt in every house here. At the home of Charles Frey, on Harmony street, almost all the window panes were shattered. At the home of Frank W. Rowley, the borough clerk, a door was jarred open and L. M. French reports that the stove lids on his kitchen range were jarred out of place. C. W. Francese, on Vine street, whose plumbing shop adjoins his residence, said that the stovepipe in his place of business was knocked to the floor.

The dead are Fred Weimar, of Wayne; Al Jackson, of Paterson, and J. Weit, of Peconic. At least forty men were injured. The plant is sometimes called the Wayne Company.

BOYS CELEBRATED THE DAY

OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY BY THE Y. M. C. A. JUNIOR DEPARTMENT.

Washington's birthday was appropriately observed Monday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Hall by a patriotic concert given by the members of the boys' department, assisted by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra. Many of the moving pictures and illustrated songs of the Edison Projectoscope Company, the Star Course entertainers in the evening, were included in the programme. The music was excellent, the pictures inspiring, and the illustrated songs, partly sentimental and partly patriotic in tone, were very much of a success. The programme:

Overture, Grand American Fantasia, Bendix; "Star Spangle Banner," 71st N. G. N. Y. on Parade; "Little Boy in Blue," an illustrated song by George Smith, soloist; Review of Dewey's Squadron; "Dixie Land," orchestra; Charge Up San Juan Hill; Washington-Lincoln-McKinley; "Only a Soldier Boy," illustrated song, George Smith; "America."

The orchestra was led by Martin A. Korff, violin. It was composed of Messrs. Barnes, Hand, G. Spier, M. Kreiger, violinists; Dr. J. F. Berg, 'cello; Mr. Hallard, flute; Whitney Frazee, cornet; J. Hewitt, clarionet; Garret T. Dunham, trombone; Louis M. Hummer, accompanist.

TOLD OF JAPS' WAR.

Sheldon Painter, a Missionary, Speaks Interestingly at Men's Meeting in Y. M. C. A.

Sheldon Painter, a missionary, recently returned from Japan, addressed the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. in Association Hall on Sunday afternoon. Besides urging his hearers to live nearer to God the missionary talked interestingly of the Russian-Japanese war. He said the Japanese have surprised their own people at their great show of strength and skill in the recens engagements. At the close of the address Mr. Painter exhibited a number of Japanese curiosities to his audience. Music was supplied by the quartette, composed of William Symons, P. O. Vroom, W. C. Leek and F. L. Lockwood. The money collected at the meeting will be devoted to Y. M. C. A. work in the Japanese army and navy.

In Honor of Mr. Noe's Birthday.

A pleasant surprise party was given Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Noe, of Union street, in honor of Mr. Noe's birthday. There were about forty relatives and friends present and the evening was spent in playing games, listening to music and other pastimes. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

No Cause of Action.

By a twelve-man jury a verdict of no cause for action was returned in the case of Andrew F. Marsh against Albert C. Brown, on contract, in Justice Huff's court Friday afternoon. William Newcorn, Esq., represented the plaintiff and Hetfield & Hetfield the defendant.

ASSEMBLYMAN MOFFETT FAVORS SIGNBOARDS

He Declares That Assemblyman Colby's Proposed Law is Unconstitutional.

THE FARMERS AROUSED

ALLEGED THAT MEASURE INTERFERES WITH INDIVIDUAL PROPERTY RIGHT.

Bill Introduced in Legislature As Result of Governor Murphy's Reference to the Nuisance—Swackhamer's Position.

The bill introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman Colby intended to legislate against sign boards has aroused an active opposition, more particularly among the farmers of the State who are most affected. The idea of the bill is that the advertising billboards are unsightly and destroy landscape effects along railroad lines. Governor Murphy having taken this position in his annual message.

Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett, of this city, in an interview yesterday, announced his complete disapproval of the measure. He said: "I am bitterly opposed to the bill; it interferes with the rights of individuals to use their property as they see fit, and in this it is unconstitutional. It is an outrage upon the farmer in that it would deprive him of one of his readiest and surest means of utilizing his land for an income. The erecting of billboards cannot in any proper sense be construed as a nuisance and I don't think the injury they do to the landscape is serious. They affect only a small portion of the view near the tracks, beyond which there is plenty of scenery left for the delight of the traveller. Besides taking from the farmer his only means of 'easy money,' the bill would, by its absolutely prohibitive license fee, destroy a legitimate enterprise in the shape of bill posting concerns and throw many men out of employment."

Assemblyman Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, had this to say with reference to the bill: "I have not yet had the opportunity to examine this bill, but I shall take care to scrutinize with great jealousy any measure which I find is calculated to injure unnecessarily any industry or to deprive our farmers of a source of legitimate gain or profit."

The license fee which the bill calls for is not less than $5 for every square foot of sign, billboard or advertisement.

BOYS HELP MISSION WORKERS

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH BAND AIDS WORK IN INDIA.

The meeting held by the Boys' Band in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Friday afternoon, was unusually interesting. In addition to the regular members, there were present a large number of friends of the Band, who came through the storm to listen to the address of Rev. William Harris, of Siam.

Mr. Harris is a missionary to the Laos country, and his account of the people and his work in that land was quite interesting. Among other facts, he stated that ten dollars of our money provides for the board, lodging tuition and books of a boy student for a term of seven months in the school at Cheing Mai. Beside his missionary work, Mr. Harris is a teacher in this school, and while on his furlough in this country, is endeavoring to raise sufficient money to erect a suitable building.

The Boys' Band recently contributed $25 to this sum, and yesterday devoted the collection taken up to the same object. VanWyck Brooks, president of the Band, conducted the exercises, the secretary, Lawrence Mead reading the minutes, and the treasurer, Jose Tweedy giving a report of funds on hand. At the close of the meeting all present were served with tea and chocolate by Mrs. Josiah Browne, Mrs. Augustus V. Healy and Mrs. Daniel Ginna.

PROTEST AGAINST LICENSE.

Petition at Y. M. C. A. Men's Meeting Against Additional Places.

Remonstrance against the granting of liquor licenses by the Common Council was made Sunday afternoon by about fifty men in attendance at the meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. A petition was prepared and President Caboone, of the association, asked all present to sign it. The opposition was aimed more particularly at the application of John Goff for a license in connection with the running of a hotel and saloon in the West End.

Miss Elline Sauer, of New Brunswick, who has been the guest of Miss Powers, of Somerset street, has returned home.

MISS LEICHTENTRITT MARRIED IN NEW YORK

Plainfield Girl Becomes Wife of Nathan Samuels, Jr., at Largely Attended Wedding.

ELABORATE CEREMONY

REV. ALEXANDER LYONS, OF BROOKLYN, OFFICIATES.

Couple to Reside at Somerville—Gift of Bride's Parents, a House—Handsomely Furnished—Plainfielders Who Were Present.

A wedding of interest to Plainfield, Newark, New York and Brooklyn, was that Tuesday afternoon of Miss Nettie Leichtentritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Leichtentritt, of West Front street, to Nathan Samuels, Jr., of Brooklyn. The ceremony was performed shortly after 5 o'clock in the Third Lyceum, Fifty-fifth street and Third avenue, New York, by Rev. Alexander Lyons, of Brooklyn. The bride and groom, according to the Jewish custom, were married beneath a canopy which was of white satin trimmed with gold. It was brought from the Eighty-second Street Temple of New York.

The bride was gowned in white satin crepe de chine, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and a Hebrew Bible. She was attended by her sister, Miss Sadie Leichtentritt, maid of honor, who was dressed in white French voile and carried white roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Adelaide M. Schwarz, of Newark; Miss Emma Hahn, of Newark; Miss Louise Frankenheim, of New York, and Miss Rose Marx, of New Brunswick. They were gowned in white lousine silk and carried bouquets of pink roses.

William Marcus, of New York, was best man, and the ushers were Charles Samuels, of Brooklyn, brother of the groom; Joseph Semel, of Brooklyn, the groom's cousin; Phillip Leichtentritt, brother of the bride and Fred Samuels, brother of the groom.

The flower girls were Miss Nettie Haase, the bride's cousin, of New York, and Miss Mildred Samuels, sister of the groom, of Brooklyn.

A reception followed immediately after the ceremony after which supper was served in the dining hall. The color scheme in the decorations of the Lyceum was pink and white.

Among the guests who attended from this city in addition to the members of the family and bridal party were Mr. and Mrs. M. Abrams, William Newourn, Fred H. Hudt, S. Dreier, David Dreier, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier, Mr. and Mrs. Rothberg and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kapp. From Newark there were present Mrs. Cecelia Schwarz, Mr. and Mrs. S. Semel, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gold and H. Nethelm. Brooklyn guests included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Samuels, the groom's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Samuels, brother and sister-in-law of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. I. Michaels, D. Semel, Mrs. F. Davis, J. Samuels, brother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Max Semel and Simeon Semel. From New York, there were Mr. and Mrs E. Frankenheim, Mr. and Mrs. I. Rubenstein, Mr. and Mrs. H. Heims, Mr. and Mrs. L. Heims, Mr. and Mrs. Max Heims, Mr. and Mrs. A. Haase, Mr. and Mrs. I. Haase, Mr. and Mrs. Moe Leichtentritt, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Leichtentritt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fox, Mr. and Mrs. E. Moses, Assemblyman Charles S. Adler and Mr. and Mrs. Max Adler. Other guests were Miss Rose Goldsmith, of Chicago; Robert Wolfheim, of Indianapolis, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. D. Hamburg, of Elizabeth; Miss Pauline Drucker and Miss A. Drucker, of Elizabeth, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Marx, of New Brunswick.

Gifts to the bride were almost innumerable and included beautiful articles in silver, cut glass, oil paintings, furniture, bric-a-brac, an onyx urn, set of steins, and many others. The groom's gift to the bride was a particularly handsome gold watch, set with diamonds. The best man received as a souvenir from the groom a gold stick pin, set with pearls, and the ushers also received stick pins. The bride presented her maid of honor with a silver brooch with stone settings and her bridesmaids were also given silver brooches. A handsome home, well furnished was the gift of the bride's father and mother to the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuels left last night for a short wedding tour which will include Niagara. They will reside in Somerville where Mr. Samuels will open a cloak store on West Main street. They will reside on West Cliff street.

SWACKHAMER MOVES TO BLOCK SMALLEY

Somerset's Assemblyman Has a Bill in Legislature Which May Help Volunteer Men.

REFERENDUM DESIRED

IF MEASURE PASSES PEOPLE MAY VOTE ON TYPE OF SYSTEM DESIRED.

North Plainfield Council's Move to Disband Present Organization and Establish Paid Department May Be Frustrated.

Whether or not a paid fire department is desired by the majority of the people of North Plainfield may be left to a vote of the taxpayers if a bill introduced in the House of Assembly at Trenton by Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer passes its third and final reading.

As Mr. Swackhamer stated at the meeting last week when the site for the new school house was discussed, he is not in favor of a paid fire department because he thinks the present department is able to cope with the average fires in the borough and that a police department on a better scale is more to be desired just now. Believing, too, that the majority of the people of the borough are opposed to paying out so much money from the borough coffers for a paid department he introduced the bill in the Assembly which, if it passes, will give the people a referendum in the matter.

It is said that every effort is being made to have the bill defeated when it comes up for a final reading today, but Mr. Swackhamer intends to fight to a finish. If the measure passes the North Plainfield fire department will not disband on March 15, a special election being necessary before its disbandment can take place.

This bill will not only effect North Plainfield but New Brunswick, Somerville and other cities in New Jersey where a volunteer system now exists which will sooner or later have to be replaced with a paid department. The present law gives the Common Council the power to say whether or not the public should be saddled with this extra burden while the bill, if it passes, will leave the matter to a referendum.

PARK GOLF CLUB'S ELECTION

TRUSTEES ELECTED AND OTHER OFFICERS CHOSEN FOR THE YEAR.

The annual meeting of the Park Golf Club was held last night at the Park Club, with a good attendance of members. Vice President George T. Rogers presided. W. R. Faber, treasurer, presented his report showing that all dues have been paid and other charges against the members collected, leaving a substantial balance in the treasury. The secretary, Charles B. Morse, reported that there are 130 members in the club. There is absolutely no truth in the report that the club intends to disband. The prospects for the coming season are exceedingly bright and a strong schedule will be arranged.

In selection of trustees, Nelson A. Miller and Charles A. Reed were chosen as a nominating committee and these names were presented and unanimously elected: Charles W. McCutchen, S. St. John McCutchen, George T. Rogers, Charles B. Morse, T. W. Morris, Jr., Leon R. Thurlow and T. U. Dudley.

After the meeting the trustees met and elected these officers: President, Charles W. McCutchen; vice president, George T. Rogers; treasurer Leon R. Thurlow; secretary, Charles B. Morse. Upon the return of the president from his trip abroad he will appoint and announce the various committees.

New Fire Hose Received.

A consignment of new hose has been received at the local fire headquarters for immediate use. There are about 2,000 feet in the shipment and it will be placed upon the various trucks at once. No. 3 truck was loaded with the new hose yesterday and other wagons will be equipped with it today. The old hose will be used for emergency.

It is now just 'twixt seasons and preserves of the right kind are a tasty relish for breakfast, luncheon or dinner. Neuman Brothers can offer the best reasons why you should buy preserves of them. They have the standard brands, guarantee their purity and warrant entire satisfaction.

AMERICA'S OLDEST MAN DEAD IN PISCATAWAY

Uncle Noah Raby Succumbs When Approaching 132d Anniversary of Birth.

THE STORY OF HIS LIFE

INTERESTING OLD CHARACTER A WONDER OF THE AGE.

Passed Away Yesterday in Poorhouse, Where he Had Resided for Many Years—Funeral This Afternoon at His Late Home.

Noah Raby, the oldest person in America, is dead at the age of 132 years, lacking a month. His death occurred Tuesday morning. Rev. J. A. Cubberley, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, will conduct the funeral this afternoon. For more than thirty years this centenarian has made his home at the poor house in Piscataway township. Though totally blind for several years old Noah has been otherwise in possession of his faculties. Some time ago the old man was taken ill and since had been quite feeble.

It is believed that Noah Raby's age is well authenticated. He was born at Eatonton, Court House, N. C., April 1, 1772. His mother, Morning Raby, was a native of North Carolina and his father an Indian named Andrew Bass. Noah was never sent to school. He learned to read but could not write his name. He boasted of the fact that he had smoked for 120 years. He started first smoking his mother's pipe when a child. It made him sick but he kept at it until he could smoke as readily and freely as his mother. Until quite recently "Uncle Raby," as he is sometimes called, had used liquor and never had appeared to be the worse for it. But he had only been drunk twice in his life. Once when in Virginia he became intoxicated and had to be brought home in an ox cart. The next time was after he came North. Some young men at New Brunswick sought to have sport with the old man and they induced him to take several drinks which made him grossly intoxicated. This was several years ago. He had never been the worse for liquor since that time.

In telling of his early life Noah said that his mother lived in a small hut built upon poles. When he was seven years of age she married and Noah was compelled to shift for himself. He was bound out to a Mr. Field who owned many slaves, but would never sell any of them because he did not believe in doing so. When Noah was twenty-one he decided to strike out and obtain a job. He succeeded in inducing Widow Penelope Parker to give him work about her place in North Carolina. He staid with Mrs. Parker five years and she paid him $300 a year. He left her to work for her daughter-in law, Sarah Parker.

It was while in the employ of the latter woman that Noah fell in love. He became infatuated with Miss Parker, his new mistress and thought he might marry her and thus come into the possession of all her slaves and extensive plantation. But he was too bashful to ask her. Instead Noah told an old darky named "Uncle Mingo" of his infatuation. The old darky offered to bewitch Miss Parker so she would marry Noah. The ardent young lover, however, would not consent to such an idea and finally upon the advice of Miss Parker's half brother he went to sea to drown his sorrow. Without saying good-bye or even stopping to draw what wages were due him Noah left on a long sea voyage. Some months later he obtained a leave of absence from the ship and went back to see his lady love. Miss Parker asked him why he left home so suddenly without receiving his pay. Noah then screwed up his courage and told the lady that it was because he loved her. In reply Miss Parker said: "Faint heart never won fair lady." But it was then too late. Miss Parker had married her overseer two weeks before Noah's arrival. In mentioning the matter to a friend the old man said he was sorry then but had not been since. "Had I married perhaps I wouldn't have lived so long," he replied in closing the conversation.

In politics Noah Raby was a Democrat. He had not voted however in a number of years because he had been unable to pay his poll tax. He used to say that the only thing to regret in all his life was that he had not learned to write his name.

For the past ten years Noah had spent most of his time sitting in a chair in his room. On pleasant days he would walk about the grounds about the poor house. He always slept sitting in a chair as he feared a rush of blood to the head. At the time of his death he weighed less than one hundred pounds. His frame was slightly bent but his muscles were quite firm and his intellect clear. Beneath heavy eyebrows and surrounded by a bushy snow white beard a pair of coal black eyes shown forth like small beads previous to his blindness. Noah Raby was a picturesque figure and was one of the most remarkable characters in any respect that ever lived. The oldest man in New Market now that Noah Raby is gone is Abner S. Coriell, who remembers that Noah worked for his father when he was a boy. He was then a white-haired old man.

THOMAS E. MAC DONALD DEAD

AGED RESIDENT SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA AFTER A WEEK'S ILLNESS.

Thomas E. MacDonald, aged 75 years, a well-known resident of this city for twenty years, died Tuesday afternoon at his home in East Front street, following an illness of one week with pneumonia. Prior to that he possessed excellent health and attended to business every day. He was for many years the New York representative of the Moses Pottery Company, of Trenton. This concern is one of the largest in this section of the country.

Mr. MacDonald was a faithful and consistent member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. He was of a quiet disposition and nature and took no part in public affairs in this city. He is survived by a widow, three daughters, Mrs. Moses, of Trenton, the Misses Sadie and Bertha MacDonald, of this city, and two sons, Harry B. MacDonald, of this city, and Charles MacDonald, of Philadelphia.

The funeral services will be held from the late home Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will be in charge. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

U. V. U. ENTERTAINMENT.

Old Soldiers Have a Jolly Time at a Dime Social.

An interesting programme of music and recitations was presented last night at a dime social given by the Union Veterans' Union together with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the order. Among those who took part were Samuel Franse who sang songs, comic and otherwise, to the accompaniment of Mrs. H. L. Gibbons; William Jeffery who sang inspired ballads; Comrades Naylor, Perry and Raybert, who made remarks, and Mrs. John Manley, who sang a solo. The most unique event on the programme was a dialogue between the years 1776 and 1904, represened by Mrs. Gibbons and her niece, Miss Edgar. The committee having charge of the programme consisted of Edward Drake, chairman; John Naylor, Albert G. Perry and Edward Vanderwer, from the U. V. U., and Mrs. C. H. Bell, chairman; Mrs. Edward Townley, Mrs. H. S. Gibbons and Mrs. Johnson, form the auxiliary.

P. H. S. DRILLS.

Lads Form Into Two Companies at Company K's Armory.

The Plainfield High School battalion began its drills yesterday afternoon in Company K's armory. There were enough cadets present to form two companies which were placed under the command of Captains Koons and Thompson, and drilled without guns in the facings, salutes and steps in squads. At a later date, guns will be used and company manoeuvres will be tried. The drill was in charge of Commandant Macnab.

A large number of boys from the Whittier School was present and from there and from the smaller High School boys, a third company will probably be formed.

Told of the War.

The causes of the war in the far East were discussed and the relations of the United States to Japan described in a lecture given before the members of the High School yesterday by Arthur C. Maclay, of this city, who was a resident of Japan for some years. This lecture was given in the Franklin School chapel and dealt with Japanese scenery, architecture and people. The stereopticon illustrations were excellent.

Tea for Miss Alden.

The Misses Bowen, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, have sent out cards for a tea in honor of Miss Alden, to be given Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

CHARLES S. COOK HAS PASSED AWAY

Plainfield's Veteran Compositor Dies in Muhlenberg Hospital From Complications.

WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN

COOK HELD A SINGLE POSITION FOR THIRTY-EIGHT YEARS.

Honest and Faithful Employe—Sterling Democrat—Member of Trinity Reformed Church—Funeral Saturday Morning.

Charles Sylvester Cook, Plainfield's veteran compositor, is dead, after a short illness. The faithful old fellow passed away in Muhlenberg Hospital at 6 Tuesday night, a complication of troubles being responsible for his end. Arrangements have been made to hold his funeral Saturday morning.

"Cookey," for that was a name of affection used by those with whom he worked in daily contact, had been in bad health for many years. A fortnight ago he became so ill that his friends and employer insisted that he should cease work and recuperate. Asthma and bronchitis were among his afflictions. After much urging he was prevailed upon to seek the benefits of Muhlenberg Hospital. The care and attention he received at that institution proved so beneficial that on last Saturday it was supposed that he would be able to return to his work in a few days. Late in the afternoon of that day, he was seized with a brain trouble and from that time on he sank slowly away. He became delirious, though at times he was able to recognize his employer, his physician and his brother, but he was not able to speak. Death relieved him of his suffering last night.

The veteran compositor was born in a house which adjoined the old Spicer & Hubbard mill in West Third street on August 16, 1850. In 1866 he was engaged by W. L. & H. L. Force, who had a printery on what was then Cherry street and is now known as Park avenue. One year later the Messrs. Force established The Constitutionalist and Cook was engaged as a compositor. For many years he was the only bill poster in Plainfield and old residents tell many humorous stories of those days in which Cook figured as a principal figure. When The Daily Press was established in 1887 the dead man was "put on the case" at the plant. He continued in A. L. Force's employment until the time of his death and no man ever had a more faithful workman.

In politics Cook was a Democrat of the most pronounced type. In his earlier days he took an active part in city politics and was noted for his honesty and loyalty. A short time ago he became a member of Trinity Reformed church and attended its services whenever it was possible for him to do so.

The dead man's only immediate relative is Albert G. Cook, a younger brother, who lives in Orange, N. J.

The funeral services will be held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck will officiate. Interment will be made in the Hillside Cemetery. During the funeral The Daily Press office will be closed in order that all those connected with the plant may attend the services.

MARTINE'S TRIBUTE.

Plainfield, March 3, 1904.

Cedar Brook.

Poor Charlie Cook "has gone to that home from whence no traveller returns." Born under most humble surroundings, and in after life surrounded by elements not the most elevating, yet "Cookey," as he was familiarly known, possessed a thousand qualities to be esteemed. He was a loyal true friend—generous to a fault—and honest as Heaven's sun light, these qualities can be said of Charlie Cook. While a pretentious monument or stone may not mark his final resting place, yet he has left that which is better, a "good name."

J. E. Martine.

Had Fainting Spell.

Manning Field, of Plainfield avenue, an aged colored man, fell in a fainting spell at the corner of West Second street and Elmwood place, late yesterday afternoon and was removed to the hospital in the ambulance. He was revived and later was able to return to his home.

Mrs. Charles E. Utter, of West End avenue, has recovered from a recent illness.

EDWIN S. HOOLEY AGAIN IN CONTROL

Borough Banker Heads Syndicate Which Acquires Option on Des Moines Stock.

LONG CONTINUED FIGHT

ROCK ISLAND HAS HELD ROAD UNDER LEASE ABOUT TO EXPIRE.

Hooley Sent Circular Letter to Holders of Des Moines and Fort Dodge Railroad Offering to Purchase Their Stock.

Edwin S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, announced yesterday that control of the Des Moines and Fort Dodge Railroad, which was scattered last summer by the suspensions of W. S. Stow & Co., and Edwin S. Hooley & Co., had again been acquired by a syndicate, of which his firm is the active head. Mr. Hooley about two weeks ago sent a circular letter to holders of Des Moines and Fort Dodge stock asking for an option to purchase their stock at $5 a share.

Options, it was stated yesterday, had been exercised on 30,000 shares, the capital stock of the company being a little more than $5,000,000.

The Des Moines and Fort Dodge Railroad, since 1887, has been operated by the Rock Island under a lease, the Rock Island guaranteeing to the lessee 30 per cent. of its gross earnings, or a minimum amount equal to 4 per cent. on its first mortgage and extension bonds, and 2½ per cent. on its second series bonds. This lease expires January 1, 1905, and, according to Rock Island officials, will not be renewed, nor will the Rock Island purchase the road, as the Des Moines and Fort Dodge territory is now covered by the Rock Island's own lines.

Either the Illinois Central or the Iowa Central and the Minneapolis and St. Louis could utilize the Des Moines and Fort Dodge, and it was generally believed in Wall street that the Hooley syndicate in reality represented Edwin Hawley and his friends, who own the Iowa Central and the Minneapolis and St. Louis. This, however, was denied, and it was stated that for the present control of the road would remain with the Hooley syndicate.

Stock upon which E. S. Hooley & Co. held options was delivered yesterday.

MORE LICENSES GRANTED

COMMON COUNCIL HOLDS SPECIAL SESSION TO ISSUE PERMITS.

Although a call was issued by President Tolles for a special meeting of the Common Council to be held last night, for a time it looked as though there would not be a quorum present. President Tolles and Councilmen Lee, Gloak, Bullock and Higham put in an appearance at 8 o'clock, but it was not until three-quarters of an hour later that the sixth member in the person of Mr. Murphy came around, making it possible to hold a meeting. Word was sent to Councilman Randolph's house in the hopes that he might be induced to attend, but he was found to be ill and could not come out.

The session was called for the purpose of granting thirty-six applications for back and cartmen's licenses. At the meeting held last Thursday these persons failed to put in their applications and their old licenses expired Monday night at midnight. Legally they could not do any business yesterday, although many of them did. It kept the police busy hunting those who were violating the ordinance. In view of the existing conditions, Chief Kiely called on President Tolles and asked him to call a special session to help the derelicts out of their predicament. This was done and the applicants are now allowed to continue their business.

Before the meeting adjourned Councilman Lee offered a resolution which was unanimously adopted. The resolution provided that Smalley Brothers, owners of the building in which the Council meets, be instructed to purchase a perfectly reliable thermometer to be placed in the Council rooms, that the members may know whether the temperature calls for putting on or taking off their overcoats.

David Smalley was present at the meeting and he said that if the Council would appropriate the money he would secure the thermometer.

Mrs. J. A. Powlison, of the borough, has been detained at home by illness.

AUDUBON SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL SESSION

Lecture by Henry Oldys, of Maryland, on Bird Music a Feature of the Meeting.

DEFENDED THE ROBIN

STATE ORGANIZATION CHOOSES MANY HONORARY VICE PRESIDENTS.

New Jersey Could Not Exterminate the Robin—Useful and Beautiful Bird—Large Attendance at the Lecture—Imitations of Birds.

Lovers of nature who attended the lecture of Henry Oldys, of Forest Glen, Md., on "Bird Music," before the Audubon Society at the Crescent Avenue church last night, were treated to a valuable description of the songs of some of the more familiar birds together with imitations of their notes that were the accurate results of careful and appreciative study. Mr. Oldys described particularly the robin and mentioned good reasons why no law should be allowed to become effective that aims at its destruction.

He stated that an examination of the stomachs of 500 robins had shown conclusively that the robins were more of a benefit to the farmer as to all others than a source of harm. The only crop that suffers severely from their attacks is the cherry crop and the remedy for this is to protect the orchards so far as possible by scattering about roots for which they have a strong appetite and by the use of stuffed owls or similar "scarecrows." The extermination of the robin would mean a loss of the service of one of the best and most useful birds. But as a matter of fact its extermination is impossible owing to the fact that it breeds in all parts of the country, from ocean to ocean and from tropics to arctic regions.

Mr. Oldys' imitations and interpretations of the bird notes were fascinating revelations of the beauty of art that is unconscious of itself. The bird melodies that he whistled were often more simply and freely expressive of the primal emotions than is the effort of the schooled musician. Though of course but broken and unsustained bits of musical expression, many of the songs had considerable variety. Among the particularly pretty ones that Mr. Oldys imitated were the carol of the chewink, the bright and breezy note of the Carolina wren, the fearsome call of the titmouse, the sad strain of the meadow lark, the doleful plaint of the wood pewee, the mope of the owl, the foolish medley of the chat, and all the other "profuse strains of unpremeditated art" known to students of bird lore.

The meeting was the annual one of the Audubon Society of the State of New Jersey, which the report of the secretary showed had a membership list of 600. The society is in good financial condition as indicated by the report of the treasurer, Miss Julia S. Scribner, which was read by Rev. A. C. Nickerson. President Alexander Gilbert presided and these officers were re-elected:

President, Alexander Gilbert; honorary vice presidents, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. Pierre Malli, Charles J. Fisk and Mason W. Tyler, of this city; Mrs. Sophie B. Herrick, of Bayonne; Mrs. Charles B. Yardley, of East Orange; Hon. C. J. Baxter, James M. Green and Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, D.D., of Trenton; Frank M. Chapman and Thomas L. James, of Englewood; Wilson Farrand, of Newark; John Gifford and Rev. Henry VanDyke, D.D., of Princeton; John W. Griggs, of Paterson; George Pfeiffer, Jr., of Camden; and Austin Scott, of New Brunswick. As secretary and treasurer, Miss Julia S. Scribner was elected and as an executive committee the following: Rev. A. C. Nickerson, chairman, Miss Mary A. Mellick, Miss Caroline Haviland, Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, Mrs. David Hall Rowland, Miss Florence Tweedy, Charles C. Abbott, Henry M. Maxson, Austin C. Apgar, Andrew J. Gavett, Charles A. Shriner, William M. Stillman, Waldron D. W. Miller.

Mrs. Vail Buried.

The funeral services of Mrs. Hulda M. Vail, widow of Wallace Vail, were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 from the home, 1214 Dunellen avenue, a large number of friends and neighbors being present. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, officiated. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

A WALKING MACHINE

Odd English Invention That May Be Useful in Many Ways.

It Imitates the Locomotion of a Heavy Animal and Can Climb Over Obstacles of a Considerable Size.

For some years past Liverpool has been to the forefront in scientific study and practical experiment of means of road haulage of freight. Contests of motor wagons are held here yearly under the auspices of the Self-Propelled Traffic association, of which the Earl of Derby is the president. The amount of heavy haulage in Liverpool from the ships and docks to local warehouses and railway stations is probably greater than in any other city in the world, and is a serious item in the cost of goods. Then railroad freight charges in England are enormous—from two to six times as much as in the United States. Consequently, there is always great interest in this city in any invention or system which promises to reduce the cost of haulage.

Prof. Hele-Shaw, of the engineering department of the Liverpool university, is admittedly one of the greatest living authorities on mechanical locomotion; therefore his unequivocal and enthusiastic indorsement of a new invention called the "pedrail" has attracted wide and respectful attention in England, not only among the general public, but among scientific engineers.

The pedrail is variously described as a "walking locomotive," a "half traction engine and half walking machine," a "combination of an endless railway and a trotting machine," and a "rail moving on wheels." The Automotor Journal, of London, describes it as "a traction engine which actually and literally walks upstairs with the stride and sure-footedness of an elephant and hauls loads behind it under circumstances which would nonplus an ordinary traction engine. Ruts, curbstones and bowlders it makes nothing of, and even nine-inch balks of timber are stubble before it." The inventor is Mr. Bramah Joseph Diplock, of London. Prof. Hele-Shaw says that he had some years since conceived the idea of a locomotive with rails moving on wheels. He encountered difficulties which to him seemed insuperable, but these difficulties, he asserts, Mr. Diplock has surmounted. The professor declares that the pedrail is "a revolution in mechanical locomotion." The pedrail, it is claimed, can be used with advantage not only for ordinary freight haulage on common roads, but is thoroughly practicable as a traction engine over bad roads, and even in districts where there are no roads at all and where progress by the ordinary traction engine would be absolutely impossible. It would, for instance, as claimed, be suitable for hauling minerals from newly developed mines and heavy lumber from partly cleared forests, and would successfully meet the rough emergencies of military operations.

Briefly, the invention might be described as replacing the wheels of an ordinary traction engine by revolving frames carrying sliding spokes, each spoke having at its end a circular foot, and on the spoke itself, at a little distance above the foot, a small wheel or roller. In connection with each series of revolving spokes a fixed frame is attached to the side of the traction engine. This fixed frame somewhat resembles in form an inverted heart. When the axles revolve the spokes are carried round and in turn place the feet upon the ground. At the same time the wheels, which run round in contact with the heart-shaped frame, when brought underneath it—that is, under what may be described as the broader portion of the heart—act in turn as supports for the heart-shaped frame to glide over. Hence the engine is itself supported in turn through the wheels by the spokes which happen at the time to be resting with their feet upon the ground.

JAMES BOYLE.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Skating is again gaining the popularity it enjoyed in the west, and especially in Chicago, three decades ago. The numerous skating tournaments held at the parks in the "Windy City" and the great crowds which attended them bring back to the minds of the old timers the days when skating was the favorite pastime of a large part of the population of that city.

Grace and Louise.

Long before the Chicago fire many rinks were scattered about the city, and after that—and, in fact, up into the '80's—the rinks were in evidence and well patronized. In those days Chicago possessed some of the greatest skaters in the world. Not a few people still remember Gus Bluhm, Callie Curtis, Frank Swift, Johnnie Cooke, the "Human Top;" Allen I. Blanchard, Engler, Miner and others. Some will remember the first championship at fancy and figure skating, in which Goodrich defeated Bishop by nine points. Perhaps in their time there never were any better skaters than Gus Bluhm and Johnnie Cooke. Bluhm was a champion at movement work. He gained his title in 1873, when he defeated James Allison, of Chicago; Ben Seary, of Janesville, Wis., and Billy Willard, of Manistee, Mich., in a contest at Milwaukee. The medals at that time were good for two years but the holder had to meet all comers, after which if he was undefeated the medal became his personal property. Bluhm probably had more admirers than any other skater that ever appeared on a Chicago surface. He was about 21 years old when he won the championship, and for many years afterward took part in contests. Bluhm's greatest movements were twists, grapevines and toe spins. As grapevines he was unbeatable, and he had more of them than any other skater. As a burlesque skater Bluhm had no equal. Probably many who will recall the fame of Gus Bluhm as a skater are not aware that for several years he has been one of the most successful bookmakers in the United States. Johnnie Cooke, "the human top," was the quickest that ever happened, and it was this that won him the admiration of the great crowds which frequented the local rinks. He died when he was only 20 years old. Cooke's great specialty was a double flat foot spin, whirling around about 150 times without stopping and then rising on one foot, doing a toe spin on the point of one skate like a top, which gave him his sobriquet.

MIDST OF ALARMS

Many Trying Periods of Anxiety in Times of War.

The Dread of Surprise by an Enemy Has Brought About Many Humorous Situations—A Joke on Gen. Wheeler.

In all wars of any magnitude the dread of surprise has often led to the adoption of precautionary measures to insure safety that sometimes appear to the reader of history wholly unnecessary. It is difficult, however, to comprehend without experience, to what high tension of mind the leaders of bodies of troops operating in the presence of an armed enemy are subjected by a sense of their great responsibility. Under such conditions there is often for a time neither sleep nor rest for the commanders of the operating forces, and the nervous strain thus produced has led often to needless apprehensions and sometimes to hasty action scarcely warranted by the existing situation. Probably one of the best illustrations of this fact is found in the remarkable "Battle of Rodondo" fought somewhere near St. Thomas in the latter part of 1652. The admiral of a Dutch fleet sailing in search of English vessels during the naval war with England then in progress, discovered the advance vessel of the enemy's fleet bearing down upon him one foggy morning just before dawn, as he anxiously paced the deck of his ship, and at once directed his gunners to open fire. He was not a moment too soon, for his fire was immediately returned, and for awhile a most terrific bombardment was maintained. The smoke from the guns quickly enveloped the Dutch fleet so that nothing could be seen of the enemy, but it was evident that he had not sailed away, from the fact that whenever a gun was discharged at him he returned one for it.

Finally the fog lifted, and the wind blew the smoke aside, revealing to the astonished gaze of the Dutch admiral a great rock standing out of the sea a short distance away. Not a sail of the enemy was in sight. For five hours the doughty Hollanders had been firing at the granite wall before them imagining that the echoes which answered their fire were the return shots of the enemy.

Possibly every soldier who served in the war of the rebellion or in the war with Spain, is able to recall occasions of general alarm, sometimes well founded, but more commonly the result simply of the nervous strain produced by anxious watching.

Such an occasion occurred in western Virginia in 1862, when an outpost of Gen. Rosecrans' army was attacked in the night by a troop of confederate cavalry. The enemy's advance was fired upon by the sentinels and held at bay while the outpost was hastily formed in line to receive the assault. When daylight came a broken-down mule that had been abandoned by the army was found dead near the camp. The poor creature, in its eager search for food, had evidently stumbled upon the sentinels and had been mistaken in the darkness by the vigilant and apprehensive soldiers on watch as an advance skirmisher of the enemy.

Numerous occasions of alarm occurred in our armies during the war in the Philippines with the insurgents, very often with cause, for the Filipinos were alert and aggressive, but sometimes as the direct result of long-continued apprehension. On one occasion the pounding of the dry rice plant by a party of natives in the effort to separate the grain from the chaff, caused a general alarm in Gen. Wheeler's brigade a mile away. The noise of the pounding resembled the discharge of musketry by volleys and quickly awakened the impression in the general's camp that a battle was going on between the insurgents and a force of American infantry. A regiment was quickly formed in line and with Gen. Wheeler and his staff at its head, hastened rapidly to join the battle.

On reaching the spot six native women and one man armed with heavy wooden mauls, and in front of a hollowed log were beating out rice grains in several great, conical shaped mortars, the blows resounding from the hollow vessels sounded at a little distance away for all the world like the rumble of musketry in an engagement.

As may be imagined, there was much merriment over the incident, and the recollection of "The Battle of the Rice Pounders" is still green in the memory of Wheeler's invincible followers in the war with the Filipino insurgents.

EQUAL TO OCCASION.

Case of a Young Husband Who Was Not Afraid of His Matrimonial Achievement.

After the last old shoe had fallen on top of their carriage the bride looked up tenderly into the proud young man's eyes and said:

"I feel awfully nervous and silly.

"It will be so horrid to have everybody staring at us and whispering that we are just married.

"Let's act as if we had been married a long, long time, so they won't suspect."

"But I'm proud of it," he said, slipping an arm around her and drawing her lovingly close to him.

"I'd like to stand on a housetop somewhere, darling, and shout so that all the world could hear it that you are mine—my very own—my sweet, adorable, beautiful, superb wife. It won't do any good to try to mislead them.

"They'll all know it the minute they see us. I couldn't keep from looking happy, no matter how hard I tried. But leave it to me. I'll fix it so they won't stare at us or whisper about us."

After the train had started Arthur looked up the conductor and had a short conference with him.

Then the proud groom returned to his wife, and the official, standing at one end of the car, said, waving a hand toward the happy couple:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I am requested to announce that they have just been married.

"They are anxious to have it understood that they are not at all ashamed of themselves, and they don't propose to pretend that they are old stagers. I thank you, one and all, for your kind attention."

Then, says the St. Louis Republic, their fellow travelers all stepped forward and congratulated them.

EXCITING FOX HUNT.

Begins in Pennsylvania Woods and Ends in Dining Room of the Town Coal Dealer.

A fox hunt which began on the grounds of the Upland Fox Hunting club's fields, then coursed through the streets and ended in the dining-room of a private house, where Reynard was captured, gave the quiet town of Upland, Pa., an exciting turn the other day.

Hounds belonging to Edward Crozer had started a large red fox, which, instead of taking to the woods, dashed into town. The clatter of horses' hoofs, the blare of the huntsmen's bugle and the barking of the dogs in mad pursuit brought the populace on the streets. A hue and cry was raised. "Catch the fox! Catch the fox! There he goes!"

And hundreds of men and boys augmented the ranks of the red-coated huntsmen. Up and down the streets, in and out of alleys, round lamp-posts, over doorsteps came the crowd at Reynard's heels.

A man placing coal in the cellar of a house saw a red streak with before him, pass into the coal hole at his feet and disappear in the cellar. It was the fox.

Tongues hanging out, the dogs leaped to the hole.

Bang, the coal man shut the window on the hounds and the crowd and leaped into the cellar. Up the steps into the dining-room he chased the fox, while the eager huntsmen and more eager dogs waited without.

The fox, cornered in the house, was captured and returned safely to the club for the next hunt.

But the dogs and the boys went away disappointed.

THE ISLAND OF GUAM

Some Information About Our Little Pacific Possession.

In a Report to the War Department Gen. Wheeler Describes Its Peculiarities and Resources.

While Old Glory has floated from the flagstaff of Guam since 1898 the people of this country have received but scant information regarding this little island possession for the reason that but little was known. Guam, however, is not without interest and this fact is impressed upon us by a study of the report of Gen. Joseph W. Wheeler, recently made to the war department, in which he gives much interesting information about the island, together with the first accurate map of it ever published in this country, the work of government surveyors. The map is reproduced with this article. We will give in a terse way some of the information which this report contains:

In a rough way the island may be said to resemble in form the sole of a shoe. It is only 29 miles long and from three to ten miles wide, with an area of about 150 square miles, or seven times as large as Manhattan island.

It is the most southern of the chain of the Ladrone or Marianne islands, which stretches 420 miles north and south. All the other islands belong to Germany, but they are very small, and Guam is the largest and most important of the group. It is four days' steaming to the east of the Philippines.

We observe on the map great paucity of information about the interior of the island. The reason is that the jungle which covers it is so dense that not even the natives have penetrated far into it, except in two or three places where paths extend from coast to coast.

The low mountain called St. Rosa peak in the north is easily reached, and a fine view of the northern third of the island is obtained from its summit. Everybody lives along the coasts, and most of the population along the west coast. The natives have cleared away a narrow strip of the jungle bordering the sea for their plantations.

As vessels approach the highland from the south or west a chain of low mountains scarcely over 1,000 feet high is seen stretching along the southwest and south coasts some ten or 12 miles in the interior. Covered with verdure to the tops, they give a pleasing and picturesque aspect to the island. But none of the mountains has been ascended except St. Rosa Peak.

Guam has some peculiarities. The northern half of it consists almost wholly of coral rock, which is very porous, so that the rain sinks immediately into it and makes its way by underground channels to the sea, so that there are no springs or rivers in the northern part of the island.

Near the middle in the neighborhood of Agana, the capital, is a large spring that yields a copious supply of water. It oozes through a swamp and finds its way into the sea by means of a river which has been artificially lengthened and turned for a mile parallel to the coast for the convenience of the natives.

This is one of the reasons why two-thirds of the population is centered at Agana. The southern part of Guam has a number of streams, some of which lose themselves beneath the surface for a time and then reappear from caverns.

Another peculiarity of Guam is that nearly all the inhabitants, though farmers, live in the towns and go out to their ranchos to raise their crops. Some of them have rude houses on their ranchos, where their families spend part of the time.

Nearly the entire population of about 9,000 distributed among six towns, Agana containing 6,400 inhabitants; Sumai, 900; Piti, 500; Agate, 400; Merizo, 300, and Umata, 200. A number of hamlets, each containing a few huts, are distributed along the shores.

Both the Spanish and the natives regarded plenty of good water as more necessary than good harbors. So it happened that the capital, the metropolis of the island, has achieved its preeminence by reason of its abundant water supply, although there is only a roadstead in front of it with unsafe anchorage.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

A new president of the Western Golf association has been elected in the person of B. Franklin Cummins, of Chicago. Allan L. Reid was named as vice president. Mr. Cummins, who was vice president last year, is recognized as a strong golfer himself and is a wise executive, having made a good record as president of the Highland Park club. He formerly played at the Washington Park club and was one of the best players on the South Side club. Edward F. Martin, the retiring president, has been an officer of the Western Golf association ever since its organization. The remainder of the ticket named is as follows: Treasurer, L. L. McArthur, Glen View club; secretary, George A. Carpenter, Onwentsia club; directors, E. C. Potter, Midlothian; Edward Sickney, St. Louis Country club; John S. Sweeney, Detroit Country club; John D. Cady, Rock Island Golf club; H. J. Leavitt, Omaha Country club.

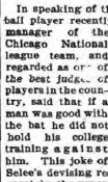
There has been a great deal of talk recently regarding future international golf matches. Since the very successful visit of the Oxford and Cambridge team last season the impression is gathering ground that the American golfers should return the compliment and send a team abroad at an early date. Leading golfers have discussed the matter only among themselves informally, but the effort to have the United States Golf Association send over a team under its auspices is admitted to be the only way a representative American team would be picked and receive the official standing on foreign links necessary to a well-conducted series of international matches. President Windeler is thoroughly in earnest over the subject, and he has been in conference with J. L. Low, captain of the Oxford-Cambridge team, regarding the matter. The idea is to arrange for annual international golf matches. Among English golfers the proposition has been discussed with considerable favor, although the difficulties of organization are recognized. It may not prove altogether an easy matter to give effect to this proposal. A British team visiting America would need to be away at least three weeks, and it might not always be possible for the best team in the land to be absent for so long a period. But the difficulties no doubt will be overcome, and it goes without saying that the matches will excite the keenest interest on either side of the Atlantic. International rivalry at sports and pastimes makes wholly for good, and is no unimportant factor in encouraging friendly feelings between the two nations.

In speaking of the value of a college ball player recently, Frank C. Selee, manager of the Chicago National league team, and regarded as one of the best judges of players in the country, said that if a man was good with the bat he did not hold his college training against him. "The idea of



Frank C. Selee.

Selee's devising really reflects, quite accurately, the general feeling among professional managers concerning the college players. A few years ago the college stamp marked a young player as being so destrable that the magnates broke their own rules hunting for the college lads. Phenomenal college pitchers received phenomenal salary offers, and the craze lasted for three or four seasons, when the managers came to the conclusion that the collegians were nice young men, but that the boys from the vacant lots had the better baseball material in their hides. "It's a funny fact," said Mr. Selee, "that the brainiest collegian is often at a loss to work out thinking plays which an uneducated 'kid' off the lots turns like a flash. This means, therefore, that college education and baseball sense are not the same. I have seen a college player who ranked with the topnotchers in an educational way stand and hold a ball, utterly bewildered, while the uneducated fellows right and left of him knew just what to do, how it should be done, and were frantically calling on the collegian to take action. I don't think Lajoie or Wagner ever saw a college unless when a train was passing it. Lajoie was a backman and Wagner was a butcher, I believe. Quite a few good players have been developed in recent years from the little colleges around the country, but few from the big universities, and, for that matter, the latter have not quit looking for them at Yale, Princeton and Harvard. The reason for this is simple. Young men, who attend the little colleges are usually hard-working chaps who appreciate the value of money, and, if they see they are good enough to play ball and increase their income, are glad to seize the chance. The boy who goes to Yale or Harvard is generally of a wealthy family, and, no matter how fine a player he may be, is too well fixed financially to need or wish to follow the professional game after graduation."

The meeting of the baseball magnates of the big leagues which took place at San Francisco recently resulted in the Pacific Coast league being taken into the National League association.

Tom Sharkey won in the wrestling bout with John Piening before the Criterion athletic club at Boston recently. Piening contracted to throw the sailor three times within an hour. Piening got the first fall in 16 minutes, and the second in 34 minutes, but failed to get a third.

MINERALS OF CUBA

The Resources of the Island Are Known to Be Extensive.

Gold Is Said to Exist in Large Quantities and Preparations Are Being Made to Mine It—Other Minerals.

The recent rediscovery of gold in Cuba leads one to inquire concerning her mineral resources in general. Everybody knows about her wealth in sugar, tobacco, fruit, woods and hides, but probably few have much knowledge of her mineral riches.

The early Spanish settlers, having in mind the various colonies of Spain that had emptied rivers of gold into her coffers, were confident in Cuba also the precious metal was to be found, and it is said they did get out considerable quantities of gold, by the process known as placer mining. Those early placers were located on the Sagua la Grande and Agabama rivers, and there were placers along the streams emptying into Cienfuegos bay. Humboldt reported gold as being washed up from the sands of the rivers Damuji and Cuonao, and doubtless there existed several placers whose locations are now unknown.

In 1827, silver combined with copper was found in a district south of the city of Santa Clara, which some authorities say yielded 75 ounces of silver to the ton of ore, while others place the yield at 140 ounces. There is no record that this discovery was followed by any extensive prosecution of the industry, or much prospecting for similar deposits. Which seems strange when one remembers the Spaniard's greed of gold, and strange when one learns that experienced mining engineers who have explored the mountains of Cuba report strong indications there of silver and copper.

The Cubian mines of Cobra, located north of the city of Santiago, were once the greatest copper producing mines in the world, and were worked as early as 1534. From two to three million dollars' worth of copper were shipped annually from Cuba to the United States between the years 1828 and 1840; but now the mines are abandoned.

The iron mines of Cuba, which are of great importance, are situated a few miles east of Santiago. American capital opened these mines and built the railways and piers necessary for the shipment of the ore. The yield is very rich, the ores, a limited brown and red hematite, containing from 65 to 68 per cent. of pure iron. The ore has been shipped almost exclusively to this country and during the war extensive shipments were continued. In 1890, the product of the Juragua company, one of the principal producers, was 362,068 tons, an amount equal to one-fourth of the importation of iron ores into the United States for that year. Just prior to the war, beginning was made by the Cuban Iron company to open up an extensive trade with England.

The war stopped Cuban exports of manganese, the insurgents closing the mines early in the hostilities, because the Spaniards received such a rich royalty therefrom. The demand for this ore from the United States has become much greater than the mines have been able to supply. Santiago is the center of Cuba's mineral district, and from this city railways reach out their arms to the various iron and manganese mines scattered throughout the surrounding region.

In the southeastern part of the province of Santa Clara, near Trinidad, building slate and marble of good quality are plentiful. Near Trinidad there exists also talc and aminathus, and deposits of asphaltum have been found to the broad belt to the north. Unusually rich asphaltum lies beneath the waters of Cardenas bay, as well as in other parts of the island. The asphaltum mines about Cardenas have been worked for many years, but the supply of some grades is apparently inexhaustible, and for a long time asphaltum has been one of Cuba's standard exports. It looks like cannel coal and frequently in Cuba has been mistaken for coal. This mineral is found in various localities of the island, but the beds about Cardenas are the principal ones.

Spanish rule interfered with the development of the mineral resources of Cuba, and though foreign enterprise frequently attempted the work, her progress with land remained largely undeveloped. Mr. Robert J. Hill, of the U. S. Geological Survey, in his book "Cuba and Porto Rico" concerning the problem of Cuban mining reports that the field is a promising one, and that the mineral deposits which remained [illegible] will be confined [illegible] cion of the ex[illegible]

HARMONY IN FASHIONS.

A Waist of One Color and a Skirt of Another Are Not Permissible.

Brown still continues to be most popular. Hat, waist, gloves and fur should match in this color to give it the proper chic.

Sometimes, however, a dress of a lighter shade of color will be relieved by bands of a darker shade of velvet, but the two tones must be chosen with great care.

The old idea of a pale blue or pink blouse with a black skirt has entirely gone out of style. If with a black skirt one wishes to wear a colored blouse, a little bolero of lace, jet, accordion plaited chiffon or net is designed to go over it, and when combined with a wide belt of black silk or satin the "cut in two" appearance is obviated.

There are, however, so many pretty blouses and thin black materials, crepe de chine and lace being the foremost, that they are much to be preferred to any color combination. If desired they can be relieved with a little touch of color at the throat in the shape of a velvet band or tulle bow.

A BROWN COSTUME.

Belts for wearing with afternoon gowns are made in the same material as the costume. Those in cloth usually are flat and deep in front, but are drawn into folds at the back and finished off with fancy buttons. In taffeta the material is cut on the bias about a quarter of a yard wide. It is then wound twice round the waist and afterward drawn through a jeweled buckle, which can be placed in front or at the back, as the fancy dictates.

The illustration shows one of the brown combinations spoken of above. The light brown cloth gown is trimmed with bands of chiffon velvet of a lighter shade, the scarf is of mink, and the hat, also of mink, is relieved by an ecru feather. The skirt of the gown shows the fashionable three flounce effect. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Muff and Stoles For Spring Wear. Also the Latest In Hats.

Fancy braidings are more popular than ever and with embroideries will be a feature of the spring tailor mades. Tiers and flounces are still as much copied as ever, and the edges of these are usually trimmed in some fancy way.

There is a perfect craze at present for pointed toques, elongated over the face. They are in direct contrast to the soup plate order of hat, and they are not becoming to every woman.

Brown is as much worn as ever, and bronze effects are being exploited by smart Parisians.

Satin straws are again introduced. They are trimmed with smart ribbon bows and clusters of small flowers.

Both muffs and stoles of black, brown and white ostrich feathers are on sale in the best shops. There are also more perishable confections for spring wear made of bronze chiffon mixed in with tiny roses.

ROSE HERE, HEROINE.

A Fisherwoman Who Piloted Shipwrecked Sailors to Safety.

An English newspaper gives silver medals to those performing brave and humane acts wherever and whoever the people are. Recently the medal was awarded to Rose Here, a humble, modest fisherwoman of the island of Ushant, near the coast of Brittany, France.

Winds sweep across the Atlantic from the west and strike the west coast of Europe with fury. Along all this coast the ocean strikes the rocks with whirlpool violence, boiling with foam. Reefs, always hidden at high tide or in high wind, lurk in wait for ships that approach unwary or are driven by gales toward the shore. It is a coast as dangerous as that of western North America.

The western extremity of France, in the department of Finistere, is Brittany, or Bretagne, whose people wrest their livelihood from the sea. Bretagne was an ancient Roman province. Its inhabitants are a people to themselves, of the Celtic race, speaking a language of their own. Druid monuments stand to this day as survivals of the olden religion of the Bretons—nay, Bretons themselves are still given to superstitions that were religious beliefs 2,000 years ago. Their very dress is different from that of other civilized folk. It is picturesque and many colored. Bretons are a powerfully built dark race, rather short of stature, noted for their courage and robust health. Apparently a woman is as good as a man among the Bretons, for women, too, go out fishing and till the little fields.

The Bretons have overflowed their native province and spread themselves upon adjacent islands. The Ushant group occupies the very western tip of France off the Bretagne coast. The largest of the group is named also Ushant.

In a cottage on the rough coast lives Rose Here all alone. She has a tiny plot of land attached to her cottage, and this she cultivates in the times when she is not out upon the sea in her boat fishing. With the gardening and the fishing Rose earns her living. She is a single woman forty years old.

One morning about 8 o'clock Rose Here from her cottage on the Ushant coast happened to be looking out over the sea toward Runion cliff. She says:

"I heard from the sea shouts for help. The cry was like that of people in despair. I looked and saw that the cries came from men in a little boat. The boat was being pitched about among the reefs and currents till it seemed every moment in danger of being knocked to pieces."

It did not occur to Rose Here to run out and find some men who would go to the rescue of the shipwrecked men. She did not wait long enough to think to do that. What she did was this, as she tells in her own words:

"I ran down to the rocks, threw off my outer garments and swam out to the men. There were in the boat M. Conreol, master of the shipwrecked steamer Vesper, and thirteen of his crew. They had no idea where they were and had been tossing about for five hours.

"I got into the boat and piloted them through the reefs, which I knew by heart, into the little bay of Pen-ar-roch, lying about two hours' journey from Runion, and here the shipwrecked men got ashore without trouble."

That is all the story as the modest, humble woman told it. Her name is Rose Here, but it ought to be Rose Hero.

You see her picture here, that of a woman who is an "old maid" and poor, getting her living by the hardest kind of manual labor, dangerous labor at that. And yet would you not rather be Rose Here than the richest, handsomest woman of fashion, who spends three or four hours a day in bodily adornment? I would.

The newspaper sent its silver medal to Rose Here. The owners of the Vesper were asked to give a substantial money reward to the woman who saved its captain and part of its crew; the British consul at Brest, Finistere, has sent a gift of money to Mlle. Here, and the story of the deed has been told to the French minister of marine. This was an act so brave, so heroic and so merciful that hardly any words can describe it, an act so great that it belittles and causes to look mean all the blazonry of the fashionable woman's life. It has been found, too, that this was not the first time Rose Here had helped shipwrecked sailors.

If you contemplate the face you will see beauty in it, a beauty to be perceived by those who know and understand—the supreme beauty of gentleness and soul force. It is a face sweet and strong. The figure itself expresses the grand repose of power.

sister, who has to wade across dusty crossings and be jostled along busy sidewalks.

Nothing can take the place of a dark tailor made in some becoming color, either black, brown or gun metal.

Parisians are wearing a great deal of black and touches of black on everything.

Accordion plaited gowns will be again revived this spring, so if you can afford it why not buy a sufficient number of yards of supple, inexpensive black or gray material and have it accordion plaited, ready to be given to the dressmaker? Such gowns may be made ever so simply with a wide, swathed belt, finished with fringed or knotted ends, and the whole is so comparatively inexpensive that it is worthy of consideration.

White gowns relieved with black satin, oriental preferred, are to be seen at present on the Riviera.

Irish embroidery and renaissance lace will again be very popular. Lace or embroidery medallions surrounded by rows of handmade fancy stitches will also hold a prominent position for trimmings. A charming blouse in pale blue crepe de chine seen recently had a yoke of Irish embroidery held together with several kinds of fancy stitches worked in embroidery silk.

The illustration shows a black and white effect. The dress is of white chiffon, relieved by insertions of black lace and sequin trimming.

Shirred Bands as Trimming—Undersleeves Made of Ruffles.

ply here at all. It demands a certain chic about the wearer, a certain distinction and erectness in carriage. Whole skirts and waists are fussed up in this manner, but, on the other hand, a simple band of shirring frequently outlines a bolero or a wide cape collar, a similar line appearing on the lower edge of the wide sleeve. Taffeta, oriental satin, chiffon velvet and even chiffon and net—these are all used with good effect. Sometimes the piping is of velvet and the shirring of a contrasting material, preferably dull.

Undersleeves composed of a multitude of fine ruffings of lace and net are very smart, and the effect is heightened if the bolero separates in front to show a blouse front composed of similar ruffles.

The long shoulder is to be with us more than ever during the coming season, but the wise dressmaker will stick to the effect rather than to the real length in the seam itself, for this is very uncomfortable and rarely becoming.

The cut shows a new three cornered hat of brown tulle and brown straw. It is trimmed with rosettes of velvet and brilliant buckles set in gilt.

WOMEN SCULPTORS

THE Louisiana Purchase exposition makes a distinct advance of public opinion on the woman question.

The disposition the exposition authorities are making of the exhibits of women's work shows that now public opinion regards this work as strong enough and important enough to be judged side by side with that of men in the same department. In brief, a woman is now as good a man as anybody in the matter of work.

A woman will be a member of every awarding committee which is to judge departments in which woman's work is.

Particularly in the line of sculpture and modeling women have made progress since 1893. Half a million dollars was appropriated for decorating the fair grounds and buildings at St. Louis. Of the sculptures adorning both the grounds and buildings some of the largest and most important figure pieces are being modeled by women. Strong pieces they are, too, expressive of power and strength, not merely pretty and ornate.

Some of the marble figures modeled by women are sixteen feet high. There are in the grounds two restaurant pavilions, at the end of the beautiful Colonnade of States. Rather oddly, these restaurants are to be surmounted each with a statue of "Victory" in the attitude of triumph, whether the triumph of the restaurant keeper or his customers is not plain. At any rate, the twin statues are to be the work of the Kentucky sculptor, Miss Enid Yandell, who has her studio in New York. The beautiful "Victory" stands airily, lightly draped, her right hand holding a trumpet through which she is sounding the shrill note of triumph. In the other hand she holds a wreath of bay leaves, other bay leaves crowning her hair. The conception of this figure is wonderfully spirited.

Two recumbent statues, male and female, heroic size, will adorn, one upon each side, the piedmont at the entrance to the Palace of Liberal Arts. They are in classic Greek drapery and express remarkable grace, repose and power. The conspicuous place in which they are posited shows the estimation in which Carl Bitter, the director of exposition sculpture, holds these two fine statues. They are the work of Miss Edith B. Stevens, still a very young woman. Those of her sex who behold them will feel proud that a woman can do such work.

Figure work, which is the most difficult of the branches of sculpture, has been placed in the hands of women modelers to an extent no less surprising than gratifying. A considerable number of the portrait statues that will adorn the impressive colonnade of states will be made by women. A fact worth noting, too, is that these American feminine sculptors are almost without exception still quite young, so that they are only in the beginning of their careers. Miss Julia Bracken of Chicago has modeled a statue of James Monroe. James Monroe does not represent any special state, but he it was who, in 1803, as minister plenipotentiary, negotiated with Talleyrand, Napoleon's minister of state, the treaty whereby all the "Province Louisiana" was sold by France to the United States.

A young artist of St. Louis, Miss Carrie Wood, executed a figure called "The Spirit of Missouri" for the dome of the Missouri state building. Miss Evelyn B. Longmans has the commission for the female figure above the Varied Industries building. What is considered to be the most important sculptural decoration that has been intrusted to a woman is the designing and modeling of the ornamentation of the spandrels on the Palace of Machinery, a commission executed by Miss Melva Beatrice Wilson.

The W. C. T. U. has ordered a beautiful permanent fountain made by Miss Elsie Ward of New York, herself a native of Missouri.

THE NEW COSTUMES.

Spring Jackets—Louis XV. Costumes Almost Perfect Representations.

The long straight jacket is to be much worn this spring. It is a jacket perfectly fitted in the back and sides and over the chest, but falling in the front straight from the bust downward to about top inches below the knee.

Louis XV. costumes have the skirt in tiers, the skirt of the coat forming the third tier. The hat worn with this sort of costume is a modified tricorne, the whole suggesting the hunting costumes of the time of Louis XV. The resemblance is made more striking by the embroidered waistcoats and the flimy jabots and lace undersleeves falling well over the hand.

A costume of this sort seen recently was of Veronese green velvet, with a waistcoat of pale robin's egg blue embroidered in silver. A jabot of point de venise and ruffles of the same gave the required touch of softness. The hat was in dark, with a rosette embroidered in silver.

Passementerie and braid work, especially those showing a silky finish, will be much used for coats, and there will also be a great demand for fringe in all its varieties.

Some notable changes are being effected in the realm of hair ornaments—always a fruitful subject to be made. Wide flat bows have taken the place of the tiny upstanding ornaments which were prime favorites a short time ago, and these are carried out in paillettes, in the most exquisite shades—deep rose or blue toning down to white and of course jet and beads as well as gold and silver.

The picture shows a gown of black chiffon velvet or silk. The collar, yoke and belt are of light silk, which show beneath the openwork embroidery.

TRIFLES OF DRESS.

Lace Flounces and Berthas—The Useless Remnant.

It is not correct to mix several kinds of lace on one dress, and yet this is frequently done by the dressmaker who is not particular.

A wide lace bertha is always a dainty and suitable finish for a decollete waist, but a wide lace flounce on a silk dress is an abomination, for it cuts the figure and makes the upper half of the skirt look cheap.

If you have any flounces of real lace, turn them either into berthas or into boleros, or else they can be used to excellent advantage on an evening coat.

Remnants have caused more than one woman to regret bitterly that she ever bought them. They may be cheap, but there is never enough of them to make anything decent, and combinations of two or three remnants are rarely successful.

There is nothing prettier for a child's frock than accordion plaiting, especially in white or pale blue.

The picture shows a walking costume of blue cloth. The plaited skirt has a hip yoke. The loose hanging front of the bolero is also in plaits. The revers are of white silk. The hat is blue and white, with a white bird.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

AN ERA OF FLOUNCES.

Many Pretty Gowns Carry These Ever Popular Decorations.

There is a new material, silky and yet rather stiff, but altogether beautiful. It is thin and intended only for evening wear and for outdoor wear in the summer. Its colors are such as pale pastel tints, white and black. Along the edges of some of the pieces of goods are borders in two and three lines of varying width in satin weave. This on the thin stuff looks like so many ribbons sewed along the edges of the flounces. By the way, there is a great and growing liking for flounces. All kinds of flounces are to be worn on skirts and waists and even sleeves. We shall no longer be able to get a dress out of seven yards of wide mater ial.

The skirts of these really graceful and elegant dresses have from three to five flounces, so that the upper one starts from the waist. The thin ones have the borders run around so that each flounce seems to have as many rows of ribbon as there are stripes. The effect is beyond measure pretty and a relief to eyes long wearied with lace, lace and still more lace.

A white dress with rows of the narrowest of satin ribbon, white or pink or blue, on the edges of the flounces makes a lovely garment, the changing folds of the flounces giving new and graceful effects. Two waists are generally made of these thin materials, one intended for day wear and the other for evening. It does not require much material to add an evening waist, and it is certainly desirable. The day waist should follow the style of the skirt as closely as possible, with flounces at the elbows. Some sleeves are made with large squares for the flounces and these trimmed with as many rows of ribbon as are on the skirt flounces, while that part of the sleeve above the elbow is laid in tucks. Tucks and ruffles are both used on the front of the waist, but horizontal.

One dainty design which can be easily made at home is of fine silk mull, both waist and skirt in flounces and with a row of fine valenciennes lace on each. This is peculiarly well adapted for the young.

A waist of the very fashionable black silk for a middle aged lady has a regular bertha cape of netted silk, with a fringe of the same on the shoulders. Silk fringe is found on many of the prettiest of waists, not always black, but in colors as well and also white. This particular waist has the fronts bloused with three box plaits, while the back is quite plain. The sleeves are puffed in what now passes for the newest in invention, yet our great-grandmothers knew the same shapes. The puff is obtained by shirring the sleeve down the inner arm seam to the deep cuffs. Shirring is to be seen on many things this coming season. Many waists have a sort of yoke defined by close shirrings, and there are flounces where there are shirred puffs above the flounce itself. Very many of the thin skirts are cut quite straight, and the upper portion is gathered by the shirring to fit the hips closely and left to flow out below. One very beautiful pattern dress from abroad had the whole dress cut in one length from neck to foot, and many shirrings fitted it to the figure. The shirrings about the waist were closer than the others. At the foot there were six narrow ruffles, each edged with a ruffle of fine lace. In that way the bottom of the skirt was made to hold out in the approved style.

While it is quite true that the skirts are made to fit the outline of the figure closely, the fitting is done in a different way from that which has obtained so long. The skirts are much wider around the bottom and even the hips, but somehow this fact has been cleverly hidden in the making.

In answer to two queries I would say that skirts are still lined with silk, but it is of a softer finish and does not rustle so crisply. As to silk petticoats, they are quite as much in vogue as ever. They are as full around the bottom and have as much foldered as ever. Black for ordinary and colored for those who like the brighter effects. And, speaking of effects, one may mention the surprising stockings now shown in the stores. They are fine and close and hand painted in flowers, birds and fancy figures in colors. Some have lace insets, and some are hand embroidered. Others have threads drawn in the Mexican work and wrought with many delicate traceries. Of course these are for dress occasions. For general use the black hosiery is considered best.

HANDSOME WRAPS.

Evening Coats of Fine Cloth and Lace Lined With Satin.

A long coat of some material is necessary during the spring and even the summer months. The present loose and shapeless style renders the garment easy to make at home by a neat dressmaker. Pale gray or tan cloth, heavy silk, all over linen lace lined with satin and later on ponges are all favorite materials.

A GRAY COAT.

Lace boleros are all the rage, and they are simply lined with chiffon, which renders any lace richer than if unlined or lined with other materials. Three-quarter length coats are also smart in lace, and for evening wear a long coat of lace and chiffon is the richest material possible.

The little bolero, which is sleeveless, is one of the best ways of utilizing remnants of veiling, chiffon, lace, etc. Odd lengths of embroideries also form the trimming and eke out the lace as well.

The collars of blouses are high, and they are often finished off in the front by tulle jabots. The tulle bow at the back of the neck seems to have disappeared owing to the low coiffure, with which it interferes. Jet dog collars made the same as the pearl ones are greatly in vogue.

Fashion this spring has returned to the directoire period, with its long jacket, its embroidered waistcoats, its gauntlet cuffs and its jabot and frills of lace. These will be features of the early spring fashions. In velvet for the moment and satin for the future they will continue among the modes for the month. They must be worn with a fairly long skirt, or the effect is anything but elegant. They are not, of course, so universally becoming as the bolero and the bolero effects. The length of the directoire coat, though it has its uses and is reminiscent of a beautiful period of dress, detracts from the height of the wearer.

The picture shows a pale gray long coat with revers of lace and silver embroidery. The deep cape is edged with fringe. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SPRING FASHIONS.

Mixed Goods to Be Fashionable—The 1830 Sleeve.

The new woolen materials for spring wear are composed of different woven threads combining different tints, but the whole is so faint that at a distance it produces the effect of one color. Blurred white or colored squares appear on some of them, suggesting a check or even a tartan, and these are especially smart made up in short suits, with the coat and seams of the skirt piped with suede or velvet.

Velvet buttons are all the rage. They even appear on evening dresses. A costume of this sort which I saw recently had, in fact, two turquoise green velvet buttons holding down the end of a lace scarf. They were enriched with tiny applications in the center of guipure lace.

Gray hats will be another feature of the spring and particularly those where a touch of white is introduced.

Corduroys and lightweight striped velveteens will be worn late in the season, and these really make charming walking suits trimmed with braid and smart buttons.

The 1830 sleeve is becoming more pronounced, and it is changed by its trimmings into a multitude of styles.

The picture shows a white silk turban trimmed with a band of gold braid, a white rosette and a black heaver tuft. JUDIC CHOLLET.

AMUSEMENTS.

Richard Carle and his musical comedy, "The Tenderfoot," in which he plays the title role, have made a great hit at the New York Theatre, where a run of several weeks was begun last Monday afternoon. This is certainly a most unique production and teems with novelty from start to finish—novelty in story, novelty in locale of scenes, novelty in characterization and novelty in music. This piece captured the favor of two great holiday audiences at the New York on Washington's birthday, the continued applause showered on every feature indicating unusually enthusiastic approbation. It is refreshing in its newness of theme and is the first comic operetta that deals with the wild Southwest and the Texas-Mexican borderland with its rangers, cowboys, Indians, Mexicans, senoritas and border girls. In contrast with these unconventional characters is the part played by Carle, Zachary, Pettibone, a Vermont traveling tutor to a flock of pretty seminary girls from the East. He is a typical "tenderfoot," lean, lank and retiring and a fitting subject for several very spirited Wild West pranks, which furnish much of the humor of the piece.

There appears to be a most pleasing unanimity of opinion on the part of the dramatic writers of the metropolitan press as to the emphatic success scored by Henry W. Savage's latest musical production "The Yankee Consul," introducing Raymond Hitchcock as a new comic opera star, which was presented for the first time in New York at the Broadway Theatre on Washington's birthday. Seldom has such praise been lavished on a new star or on a new musical play in that city. Indications all point to the conclusion that Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul" is the one big musical hit of the season in the metropolis and that the Broadway Theatre has added another to its list of big musical successes. Acton Davies, the critic of the Evening Sun, in the course of a review of the performance said: "It's a long, long time since playgoers have come away from a musical show of American manufacture in as satisfied and enlivened a frame of mind as the two big audiences which saw the first performances of 'The Yankee Consul' yesterday. In short 'The Yankee Consul' has success written all over it. It will live long and prosper as it deserves to do, while in the stellar advent of Raymond Hitchcock, the theatrical firmament is the richer by one real star. Mr. Hitchcock does not merely twinkle, he cracks."

Robert Edeson under the direction of Henry B. Harris continues to attract uniformly large and fashionable audiences to the Hudson Theatre not withstanding that on Monday afternoon, Washington's birthday, "Ranson's Folly" began the sixth week of its New York run. Richard Harding Davis' comedy delights all theatregoers because it unfolds in an entertaining and artistic manner the story *of the book of the same name. Pos*sibly the great charm of "Ranson's Folly" is due to the fact that it tells a story of boy and girl life, the sort of story that when we are old makes us sit on a footstool and stare into the fire and smile, and when we are young entertains us because it seems a vital transcript of youth's experiences. Thrilling climaxes punctuate the action of the play and Lieutenant Ranson as vitalized by Mr. Edeson is shown to be a young man of daring, determination and honor who laughs at misfortune and who cannot suppress his sense of humor.

"The Yankee Consul" has been received with great fervor in New York at the Broadway Theatre, which, although one of the very largest playhouses in America, has been crowded to its utmost capacity ever since Washington's birthday. Raymond Hitchcock, as the festive American sent in an official capacity to a Southern republic, where he becomes entangled in many complications, feminine and official, has scored a most emphatic success, probably exceeding the same actor's former extraordinary hit in "King Dodo." The supporting company, scenery, costumes, score and libretto are praised with the greatest unanimity.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Saunderson, of Fairview avenue, who have been spending the winter in Florida, have returned home.

Rev. Milton A. Graf, of Grace church, Trenton, a former worker in the local Y. M. C. A., visited relatives in this city Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Kleinert, of Jersey City, have returned home after visiting friends in this city for the past week.

THE BOROUGH REPUBLICANS NAME A STRONG TICKET

Enthusiastic Primary of North Plainfield's Majority Party, at Which the Leaders of the Citizens' Movement Are Severely Arraigned.

MAYOR SMALLEY MAKES ONE OF HIS CHARACTERISTIC SPEECHES.

JOHN VALIANT AND CHARLES A. REED ALSO ADDRESS THE ASSEMBLAGE, OVER WHICH P. A. EMMONS PRESIDES.

The Republicans of North Plainfield assembled in the Somerset street school house Saturday night and put a ticket in the field amid great enthusiasm. There were spirited addresses by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, Mayor Newton E. Smalley, Former School Director John Valiant and Former City Judge William A. Coddington. The live issues of the situation in the borough were thrashed out in a good old-fashioned style and the opposition movement received what those present termed as "a knock-out blow."

This was the ticket named at the caucus: For Councilmen—Nelson A. Miller, Alpheus M. Stine, for three years; Charles L. Nichols, for the unexpired term of Robert Clark, Jr. For Assessor—John P. Emmons. For Collector—George M. Brown. For Freeholder—B. S. Braider. For Commissioner of Appeals—William C. Smith. For Justices of the Peace—Abram King, (full term), George M. Hoagland. Appropriation for Board of Health—$550.

Peter A. Emmons, as chairman of the previous caucus, called the meet*ing to order promptly at 8 o'clock,* and by unanimous vote was made chairman. Councilman J. K. Arnold was made secretary. He read the call and a such nomination was made, by a vote he cast the ballot.

The primary was one of the best ever held in the borough. It was quiet and orderly. Every person was given an opportunity to take part. Nominations were made from the floor by various citizens, and as each nomination was made the one nominating delivered a short speech referring to the special fitness of the candidate for the office. The nominees received complimentary applause.

John Valiant spoke earnestly for George F. Brown, saying that one so entirely satisfactory in the office of collector should be continued. He also spoke words of praise for Nelson A. Miller for Council, stating that if elected he would serve the borough well. Other nominees were equally praised by him.

Corporation Counsel Reed stated that he understood that Robert Clark, Jr., would not reconsider his action and consent to serve his term out and consequently it would be necessary to nominate some one to fill the unexpired term. He regretted Mr. Clark's action for he said that Mr. Clark had always been an honest and conscientious official; one whom he admires greatly as a personal friend, and one whose head and heart are all right.

Mayor Smalley supplimented Mr. Reed's remarks by saying that Mr. Clark informed him over the telephone that he would not reconsider his action. He also regretted that official's action and said that probably at the meeting of the Council Friday night it would be necessary to accept Mr. Clark's resignation. Francis J. Biatz was named as Mr. Clark's successor, but he declined, stating that other business would not permit him to accept the nomination.

Mr. Reed offered a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, that the people assembled at this caucus pledge themselves to the support of the Republican party and the candidates named. This being done, he addressed the primary at some length.

In part Mr. Reed said: "You are here tonight as the representatives of a political party of the borough, regularly called for the transaction of such business as may come before it. Our old-time foe, the party of Jefferson and Jackson, a party that never knew when it was licked, but always one to put up a good fight, has been swallowed up by a new movement, a growth of a day. These people say that nine-tenths of the citizens of the borough are opposed to its administration, that they cannot go into a Republican caucus and make nominations or even be heard. They say it is useless to go to a Republican caucus for they can do nothing. If this is true those people should come here and right these wrongs. There is no lock on the doors There never was a time when a person was refused admission and could not take part.

"Imagine old dame Democracy be*ing called into such a caucus. How* did the opposition know that the Republican ticket would not suit? Has there been any spell cast over the people? They say that George Brown is Newt. Smalley's brother-in-law and that bars him from being elected. There is John P. Emmons who has lived in the borough long enough to establish a reputation which is above reproach. Does he wear any man's collar but his own? He is an honest, hard-working citizen, an owner of property and if elected will assess your property right. He is especially qualified through experience in such matters.

"Nelson A. Miller, for Councilman, lives on Myrtle avenue. He is a trustee of the First M. E church, of the Park Club, a property-owner and a good citizen. He doesn't wear anybody's collar but his own. He is a gentleman in every sense. Alpheus M. Stine, another nominee for the Council, has lived in the borough a long time, has done business here and has a reputation for being a hard-working and honest citizen. Neither of the other nominees have sought office but are willing to do the best they can for the interest of the borough. One of the first citizens of the borough, as well as one of the best, stated in Saengerbund Hall at one time that if this municipality remained a borough the taxes were sure to go up and he was willing to pay the increase to have the borough remain as it is. The budget for the coming year is the same as last. The paid fire department will not cost between $4,000 and $5,000 as charged. When the taxpayers of the borough generously voted $10,000 for the fire house and afterward asked for a small corner in one part of it for the Council so that rent might be saved for the borough, the firemen said 'You cannot have it.' It is time something was done. The expense of maintainance will be less than half the sum charged by the opposition."

Mr. Reed referred enthusiastically to B. S. Braider for freeholder and W. G. Smith for commissioner of appeals, as men who would do as they have always done, stand by the party, declaring that they refused to go with the opposition. Continuing, Mr. Reed said: "Mr. Honeyman says to the Democratic lady, 'you lay your head on my arm,' and some one in the audience remarked 'Why doesn't he take the old lady on a tour.' As for Dr. Cooley he is getting in line for a $600 job. We are now on the eve of a Presidential election and will soon be marching for 'Teddy' Roosevelt. We do not want any strange gods. I am surprised at Charlie Place. That he should be led astray is a shame. He has been gold-bricked. How he will kick himself in the near future. Honeyman is sorry he has pushed himself to the front. Cooley was assessor once, but he wasn't re-elected though he got the nomination. He has been waiting for an office ever since. There are many Democrats who won't be led astray but will vote the straight Republican ticket rather than support the opposition ticket which does not compare with the one nominated here tonight."

Mayor Smalley was the next speaker. In part he said: "I am sorry after being Mayor of this borough for five years to find conditions as they are. A short time ago I was in good standing in the party. You know my record. I have tried to do the best according to my ability and will continue to do so to the end of my term. Point if you can to one iota of public business that has not been done right and I will 'make good.' Any time during the next ten days I will meet in open debate any citizen of the borough who wants to argue these things. The hardest work I have had during my term has been to keep the 'grafters' out. You know them. They have made demands for something they are not entitled to. We've got a so-called newspaper in the borough. Let its editor meet me in public and discuss the history of that paper. I defy him to.

"While Mr. Swackhamer was representing the minority in the Council he was running a hay-carriage up and down Summit avenue when he should have been at a Council meeting. Yet he says the minority should be represented. He had no collar on him when in the Council. The borough's business must be done right. Our ticket is a good one and should be elected. As for the volunteer fire department, I have gone out of my way to please these firemen and they cannot deny it. The borough has a right to a part of that fire building. When a vote of the firemen was taken on the question of the Council using a part of the building George H. Fairchild came to me afterward and said "Some voted for you, but not a one wanted you."

"I ask you, gentlemen," said the Mayor, "would you have done differently than I have done? We were forced to take possession and have we violated your confidence by so doing? In two instances of those nominated for the Council by the opposition the nominees do not own any property and they are not the kind of people to improve the borough government. I know the people of the borough and am a fairly good judge of human nature. There is no imperialism here. The normal Republican majority in the borough is 200 and we are bound to succeed on election day."

Following the Mayor, Mr. Valiant reviewed briefly the history of Mayor Smalley's term and when he was in the Council. While at first he was opposed to Mr. Smalley he afterward became his warm supporter and was glad to acknowledge the Mayor's efficient management which had been profitable to the borough. In his judgment the Mayor is doing what he *set out to do and is giving satisfac*tion. He added that no one had asked him to speak for the Mayor and no one knew that he was going to speak. He said he detested factionalism and he believed that the Mayor was giving satisfaction to the thinking people of the borough. "We must trust our officials until we find them false," said Mr. Valiant. "No one has a string on me, but I will support the regular ticket and help to down the opposition."

William A. Coddington, of East Sec*ond street*, this city, was the last speaker. He said that it was the first time he had ever attended a political meeting in North Plainfield, but at the urgent solicitation of his good wife and with a sense of his duty which he felt to be to help continue the present good administration, he was present. He declared that he was a good Democrat, but if he lived in the borough he would work for the success of the Republican ticket. He said that he asked no favors of Mayor Smalley or any one else, for the opposition ticket he said that the best men have not been selected in either the Democratic or Republican party, but men whom the leaders think will pull votes. "It is trickery," said Mr. Coddington, "and the people of the borough will not stand for it."

Mr. Coddington said that he was a taxpayer in the borough and was interested in good government. He roundly denounced the action of the opposition in ignoring such a good citizen as Elston M. French, one who has served the borough well and faithfully. But inasmuch as they had done this he believed that John P. Emmons is equally as good a man and he urged his election as well as that of George F. Brown for collector, whom he referred to as "true blue and with not a dishonest hair in his head." He hoped that on March 8 the Republicans would bury the other ticket so deep that it would never be heard from again.

The concluding business of the primary was to select a committee on vacancies and James K. Arnold, W. F. Williams and Harry Brokaw were chosen.

It is quite likely that the Republicans will open a headquarters on Somerset street and from now on will make the campaign a lively one.

Miss Carrie D. Sayer, of Sayreville, who has been the guest of Miss Monroe, of Somerset street, has returned home.

AMUSEMENTS.

Not in many years has a play scored such a tremendous success as has James K. Hackett's production of "The Secret of Polichinelle" now at the Garden Theatre, New York. It is a most delightful mingling of comedy and pathos, of laughter and tears and the actors in the cast which Mr. Hackett has selected are considered the best balanced body of players seen in New York since the days of Ada Rehan, Mrs. Gilbert, John Drew and James Lewis at Daly's Theatre under the direction of the great Augustin Daly himself. The cast includes besides William H. Thompson the star, W. J. Ferguson, Grace Kimball, Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh, Florence Conron, Alice Chandler, Kesherine Keys, Frank Patton and Master Charlie Barriscale.

At Wallack's Theatre, New York, "The County Chairman" approaches its 100th performance, with every indication of repeating this achievement two or three times over. At a period when many American writers for the stage complain of overimportation of foreign made material it is pleasant to observe that unquestionably the greatest success of the year is the work of a native dramatist. In fact, Henry W. Savage, owner and manager of "The County Chairman," has never produced any original plays of other than American authorship, and, what is still more to the point, every one of his ventures has commanded wholly enviable favor in all parts of the country.

Miss Mae Naudain, who has been on the stage only five months, has been promoted from the chorus to the important part of "Bo Peep" in "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic Theatre, New York city. Miss Naudain is twenty years old and possesses an excellent voice and winning ways and much is expected of her. Miss Grace Fields of "The Babes in Toyland" has been selected by Julian Mitchell for the role of "The Poppy Queen" in "The Wizard of Oz" which follows "Babes in Toyland" at the Majestic. Saturday, March 19, will be the twenty-third and last week and the one hundred and ninety-second performance of "Babes in Toyland" and while its departure from New York will be greeted with tears by many, the advent of "The Wizard of Oz," on March 21 will be hailed with delight by old friends.

PASSED DREW EXAMINATIONS

REV MR. WHITESIDE SUCCESSFULLY PURSUED COURSE OF STUDY THERE.

Among those who successfully passed their final examinations at Drew Theological Seminary, last week, are Rev. Francis E. Whiteside, of this city; Rev. George B. Shaw, of Scotch Plains, and Rev. George T. Watts, of New Dover. Mr. Whiteside will enter the New York East Conference, where he will most likely be associated in a special evangelistic movement which is being conducted with much success by Rev. Mr. Hen*derson, of Brooklyn*, who will be remembered by Plainfielders as conducting a series of meetings in this city. Mr. Watts will remain at New Dover until fall, when he will join the Genesee, N. Y., Conference. Mr. Shaw will remain at Scotch Plains until the Newark Conference meets and will then join the Minnesota Conference.

BILL HARMFUL TO PLAINFIELD.

Measure Applying to Second-Class Cities Infringes on Council's Power.

Plainfield is interested in a bill which has been presented in the Assembly, which provides for the appointment by the Mayor of two commissioners to have general control of the police and fire departments, taking those branches of municipal government out of the jurisdiction of the Common Council. The measure is a general one and applies equally to all second class cities. It was presented by an assemblyman from Essex county and is intended primarily to accomplish an aim of the common council in Orange which wants some dirty work done for it. Plainfield's Common Council is opposed to the measure and it is believed that it will die in committee.

William M. Tallman, of Maple avenue, was severely injured at Elizabeth last week by falling and severely spraining his ankle. His physicians declare that the tendons are broken and will place the member in splints today. This could not be done before because of the great swelling.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Brokaw, of Newark, are visiting relatives in this city.

WANTED—SEVERAL INDUSTRIOUS persons in each state to travel for house; salary $18 and all traveling expenses; position permanent; with a large capital, to call upon merchants and agents for successful and profitable line.
